"In Name Only" Is Week-End Feature on Catlow Screen

Special Thanksgiving Matinee and Evening Show on November 23

When a film dares to be different, when it thrills with its sincerity and removes doubt beyond the shadows, it is usually quickly recognized as headed for greater popularity and success. "I Stole a Million," co-starring George Raft and Claire Trevor, coming to the Catlow theatre Saturday for one night only, comes classified as just such a picture.

The recipient of widespread acclaim for its piercing realism and its naturalness, "In Name Only" scheduled to appear at the Catlow Sunday and Monday, Carole Lombard has the part of a young widow in love with Cary Grant, a real estate operator married to Kay Francis, portraying a mercenary mate who married Grant for his money.

Double featured Tuesday with "The Magnificent Fraud," is "The Fighting Gringo," starring George O'Brien.

Gilbert Gabriel, who was such an ace as a dramatic critic in New York that Paramount brought him to the coast to incorporate his unusual ideas in movie scripts, collaborated with Robert Thoeren on "Hotel Imperial," the film drama coming to the Catlow Wednesday for one night only.

Members of the varsity football team of the University of Southern California will be seen in the thrilling and hilarious football sequences in the new Joe E. Brown-Martha Hayes football comedy, "11,000 a Touchdown," which Paramount will present Thanksgiving day and Friday at the Catlow. There will be a matinee Thanksgiving afternoon.
