A Night Rider's Raid

The worst night riders are calomel, croton oil or aloes pills. They raid your bed to rob you of rest. Not so with Dr. King's New Life Pills. They never discuss or inconvenience, but always cleanse the system, curing Colds, Headache, Constipation, Malarria. 25c. Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy.

A Bad Taste, Perhaps.

Did you ever notice how much more homely a crowd looks to you on some days than on some others? It is a fact however, strange as it may seem. And, nothing it, did you ever take anything for it?

Knew His Lordship.

"Anyone called, Perkins?" "Yes, my lord; man with a bill. Used awful language." And absolve! Why, if he'd been your lordship himself he couldn't have been more so!—Ally Sloper's Half Holiday.

Be Open to Conviction.

No liberal man would impute a charge of unstedfastness to another for having changed his opinion.—Cicero.

Poor Opinion of the Students.

The average student is about as well qualified to judge of the influence of his professor's teaching as is the little child to judge of the quality and quantity of candy he should eat.

Question and Answer.

"Do you eat, drink or wear clothes?" asks the Augusta Chronicle. Speaking strictly for ourselves, we wear them.—Houston Post.

Numbering the People in China.

China is preparing to take a census of her 400,000,000 people. The census is to be a thorough one, and after it is done the facts and figures are to be kept pretty well up to date. One provision of the regulations for officials reads: "After the completion of this census all births, deaths, marriages and adoptions must be reported by the head of the family to the local census office or police station. The records of families must be revised every two months and records of individuals every six months, and reports must be made annually to the board of the interior by the directors general of the census from the various provinces."—London Globe.

An Indian Memorial.

Mr. Rodman Wannamaker of New York at a recent dinner advanced the idea that a massive statue of an Indian placed at the gateway to the new world would be the most fitting memorial to the race which played such a prominent part in our early history. Colonel Cody, General Nelson A. Miles, Major General Leonard A. Wood and General Hunter Porter, each of whom has had more than a pictorial acquaintance with our picturesque predecessors, and each of whom spoke at the dinner, grew enthusiastic on the spot and declared that the idea had their heartiest indorsement.

The Magnetic Poles.

Later information on the results of Lieutenant Shackleton's expedition to the antarctic revealed much that was not discussed in the preliminary dispatches. It is now brought out plainly that the south magnetic pole, like the north magnetic pole, shifts its position. The discovery will enable geographers to revise the magnetic charts, and this will render navigation safer.

They Agreed.

To his valet no man is a hero. Even his coddle is apt to hold the blighted in very low estimation. The latter discovery was made the other day by a certain legal luminary who already had quite a modest opinion of his own abilities, though he has been for many years an ornament of the bench and is himself the son of a judge. During his off days he usually divides his energies between golf and dairy farming. On the occasion in question it happened to be golf, and, not being in his usual form, he made a very bad foozle.

He gazed incredulously at the ground, looked inquiringly at his club and, having apparently solved the difficult problem, forced his coddle and continued, with emphasis, "Well, I am an ass!" The coddle, startled out of a dream of bliss, was too well trained to contradict his employer, so he solemnly replied, "Yes, sir!" The man of law had overloaded the caddie's existence, but this candid opinion recalled him to earth. He looked at the caddie, and the caddie looked at him for a brief second. Then both burst into a shout of laughter. The humor of the situation had struck them at multaneously.—London Tatler.

Buried in Woolen.

In 1670 an act was passed in England requiring the dead to be buried in woolen, the purpose being to lessen "the importation of linen from beyond the seas and the encouragement of the woolen and paper manufactures of this kingdom." A penalty of £5 was inflicted for a violation of this act, and "the relatives principally preferred to be buried in linen a record of the fine appears. For example, at Gayton, Northamptonshire, we find in the register "1708, Mrs. Dorothy Bellingham was buryed April 5. in Linnen, and the forfeiture of the Act paid, fifty shillings to ye informer and fifty shillings to the poor of the parishe."

Pope wrote the following lines on the burial of Mrs. Oldfield, the actress, with reference to this custom:

"Odsfish! (an oath) 'twill make a saint provoke:
Were that words poor Narcissa spoke
No, let a charming clointa and brussels lace
Wrap my cold limbs and shade my lifeless face."

—Chambers' Journal.

Keep on Trying.

A little girl who had a live bantam presented to her was disappointed at the smallness of the first egg laid by the bird. Her ideal egg was that of the ostrich, a specimen of which was on a table in the drawing room. One day the ostrich's egg was missing from its accustomed place. It was subsequently found near the spot where the bantam nested, and on it was stuck a piece of paper with the words: "Some thing like this, please. Keep on trying."—Dundee Advertiser.

A Simple System.

"How did Hitchins come to be so highly esteemed as a weather prophet?"

"By his optimism. When there is a drought he keeps predicting rain, and when it's raining he says it is going to clear off."—Washington Star.

Life 100,000 Years Ago.

Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men, who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was incessant danger from wild beasts. To-day the danger, as shown by A. W. Brown of Alexander, Mo., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." Tocure Sore Lungs, Colds, obstinate Coughs, and prevent Pneumonia, its the best medicine on earth. 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy. Trial bottle free.
