A Professional Proposal.

The Banker: I respectfully request that you deposit your love with me to bear interest daily until death.—Judge.

Next to Impossible.

"It would be a hard thing," says the Philosopher of Folly, "to persuade the average working man that Saturday night comes as often as Monday morning."

Women's Noblest Vocation.

Nothing finer can be found in women than that kindness of heart and sweet sympathy which finds expression in works of charity.—The Gentlewoman.

The New England Spirit.

One thing we New Englanders like about us is our all-around superiority to the people of the rest of this great and glorious country.—Springfield Union.

Trade in Beeswax.

British manufacturers of blacking purchase large crops of beeswax. The beeswax imported from China is in large cubes, each done up in a written guarantee of purity and quality.

To Heights Sublime.

If making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before is a noble accomplishment what proud world will fully name the humble benefactor of reforesting a nation?

Preposterous.

"They say Harold Coddington has brain fever." "Impossible! Could an angleworm have water on the knee?"

Laugh and Be Glad.

A good laugh is sunshine in the house.—Thackeray.

Crickets His Inspiration.

Wagner in his Waldweben and other wildwood music has doubtfully followed the beautiful music of the little German crickets.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"Hiring a relative as a clerk—don't," says the Philosopher of Folly, "and working in your father's office is like playing poker with your wife—it doesn't prove anything."

Cultivate Courage.

Let doubt and fear cross right there and death be thine, but the glory shall be thine, the sunny sky, and everything. If thou but once look deep into the eyes of courage.

New Definition of Gentleman.

"A gentleman," says the Philosopher of Folly, "is a man who is so old-fashioned that he is one that he thinks he has to be polite to people."

Tough Proposition.

"It seems hard to me," said the man who is a small, low, shrill tenor, "that when a man dies and goes to heaven he has to be passed and classified by a guy with a pitch fork."

His Last Journey.

Jean Mallet, dead at his home in Paris recently, at the age of 106, from fatigue. He had walk d to Paris from Belfort, a distance of 50 miles, to see his children.

Doing Good Service.

Anybody who can produce anything beautiful is doing some good for mankind.

Japanese Burial Practice.

Japanese dead are buried in a squatting position, chin upon knees.

ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

Farm Notes.

Alfalfa ought to be grown where you can know about it.

The proper use of your time will produce a good farmer.

Many farmers do not seem to understand the advantages of ventilation.

A one-crop country is generally a poor country, especially for the small farmer.

Every man who owns a farm is a trustee for the nation for his small property.

With large machines the work of husking and shredding corn is usually custom work.

The price of broomcorn fluctuates rapidly, and sometimes unaccountably between the margins of profit and loss.

Forget that potatoes were ever planted in hills, level culture is much better. Plant the tubers in deep furrows.

The shifting from wheat to corn in some of what have been regarded as especially wheat counties is very noticeable.

Well-rotted manure is all right in its place, but it has very little place on a farm, the process of rotting is too wasteful, whatever the process may be.

A practical rotation is to plant corn peas in wheat or oats stubble, plow the crop down before heavy frost in the fall, and follow with corn the next year.

Do not follow your grandfather's custom of planting beets, lettuce, onions and such vegetables in raised beds. They dry out quickly as well as being difficult to cultivate.

Farmers in all sections are pretty well aroused over the necessity of better seed wheat and corn. The same enthusiasm should extend into the improvement of farm animals.

It is not an exact matter to compare peas but in the vicinity being cultivated, slowly and with unfavorable weather the hay is apt to be badly injured, if not spoiled, before it is cured enough to stack.
