FINISH HIGH SCHOOL

Class of Six Will Be Graduated at Salem Church This Evening.

The six officers in the the graduating class and the teachers have had a strenuous week attending to school duties and the programs and pleasures arranged for commencement week. The small class has attracted as much attention with its affairs, as larger ones of other years and each member by good scholarship and deportment deserves the fun which marks the close of their Barrington school days.

The junior banquet on June 15 in the library of the school was a study in green and white both flowers and decorations; a jolly hour preceded the supper in the assembly room where games were played by teachers, seniors and juniors.

A delightful evening of friendship and amusement was passed at the home of Prof. and Mrs. E. S. Smith on Friday evening by the teachers and seniors.

Sunday afternoon the annual sermon to the graduating class was preached by the Rev. Lambert of the Baptist church who spoke from two texts, "He That Putteth His Hand to the Plow and Turneth Back Is Not Worthy" and "Overcome Evil With Good." He gave excellent advice to the graduates, admonishing them to realize that they have been gaining knowledge and theory and now the time has come to need to apply their studies to the doing of practical work.

Class night was on Tuesday and drew a large and appreciative audience. Every musical number was very good and very pleasing to the audience, especially each solo, and Prof. Smith. Their remarks were sources of great amusement, especially Prof. Smith's school the year near. Miss Elsie Hollister served as the orator who forecasted the future of each graduate; the fate of Alonzo Flagge will be to become a Parisian mailman with the letters for Paris and make beautiful gowns for all her old friends; Lucile Hansen will be "Dr. Bennett" in Ohio and remove many an appendix; Lillie Volker after teaching school for years, an elocutionist engineer and travel in airships; Fred Griffin is to become the hero of the Denver fire department; Mabel Schaede marries a German professor and Ethel Schlueter lands in the Salvation Army.

This evening the class will be graduated at the Salem church. Prof. C. W. Parr of Chicago will give an address.

L. R. WEBSTER.

Esteemed Barrington Resident Passed Away Monday Evening.

Lemuel R. Webster, whose somewhat sudden death occurred at about ten o'clock on Monday evening, June 20, was a native of Illinois having been born in Naperville, April 20, 1839. His parents, Noah Webster and Eliza Inch Rogers Webster, were from New Hampshire. His mother, Elizabeth Rogers, traced her descent to Hetty John Webster, a prominent minister of England who was burned at the stake in 1555. A brother of Mrs. Webster, Rev. Leonard Rogers, a congregational minister, was, in addition to his work as home missionary to the region of Geneva lake. He died at Crystal Lake.

From Naperville L. R. Webster removed to Barrington where, in October, 1865, he was united in marriage to Miss Ann Freeman, who, when a child, came with her parents from England. During the 45 years of his married life he has lived in Barrington and has been in the Lake Zurich road. For the last eight years the village of Barrington was his home.

During much of this time he has filled the office of janitor at the Methodist church, where he did effective and faithful work.

Last fall, after disposing of his property, he built a bungalow to accommodate himself and his wife, a home rendered more comfortable by the kindness of their neighbors. Last Sunday he attended the day church by patriotic speeches and dinners. Every club, every society and organization met around the festive board and honored the day in song and story.

The nature of the speeches and dinners varied with the locality, but in the remote parts of the country they agreed absolutely in the number of toasts. It was the custom to have twenty-four toasts, twenty-three, of course, the thirteen original states, with the addition of one more than the custom died out, probably because the newspapers ran out of type. In the south

Parades in the larger towns were features of the celebration during the day, and in the evening, by the principal part of the celebration was the banquet and the speeches. In recent years, however, there has been a great falling off in the importance of the time of patriotic oratory and the day has been celebrated with more noise than ever before. Many of the speeches come true. The day is celebrated with popping and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations. At the end of the country to the other. Oratory, prayer and praise are forgotten and the old time decorous celebration of the day has seemingly passed away forever.

It should not be taken from this that there was no noise connected with the early celebrations. Quite on the contrary features of these were fired, bells were rung, and in the evening tar barrels were burned, but there was a more decorous expression of notions which mark the celebration today. Prayer was there and list of dead and injured on the day of the Nearly every resident of a city who could do so went out of town to avoid the noise of the Fourth. Just the reverse was true of the early celebrations. The first big celebration was held in Boston in 1776. All the bells in the harbor fired salutes in the morning. The day was given over to oratory, prayer and praise. Sections and organizations had banquets in the noon and in the evening, and the celebration was concluded with the ringing of tar barrels and more salutes from the ships in the harbor.

Changing Ideas of the Fourth of July

THE legislatures of seven states and the city commissions of scores of cities have passed laws for the observance of the Fourth of July. This action is a reversal of the ideas of the early days of the Fourth of July. This advance legislation, which began as early as 1901, has so changed the ideas of the people that the Fourth of July celebrations have ceased to be a national disaster from the old-time methods of honoring this auspicious day. The terrible loss of life that has accompanied every Fourth of July celebration for the past years is the cause of this legislation.

The present generation does not remember that during the latter part of the eighteenth century and for years during the greater part of the nineteenth century, firecrackers and explosives as are used today in celebrating the anniversary of independence. Our forefathers in knee breeches and powdered hair celebrated the day chiefly by patriotic speeches and dinners. Every club, every society and organization met around the festive board and honored the day in song and story.

The nature of the speeches and dinners varied with the locality, but in the remote parts of the country they agreed absolutely in the number of toasts. It was the custom to have twenty-four toasts, twenty-three, of course, the thirteen original states, with the addition of one more than the custom died out, probably because the newspapers ran out of type. In the south works begun to have a place in the celebration. Those were harmless and almost comforting when compared with terrifying explosives which are put on the market today. Not only are there less dangerous and noisy, but their use was restricted to a comparatively small number of people. Those who were unable to get fireworks and use their muskets and shot them off themselves had improvised cannons. Even blackmailing got out of control and by placing powder in little tubes were able to thrash it off so that it made a satisfactory amount of noise.

The Fourth of July has come down the decrease in the patriotic orations and prayers. Before the fifteen celebration of the day had been observed for years the decline in patriotic oratory

The question today is, how should the Fourth of July be celebrated? The answer is, which it is to be celebrated many declare, is not in entire keeping with the spirit of the day nor the comfort and pleasure of the majority of citizens.

Those who would reform the manner of celebration say the day should be kept as one in which the memories of the feats of American arms so far the spirit of liberty and progress. It should be a true festival without fireworks. It should be a day of patriotic There should be civic banquets, gatherings of the people to forget all lines during the past year could be forgotten. There should be patriotic music and speeches in every community. Every man should be given information more like the early observances.

There should be processions, but they should be patriotic and not noisy. Not only should the noise be done away with, but the dangerous fireworks be ordered in with martial music and patriotic songs. Patriotism is to be keeping with the spirit of the occasion. Patriotism should be the keynote, exercises for children and pub-

The day is celebrated in this way there will be no occasion for people of conscience and sensitive nerves to leave the city to escape the noise and risks of the celebrations. In fact, the celebration, not proposed by the reformers, is gaining greatness there. Add if Mazina's new noiseless bomb for the Fourth of July cannot why the problem of a safe and sane Fourth cannot be solved for all time.

Punch for the Fourth.

Plate strawberries and cantaloupe placed into lemon ginger punch by adding one pint quart of lemonade to equal amount of ginger ale. Have ready the fruit, cut into cubes, add fresh mint and bruise the lower leaves into the lemonade. Add fruit to ice to bring out the mint flavor. Put lemon slices into the punch for a finishing touch. It is particularly popular at afternoon tea, picnics or card parties or some social function where men are represented—Emma Paddock Telford

An Heir to Millions

SYNOPSIS

Andy Mclean, aged and economic, suddenly inherits a million dollars. He is a mysterious character, as well known for his poverty as for his use of a stolen train whose owner he has apparently murdered. Andy's whole life is a mystery, and he is generally considered a "bad man." Andy is a good-looking boy, however, and he is a great favorite with the school teacher. He becomes a hero when he saves the life of a little girl.

"Well, that's one right. The money been out a year and Nowadays he wouldn't back again. But mind you, Cathey, not till you've asked all creation with a fine-tooth comb to find Martin's heir."

"Whom do you mean, as a stranger or trustee?"

"Must you have one? Why, we've avowed antiquarians, and though the fine themselves referred to were of a specific nation and undoubtedly Celtic—

"Undoubtedly they are necessarily extinct.

Melissa frowned in perplexity. It seemed an insult to her intelligence that far more trouble to learn no nearer behind him than Bill Ed and his cousin Ira and guard it during his eventful life.

"Can't you fathom a single unclaimed dubiously at length. you believe—is disarting Mr. Ed Cathey and his partner?

"Certainly. If you wish it. They will be sufficient. Andy, you know Mr. Passavant and myself."

With a great sigh of relief she waited with the whole subject thrown off rifled answer. Then as the lawyer rose to go, she spoke hesitantly.

"Pa is up quick Carbon I'm mortal tired."

By this time the sun had set behind the western hills. Melissa and Ira Evan appeared to wheel his master within the room. Andy was fellow dozed. Half his nights had been spent in the open air, and he could not starve enough for a treat. Now that the end was near he relaxed into the crib bed and rabbited confinement of four walls as a bird would. Melissa had bung to the rafters of the porch, where its dim radiance, which had glowing eaves which to the last resolved lovingly over the sleepy prospect.

One two hours passed, and save for the steady hurtle of the Sunset Limited through the stations the house was quiet. Every soul thereto knew that the moment was at hand. Martin and the passing away, hushed were the usual sounds of night revelry and "hide-open" Bronze. It was felt to be a fateful night for the sick man's sake.

At length Mr. Carbon's task was done. A hack was carried to the porch, by lantern-light the will was read to the people who turned upon eyes to meet those of the lawyer in mute approval when the reading was ended. The hack was dismissed and Ed Evan he affixed his sketch and spreading signature to the witnesses followed, and the deed was done which bequeathed a million dollars and a royal revenue to—who?

Next morning Melissa Mclean was found lifeless in bed his glasses and another notes could not be found. Ira fail almost exactly quite.

Perhaps he has found Minna," mused the lawyer with bound eyes, as he stood by the side of his vintage sleep.

CHAPTER II

In an old fashioned sitting room of an antiquated trivia known to that obsolete lonesome quarter of downtown New York formerly known as Greenwich village there was a little gathering of a young couple both of whom were exceedingly pretty to look upon.

To the judicious observer it would have been apparent that their attitude and bearing each towards the other had been with some embarrassment than mere friends yet less than man and wife. In fact there was the bashful and happy dwellers in that inestimable border-land known as being Engaged.

The girl was faintly tall of stature, her beauty accentuated by a wealth of fine and glossy dark hair which rippled and it was coiled in a manner absurdly head and above a wide-brimmed fashion frivolous white and broad and low. Her eyes were of a very steadfast dark blue, yet wholly adult, giving one the impression of quiet reserve and cool judgment. A fine chin above a strong and supple throat made her look older and more wise than any hair years really warranted she was found with the use of those trifles of needlework which keep the fingers busy without curbing one's thoughts, and at the same time serve to display to admiring and even critical eyes the graceful advantage a very shapely wrist and hand. Yet even the dearest of her beauties—and she would never have instituted that Eunice Trevenna was the best—was the gift of a compliment. Indeed, it needed but a glance into the depths of those outer gray eyes to convince you that that have was a stubborn tender and true as that of the Douglas himself.

So at least thought young Wilfrid Blanda, who was opposite to her, and who certainly enjoyed the best opportunities in the world for knowing. He was a pleasant, wholesome lad, fair and florid, with light golden-brown hair and mustache, slim and with slightly aquiline features, a rather weak face on the whole, one might say, though perhaps this was owing to a rather questions droop of the mouth, which, in a man of more sensitive mouth a beard would better have hidden a chin which was too pretty for any mere man.

Had you guessed him to be a clerk or a bookkeeper you would not have been far astray—one of those men who make extraordinarily faithful and faithful servants but very poor men. Are to charterer he was satisfied better nor worse than thousands of other youngsters who start out in life in some downtown office or alone at 9 o'clock, the goal of whose ambition is to earn fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars a year, live in a respectable pleasant girl, settle down in a Harlem flat, or a little detached house out in Brooklyn, raise a small family get ahead a little, dress well, wear clothes each year with a semi-annual overhaul, take a vacation annually and an outing on Saturday afternoons and other times when he can.

Not a wildly hilarious or thrilling existence it may be granted, yet there are hundreds and thousands of such men quietly-minded and refined, neither or very strong, very weak, very virtuous nor conspicuously virtuous, but who, in the phraseology of the Shorter Catechism, are priously or morally disposed, that duty is the state of life to which it has pleased God to call them, and who, in their kindred stuff that the average city is made.

Even to such men strange dreams may come—visions of sudden fortune, wealth and power hopeless of realizing yet not quite impossible, dreams quietly prompted by certain innate or inherited aspirations, the fulfillment of this life which only women can provide and for the attainment of which they feel a yearning and an infinite capacity if only they could find—

Yes, it is a splendid thing to be rich. Wilfrid was not a strong enough of cut Cavendish, for he had been another year in the office, and way in a year than I guess. You've always had plenty, haven't you? he added.

"It was just foolish talk said Wilfrid in whose late enthusiasm his heart would have gone forward to the tin-box were like a bucket of cool water on a burning.

Nevertheless, as he walked home to his lodgings on Washington square he explained to Eunice Trevenna that still clung to him, and as he owing to the fact that the unknown benefactor his story was jaunty, his head held high, and his gaze fixed on a rich to be was actually poor

"It was a mistake, Wilfrid Stanton conclusion as the college world Dear, you know I'm not a fortune-hunter, possessing an eye for beauty and for a young girl's, to be sure, but not for refined, unctuous appetite for luxurious ease, nature's birthright from the world and the moon, the knight of ever-regrettable poverty are apt to prove especially galling. Like you, I'm a clerk, and I'm glad of it. What it means to be beautiful poor mite crabby poor

What wonder that that his long lings, his neighbor's his day dreams, his fancy dwelled about that wealth he no other sum others abusing, or the of a long drawn-out sigh—sighs. Not for the money's sake of possession, but for the gratification of the fact that was to him, did he long for money and what it would bring him.

Sovereignly day dreams fortuitously—strange, fantastic, yet with a little brown taste in the mouth. The best of them, the most fantastic, the most divorced to the Point street stoop, the most unlikely to come true, yet that young entry clerk. No one would have thought of it, no one would imagine for two brown a faster yacht, a finer stable, a more lavish, more hospitable maintained by the action of Mr. Ed CONTINUED)

Seven Divided in Church

The average man and woman seem to have been formerly by no means an uncomfortable practice in the Church of England. In fact, Edward VI. a prayer book specially mentions that at the communion service "the curt shall tarry on one side and the women on the other." The papers of a church in Westmoreland include elaborate directions for the division of the sexes at its services.

Give your children pretty names. Nothing more than enough ugly ones already

ELDEST SON OF ROOSEVELT WEDS

Theodore, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Alexander Are Married.

CULMINATION OF LOVE MATCH

Former President Witnesses Ceremony in New York Church—Ban Franciscan Is the Home of the Couple.

New York—Of all the June wedding days in the year, June 19 was crowned the most general interest was that of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Alexander which was celebrated in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church on June 20.

A large number of prominent people witnessed the ceremony but naturally the most noticed person in the church after the bride and groom, was Col. Theodore Roosevelt, father of the young man, who was entering the state of matrimony. The date of the wedding was kept back by the illness of the bridegroom, who, with his father, had engagements after his return from Africa, which he had to keep for only two days before.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt who before her own recent marriage was Miss Elizabeth Carow, was the mother of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Ethel Roosevelt, Miss Josephine Millingsworth, Miss Janetta Alexander, Miss Jean Delano and Miss Dorothy Roosevelt.

Here Henry M. Sanders, a great uncle of the bride, officiated assisted by Dr. Gordon Russell of Cranford, N. J.

After the ceremony the bridal party was entertained at the home of the bride's uncle, Charles H. Alexander at least a part of the honeymoon will be spent at Sagamore Hill, the country home of the Roosevelts' near Oyster Bay, Long Island. Later in the summer the young couple will start for San Francisco where Mr. Roosevelt is to be in charge of the interests of the Roosevelt family. As a boy he rode horseback and mountain with his father and presents of the Juvenile Roosevelt cities in their home at Oyster Bay and he took some part in exhibition during the recent military maneuvers in Texas and his collegiate courses at Harvard, but in the end he has been long enthusiastically on the outdoor of life in the open that his father and brother Kermit. Young Roosevelt is an ardent admirer and his romance with Miss Alexander is said to date back his beginnings in the mutual love of those outdoor pastimes. It is said that "Teddy, Jr." has endowed the sweetheart in outdoor sports. He participates two years ago in a bull into flight from Washington to which he and the two army officers who were his fellow passengers had a rather exciting experiences.

There was little surprise on the part of the public when Theodore, Jr., announced the completion of his college courses two years ago, chose a boat mate career as his life work and yet more wonder was aroused when he took employment in a commercial office factory in order to acquire knowledge at first hand of the practical side of naturally manufacture. He started at the lowest round of the ladder as an unskilled workman at a small salary. Of course he was promoted as he mastered the intricacies of the business

New York.—He has come back! Theodore Roosevelt returned to his native land June 18, and was given a welcome home such as was never before accorded to a citizen of this republic. The whole country joined in it, and it was as spontaneous and as utterly non-partisan that it mattered not but he must flattering to the former president.

Home emerging from the African jungle the latter part of March, Mr. Roosevelt has been the guest of nearly every European ruler and always unprecedented honors have been showered their greetings to "Teddy" as he passed and the factories and mills added the noise of their whistles to the general din.

But it was all the way up to Trenton, by-three street where the parade turned and made its way back to the Battery. At that historic spot at the lower end of Manhattan Island Colonel Roosevelt landed to receive the formal welcome home.

Welcomed by Mayor Gaynor.

In an enclosure in the center of Battery park were 200 distinguished guests including executive, representative, civic ambassadors and personal friends of Mr. Roosevelt. Surrounding this enclosure was another reserved space which was occupied by about 1,500 prominent men and members of the big reception committee.

The cheering and music were at most continuous as the colonel entered the park but finally quiet was restored and Mayor Gaynor stepped forward and delivered a cordial address of welcome on behalf of the city of New York. The mayor's address spoke briefly but forcibly and delivered a tribute to the former president. Much as he might have liked to be released for great his predecessor President Taft was kept away on account of his official duties, and his regrets were expressed.

Parade Through the City.

When the speech making was over the parade through the city started. It was original. Intended to combine the reception with a mammoth parade, it was arranged so as to allow organizations through the parade twice. Within a few days however the committee was flooded with the many applications that the parade twice had to be in part abandoned. Organizations from Maine to Texas, and from the gulf to the Great Lakes requested places in the line of march and if the project had been carried out the procession would have extended from the Battery to the Harlem river and back again a distance of 20 miles, and the people who had traveled hundreds of miles to see Roosevelt would have been deprived of the pleasure. In order to overcome this obstacle the line of march was modified a unique arrangement was adopted by the committee.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE TRIP

begged on him. The reception by his fellow citizens was a fitting tribute to his triumphal tour and must have been the most satisfactory event conducted with it.

Fletcha Marsh Him at Quarantine.

More than a month ago every avail able craft in New York harbor had been engaged for the day and numerous big organizations like the Rochelleau club of New York and the Hamilton club of Chicago had chartered regular ocean line steamers. Early in the morning the immense flotilla sailed far down the bay and when about nine o'clock the accepting tugs and motor boats came flying in with the word that the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria was approaching all made ready for the final greeting.

As the big liner came into sight every whistle on every vessel was let open and shrieking the welcome to the returning wanderer. Colonel Roosevelt was on the bridge of the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and he was greeted by the vast throng of sightseers. Colonel Roosevelt landed to receive the formal welcome home.

THE VOYAGER HOMEWARD BOUND

returning wanderer Colonel Roosevelt, with Mrs. Roosevelt and Kermit on his side, stood on the deck waving his hand and smiling the familiar smile and the waiting thousands cheered him again and again.

Reception Committee Takes Him.

At Quarantine the arrangements for mailing were quickly over and the official reception committee took the colonel and his party aboard its reserve cutter. That vessel at once started up the harbor and all the gaily decorated craft, filled with civic and private parties, fell in behind and formed a most spectacular water parade. On almost every boat was a band and all the way the musicians pagged at the top of their lungs. The shores were black with people who shouted their greetings to "Teddy" as he passed and the factories and mills added the noise of their whistles to the general din.

NOVEL TOY FOR BOYS IS NEW

Shoots Straight and True and Can Be Carried in Pocket—How to Manipulate It.

A novel toy which is a cross between a bow and arrow and a gun is now and which can be made by any boy has been designed by a Niagara citizen's man. It shoots straight and true and can easily be carried in the pocket. Take a round piece of wood about three or four inches long and an inch or inch and a half thick—a piece of an old curtain pole will do nicely—and round it off at one end ready to be used as an arrow. Then bore holes about half an inch deep in each end and bend a piece of steel wire into a long handle with the ends turning in and forming the axle for the rubber wheels. Take a piece of strong rubber or several pieces in the ends of the wooden rod to form the bow. Finally take a rubber film round stick notch one end slightly deep enough to hold in the wood and fix it in the rubber. When this is drawn back and let go it will be found that the guidance provided by the wooden rod will give you accurate aim.

JAPANESE FISH IS CURIOUS

Interesting Specimen Uses Fin as Sail—Dorado Is Caught by Hook and Sinker.

One of the most interesting of fish of Japanese waters is the Oriental sail fish (Histiophorus orientalis) so generic name means the sail bearer and the fish is so named from the fin found in the dorsal. The sail fish is 10 feet in length and weighing 154 pounds are Zoologist. They swim about one half the time with the sail, which weather with their huge fins above the water.

It is a favorite food fish and the annual catch is nearly 1,000,000 pounds. The sail fish is caught by means of a harpoon.

Another food fish known as a dolfin or dorado is caught with hook and sinker. The fishes congregate under a floating raft made of bamboo and are then caught by hook and line.

Of the dorado tuna is surrounded by a motor boat and the dolphins are driven or herded to the surface of the water with sticks. This fish is rather both fresh and salt and is a great a favorite in western Japan as the sail fish is in the northeast.

LIFE LENGTH AMONG ANIMALS

Record of Longevity is Held by Tortoise—Elephant Believed to Come Next.

The maximum length of life of some of the lower animals is not follows. The horse lives to a maximum of 35 years and the dog, a little period the dog does not exceed twenty-five years. The rabbit from eight to ten, the goose 30, and the duck the hen and the turkey a dozen years.

Among the animals having the best established reputation for longevity are the swan which lives 100 years and the parrot and the elephant which attain an age of 150 years. Carp are reported to live to a year to have enjoyed their reputation, which dates back to the ancient fish farms from Thantilly and Plinbatistinia. They rarely become old tenantans.

The tortoise appears to be the animal that lives the longest, and the Galapagos gigantic is reported to one weighing 296 kilograms which terminated in the person were around Zoological gardens for him. Lionel Rothschild, from which is said to have been born in 1756.

Had Inclination, But No Room.

At a children's party one of the matrons in an effort to supply the wants of a certain group of the little guests approached a lad who had already consumed some three or four pieces of ice cream and to speak of divers pieces of jelly cake.

"Have I not had enough some refreshment, Willie?" she asked.

The young gentleman took on an expression of deep regret. "Thank you, ma'am, I would be I can still chase, but I can't swallow."

THE COMBATANT.

I think all Nature students grow to be courage of combatant. He walks about by day and night, Prepared to meet the foe in fight. There's nothing in the world he loves so much as putting on the gloves. He's ready for the fray at any time. The one of four as well as table

IMPORTANCE OF THE APRONS

At One Time No Lady's Wardrobe Was Complete Without Goodly Supply of Them.

When little girls wear aprons now adays they never give a thought to the new-fashioned ones surrounding them but there not them or because meaning of some wishes and sometimes pretty clothes But when there is comfort in the pinafore and wonderful for them, the aprons are laid aside and there they are by their side when dresses adjust to their coming.

Long ago however when their great-grandmothers were young, aprons were considered important pieces of clothing. No lady's wardrobe was complete without a goodly supply of aprons. Aprons were made in this domain in every style and design and said after towards aprons wrought with gold embroidery aprons worn in the good old days of dance and respectability crimped with bows and lace to suit the fancy of the wearer and there were gauze aprons and lawn embroidered aprons and there were glove and patterns and for embroidering them.

There is no telling how long age aprons date from. Without doubt there among the many things which came from England in the May flower. Queen Anne wore them and of course her ladies followed her example and it is probable the early colonial dames put them in evidence use in the pioneer days.

If some enterprising person under took to hold up a wardrobe of the olden time and to aprons he would find his work not to be found in Webster's dictionary.

There have been put to so many uses requiring variety in size and shape that it would be difficult to describe them. Women and children alike have found in them a ready use for the aprons of all sorts and sizes and shapes are over—the apron fashion is no more.

WITH DOGS AS PLAY HORSES

Boys of South Side of Great City of New York Take Dogs by Proper Them on Sleds.

When you can make a dog work for you and he will do it without doing the dog some kindness and yourself some good. Just which part of this arrangement appeals most to some small boy who is anxious to the novel in the south part of the great city of New York is not known but they are making the most of it.

Dogs are plenty in the south side and old saddles like to pull them down the steep cobbled hill on roller skates. The children click of the full ers in the dogs harness and with sufficient attitude to keep the dog going. The dog is willing to do it and hopefully it has the same effect as a dog pull on a sled.

As for the boy he gets all the fun of rolling and riding without the exertion, and perhaps he gets the satisfaction of showing the others riding the dog. Nobody seems to be hurt and the friend anywhere is a popular sport in many parts of Europe where there are hills, dogs and boys.

Slightly Confused.

One day last week a Chicago lady ordered two servants to build a fire in the fireplace in the grate and when his orders had been obeyed the lady was surprised to see a large cheerful warmth in a short while the dropped down deep enough and so rumpled up of the fire until a great warm blaze was the conjectured to notice it. Taking the hint quickly, and when his servant came in the lady pointed to the grate. The servant scratched his head in puzzled silence and Newton, being big thoroughly angry with the beat and the servant's disobedience shout "Will you more that grate?"

The servant recovered from the first then finally growing calm, he replied:

"Would it not be better ale for you to make the fire, ma'am?"

"Well, well, well said Newton (Turning my word, I never thought of that!"

BROWNE RESTS CASE

Defense in Bribery Trial Comes to Sudden and Unexpected End.

PROSECUTOR ADDRESSES JURY

Malone Savage Attack on State Legislature—Lawyer and Defendant Are Kept Off Witness Stand.

Chicago.—The closing chapter in the Browne bribery trial was begun yesterday and ended today when the defense rests by quarrels between counsel and disappointment to the crowded like a house of sound.

State's Attorney Hoyne began his address to the jury by explaining the reason which compels the State's attorney made against the minority of some witnesses, called to Attorney Charles S. Edwards, a lawyer and a member of the legislature.

The prosecutor made a savage attack on members of the Illinois legislature and on Edwards.

Malone is often excusable the State's attorney said, because of his ignorance.

Lawyers as sometimes justifiable, a man who has allowed his reading to feed a sick child or an invalid wife. The legislature, Hoyne said, is the work to the lowest depths of degradation. Hoyne said that it was time to get back the lawyers with him.

Hoyne said that Edwards, a prominent member of the legislature, was the man who was the last witness called. The State's attorney said that he was the man who was the last witness called. The State's attorney said that he was the man who was the last witness called. The State's attorney said that he

A SANE FOURTH.

Magazines and newspapers all over the country unite in one voice in urging upon the public a more whole some and less dangerous method of celebrating our national holiday.

Philanthropic men and women, organizations and clubs are laying plans for a glorious and satisfying Fourth of July for city children, which shall eliminate the noise, free firearms and yet fill observe the day.

The same idea should be carried out by all civic institutions in behalf of the children and young people, let us devise some way of spending the day which shall not be more in danger than usual of serious loss, a story of death and disaster such as has clouded and darkened our past record of what should be a joyful commemoration of the nation's independence day.

Let us hustle ourselves to arrange attractive programs for the day either for public gatherings or family parties, which shall prove our patriotism, and protect our lives and young men from the terrible accidents which have for so long been the record of our national celebration.

RAISING PERSIAN CATS HAS PROVEN PROFITABLE

Michigan Country Women Increase Their Incomes By Breeding Felines—Brives Decided Advantage Over City Cousins.

"Why couldn't country women raise Persian cats?" questioned Mrs. Carl Ely of the Abbottsford cattery when she was approached about the activities of women on the farms taking up the fancy of pedigreed felines. There is no reason on earth why they couldn't, and every reason why they should be more successful than city women. They have better stills for the cats for one thing, and for another they have ever so much more room. The more room the cats have the better and larger they grow and the larger they are the more valuable. On the back end of a city lot, the cats really do not have enough room to do their best. I have a portable cattery for my cats which I carry wherever on my lot, but I could do much better if I had the self and dome of the farmer's wife.

Mrs. Franklin has been in the business for years, has taken first prizes at different state fairs, has been president of the Detroit Cat club, and is consulted daily by women who are starting in the business, says Michigan Farmer.

A good breeding cat may be purchased for $15," said she. "Of course you could get a kitten for $10 or $15, but it is better to pay more and get a cat as you never really know what it will do. Kittens are born blind, and it is days the siltens are born and in a couple of months they may be sold at from $15 up to as high as $100 as you care and and are able to get. There are usually from six to six kittens, though sometimes there are eight. In the beginning I feed the cats only four and keep a common, but I feed them more than four. They should not be weaned under two months, but I wean them at five, though some wean them sooner.

"I feed them nothing but fresh milk three times a day. I always wash the milk carefully before I use it. After that I feed them porridge and milk in the morning and a noon meal there is no meat in it, and no longer anything but porridge. I feed a great deal of beef broth, and I feed no meat and if you have a Persian cat a month old you will see the difference in them. They lose grass and cattle, too, and I have a basket of catnip dried every fall for them.

"Persian cats are no harder to raise than ordinary alley cats, no matter what you may hear as to their delicate nature. Give them out doors all winter if you want, and in fact, the wild cat must not be brought in. They must be kept dry, but the cattery need not be heated. Build shelves so they can climb, study them as you do your babies and treat their little stomachs much the same.

In picking out a queen, the woman must be careful to look for what we call type. The cat shows all things must be broad between the eyes, must have a short face, small ears, a collar or low broad body, short legs, a short tail and a long coat. The cat must be a solid color, yellow and black and yellow cats must have yellow or orange eyes; other cats have blue eyes, and white cats should have blue or amber eyes.

I have found all colors equally hardy. The cat shows all things that is as hardy as a blue or yellow shell or a silver. In breeding it is best to breed color to color. If you do not the color of the litter will probably taint if he is older and line bred, so you the queen is also line bred. Then the litters will be about equal.

"Some years ago I was quite engrossed as a farmer registers his prize stock and only line-bred cats can be shown and bring up so high prices. It is curious to note how though that the old line-bred ancestors not only show in their descendants of the seventh and eighth generation, but that the effect of bad blood shows in the human being after generation.

The cats are remarkably intelligent and sensitive and resented every thing which is said to them. In disposition they are much like people, some of them being loving and good natured while others are cross, irritable and by year of silk ready for affection. If you have been in the habit of saying to your cat, "Good morning, pussy, how are you? They are Persians."

This is another advantage. The live stock breeder must wait two, three or four years for his cattle to get in shape for market, the swine breeder must wait nearly a year and the sheepman is likely to have his profits knocked away by tariff agitation or a big crop of wool in Australia, or a sudden panic among the "predatory wealthy."

Meanwhile the great nations disappear, until the map of Europe looks like a western landscape after a cyclone, but people must have milk, butter and meat and the farmer can do little better every year. No dairyman need worry about his future. The election for Republicans, Democrats and Socialists alike need the products of the dairy farm, and they know that they are getting what is coming to them.

The money from the dairy comes weekly, or at most monthly and it is a cash deal all the time. The prices are with the farmer, and he has control in times that take the same up and down cyclone as other wear.

And the farm. The dairyman who has not approve his land every year must be awake slightly studying how to keep it from going to weeds and filling milk is about the hardest way to use a dairy farm, but he who sells butterfat sells nothing but somebodies for a lot of butter isn't worth a wagon load of stable manure as a fertilizer. They say it is worth about 75 cents.

When the soil crumbles in the hand and does not pack, is the time to start the cultivating.

Although the watermelon is a one crown fruit, wet is more damaging to it than frosts.

To manipulate rainions so as not to have them grow in the mouth and bury is a thing yet to be discovered.

Agricultural experiment report difficulty in getting pumping gasoline engines to stay primed for a reasonable time.

The best time to kill the weeds is before they form seed and before they have robbed the corn of moisture and nourishment.

Keeping the pasture clean of undesirable growth means more grass for the animals which means more money in your pocket.

Pleasant surroundings and modern conveniences, vastly obtainable, will go a long way in keeping the boys and girls on the farm.

When the weeds are sown and the transplanting is mostly done in the family fruit and vegetable garden, comes must begin cultivation.

When the dirt turns dry, soil it will may leaves it in a more loose and free form, which is the best condition for leaving any soil for seeding.

Horseweed is the most widely known source of dark honey, and perhaps the only one which has ever been popular as a table honey.

The gospel of corn improvement is now being rapidly adopted by the farmers and the younger generation, through the agency of natural forces.

GOOD LOAD-LIFTING DEVICE
Comes in Very Useful in Handling Barrels, Boxes or Loads of Hay—Handy on Any Farm.
A device for lifting heavy objects, such as barrels, large boxes and bales of hay, has been invented by a Chicago farmer. By means of it three settlers can be moving into a wagon or ship in a man would lift a satchel. In experiments the improvement moves bins a triple pair of ten-tonnes, the arms of the tongs being curved in a semi circle so as to engage a barrel. At the bottom of these arms are swivel wheels which are locked by a spring.

Load-Lifting Device.

actuated bar when it is desired to grip the load. When the burden is to be dropped the panel is released and the wheel rotates and allows the barrel to slide and settle. The device works on the principle of ice-tongs, one set when the vertical portions of the arch are drawn together by means of cables at the top, the curved portions close together and engage the load. Of course, it will be understood that an apparatus of this nature must be operated by some power engine as a derrick would be.

Method of Sowing Grass Seed.

When the seeds of mixed grass are sowed, care may be mixed and then sown by running a distributor over the land manured on a wheelbarrow. This, however will not sow very large seeds at the same time as the small ones are mixed. It is better in go over the ground twice, sowing the larger ones at one time and also the smaller ones. They should then be covered by running over with a light harrow.

Bunch Grass.

Bunch grass grows more or less in the natural state on the Buffalo grass, but is to be found at its best on the plains to the southward. It is a hardy grass under cultivation as western rye grass like orchard grass, it grows in bunches and does not form a matted sod. Its nutrition and palatability is not equal to that of Buffalo grass, but its sustaining power is better owing to the more abundant growth.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

The best growth of roses is in rich, moist and rather cool soil.

The best soil for roses is a rather stiff but deep and rich clay loam.

As a rule roses do best when set out in the fall or very early in the spring.

Grapes do far better when they are cultivated until the berries are grown.

With dormant field roses, all of the broken and bruised roots must be cut smoothly.

To produce finest and largest blooms, roots must be carefully pruned each year.

When planting roses, avoid exposing the roots of the plants to the sun or drying winds.

Roses should watch for black knot on the cherries and plums, and for pear blight and at its first appearance "get on his job."

Plant cherry trees on your home grounds and thus give your people something to think about that is bright and cheerful.

All of the roses should be cut back at the time of planting, except potted, growing plants, and perpetual blooms should be cut back severely.

BAIL BILL IS SIGNED

IS NOW A LAW HAVING RECEIVED PRESIDENT TAFT'S APPROVAL.

SENDS FOR PARTY LEADERS

At Conference Executive Gives His Views Regarding Legislation He Desires, Adopted Prior to Adjournment—Signs Statehood Bill.

Washington.—That congress will adjourn on Saturday of this week or possibly before was the opinion of the leaders on Saturday.

With the railroad and statehood bills out of the way, the president having already signed the former and the latter only awaits his signature to become a law, the senate took under consideration the postal savings bill, and there is every reason to believe that by Tuesday at the latest the house conference report will be adopted and this measure also hurried along on the president. The conservation bill has passed both houses and there only remains the adjustment of the disposed bond issue for reclamation projects which is in the hands of ways and means committee.

Besides these the naval, legislative, executive and judicial and sundry civil appropriation bills are in conference, the urgent deficiency bill has passed the house and was reported to the senate and the public building bill was brought out in the house. No doubt is expressed by the leaders of these bills to be passed all of these measures by Saturday. If any prospect arises difficulty might arise in the senate determined upon to keep the party leaders at bay.

The new features of the reciprocal commerce act, with which the senate try to finish up, must be taken up in 60 days, except the provision relating to the suspension of commerce pending investigation by their reasonableness and the provision for the appointment of the commission to investigate and report to congress. These take effect immediately on the president's signature. The commission get to work as soon as possible and will make a report when congress reconvenes in the fall.

Regarding the action of the caucus of the railroad and statehood bills the president was pleased with the issue of the bill for publicity, campaign contribution and the postal savings affecting federal office and asked congress to pass that measure before adjourning.

The president sent for party leaders in both houses and the senate on Monday and told them his views regarding this proposed legislation. Taft said he had made a personal pledge to the last republican platform to do what he could to further the enactment of a publicity bill. The president had hesitated to add this bill to his program, but he felt congress was drawing itself to adjournment and he felt the party had carried itself definitely in its platform. Now that the program is practically completed he decided to bring all of his influence to bear on behalf of the publicity bill.

Mr. Taft obtained the consent of Senator Lodge to take up the Aldrich publicity bill. Senator Lodge promptly set the publicity bill might be given the right of way as the Aldrich bill which is in line with the disposition of the postal savings bank bill.

The president further pressed the adoption of the conference, after several conferences, he let it be known that he would be satisfied if the passage of the postal savings bank bill, of the conservation bill, providing for the selection of a public site, and of the reclamation bond bill, providing for $20,000,000 to bonds for complete existing reclamation projects.

At noon Monday the vice-president attached his signature to the statehood bill, and an hour later the president signed it.

When he traveled through Arizona and New Mexico last fall President Taft gave his personal pledge for statehood. In his speeches there was evidence that this pledge was taken with a good deal of salt and in a session of this kind called on a sharp criticism from the president at a banquet at Albuquerque.

The Gillett bill to permit Justice Moody of the United States Supreme court to retire on full pay because of his long continued illness was passed by the house by unanimous consent.

Standard Reduced Prices.

New York.—The wholesale prices for refined oil have been reduced from one and one-half to two cents per a gallon by the Standard Oil company making the prevailing price throughout the country now seven and one-half cents a gallon. The standard controls more than seventy per cent of the refined output of the country and it can readily be seen what sort a reduction in price means to the great corporation.

JAMES A. PATTEN INDICTED

COTTON KING CHARGED WITH ANTI-TRUST LAW VIOLATION.

Bill Against Men Who Conducted Recent Bull Pool—Each Gives $5,000 Bond.

New York.—The special federal grand jury Friday returned indictments against James A. Patten, the Chicago speculator, and seven others alleged to have been associated with him in the cotton pool. They are charged with having violated the criminal clauses of the anti-trust law.

Their bail was fixed at $5,000 each by Judges Hough. All of them gave it and through National Surety company and were immediately released.

The men indicted are: James A. Patten, of Chicago; D. P. Brown of New Orleans; Frank B Harne of New Orleans; Eugene E. Scales of Tyler; Sidney J. Herman, Robert M. Thompson and Charles A. Stoller of New York, Morris E. Rothenbilt of Mississippi.

The indictments were handed up to Judge Hough in the United States circuit court. The indictments were presented by former United States Attorney John C. Bonner, Henry Wolman and Joseph P Cotton.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, one of the indicted men, was strongly opposed to accepted a bond from President Taft was forming his cabinet. He is a democratic leader and for years was prominent in the politics of Kentucky. He was also supposed to New York to occupy an important position with the New York Life Insurance company.

The investigation, which resulted in the indictments was begun April 1 at the Southern cotton exchange in General Wickersham. It will be recalled that the bull pool operations in the cotton market last winter Mr. Patten and his associates made a fortune in the bull movement, took advantage of every occasion to deny that they had formed an agreement and conspiracy.

SHORE LEAVE DENIED, CHINESE MAKE DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Seven Leap into Water and Four Drown—Remainder Rescued and Brought Ashore.

Philadelphia.—A mutiny on board the British steamship Highland Monarch, which left here for Auckland N. Z. followed by a dash for liberty by a dozen Chinese members of the crew, resulted in their rowing of four and the narrow escape of three others.

The men rescued are in a police station while the remainder of the mutineers are in irons aboard the ship.

The trouble started in the night. The Highland Monarch had been lying in the Delaware river at Point Breeze in the extreme southeastern part of the city for three weeks, loading with cargo oil for New Zealand.

As the British Shore Immigration law places a fine of $500 on the capitain of a steamship for every Chinese member of a crew that escapes, the 20 Chinese sailors did not permit to leave the vessel, while the other 20 men in the crew, all Englishmen, were given liberty to go ashore.

The confinement grew irksome, and at the ship was moored to the dock the Mongolians asked First Mate Bowman, who acted as the ship's officer ashore. Being refused, the Chinese held a meeting and decided that the irons and an hour later nearly all the Chinese made a dash for freedom.

CANNON SORRES HIS CRITICS

Insists Majority Controls and Charges Newspapers and Magazines With Criticising Him Falsely.

Washington—The old rules of the house were defended and the critics of the speaker were severely scored by Speaker Cannon in a brief address on the floor of the house Saturday.

Mr. Cannon contended that the operation of the rules as adopted by the fifty-first congress and as enforced by him had never interfered with the will of the majority of the house which the actual majority had been obtained on any proposition. He scored newspaper and magazine writers who had been guilty of misrepresenting what had proceeded from a lack of knowledge and upon false premises. The remarkable speaker was greeted by cheers from the Republican conference when he had concluded. Mr Cooper of Wisconsin, one of the leading insurgents, attempted to reply, but there was no chance.

Referring directly to Minority Leader Champ Clark the speaker suggested that the Missouri leader and Democrats would make the best speaker the old rules were adopted. He said there was a signal for an ovation to the Democrats in honor of their floor leader.

Life's Little Jokes

"COPPER OF BRAZILIAN CATTLE." STRIKE OF SÃO PAULO.

Washington.—Fully four and a half out of every five pounds of coffee drunk in the United States comes from Brazil, and the proportion is growing steadily higher. Coffee production in the Brazilian lexan is of a superior quality and flavor. The generality of coffee drinkers hath a lazy idea that Mocha and Java enter largely into the morning beverage, but it is a fact that all the Mocha and Java that reach this country in a year would not supply St. Louis for six months.

It is generally known and understood that the greater proportion of fine Brazilian coffee comes from the state of São Paulo, on that country, and the statement that São Paulo, the richest state in the Brazilian Union, is "one vast coffee estate" has been made so frequently that the general impression has gone abroad that little else but coffee is produced in the state. It is true that São Paulo alone last year produced 1,134,000,000 pounds of coffee that had a value of $180,000,000, and that this vast aggregate of wealth was secured through the greatest coffee pen in the world. Statistics show that in 1902 São Paulo has a host of other industries that are developing at a rate that is astonishing. It is to São Paulo that the private and governmental eloquence has been granted. It is from São Paulo that the enormous shipments to Europe of live cattle will be made. It is from São Paulo that textile fabrics are

HONOR RESTED WITH AUTHOR

How the Late Popular Writer, O. Henry, Outwitted Unscrupulous Editor

A friend of the late O. Henry writes of him: "He was reckless in spending money, and frequently gave elevator boys and bellhops $1 and $10 notes. But he wasn't easy, despite his flush and regardlessness. His friends marvel at his luck in showing the man's shrewdness. A magazine noted for 'jobs' pay,' they say, contracted with him for a three-part story for which he was to receive fifteen hundred dollars. He got a five-hundred dollar advance before starting to work, and when he turned in the second installment (some of it had been printed yet) got five hundred dollars more and asked for the third five hundred dollars as an advance before finishing the tale. The editor, in an effort to save money, apparently declared that after all, the story didn't appear to be worth more than one thousand dollars—this when he had the two installments in his office. All right, said O. Henry. I won't write the third story. And he didn't. He laughed at the editor. 'Well then,' said the latter, 'I'll run the two parts and then let our readers have a guessing contest as to how the story ended—and put up perhaps a five hundred prize to the winner.' For a moment the author thought he was outwitted. Then he said: 'Go ahead—and I'll win the prize. He intended to do it, too.'

An Office Business Only.

A young man called at the office of a justice of the peace and with some hesitation made known his business, which was to be married. The justice replied that he thought he might perform the service, and inquired if the young man had his license.

"Well, sir," said the justice, "this office of ours is like a department store. We don't have to have, but we don't deliver them at the house."—Youth's Companion.

When she came in from her bath, she told how fine the water was, and told of the new phrase she had learned, assuming her grown-up manner, she remarked: "Oh, but the undertaker was strong this morning!"

A Case of Terrible Kidney Trouble.

Henry Palmer, Cole and Walnut Sts., Barnesville, O., says: "My kidney trouble was caused by hardships and exposure in the army. The awful pains across my back grew unbearable some more severe until I was in constant misery. My feet and hands were swelling to twice their natural size. The kidney secretions were in a terrible condition—for months I could not walk without assistance and could not stoop to tie my shoes. I became so dizzy everything seemed to whirl. My condition was alarming when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Before long I improved and was soon strong and well."

She was an attractive old lady and volunteered much information to the lady seated next her. "I suppose I see an important event in the country twice in my life," said the old lady, with a stone of the new church.

"Indeed!" said the young lady "that is the dedic and finishing and the single lady and the single lady and marriage, and those two are the start and ar—ranging ideas."

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food That Cured Her.

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food I determined to make a trial of it on a case on in Salisbury, Mo. At that time there was some doubt in my mind, but my husband ordered some from a Chicago house.

"I had been greatly afflicted with indigestion and dyspepsia, gas, pains and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. Now I can eat anything and sleep like a log. Grape-Nuts food has cured me.

"My husband was so delighted with the results of the food, that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a very large trade on the food. He sells them by the case to many of the leading physicians of the country, who recommend Grape-Nuts very generally. There is some satisfaction in using a really scientifically prepared food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a Reason."

Why He Whitewashed.

A country doctor tells a story of a man who moved into a dilapidated old cottage and was found by the doctor busily whitewashing it inside and out. "I'm glad to see you making this old place so nice and neat, said the physician, "it's been an eyesore to the neighborhood for years." "Ain't it?" he replied. "Well, I'm remedyin' that the reply. The last people what lived in it died of a little throat trouble, and I thought I'd whitewash it a good disinfectant. "Yes, sir, I'm a-doin' everything I can."

COST OF FILLING THE SILO

Bulletin Issued by Department of Agriculture Gives Average Yield as 5.01 Per Acre.

Bulletin 591 issued by the United States department of agriculture on "Cost of Filling Silos" gives the average yield of silage per acre as 5.01. The author visited 17 farms during the silo filling season and took notes on the number and arrangement of men and teams, the machinery used, length of time etc. The results obtained are very valuable inasmuch as they are not the results obtained by one farmer under certain conditions. The farms visited are all located in Jefferson and Pond du Lac counties, Wisconsin, where the silo has been in quite general use for several years.

The average cost per ton of silage was 64 cents and the average cost of putting the corn in the silo was $1.36 per acre. The lowest cost for putting the corn in the silo was 46 cents per ton and the highest 46 cents.

In regard to partnership arrangements among the farmers the bulletin says. The high cost of machinery for cutting silage and the difficulty in procuring help prevent many farmers from building silos. It is high time, in fact to be able to get an outfit when it is needed. An early frost or a short but dry weather may so affect the crop that it is necessary to fill the silo several times before the usual time for this season a man should own his tractor and engine unless he has enough silage to cut each year to warrant this outlay of capital. It is one silo easier to hire an engine than it is a cutter. For this reason many buy the latter and depend on being able to rent the former when it is needed. The next best arrangement is owning an outfit individually in for a few or three farmers in the same neighborhood to buy the necessary machinery in partnership.

The illustration shows an excellent method of filling a silo by means of a slat elevator.

INJURIOUS TO APPLE TREES

Round-Headed Borer Does Much Damage and is Hard to Dislodge—Prevent Laying of Eggs.

The round headed borer is a very injurious beetle to the apple tree. The adult insect measures about three quarters of an inch long, is brown and has two broad white stripes extending the length of the body save. Farm

Apple Tree Borer

Bulletin 1.

Prime. The eggs are laid on the bark near the base of the tree during the summer. The larvae which are white with round heads and black jaws hatch within a short time and immediately they begin to bore into the inner bark of the tree. It takes three seasons for the larvae to reach maturity. The beetles emerge out during the warm weather.

The larvae may be detected first by the discoloration of the bark and later by the sawdust which they have pushed out of the burrows. The most effective remedy so far the other tree borer is the digging out method. Of course this means the making of additional wounds on the trees, which in some cases may be as bad as the borer. Preventing the trunks of the trees to prevent the laying of the eggs by the females is recommended.

Berry Bushes by Themselves

There is very little excuse for having currant, gooseberry and raspberry bushes in the garden on a farm. Give them a plot by themselves and work every foot of the garden plot to vegetables.

Thinning Fruit.

The question of thinning apples, peaches, pears and other fruit is becoming of some importance every year. Not only do we get larger and finer fruit, but the curculio is making more seriously every years and in thinning fruit we have the curculio in present every specimen that shows a sign of the curculio sting should be taken away and burned.

The demands of the markets and the conditions of the eastern and southern fruit growers is such that they must this their fruit if they are to succeed in holding their home markets. The demand is for larger and more show fruit and of better quality, but more particularly of fruit that has a fine appearance.

LUCILE GRAPE IS EXCELLENT

It is Hardy and Healthy and Strong, and Robust Grower That Ripens Early—Fruit is Sweet.

The Lucille is the coming red market grape, says a friend who is a large grape grower in Chautauqua county, New York. He says it is hardy and healthy a strong, robust grower that ripens the wood to the tips even when carrying a heavy load of fruit, says Green's Fruit Grower. It ripens early between Moore's Early and Worden and makes a handsome title of our national colors red white and blue and packed with Diamond and Worden grape. The Lucile is sweet, refreshing, favorably with Wyoming Red in color. Its crowning glory is the size and uniformity of the clusters. It is indispensable at the north, where early ripening and hardy vines certainly are.

Good Rule of Life

Polish silver day and be done with it. Do take time when you could. Some blunders and accidents happen most, cause is large, then as soon as you can. Promptness.

Flow of Rivers.

A river is sluggish when it flows at the rate of three miles an hour, moderately swift two miles an hour, very rapid one mile an hour, a torrent six miles an hour.
