BARRINGTON REVIEW

VOLUME 34. NUMBER 11 BARRINGTON, ILLINOIS. THURSDAY. MARCH 14, 1918 $2.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE

PRIMARY ELECTIONS BOOKED THIS WEEK

Women Can Vote For All Offices Except Constable; Opposition for 3 Positions

Friday and Saturday of this week will be primary and caucus days for the towns of Barrington and Cuba, as the case may be, and candidates are working hard to bring out a full vote. The polls will be open from 1 to 9 p. m. in each township and the polling places will be, Barrington, precinct No. 1, Village Hall; precinct No. 2, Barrington Center church; Cuba, Leonard's garage.

The commissionership is the main office of contention in both townships, four candidates having entered the race in Barrington township and three in Cuba. Five candidates have filed their names asking for the collectorship on the Cook county side, but no collector will be listed on the Cuba from new on, according to a new law in this regard. There is opposition for the office of assessor and constable in Cuba, two candidates in each instance being listed for the job.

Women will be permitted to vote for all township offices this spring, thus giving them a free hand at the ballot and to say who they prefer for supervisor, town clerk, assessor, collector, single commissioner and school trustee, whether they will vote to any extent is hard to predict, though it is taken for granted that both townships will witness a liberal representation of votes from the fair sex, especially in the commissionership battle.

The primary for the town of Barrington will be held Friday and that of Cuba the following day. A specimen ballot of tickets to be voted will be found on another page of this issue.

One Commissioner Instead of Three.

The highway commissioner elected in each township of the state on April 2 will be vested with all the powers that have heretofore been held by three men. He will be given the use of all funds that may be levied for road and bridge purposes and will be charged with the duty of maintaining and improving all the roads within his respective township.

The question of Highways has been one of minor importance for many years in Illinois. The fact was made self-evident when the Tech law was passed, in 1913, for at that time Illinois ranked twenty-seventh in the matter of improved highways in the United States. Since that time the people of this great state have striven to place Illinois in her proper place with regards to her highways, and today, after only four years of concentrated effort on the part of the people Illinois stands sixteenth in the matter of improved roads.

It has been demonstrated that every great enterprise must have some concentration of authority. Some one person upon whom it is possible to place the responsibility for the performance of certain duties and also upon whom will fall the blame for omission of these duties. Hence, in the management of so great an enterprise as the building of highways, with the large expenditure of money, it was deemed important enough by the legislature to cause them to enact the law, whereby a single man shall take over the duties and the responsibilities heretofore conferred upon three.

Selects the Best Man.

In order to bring about the results contemplated by the law, the people must necessarily be very careful whom they support for the office of highway commissioner. That man should be one who can devote his time to the duties of his office, for the building of roads should be done early in the season and not after all this farm work has been taken care of.

He should be a man whose integrity is above reproach, for slick salesmen delight in doing business with a man who will appreciate a small personal favor. In all instances of this kind the public pays for the favor and the money so spent will not be of much use for building or maintaining your highways.

The single commissioner should be a man of good business judgment, for he should spend the road and bridge funds judiciously. The amount of money he will have to spend will accomplish much if properly used, and last but not least, he should be a man who has had some experience in this line of work.

MANY FROM HERE ATTEND FUNERAL OF G. F. SCHROEDER

The remains of George F. Schroeder, who met a tragic death at St. Francis, Wis., last Thursday, while acting as fireman on a Chicago & Northwestern passenger train, by being struck in the head with a mail crane, were taken from Milwaukee to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schroeder, on East Montrose avenue, Chicago, Saturday, and the funeral services were held on Monday.

A number of Barrington friends attended the funeral, including many members of Lounsbury lodge No. 751, A. F. & A. M., of which deceased was a member. The lodge also had charge of the services at the grave and William Abbott, worshipful master, read the funeral service. Six engineers, all Masons, acted as pall bearers. They were W. F. Seaverns, Henry Gilbertson, Harry Ritter, Henry Carlson, Max Faye and Harry Campbell.

The Schroeder family were preparing to move to Chicago, as Mr. Schroeder had been his region on Barrington run, which he had held for some time. It is said that he had taken the Chicago-Milwaukee run for the first time on Thursday having been recently promoted to engineer, but finding no steady position decided to act as fireman until something permanent came in view. For some time past Mr. Schroeder had been friends for Guy M. Dodge between here and Chicago and was considered an able and faithful workman.

He was an expert electrical industrious young man and had a large circle of friends in and about this village, as he was easy to make and hold friendship with all ages. Thus his untimely death is a source of sorrow on the part of relatives and members of the immediate family. He leaves besides his parents, a widow and two children.

Uncle Sam Minstrel Show.

Next week tickets will be on sale for the benefit minstrel show for the Illinois Volunteer Training Corps, and if you want a good seat get your ticket early. The date has been set for Friday night, April 5, when one of the best entertainments of the season is promised. You will be entertained by local members of the training corps in a big two-part program, consisting of jokes, songs, musical numbers and the like, which go to make up a delightful evening's program. There will be some new faces in the "line up" for this play and W. C. Carmichael as Uncle Sam, will build some former favorites he has made in the most agreeable fit all ages. Don't plan on going anywhere on this date, April 5, but attend the minstrel show. Tickets will be 15, 25 and 35 cents. "Tex" Cameron will officer the seat sale.

Dies at Home of Parents.

The funeral services for John Reehow, aged 43 years, who died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reehow, of Washington street, were held last Thursday afternoon from St. Paul's church, in charge of Rev. H. Tietke. Mr. Reehow had been employed for some time as flagman for the Soo railroad with headquarters at Des Plaines and came here to his parent's home to receive care following a siege of pneumonia, which, coupled with pleurisy caused his death. He leaves his parents he is survived by five sisters and three brothers. Mrs. John McCoy of this village is a sister. Interment was in St. Paul's cemetery.

Dr. Barlowe Locates Here.

Tuesday the household effects of Dr. Merle Barlowe, who has been located in Lake Zurich for several years, were moved to this village and placed in the William Peters residence on Grove avenue, where Dr. Barlowe and family will reside. The office and operating rooms will be in the Peters building over Schroeder's hardware store in the same apartment with B. W. Olcott, dentist. We welcome Dr. Barlowe and family to our village and predict for them a happy and successful future.

ANOTHER FARMERS' MEETING MARCH 23

Two Prominent Speakers, W. J. Kittle and Prof. Holden, to Talk to Farmers

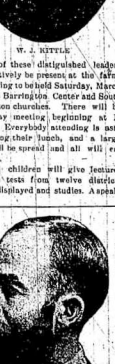
Farmers these days are thinking and talking and reading about milk cows. There is not a man who knows more or who has more interest at heart in the pro-auction side of the milk situation than Secretary William J. Kittle.

There is not a man in the United States who has accomplished more in corn improvement or is more able to tell the story than Prof. P. G. Holden.

W. J. KITTLE

Both of these distinguished leaders will positively be present at the farmers' meeting to be held Saturday, March 23 at the Barrington Center and South Barrington churches. There will be an all-day meeting, beginning at 10 o'clock. Everybody attending is asked to bring their lunch, and a large table will be spread and all will eat together.

School children will give lectures and corn tests from twelve districts will be displayed and studies.



PROF. P. G. HOLDEN

So for the ladies will be provided and music will be a feature, also. Further publicity will be given next week throughout the press and mails.

ALFALFA AND CORN

A meeting in the interest of alfalfa and corn will be held at the Lazenbiehe school next Wednesday evening, March 20. The children will show some of their tests of seed corn. Superintendent Smith and Director Farr will cooperate with the teacher, Miss Kamper, and pupils and patrons of the school. All those interested are urged to attend.

Mystic Workers' Masquerade Ball

Friday night, March 22, is the date of the second annual masquerade ball to be given by the Mystic Workers for the benefit of its soldier boys, and no doubt the auditorium will be filled with masqueraders and spectators.

The feature of the dance, aside from the costumes, will be the awarding of prizes, four each to ladies, four to gentlemen, and two for lucky spectators. These prizes have been donated by different business men of the village and are well worth striving for.

The Dreamland four-piece orchestra will furnish music and tickets will be 75 cents per couple; spectators will be admitted for 25 cents. If you want to enjoy an evening of gayety meet your friends at the masquerade March 22.

Lester Hollister of Camp Grant was home Sunday for a visit with parents.

SCHOOL NOTES.

For their art work this month the pupils are illustrating one of their lessons.

The "bird calender" in Room III has already the names of six birds seen in this vicinity.

"Play Week gardens" in Room II are ready for planting as soon as the earth is a bit warmer.

The concert to be given Friday night March 15 is by pupils of the Barrington Grammar under the direction of W. N. Sears. The members of the orchestra who are not now in school have all been attendants.

For the fortnight ending March 9 the Junior Auxiliary has received credit for 2 sweaters, 2 refuge garments and 2 crib quilts. It should be a source of pleasure to the children who have knit so faithfully this winter that every piece of knit goods turned in has been appraised as "good" at headquarters.

The first meeting of the Q. I. A. for 1918 held at Arlington Heights Tuesday of this week decided a number of matters of importance. The base ball schedule has been made on a basis of four competing schools with Arlington Heights playing here April 19. A tennis tournament set for June 3 will have entrants for singles and doubles with the winners and runners up both girls and boys. June 7 has been chosen as the date for the annual track meet at Des Plaines. Banners for base ball and track will also be awarded.

As a part of the work in English every pupil beginning with third grade is required to read some approved books during the school year and to report on them. The following pupils have already finished their assignments:—High school—Richard Wessel, Elmer Dubs, Curtis Jahnke, Earl Stoneman, Ross Wallstrom. Room V—Eleanor Alverson, Louis Cannon, Lois Mae Hagge, Kirk Smith, Esther Meyer, Minnie Lipofsky, Emma Walbaum, Dorothea Eadie. Room VI—Karl Weichelt, Carl Frick, Christ Sommerfeld, Carl Ahrens, Eleanora Berlin, Grace Schwenn, Johanna Gerdau. To Organize Poultry Association

A number of men interested in poultry met last night at the village hall with County Life Director Farr to make plans for organizing a Poultry and Pet Stock association. The object of the association is greater production and better products.

The committee desires to announce that on Saturday night, March 16, at 8 o'clock sharp will be held in the village hall to put the proposition before all interested parties and to show the benefits Barrington and community can enjoy from a successful organization of this kind.

One breeder, and we hope more will follow, offers to pay $5 for the best cockerel raised from eggs purchased from him, and the eggs are very low priced, too.

Remember the meeting Saturday night is for Barrington and vicinity, both in Cook and Lake counties.

M. E. Church Notes.

Miss Hewitt, a missionary from Mexico, will speak at the morning service for W. F. M. society. Evening subject: "Great Things for the Heart," and special music by the "Ever Ready Uproach." Some of the most significant poems will be studied, some large ideals presented in combination with songs. The purpose is to give some of the greatest emotions to suggest optimism and peace, to awaken the mind for the loftiest religious ideas, looking forward to the beautiful Christian life and satisfying experiences. The world is dark and rent with strife; we need God, and mountaintop ideals and inspiration.

JOHN B. DE LONG, Pastor.

APRIL 1ST LIMIT FOR FEDERAL RETURNS

Penalties For Income Dodgers Are Severe; Get Your Return in if You are Liable

April 1, 1918, is the final day allowed under the federal income tax law for the filing of federal income tax returns. Persons who are required to file returns under the provisions of law and who fail to get their returns in on time are subject to severe penalties, as follows:

For making false or fraudulent return, not exceeding $2,000 or not exceeding one year's imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court, and, in addition, 100 per cent. of the tax evaded.

For failing to make return on time, not less than $20 nor more than $1,000, and, in addition, 50 per cent. of the amount of tax due.

If on account of illness or absence from home you are unable to render your return within the time prescribed by law you may obtain an extension of 30 days if a request therefor is filed with the collector of your district before the due date of the return. In this request you must state the reason why the return cannot be filed within the time prescribed by law.

Collectors of internal revenue are not authorized to grant extensions of more than 30 days, but the commissioner of internal revenue has authority to grant a reasonable extension upon a showing by taxpayers that if you desire an extension of more than 30 days your request should be addressed to the commissioner and should contain a detailed statement covering the reasons which make it impossible for you to file your return on or before April 1.

The internal revenue men are now completing their tour of the country, during which they were in touch with the people of every city and town. If you failed to get in touch with the deputy which visited your section it is not too late to get advice. Consult your postmaster and if there is no present deputy, is now. Get your blank form, study the directions and the requirements as about this person and make your return without fail if your income was sufficient to come within the minimum named in the law.

It is pointed out by Commissioner Roper that it is important that the people comply with the federal laws fully at the time they are complying with the drafts for men and the conservation of foods and fuel. "The war must be paid for," says Commissioner Roper. "Congress has as much right to compel a just portion of revenue as it has to conscript our men. The tax for 1917 is designed to reach modest incomes well up into the middle, so that all persons who are in financial position to bear a portion of the heavy government expenses will be assessed in proportion to their ability to pay.

"The man who is barely making a living or barely supporting a family is not affected by the 1917 law. But the man who is able to bear a share of the burden has been reached by the new law, and he should not evade responsibility in the same patriotic spirit that our young men have shown in offering themselves for the great purpose of the country to make the world safe for people who intend to live and to govern themselves.

This tax is one which recognizes women as on an equal basis with men. Any unmarried woman or a married woman with a salary must make tax return just the same as any man. Only the woman supporting her mother or other members of her family may take out $2,000 exemption.

Under the law the head of the family is the one whose earning power contributes to the family's support.

Similarly a widow with small children to support can take out $2,000 exemption and $200 additional exemption for each of her children under eighteen. Thus it is intended that the law shall work no hardship to the poor, having to already to get along. But each must file return if her income is $1,000.

A man whose wife dies and who is left with small children to support should be entitled to the benefit of the full exemption under the new tax law and also claim $200 exemption for each of his children under eighteen.

The widower under the law is a single man and must make tax returns accordingly. The law does not file returns unless they are earning $2,000 or more.

"This is no such a national obligation as the reporting for duty of a man drafted for service with the colors," says D. C. Roper, commissioner of internal revenue. "As it stands, it is much a matter of the man or woman's own conscience. It is for him or her to determine just how far he is liable to the tax. He must figure his own income and if it reaches the figures named in the law must make faithful report upon it to the proper authority.

"This tax is distinctly a war measure and will be in effect during the war."

An adlet in the business columns—you don't have to wait.

"RAG DOLL" SEED CORN TEST AT VILLAGE HALL SATURDAY

The seed corn meeting at village hall last Saturday morning drew only a fair sized crowd, due to the fact that an auction sale had been set for the same hour. Lake County Farm Advisor Wilkins of Libertyville was unable to get here on scheduled time on account of road conditions and Country Life Director Farr, Professor Irwin S. Smith, high school pupils, Miss Cora Kellogg and a few of her pupils made short talks and explained the "rag doll" corn test.

There were ten tests displayed, some of this year and some from last season, which showed clearly that the former was not up to standard. Julius Landwehr had a test of five years which made an average of 70 per cent. Corn from the Henry Eifrink farm graded 83 1-3, while one display from the Frank Bauman place only averaged 5 1-3.

Miss Kellogg and the high school boys from Barrington are doing a mighty good work in this respect and are interested in the movement to the extent that their services are much in demand by the neighboring farmers. Miss Kellogg and her pupils make tests on all sorts of grain for farmers in the Deer Grove neighborhood which have been a great help in the reaping of better crops by those who have used them for assistance.

This was the first of a series of meetings pertaining to seed testing and the dairy trade which have been arranged to take place in different communities in Cook county, under the auspices of County Superintendent of Schools E. J. Tobin, and the next one is to take place near here, will be at Barrington Center soon.

Men's Meeting Fine Success.

A large number of men attended the meeting last Sunday at the Baptist church, and they discussed enthusiastically the plan to make it a permanent organization of all men of the community for United Christian work. It is proposed to call it The Men's Union and Community Christian association. Large plans are contemplated, including social and recreational work, educational programs, resulting later in buildings and institutions. All men of the community are to be invited to such a project under Christian direction and on Christian principles.

Next Sunday at the Baptist church the meeting will be held at 3:30, and Rev. Hoffman will present a study of religious education and social work. There will be two five-minute talks by other men. A large effort is being made to bring men out to this meeting, and all men are invited. The discussions are lively and vital.

On Sunday afternoon, March 24, Rev. John E. DeLong will conduct the study on "Some Proposed Plans of Co-operation, Organization and Enterprises." Large things for the Kingdom will grow out of this movement. Save the time for next Sunday.

Training Corps Notes.

An unusually good attendance responded to the regular Monday night drill of the Illinois Volunteer Training Corps, and the men were given some first aid work and drill, since weather conditions have halted same.

Song books, issued by the State Council of Defense, were given members and they have begun to learn the memorize many of the numbers so as to be able to render appropriate music should the occasion present itself.

A base ball club for 1918 will no doubt be organized in the near future, as Captain Castle appointed a committee of three, Hy. Meyer, Fred Waterman and Charles Hutchinson, to serve in this regard and complete plans for a team to represent the corps. Their names were given out Monday night.

After a short drill at the Spencer park squad performances were numerous as each corporal gave specific attention to his men for some time.

A Big Job.

The Waukegan Leader last week printed a portion of the delinquent tax slate list for W. C. Foster company of Chicago, which took an immense amount of type to assemble and the amount of type is not completed, however, and more of it will appear in the Leader this week and next. Mr. Blanck, the editor, says the job measured over 3 feet of solid type and took his force three days to set it by hand. A large amount of material was borrowed from the Palatinian at McHenry.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN

CHAPTER I

The Crown Prince Runa Away.

The Crown Prince sat in the royal box and swung his legs. This was hardly proper, but the royal legs did not quite reach the floor from the high crimson-velvet seat of his chair.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto was aged: His royal robes, consisting of a pair of blue serge trousers, a short Eton jacket, and a stiff, rolling collar of white linen, proved it.

He had been brought to the opera house under a misapprehension. His aunt, the Archduchess Antoinette, had strongly encouraged "The Flying Dutchman," and his English governess, Miss Braithwaite, had read him the story of spring literature about it. So here he was, and like Flying Dutchman was not exactly at all, one did it for. And was tired of flying, after dreary eons of singing. It was moved off on creaky rollers by two men whose shadows were known grotesquely on the sea backing.

The orchestra, agitated by a bass solo and intermittent thunder in the wings, was making a deafening din. One of the musicians, a little Italian, took out its handkerchief and wiped its nose.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto looked across at the other royal box, and caught his Cousin Hedwig's eye. She also had been brought against her will, took out her own scrap of linen, and mimicked the shadow. Another, Herr Baron Rippenstein, was in ecstatics being occupied with the storm, she winked across at Prince Ferdinand William Otto.

In the opposite box were his two cousins, the Princesses Hedwig and Hilda, attended by Mademoiselle Jodoin, Hedwig was eighteen. The crown prince liked Hedwig better than Hilda. Hedwig was to be presented formally to the court at the Christmas-eve ball, and had been daily presentable by her governess to the king with the usual string of pearls and her own carriage, she still ran off now and then to have fun with the crown prince and Miss Braithwaite in the school room at the palace) and she could eat a great deal of bread and butter.

The crown prince yawned, although it was hot in the middle of the afternoon. Catching Hedwig's eye, he ran his fingers up through his thick yellow hair just above his forehead. She had confided to him once, while they were walking in the garden at the summer palace, that she was thinking of being in love with a young lieutenant who was attached to the king's suite. The prince had never called Otto, for short, by his family, because he actually had eleven names (his godfathers had been numerous) for some time afterward he had bothered Miss Braithwaite to define being in love. She had had no really satisfactory answer.

In pursuance of his quest for information, Ferdinand William Otto had with the young officer, whose name was Larisch, and had finally asked to have him (the young officer) in waiting school. The grim old king had granted the request, but it had been quite fruitless as far as the prince's mind Larisch only grew quite red as to the eyes when love was mentioned, although he appeared not unwilling to hear Hedwig's name.

So now Ferdinand William Otto rest his fingers through his pale hair, which was a favorite gesture of the lieutenant's, and Hedwig blushed. The archduchess sitting well back, was nodding. Just outside the royal box, the red velvet sofa, General Mettlich, who was the chamberlain, had fallen comfortably asleep. He had been invited and was outside because he said he liked to hear music, not see it. He was good looking. His martial beauty, with the gold braid, was rising and falling peacefully. Beside him by the prince's chair, a small black derby hat.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto considered it all very wearisome. He could only wonder around the corridor, or buy a sandwich from the stand at the foot of the great staircase—or, better still, if nine could only get to the street, alone, and purchase one of the fig women from Miss Braithwaite as designed! The crown prince felt in his pocket, where his week's allowance of pocket money lay comfortably untouched.

He meditated. He could go out quickly, and be back before they knew it. Even if he only wandered down the corridor, it would stretch his short legs. And outside it was a fine day. He looked already like spring.

With the trepidation of a canary who finds his cage door open, and hopping to the edge, surveys the world before venturing to explore it, Prince Ferdinand William Otto rose to his feet. Hedwig, in the box, Duchess Antoinette, who did not move, and looked around him from the doorway. He paused.

He picked up his hat and concealed it by his side. Then cautiously, as if to stretch his legs by walking, crossed the corridor and back, he passed the dressing room door. Another moment, and he was out, of sight around a bend of the passageway, and before him lay liberty.

Not quite! At the top of the private staircase reserved for the royal family a guard commonly stood. He was there now, a fear fresh his post, however, and was watching the stage through the half-open door of a private box.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto passed behind him with outward calmness. At the top of the public staircase, however, he hesitated. Here, everywhere, were brass-buttoned officials of the opera house. A pardessus woman stared at him curiously. The little prince looked at the woman with a frown of a king. Then, with his heart thumping, he ran past her, down the white marble staircase, to where the great red velvet rope barred the way.

Olga, the wardrobe woman, came out from behind her counter and stood looking down the marble staircase at the small flying figure.

The old soldier who rented opera glasses at the second landing, and who had left a leg in Bosnia, leaned over the railing. "Look at that!" he exclaimed. "He will break a leg, the young rascal! I could have—but there, he is safe! The good God watches over fools and children."

"It looks like the little prince," said the wardrobe woman. "I have seen him often—he has the same bright hair."

But the opera-glass man was not listening. He had drawn a long snuff from an enormous pocket and a roll from the other, and now, retiring to a far window, he stood pleasantly eating—his mind occupied with old days of breed. His mind was in Bosnia, with his leg. And because old Adolbert's mind was in Bosnia, the little prince was home with the mind, and not with the ear, he did not hear the sharp question of the sentry who came out of the stairs and paused for a second at the clock-room. Well for Olga, too, that old Adolbert did not hear her reply.

"He has not passed here," she said, with wide and honest eyes, but with as can toward old Adolbert. "As old gentleman came a moment ago and got a sandwich, which he had left in his overcoat. Perhaps this is whom you are seeking?"

The sentry cursed, and ran down the staircase, the nails in his shoes striking sharply on the marble.

Olga of the cloak room leaned over her objects, with her lips curved up in a smile. "The little one!" she thought. "And such courage! He will make a great king! Let him have his picture like the other children, and—God bless him and keep him!"

The crown prince was just a little startled by the brilliance of his escapes. He paused for one breathless moment under the porte-cochere of the opera house as he took a long breath, turned to the left, and was at once swallowed up in the street crowd. It seemed extraordinary to him, that he was unaccustomed to crowds. And he had, that very Christmas, gone shopping in the city, accompanied only by one of his tutors and Miss Braithwaite, and bought for his grandfather, the King, a silver horse shoe, which might hold either neckties or gloves, and for his cousins silver photograph frames!

But this was different, and for a rather peculiar reason. Prince Ferdinand William Otto had never been in back of a crowd! The public was always lined up, facing him, smiling and waving and bobbing him. Prince Ferdinand William Otto had never known the backs could be so rigid. It was mind boggling.

The next two were full of remarkable things. For one, he dodged behind a street car and was almost run over by a motor truck. The policeman on the corner came out, and taking Ferdinand William Otto by the shoulder, gave him a shaking so sad a shaking, Ferdinand William Otto was furious, but pitiey kept him silent; which proves conclusively that the royal prince had not only initiative—witness his flight—but self-control and diplomacy. He was a king, to give his prospect such a king!

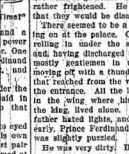
Prince Ferdinand William Otto had been brought up with a great desire to be small, active mind. This was nothing less than a ride on the American goods train, which had secured a concession in a far corner of the park. Hedwig's lieutenant had described it to him—he was not taken in a small car to a dizzy height, and then turned loose on a track which dropped giddily and rose again, which buried one beneath street-iron tunnels of incredible blackness, thrust one out over a gorge where one looked down curves around corners of precipitous heights, and finally landed one, panting, breathless, shock-headed, but safe, at the very platform where one had purchased one's ticket, three eternities, which were only minutes, before.

As the early spring twilight fell, the gas lamps along the alley, always burning, showed a twin row of pale stars ahead. At the end, even as the young hero dared, he saw, against of tiny red, white, and blue lights, riding high in the air, outlining the crags and peaks of the sheet iron mountain which was his destination. The land of desire was very near!

There came to his ears, too, the occasional rumble that told of some palpitating soul being at that moment buried and twisted and joyously emptied, as per the lieutenant's description.

Now it is a strange thing, but true, that one does not reach the land of desire alone; because the habit of pleasure is the sharing of it with some one else, and the land of desire, alone, is not the land of desire at all. Quite suddenly, Prince Ferdinand William Otto discovered that he was lonely, at that moment there was a soft whirring off to one side of him, and a yellow light flashed and falling erratically on the breeze, careened suddenly and fell at his feet.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto bent down and picked it up. It was a small toy aeroplane, with yellow silk planes.



"Get! Did You See It Go That Time?"

cup ropes of waxed thread, and a wooden rudder, its motive power wound in a tightly twisted rubber. One of the wings was bent. Ferdinand William Otto straightened it, and looked around for the owner.

A small boy was standing under the next gas lamp. "Gee!" he said in English. "Did you see it go that time?"

Prince Ferdinand William Otto eyed the stranger. He was about his own size, and was dressed in a short pair of corduroy trousers, much bloomed at the knee, a pair of yellow Russian leather shoes that reached well to his calves, and, over all, a shaggy white sweater, rolling almost to his chin. On the very back of his head he had the smallest cap that Prince Ferdinand William Otto had ever seen.

"This is the best time for flying," he said, in his perfect English. "All the exhibition flights are at sundown."

He also walked slowly over and stood looking down at him. "You ought to see it fly from the top of Pike's Peak," he continued, pleasantly. "That's Pike's Peak up there."

He indicated the very top of the land of Bohemia, with his forefinger.

"How does one get up?" he queried.

"Ladders. My father's the manager. Do you want to meet him?"

Prince Ferdinand William Otto stared with new awe at the boy. He fought his first impulse to deny knowledge of the stranger, and stated that his father was the king of England, kings were, as you may see, directly descended from the gods. Prince Ferdinand William Otto was furious, that pitiey kept him silent; which proves conclusively that the royal prince had not only initiative—witness his flight—but self-control and diplomacy. He was a king, to give his prospect such a king!

Prince Ferdinand William Otto had been brought up with a great desire to be small, active mind. This was nothing less than a ride on the American goods train, which had secured a concession in a far corner of the park. Hedwig's lieutenant had described it to him—he was not taken in a small car to a dizzy height, and then turned loose on a track which dropped giddily and rose again, which buried one beneath street-iron tunnels of incredible blackness, thrust one out over a gorge where one looked down curves around corners of precipitous heights, and finally landed one, panting, breathless, shock-headed, but safe, at the very platform where one had purchased one's ticket, three eternities, which were only minutes, before.

As the early spring twilight fell, the gas lamps along the alley, always burning, showed a twin row of pale stars ahead. At the end, even as the young hero dared, he saw against of tiny red, white, and blue lights, riding high in the air, outlining the crags and peaks of the sheet iron mountain which was his destination. The land of desire was very near!

There came to his ears, too, the occasional rumble that told of some palpitating soul being at that moment buried and twisted and joyously emptied, as per the lieutenant's description.

Now it is a strange thing, but true, that one does not reach the land of desire alone; because the habit of pleasure is the sharing of it with some one else, and the land of desire, alone, is not the land of desire at all. Quite suddenly, Prince Ferdinand William Otto discovered that he was lonely, at that moment there was a soft whirring off to one side of him, and a yellow light flashed and falling erratically on the breeze, careened suddenly and fell at his feet.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto bent down and picked it up. It was a small toy aeroplane, with yellow silk planes.

cup ropes of waxed thread, and a wooden rudder, its motive power wound in a tightly twisted rubber. One of the wings was bent. Ferdinand William Otto straightened it, and looked around for the owner.

A small boy was standing under the next gas lamp. "Gee!" he said in English. "Did you see it go that time?"

Prince Ferdinand William Otto eyed the stranger. He was about his own size, and was dressed in a short pair of corduroy trousers, much bloomed at the knee, a pair of yellow Russian leather shoes that reached well to his calves, and, over all, a shaggy white sweater, rolling almost to his chin. On the very back of his head he had the smallest cap that Prince Ferdinand William Otto had ever seen.

"This is the best time for flying," he said, in his perfect English. "All the exhibition flights are at sundown."

He also walked slowly over and stood looking down at him. "You ought to see it fly from the top of Pike's Peak," he continued, pleasantly. "That's Pike's Peak up there."

He indicated the very top of the land of Bohemia, with his forefinger.

"How does one get up?" he queried.

"Here I Am, Sir," Said the Crown Prince.

Olga, the wardrobe woman, came out from behind her counter and stood looking down the marble staircase at the small flying figure.

The old soldier who rented opera glasses at the second landing, and who had left a leg in Bosnia, leaned over the railing. "Look at that!" he exclaimed. "He will break a leg, the young rascal! I could have—but there, he is safe! The good God watches over fools and children."

"It looks like the little prince," said the wardrobe woman. "I have seen him often—he has the same bright hair."

But the opera-glass man was not listening. He had drawn a long snuff from an enormous pocket and a roll from the other, and now, retiring to a far window, he stood pleasantly eating—his mind occupied with old days of breed. His mind was in Bosnia, with his leg. And because old Adolbert's mind was in Bosnia, the little prince was home with the mind, and not with the ear, he did not hear the sharp question of the sentry who came out of the stairs and paused for a second at the clock-room. Well for Olga, too, that old Adolbert did not hear her reply.

"He has not passed here," she said, with wide and honest eyes, but with as can toward old Adolbert. "As old gentleman came a moment ago and got a sandwich, which he had left in his overcoat. Perhaps this is whom you are seeking?"

The sentry cursed, and ran down the staircase, the nails in his shoes striking sharply on the marble.

Olga of the cloak room leaned over her objects, with her lips curved up in a smile. "The little one!" she thought. "And such courage! He will make a great king! Let him have his picture like the other children, and—God bless him and keep him!"

The crown prince was just a little startled by the brilliance of his escapes. He paused for one breathless moment under the porte-cochere of the opera house as he took a long breath, turned to the left, and was at once swallowed up in the street crowd. It seemed extraordinary to him, that he was unaccustomed to crowds. And he had, that very Christmas, gone shopping in the city, accompanied only by one of his tutors and Miss Braithwaite, and bought for his grandfather, the King, a silver horse shoe, which might hold either neckties or gloves, and for his cousins silver photograph frames!

But this was different, and for a rather peculiar reason. Prince Ferdinand William Otto had never been in back of a crowd! The public was always lined up, facing him, smiling and waving and bobbing him. Prince Ferdinand William Otto had never known the backs could be so rigid. It was mind boggling.

The next two were full of remarkable things. For one, he dodged behind a street car and was almost run over by a motor truck. The policeman on the corner came out, and taking Ferdinand William Otto by the shoulder, gave him a shaking so sad a shaking,

INCREASE IN WESTERN CANADA ACREAGE

Will Prove a Big Factor in Winning the War.

Reports to hand indicate that Western Canada has a vastly increased acreage ready for crop this year over last year. The splendid open fall of 1917, gave a better opportunity for fall plowing than for some years. Work in the fields was almost continuous until the end of November. In fact, in the neighborhood of Stanley Creek, Alberta, there was sufficient mild weather in January of this year to permit farmers to plow, and, many, took advantage of it. A great many Americans owning land in Canada moved up last year, and this has also helped to increase the acreage. They came into possession of the land on prices varying from $15.00 to $25.00 an acre, and with the proven yields of wheat running from twenty and as high as fifty bushels per acre, with a net price of $2.21 a bushel, they could look production and patriotism together with a big margin of profit. The Post-Intelligencer of Seattle, Wash., gives a very conservative statement of the agricultural development and opportunities in Western Canada. In its issue of December 14, 1917, it says:—

"Since the beginning of the year American emigration into Canada has been greatly stimulated according to the reports of the Dominion authorities, and has been almost entirely made up of farmers attracted by the fertile and comparatively cheap wheat lands.

"Whatever may be said of wheat culture as a profitable investment in ordinary years, since the beginning of the war it has offered advantages quite beyond the usual experience. War has boomed the price of wheat until the farmer now receives around $2 for his product at his granary. Average crops, according to the adaptation of soil and climate range from 12 to 25 bushels to the acre. Even the minimum crop, at $2 per bushel, brings in these war times a reasonable profit. Before the war wheat culture was that being abandoned by farmers who worked intelligently for results on the right side of the ledger. It has been the popular crop for new settlers, but when the pioneers settled down to business it was generally corn, hogs, cattle and diversified farming that brought the profits. Iowa and the Dakotas in turn, as the farms became settled, mortgaged the land on wheat culture and refinanced paid off the mortgages with corn and hogs.

"War is thus bringing a temporary encouragement to Middle farming. Many of the ranchers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta hold away $20,000 to $50,000 in the banks and land. It may be pointed out, however, that the growing of wheat is not the only inducement which is lending settlement to Canadian lands. Low taxation, favorable agricultural climates, and profitable prices not only for grain but for hogs, cattle and all forms of farm produce all contribute their share toward the rapid settlement of the fertile lands of Western Canada."—Advertisement.

ON GUARD

At this time of the year people feel weak, tired, listless, their blood is thin, they have lived indoors and perhaps expended all their mental and bodily energy and they want to know how to renew their energy and stamina, overcome headaches and backaches, have clear eyes, a smooth, ruddy skin, and feel the exhilaration of real good health, tingling thru their body. Good, pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against ills of all kinds. Almost all diseases come from impure and impoverished blood. It is to be noticed to the pale or pimply face, the tired, languor expressions, all the listless answer:—

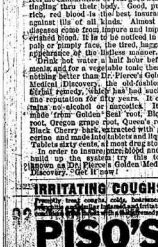
Our Daily Bread

By REV. L. W. COSNELL
Assistant Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Give us this day our daily bread. Matthew 6:11.

This petition takes a new meaning today when the food supply is limited. How blessed that "our Father" is interested in such matters!

The word "bread" covers food in general. Some have thought it must contain a reference to Christ, the spiritual bread. True, it naturally leads our minds to him, but we believe its primary reference is to material bread.



Here is a plain encouragement to present our physical needs before God, although it is to be kept in mind that petitions out of the seven in the Lord's Prayer are taken up with spiritual things.

We ask God to "give" us our bread. Let us keep in mind that it comes from him. Tiffany tells us of a story of a man who met a boy in the village street, carrying a loaf of bread. He asked the boy where he got the loaf, and the boy replied: "From the baker." "But where did he get it?" Blushing, the boy replied: "From the farmer." "And where did the farmer get it?" "Why, he got it from his father." "Yes, but where did your father get his wheat?" "Oh from God," said the boy. "Then," said the man, "you get your loaf from God."

Back of the loaf is the sunny floor,
And back of the floor the mill,
And back of the mill the wheat and the shower
And the sun and the Father's will.

Although God gives us our bread, yet we must labor for it and the scripture says, "If any man will not work, neither let him eat." The fact that we toil assures us that God will feed us, for does he not feed the birds of the air, which neither sow nor reap nor gather into barns? And what does he says, "Even to feed the sparrows God spends more than the revenues of the French kingdom?" Hence this petition sanctifies our toil. What man could cheat or steal or lie the after he has asked God to give him his bread?

Again, since God gives us our bread we should thank him for it. How beautiful is the picture given us of the apostolic church, that "they did eat their meat with gladness." We have neglected we are of the duty and grace of thanksgiving.

We pray that God would give "us" our bread, considering our brothers as well as our own. If we pray aright we shall not shut up our heart of compassion against the poor. Let thus what we asked the poor man cry for bread in order to enrich ourselves.

How God Fed a Widow and Her Children.

It is to be noted that Jesus directs us to pray for bread for "this day" only. This implies that we are to trust our Father for the morrow and to be unanxious. Dr. H. C. Trumbull tells of a poor widow and her children who lived near his boyhood home. One night, she put her little one down to bed, she knew she had nothing to eat for the morrow, yet needed in faith, she remembered her needs to God. The next morning, she saw the table around and then sent the children to the neighbors to get food for the floor; it was used in those days instead of cloth. While they were gone she prayed earnestly to God for food for breakfast. The children soon came back in tears, bringing a fish which had been left in a hollow of the beach by the receding tide. While the mother was cooking it a neighbor called and explained that years before the widow's husband had done him a kindness which he now wished to repay; he left a bushel and a half of carrots. The mother proceeded to cook Johny-cake and then fed her children how the fish and ends had come just in time to answer to prayer. With what gratitude to God they sat down to that breakfast! The neighbors heard the story, and flow to it that this good woman and her children were never again in want.

The word "daily" is found nowhere in the Greek Testament save in the Lord's Prayer. There has been much discussion as to its meaning. The best scholars incline to the view that "daily bread" means bread sufficient for our existence, which we actually need to sustain us. What a rebuke to luxury! The most spiritual men of the ages feel that they fear luxury as they fear but few things; it has a subtle power to sap spiritual strength. Our Heavenly Father only engages to meet the modest needs of his children. Those needs vary considerably in the eye of a king, for example, as compared with a peasant. But in every case God will hear the prayer of his children for their "daily bread."

How unhappy the state of those who do not know God as their Father in heaven!

First know your Bible, and then how to use it!

THE HOPE CHEST

By VINCENT G. PERRY.

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

There never was a chaperone like Aunt Flo; both Leslie and Nora agreed on that. Leslie and Nora had been engaged for over a year. He had a fine position and an income capable of taking a wife, so he thought it time they were married.

"Why, Leslie," she said one day near the end of the season, "you talk as if I was on the verge of being an old maid. Why, I'am only twenty-two or twenty-three when a girl gets the very best out of life. My good times have just begun."

"That doesn't say that they will cease when you become my wife," he argued. "You know that I love you and that your happiness is my first consideration."

But nagging only made each more stubbornly sure of his own opinion, and Nora's Leslie left, been in tears.

Aunt Flo was waiting for them on the veranda of the hotel. The minute she saw Leslie appear alone she knew something had happened and was ready with her sympathy. When he poured out his troubles.

"Don't be impatient; Nora is foolish to wait," she said after he had finished. "Have patience, though, for I know I can."

Near the end of the week, a trunk arrived for Aunt Flo. She had not said anything about its being expected and Nora was rather curious to know why it had been sent. Some days later Aunt had not bought new clothes. She had more than she would be able to wear there, as it was.

"I contains some things I have had sent here for you, dear," Aunt Flo explained when Nora questioned her about it. "They are some things of your mother's, I thought you might like them and they can go home with your luggage."

"You're a dear! What are they?" Nora asked eagerly.

"Some things that I started collecting when I was younger than you. I prize them and would not let anyone touch them while I was alive."

Nora found the trunk in her aunt's room and the key was in the lock. It was a very old-fashioned trunk, but it looked as if it had done very little travelling. It was covered with leather before she opened it. Somehow there seemed to be something sacred about it, and Nora felt as if she were the first to open

THE "CLUB" METHOD.

When, but a few years ago, the movement was started to organize the boys and girls, men and women of the land into clubs for the better furthering of various agricultural interests, the promoters were far from dreaming of the great benefit these organizations were destined to confer upon their country. Promoted originally largely as a matter of pride in achievement for achievement's sake, they have really placed their country in position to mobilize her enormous resources for the most titanic struggle this world has ever witnessed. The urgency of the food situation has made of these organizations a heavenent boon. They have enlisted effort that was heretofore either misdirected or utterly wasted.

This year should see such an effort on the part of various agricultural clubs as will make the world sit up and take notice. Greater results should be accomplished because they have passed the experimental stage and are now firmly established. The preliminaries of organization and experiment are past, and the road lies open before them, with sign boards correctly placed and all needed information thoroughly worked out and available for all.

The day has arrived when the closest possible co-operation is necessary between every agency that has to do with the great problem of the world's food supply. Only by such co-operation can we hope to overcome the great handicaps under which we are already laboring.

Every pig club, corn club, vegetable club, canning club, or club of whatever kind should be thoroughly awake and direct its supreme efforts towards the working out of the plans of our government. Your country calls for the best that in you lies. The opportunity and the material are at your hand. A long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together, and the victory will be ours.

KEEP THE CHILDREN IN SCHOOL.

With the many pressing matters claiming the attention of the people and the urgent need of every hand at the plow that can possibly be mustered, the temptation is great to slack up in school attendance. This temptation should be resisted. No child of school age should be permitted to absent himself or herself from the schoolroom. The urge of education was never greater than at present. The absolute inability of the uneducated to meet present day conditions was never more apparent. And not only is this true, but the education must be more thorough now than was ever before demanded.

The probable duration of the war is a matter of much uncertainty. A slackening of the educational drive would be most unfair to the young people and would place them at a terrible disadvantage; would impose upon them a handicap from which many of them would never recover.

If we would have an object lesson of the effects of abandoning the education of the young during the war times, we have only to look to the Southern States of this Republic. During the unfortunate war between the States, when the people of the South were fighting for their very life, education was permitted to languish. The present free school system was then unknown; all schools being of the "subscription" class. These were largely abandoned, and the young people permitted to grow up practically without education. The result is still to be seen in many sections of the South. Men who were in their teens when the war broke out, just at the age when they should have been applying themselves diligently to securing an education, were drafted for work on the farms, and from there graduated to the ranks, with the result that they have gone through life without the education that by rights should have been theirs. There are thousands of these men throughout the South today—men of great natural talents who had they gotten the training they should have had, would now be occupying high positions. But their illiteracy has been fatal to any real progress. They are honest, painstaking workers in whatever field they may occupy, but their handicap places them in the ranks of the mediocre, and struggle as they may they can never go higher.

As illustrative of the point we wish to impress, let us state that of the entire country the South is today more than any other section preeminently a young man's country. It is so from the fact that such a large per cent of the older people are so deficient in education.

The boy or girl can find time to do all the work in other lines that should be imposed upon them and still keep up their studies. A few hours each day given to real work will only serve them the better for their studies. And a few hours of work each day is all that should be required of them under any circumstances.

Keep the children in school. They are our future citizens, and we can't afford to lower the standard.

THE NEW GERMAN MENACE

The map presented herewith shows plainly how the collapse of Russia has brought on once the menace of pan-Germanism and the conquest of Baltic and eastern Europe, Asia Minor, India, and even northwestern China. The line of arrows shows the route which the Germans now claim it open to them. The collapse of Russia has given them the north coast of the Black sea. It gave them the Black sea, either to sweep around the Black sea or to cross it to Batum (or Batum) and thence to the gates of India.

The route by which Germany first sought the entry into India is shown by the dotted line. This route appeared easy to the British successes in Mesopotamia. The British after their first disaster at Kut-el-Amara returned to their assault, captured Kut and then Bagdad, and their lines now stand firmly across the route north of Bagdad. The Bagdad lines for a long time stretched south and southeast from the ancient seat of the Bible sea, adding an additional incence, but they since have retired before the Turks.

Meanwhile the British forces which started their operations from Egypt and the Suez have continued their advance across the Holy Land until they now are within striking distance of Jerusalem, where a further advance by them would cut the Constantinople Bagdad railroad.

HOLD CASUALTY LISTS

USE OF ADDRESSES GIVES FOR VALUABLE INFORMATION.

Pershing Says Units at the Front Are Identified Through Publication of Names.

Washington, March 11.—The war department has ruled that the military casualty lists to be made public in newspapers shall not include the enemy gases addresses—the names and addresses of relatives or friends.

The committee on public information, of which George Creel is chairman, has refused to put out the casualty lists through its news channels unless they include the emergency address.

The committee takes the ground that a more list of names without means of identification is not public information.

Orders from the White House may be necessary to straighten out the matter.

Reports of casualties continue to arrive, but the names thereof have been offered to the committee on public information in abridged form for dissemination through the regular news channels. They merely give the men's name and rank.

When Mr. Creel and the editors of the news division learned that merely the names were given out they decided that the committee would not publish the lists.

SECOND ARMY DRAFT NOW ON

95,000 Men Will Move to Training Camps Beginning March 29.

FURLOUGHS FOR AGRICULTURE

Those In First Call Not Desired at Home Will Be Left and Added Taken From Second—New Plan Announced.

Washington, March 9.—There will be no date set for the second draft for the very sufficient reason that the second draft is on now.

The call issued on Tuesday for 95,000 men to be assembled during the three days beginning March 29 was to go 20,000 into the second installment. If all the men liable to service under the original call were called. Actually the 95,000 will take 10,000 or 20,000 of the young men of the second installment, while a lot of the original drafts will not be hidden to the colors at all. Their time will come, but it will be when it is convenient for the camps to handle them.

Illinois, for instance, is required to send 1,061 as its quota of the 95,000. There remain, 6,000 men of the original draft, and these men will have gone to the camps. Wisconsin is asked for 2,214, Michigan for 5,538 and Indiana for 2,207, while Iowa and Minnesota are not required to send any.

The new plan of drafting states that they filled their quota of the first draft, and some states that still owe men on that account are passed over. This simply means that the selective system has taken the place of the lottery plan, and that the 125 this time in the United States will take men as it needs them, choosing the particular men of men and being guided by the capacity of particular camps to the men they need, and other considerations.

The general scheme of the new arrangement was announced on Tuesday by an official bulletin from Provost Marshal General Crowder's office.

According to this bulletin, 800,000 men have decided to be drafted must be used for the purpose of allocating the quotas of the various states. This does not mean that 800,000 will be called out—there may be only 500,000 or there may be 1,000,000—the elasticity lies in the fact makes either figure possible.

A group will be announced every month or two.

For a month past selected men have been gathered for service here and there.

"This is a war of mechanics," says Crowder, and then he goes on to explain that he put the mechanics into the army with the minimum disturbance.

"Men who are already in the military service, who have such special skill, will be taken from the line regiments and assigned to other units and departments where their skill is needed.

"Men classified by the selective boards, even though they may have been placed in a deferred classification, will be withdrawn after a time and particularly from the industries of the nation for special service in staff corps and departments.

"E. Young men of draft age, who certain educational qualifications, will be inducted into the service and sent to universities, colleges and technical and secondary schools for special and accelerated courses until they have acquired such proficiency as will justify their assignment to the special units that are being organized in considerable numbers.

"In conference with this plan the provost marshal general has already called upon the states for some 10,000 trained artisans, and I feel sure that upon the states for 10,000 young men graduates of engineer schools, university and technical schools, technical and other schools throughout the United States for a two months' course before entering the army.

"It would be a most unscientific and fatuous step if the selective boards were called indiscriminately, without regard to the labor situation in any district, to send men in the order in which they happened to be determined by the national drawing, except that where it is allowed that a registrant is complete and positively employed in the planting or reaping of a crop, in this case the edges shall be deferred to the foot of the quota of his board or, if he as he continues to be employed, until the end of the crop.

"As a final contribution to the cause of food growing, agricultural students in their senior year, and those among the junior classes who are of the age to have their draft calls deferred to enable them to finish their course.

News Nuggets From Illinois

Chicago.—Would you raise the interest mortgage on the home? Buy a hog. Would you build a flat building? Buy two or three hogs. Would you become independently wealthy? Buy a drove—just a small drove of hogs. Big money is making out hogs and simple mathematics, as any one of half a dozen prospectuses of stock-selling companies will tell you. Assistant Attorney General Raymond S. Pruitt is now investigating the sale of hog stock certificates offered in Chicago investors. The promoters are taking out no licenses under the provisions of the "blue sky" law, claiming they are organized under the common law and are not corporations.

Springfield.—January, 1918, was the most severe month in the climatological history of Illinois, according to Clarence J. Root, meteorologist at the United States weather bureau here. "As far back as 1878 there has been no month of any name as cold as the one under discussion," says Mr. Root in the January pamphlet of the climatological data, just published. "And the local record at Peoria, extending 65 years, shows this January to be the coldest of any month, and the coldest temperature of December and January lower than any two previous, consecutive months."

Springfield.—Y. T. Dallman, United States marshal, and two deputies left this city for Rock Island, whither District Attorney E. C. Kunitz preceded them to engage in the government's crusade against liquor and vice in the military zone surrounding the federal arsenal. John E. Dougherty, assistant United States attorney, and Deputy Marshal Wigham were suspended from duty at Rock Island by orders from Washington, D. C., for failure to clean up conditions at the arsenal.

Chicago.—All exemption boards in Chicago, and presumably Illinois, received the following letter from Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson: "To all local boards: The response of the school teachers of Illinois to the call of the president to prepare the occupational cards in each county of Illinois has been a most gratifying one to all concerned. Can you not do something to speed up this work? Shall this work fall because the teachers of Illinois neglect this request to aid their country?"

Chicago.—Gardening is to be a major undertaking in Illinois this year. Last year, village, town and city dwellers made a beginning. But this year every vacant lot is expected to be put to service and made to do its patriotic duty. Gardening is to be made an organized industry instead of a series of sporadic individual experiments. The food production and conservation committee of the state council of defense is urging community action in war gardening throughout the state.

Peoria.—The distillery of the Clarke Bros. & Co., distillery, the largest straight whisky distillery in the world, by the United States Industrial Alcohol company when manufacture of whisky was suspended by the government, about that concern six distilleries now using 400,000 gallons of molasses a day and turning out daily 185,000 gallons of alcohol which goes to the United States government and the allies for the manufacture of explosives.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels in an official order established a five-mile dry zone around the Great Lakes Naval Training station and seven other naval stations. Within this zone all saloons must close. Within this zone no liquor may be served to officers and men of the navy in private homes in which they are guests.

Chicago.—The danger from alien enemies in manufacturing plants can be eliminated if men of citizen proved make it his business to safeguard the plant in which he is working. Col. Frank B. Harris, adjutant general of the central war department bureau, He recommends that a superintendent of personnel and plant protection be named.

Bloomington.—Ralph Benford, chief engineer of the Illinois traction commission, has been advised that quail have survived the blizzards in northern and southern Illinois, but that many were killed in central Illinois.

Carlinville.—Within the next few days it is expected that the contracts for the sale of 20,000 acres of coal lands east of this city will be closed. The rights to be purchased are in the vicinity of Wamac and south of there.

Paris.—The meeting of central Illinois members of the seed corn convention held in Paris was one of the most important gatherings of farmers ever held in this section of the state. More than 200 were in attendance.

Freeport.—Receivers for the private bank of Burkhart Bros. at Polo declared a first dividend of 25 per cent. Checks amounting to about $200,000 will be sent to creditors. Bryant Burkhart, head of the bank, drowned himself last fall.

Champaign.—The experiment station of the University of Illinois has issued Circular No. 211, on the seed corn situation, which it regards as the most salient in the history of the state. "Good seed is scarce," it says, "and many counties will be unable to supply their own seed."

Camp Logan, Houston, Tex.—A committee of food experts from Washington began a survey of foodstuffs at Camp Logan to determine what improvements if any can be made on the character of food and conditions under which it is served to the Illinois soldiers.

Chicago.—The United States food administration, following the assurance from grocers, shippers and jobbers that there will be no inflation of prices, inaugurated a campaign to appeal to the 25,000,000 bushels of potatoes now in the hands of Wisconsin and Michigan farmers. Plans for an appeal to the consumers in the city of Chicago and other cities to eat more potatoes to prevent enormous waste were formulated at a conference in the offices of the food administration. The conference was attended by growers from Wisconsin, adjacent Indiana, and was called by Horace C. Gardner, chairman of the price committee. The growers explained that because of lack of transportation there are now millions of bushels of potatoes in their bins in danger of spoiling.

Chicago.—The new National party, swelled by the members of a convention of political units, all of which have decided to form one body, the new National party stands pat for prohibition, social democracy and progressiveness, three propositions which formerly were the keynote of separate organizations. The new National party comprises the old single tax party, the socialists, the Woman's party, the Social Democratic league, and, in a limited sense, the Prohibition party and what is left of the Progressive party. The program of the National party is divided into three parts. "Political Democracy" is sanctioned, "Industrial Democracy" championed, and support is pledged to principles of "International Democracy."

Chicago.—Immediate action to prevent any possibility of decreasing planting of corn because of a shortage in the seed supply was taken by Chief Deputy Stevenson of the Illinois food administration when he inaugurated a state-wide search for corn of the 1916 crop, plenty of which is said to be scattered throughout the country. W. G. Eckhardt, state seed corn administrator, pointed out that there is a possibility of the abandonment of one-third of the normal corn acreage because of the inability of farmers to obtain seed. Every farmer in Illinois is urged to get busy now to search for seed corn. Advice is given that there is a shortage in seed wheat was denied by Bernard W. Snow and other crop experts.

Chicago.—The battle cry of freedom, shouted from 700 eagle throats, sounded in full measure in the ears and confidence to our soldiers "over there" and echoed a mighty different sort of music from that of the German imperial band, Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. It was the war cry with which the workers for the third Liberty loan voiced their spirit for the beginning of the great spring drive—the new sale of our bonds which is to begin on April 6 the anniversary of this country's entrance into the war. They met here representatives from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Washington, D. C.—Illinois was fourth in volume of subscriptions to the third Liberty loan with a total of $271,731,750, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo announced. New York was first with subscriptions of $1,413,000,800, was far in the lead. Pennsylvania with $497,372,550 was second, and Massachusetts with $317,795,554 was third. Subscriptions of other middle western states were: Indiana, $61,800,000; Michigan, $110,000,000; Minnesota, $70,504,500; Wisconsin, $68,911,750; Iowa, $82,922,450. Total subscriptions were $4,617,532,900.

Chicago.—Those observers of the commercial world who regard bank clearings as a business barometer found a large measure of optimism in the report of the Chicago clearing house. Bank clearings were $954,885, a record for a normal day's business. The highest previous record was made on March 1, 1917, when $111,005,470 was the figure. Quarterly interest payments and other periodical transactions are largely responsible for the big volume of business early in March, bank officials say.

Springfield.—Governor Lowden received a communication from General Crowder, provost marshal general, in which that retired position was abolished since necessity of vaccinating drafted men about to start for cantonments from infected areas.

Camp Grant, Rockford.—Orders for 400 "April replacement troops" to be sent from Camp Grant to Camp Merritt were received here. They will leave soon, and it is believed will be on their way to join American forces abroad by April 1.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and the doctor decided that I would have to go through an operation before I would get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. I believed my mother and from my trouble I can do my housework without difficulty. I believe any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. Maude Boyd, 1421 Cleveland St. N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Conclusion: Here are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.
