BUSINESS GIRL AS A WIFE

Some Excellent Reasons Why She Should Be Distinctly Valuable in the Home.

What the business girl wife has learned from the experience of others, and association with them, is impossible to the home body who has never taken an interest in the business affairs of her father or brothers.

The business girl wife has learned the valuable lesson of being silent when silence is golden. She should be a success because she knows the worries that beset a man in business.

Having had to work for money herself, the business girl knows the value of it. This working for money and, often, trying to drape neatly on a small salary, has made her content to be economical—especially if her husband's salary be small.

This girl knows by experience that the workman needs the quiet, restful home when the day's work is ended. She has learned in her business career the necessity for system in all kinds of work. She knows the absurdity of asking her busy husband to execute household commissions. Her own experience in business has taught her this lesson.

If her husband should fail to make his appearance promptly at the dinner hour she will not grumble, for she has experienced the necessity of sometimes staying at the office when business demanded it. She knows, too, that the little bickerings between herself and her women friends are not pleasant for her husband to hear. She seems to be fitted by training to make him a happy, cheerful home.

Have Plenty of Light.

Have you been using the same old sputter lamps this winter to read by? Then it is no wonder you are having trouble with your eyes. It pays to have good lights to work and read by. Better pay out money for good lamps than for spectacles. There are a number of improved makes of kerosene lamps that give a good, strong, steady light and some very good and fairly brilliant and economical gasoline lights. Some of these almost equal the brilliancy of electricity.

But whatever the lighting power used, the quality of the light should be as nearly pure white as possible—not red or yellow. Don't keep on using the antiquated little lamp with its tiny wick and flickering flame. The best and brightest is not too good—then the young folks and older ones too, on the farm will spend the long winter evenings more pleasantly and profitably.

Long Pig in the South Seas.

Long pig is not pig. Long pig is the Polynesian euphemism for human flesh; and I suppose I shall not have the chance in these degenerate days to see any long pig eaten, but at least I am already the possessor of a duly certified Marquesan calabash, ebony in shape, curiously carved, over a century old, from which has been drunk the blood of two shipmasters. One of these captains was a mean man. He sold a decrepit whaleboat at good as new from fresh white paint to a Marquesan chief. But no sooner had the native sailed away than the whaleboat dropped to pieces. It was his fortune, some time afterward, to be wrecked on that place, on that particular island. The Marquesan chief was ignorant of rebates and discounts; but he had a primitive sense of equity and an equally primitive conception of the economics of life and he balanced the account by eating the man who had cheated him.—Jack London in Pacific Monthly.

Necessity, Not Choice.

A young woman stepped on board a train at the Grand Central station one evening and sat down, right in her dress-suit case beside her. Presently a gentleman, who had dined not wisely but too well, came along down the aisle, sidled into the space beside her, and deposited himself precipitately upon the dress-suit case.

"Excuse me," said she, "you are sitting on my dress-suit case. If you will be kind enough to rise I will remove it."

"No, you needn't—s'pose you think I'm sitting here because I want to. Well, I'm not. There's no other place in car, that's why!" responded he aggressively.—N. Y. Times.

Not Interesting.

Senator Platt of New York entered a cloakroom one day when Senator Mason of Illinois was entertaining a group of statesmen, and he stopped softly aside as though he felt that he might be intruding.

"Come on in here, Mr. Platt," called Mason. "We are not telling anything secret or private."

"Then I do not care to listen," said the czar from of New York.—Los Angeles Herald.

Not Satisfactory.

The judge stared hard at the accused man.

"You are charged," he said, "with robbing a limburger cheese factory. Have you anything to say?"

"Judge," the prisoner hoarsely replied, "I was driven to it by hunger."

Their Lack.

"English humor is said to be dull." "They have a narrower field than ours. You take the cherry tree out of a nation's literature, and you leave an awful gap."

NORRIS MAY BE A SENATOR

NEBRASKAN LEADER OF FIGHT ON CANNON REVIEWS RESULT.

Thinks Triumph of "Insurgents" Will Aid Republican Party and Pending Legislation in House.

Washington. — George R. Norris, the "insurgent" who led the fight against Cannon, has come out of the row in the house with a good chance of succeeding Elmer J. Burkett as senator from Nebraska. Mr. Norris issued this statement after the battle was over:

"The change in the rules of the house is in the interest of representative government. It takes dictational power from the speaker and places it in the hands of the house opportunity to have brought forth from committees for consideration legislative matters in which any representative number of members of the house are interested.

"An enlarged committee necessarily means a broader appreciation of the true sentiment of the country, and of all its sections. Ten men from ten sections of the country have a more perfect appreciation of the desires of the country in legislative matters than one man from one section.

"Mark you, I have held that the speaker as chairman of the committee on rules dominated that committee. The speaker as a member of the house represents a single district no larger than my district; not so large a territory, nor so diversified in interest as many other districts represented. Therefore, his viewpoint of legislation needs to be more restricted. But, because he is speaker he dominates to the disadvantage of the entire house membership and the injury of the country. This needed correction.

"My fight was not against Cannon; It was against Cannon's control of the committee on rules, and the injustices likely to flow therefrom. With the assistance of others who believed with me that the power of the speaker should be curbed and restricted and through Democratic aid, we have won. This victory is a warning on the Republican party. I am a Republican, working for party success. I believe it will be Republican success and make for party success."

41 INDICTED FOR GRAFTING

PITTSBURG COUNCILMEN ARE CAUGHT IN JURY NET.

Charged with Accepting Money for Vacating a Street in Interests of Mill Owners.

Pittsburg Pa.—After a day of sensations in matters pertaining to graft, the grand jury Monday evening added to the sensation by handing down a list of 41 indictments against councilmen for accepting $100 each from the A. M Byers Company of Pittsburg for vacating a street in the interests of the mill owners.

Dallas C. Byers, head of the steel company, was indicted for bribing the councilmen, but fled to Europe, where he is supposed to have died. Among those indicted are William McKelvey, formerly police inspector at Pittsburg and now head of a large private detective agency. P. H. Kearns, hotel keeper and considered one of the Democratic leaders of Pittsburg. Morris Kaufstein, formerly political leader of Allegheny before the consolidation with Pittsburg. Dr C C Long, one of the leading physicians in Pennsylvania.

Fred Herring, another of the indicted men, sought a private interview with District Attorney Blakeley and made a complete confession. The district attorney will ask that sentence be suspended in Herring's case. Blakeley announced that the other 40 indicted could secure immunity from prosecution by appearing in open court and confessing. Otherwise they will be sent to the penitentiary, he asserts.

SAYS BALLINGER IS WRONG

Director Newell Denies Several Statements Made by Secretary in Pinchot Inquiry.

Washington.—Director F. H. Newell of the reclamation service took the stand Saturday in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation and denied several statements made by Secretary Ballinger to the effect that his bureau had recommended the restoration of water-power sites from entry under the Garfield regime.

His testimony was largely corroborative of that given by Chief Engineer Davis concerning conferences he and Davis had with Ballinger in March, 1909, at which the latter expressed the opinion that withdrawals made by Secretary Garfield were illegal and that he intended to restore them.

The witness denied the accuracy of statements made by Ballinger in letters explaining his action in restoring water power sites to which Ballinger declared he had done so because the engineers had recommended it. Newell said he protested strongly against "throwing back all power sites".

Attorney Pepper questioned the witness regarding the "black tent" affair. Newell corroborated Davis' statement that Ballinger had become angry because he had written a letter to E. T. Perkins, Chicago purchasing agent of the service, suggesting that he resign because he had accepted $100 a month for four months from the Harriman railroads for advertising lands along their lines in his "black tent" lecture tour. Newell said the secretary subsequently placed the stamp of approval on Perkins' conduct.

BEEF POOL INDICTED

TRUE BILLS FOR NATIONAL COMPANY AND TEN OTHERS RETURNED.

CIVIL ACTION THEN FOLLOWS

Leading Men in Industry in Chicago Are Defendants in Document Designed to End Combine—What Bill Sets Forth.

Chicago—Indictments were returned Monday against the National Packing Company and ten subsidiary concerns by the federal grand jury which has been investigating for the last three months alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The defendants follow:

National Packing Company of New Jersey.

G. H. Hammond Company of Michigan.

Fowler Packing Company of Kansas.

United Dressed Beef Company of Missouri.

Hammond Packing Company of Illinois.

Omaha Packing Company of Illinois.

Anglo-American Provision Company of Illinois.

Western Packing Company of Colorado.

St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision Company of Missouri.

Colorado Packing and Provision Company of Colorado.

New York Butchers' Dressed Meat Company of New York.

Coincident with the return of the indictments, a petition to dissolve the National Packing Company and its subsidiaries was filed by District Attorney Sims in the United States circuit court.

While none of the packers was named in the indictment, they are charged with the unity of guilty. Those who are made defendants to the suit are named besides those corporations which were indicted are:

Armour & Co
Swift & Co.
Morris & Co.
Edward Tilden
Louis F Swift
Edward F Swift
Charles H Swift.
L. A. Carton
Frank A. Fowler
J. Ogden Armour
Arthur Meeker.
Thomas J. Connors.
Louis Ehrich
Thomas E. Wilson.
L. H. Heyman.
Continental Packing Company

The indictment sets forth that all of the defendants except the National Packing Company, which, it is charged, is merely a holding company, are engaged in the beef-packing business; that they buy live cattle at divers points in the United States and slaughter them at the plants of the various concerns located in Chicago, Kansas City, St. Joseph, East St. Louis, Omaha, Denver and New York city; that the beef resulting from the slaughter of the cattle is shipped to various markets throughout the United States.

The bill charges that the necessary effect of the union of these interests in the management of the National Packing Company is to destroy competition not only among the combined companies of the National Packing Company, but also between those companies and the Armour, Swift and Morris companies.
