FLOCK TO ST. PAUL.

G. A. R. VETERANS OWN THE MINNESOTA CITY.

mmense Attendance of Visitors from Outside States-Citizens Show Appreciation of the Honor Conferred by Superb Decorations.

Veterans of the civil war literally swarm the streets of St. Paul. Nearly 200,000 visitors were in the city Monday, the opening day. The decorations of streets and business houses were superb. Sixth street might properly be termed Grand Army avenue, for there is no street in the city so typical of the occasion or so handsomely attired in the colors and the emblems of the nation. Sixty marble-white columns of fancifully molded staff stand at intervals between Smith park and the cathedral. Each is surmounted with a banner that blows with the silent breeze, and each contains some figure or design emblematic of the great war of the rebellion and the present reunion of the men who wore the blue and wear it yet.

The formal program of the encampment was begun in the evening at 8:30, when a reception was given at Hotel Ryan to the commander-in-chief and Mrs. Walker by the citizens' committee and citizens of St. Paul. The hotel was gayly decorated for the occasion, and several thousand persons shook the hand of the commander. At the same hour at the state capitol

SILVER MEN NAME SLIGH.

Three Conventions at Bay City, Mich. Are United Into One.

The Democrats, free silver men and Populists of Michigan, in session at Bay City Wednesday, decided that the name at the head of the ticket should be the "Democratic People's Union Silver Party," that the populists should be accorded three electors and have the nomination for auditorgeneral. The three conventions meet in joint session to nominate the state ticket, the populists and silver men together to have a representation equal to that of the democrats.

Charles R. Sligh was made the unanimous choice for governor and Whiting was given the second place on the ticket, that of lieutenant governor. The other nominations were as follows: State treasurer, Otto E. Karste of Ironwood; auditor general, Arthur E. Cole of Livingston county; attorney general, Alfred J. Murphy of Detroit.

No Fusion in Kentucky.

The democrats of Kentucky have formally refused to accept the terms of fusion offered by the populists. Joseph Parker, state populist chairman. Said Thursday that as the democratic committee (silver) had rejected the offer of fusion the populists will put out thirteen Bryan and Watson electors, who shall be wholly independent of the thirteen Bryan and Sewall electors. As there are 12,000 organized populists in the state, this action is declared to mean a loss of 24,000 for the Bryan and Sewall electors, since each vote cast for a Bryan and Watson elec-there was a reception to the Grand Army, the Women's Relief corps and Sons and Daughters of Veterans. Mrs. Marie Hazenwinkle, president of the Minnesota Women's Relief corps, was in charge of this reception. It continued until 12 o'clock, and it is estimated that at least 30,000 veterans passed through the capitol during the evening. The scene about the women's headquarters at the Kittson mansion was animated.

Maj.-Gen. Sickles, president of the Union Veterans' Patriotic league, created a great deal of adverse comment by injecting politics into the encampment in a letter to the surviving soldiers and sailors, urging the election of Major McKinley in the coming presidential election.

DETROIT THE WINNER.

Next Meeting of Republican Clubs to Be Held in That City.

The committee on time and place of the meeting of the next National Republican League convention held a meeting at the Pfister hotel, Milwaukee. Wednesday and decided to report in favor of Detroit. Nashville was the only city that made a contest, and the matter was decided without much of a fight.

REPUBLICAN PARTY.

THE PRESS OF THE COUNTRY DEFENDING ITS RECORD.

Is a Sample of What Would Result Should Bryan Win - Silver Wave Is Receding-The Silver Syndicate.

The condition of Mexico is naturally attracting a good deal of attention, from the fact that it is on a free-silver, 50-cent dollar basis. Its example is, however, of very little importance as an object lesson for the United States, for the reason that other factors of much more potency enter into the case to determine the real condition. Still, it is pertinent to inquire into the facts, apart from making an argument for or against any particular theory of money.

Whether one concludes that Mexico is prosperous or not depends altogether from one's point of view. So far as concerns business men, those, whether foreign or native, who have vile native coffee, their only luxury being a kind of liquor worse than barrel-house whisky, and on which one bring about a display of enthusiasm can get beastly drunk for a few cents. | and the tour of the "boy orator" found in them. A few descendants of the Spanish grandces have great estates and are very rich, while the in the profits of the land they work than did the plantation negroes of the cotton belt before the war.

It is wholly immaterial to those poor people whether Mexico is on a silver or a gold basis. They themselves are on a copper basis, and are bound to stay there until their general plane of civilization is raised. To hold up Mexico as a model for America, or as an example in any point of view, is simply preposterous.

Another reason why Mexico can furnish no criterion by which to judge a monetary system is that the money metals are the great staples of production in that country, except as agricultural products are raised for domestic use. The gold yield is much larger than statistics indicate, for the reason that there is a tax on the output of both gold and silver. There is not much attempt to smuggle out the silver-it is too bulky-but a great part of the gold produced escapes taxation, and, in escaping taxation, eludes the statisticians. There is supposed to be $5,000,000 in gold in the country and ten times that amount in silver money. There is more than that amount of each metal produced annually. The statistics of 1894 gave the gold output as $4,500,000. The actual amount must have been at least $6,000,000. The silenterprise and capital, Mexico is pros- ver output was $60,817,300, about three their wages?

The Silver Syndicate.

The New York Press gives to-day another chapter of the great speculation of the Silver Mine Owners' Syndicate. This free-coinage movement had its origin with these silver kings, who wish to sell their white metal for twice what it is worth in any market in the world. It is financed by men who, already enormously rich, hope to double their vast fortunes. It is the owners of silver mines who are supporting the free-coinage newspapers, distributing free-coinage literature, paying the salaries of free-coinage stump speakers and "backing" free-coinage candidates. Are they doing it for the good of the country or for the money there is in it for themselves? Do men go into speculations that promise 100 per cent profits out of philanthropy or out of greed for dollars? Will the people who have allowed themselves to be imposed upon by these silver kings persist in a scheme to add millions on millions to the enormous fortunes of a few score men by depriving the plain people of half the value of their savings and and silver, and no end, hardly, of good land. The industrial class are fairly industrious and never think of striking. They work long hours and are models of workingmen's homes .- Chimuch more contented with their wages than our laborers, skilled or unskilled. The government is stable. The proverbial unrest and chronic state of revolution which prevailed prior to the administration of that truly great statesman, Juarez, no longer curses the land. The term "Mexicanize," as formerly used, ought to be blotted from our language. It is positively slanderous. Not only is there peace at home, but Mexican credit is good abroad. The national debt is being paid, interest and principal, in gold. No advantage is taken of creditors to force a depreciated silver currency upon them. We repeat that from a business man's point of view Mexico is prosperous, highly so.

But when viewed from the standpoint of the people, their condition and opportunities, it is altogether different. The great mass of the people are abjectly poor and wholly illiterate. Their contentment is due to their ignorance and to the fact that they and their ancestors never knew any better condition. The climate is mild and their absolute necessities are few. The best paid labor, the labor in mines, towns and factories, does not command over one-half the pay common on this side of the line, and that, too, in a 50-cent dollar. The agricultural labor is paid that the republicans of that commonabout one-quarter the United States rate, besides the depreciation of the money. A citizen of the United States, accustomed to our ways of living, can hardly conceive the abjectness of the poverty of the peons, the class which does about all the work of every kind and constitutes at least 90 per cent. of the people. They have nothing in the way of clothes except the rags on their

Silver Wave Receding.

Indications are growing stronger every day that the silver craze has reached high water mark, and that the wave is receding. From all over the country the testimoney is the same, and it is particularly applicable to the western states. The argentiferous enthusiasm that aroused Colorado, for instance, to a high pitch has perceptibly declined, and there are not a few republicans in that state who are sanguine that it will be carried for McKinley and Hobart.

In Kansas it is the same way. There is no defection among the republicans of the Sunflower state, who are well organized and are showing a compact and aggressive front to the enemy. The republican newspapers of the state, without exception, are supporting the national ticket most enthusiastically, and this is of itself a tower of strength to the cause. Kansas has not forgotten the glorious traditions of the past, and can be relied upon in the crisis now before the country to cast her vote on the side of prosperity and national honor. From Nebraska, the home of Candidate Bryan, who is now swinging round the circle, the word goes forth wealth will not be satisfied with less than 25,000 majority for McKinley. They know Bryan there, and all that he stands for, and are eager to register their opinion at the polls. Missouri, too, is lining up for the battle for sound money, and every day sees new accessions to the ranks of national credit.

In fact, the same story comes from backs, live mostly on beans and a all over the country, and the Bryan within one year."

The only people in this country who could profit by the free and unlimited coinage of silver would be the owners of mines, bankrupts who wish to repudiate their debts and speculators in the returns of the men who toil for their bread. If this nation ever should sink to the level of a silver basis the workingman would not be able to lift his head for a generation to come, the farmer would plunge deeply into debt because the working classes, who are the greatest consumers of farm prodcts, would have their purchasing power cut in half, and this whole coun-

In answer to the direct question, "Would your theory put the country on a silver basis?" he replied: "Momentarily it might. I think it would immediately." He was then asked: "How long would that condition prevail?" He answered: "I would not predict the in its nibs and ran clean away with achievement of actual bimetallism in him. Editor G. C. Harner of the Clark county Herald wrote an editorial in which his trenchant pen took the bit the kind of person who would sell his vote for 50 cents and do any old crime from bigamy to sheep stealing if the bribe were large enough. Caldwell was convicted and served two years at the Joliet penitentiary. When he was released from prison Caldwell threatened when the opportunity came he would kill his stepdaughter. For that reason she has been avoiding him for several years. Thursday night Caldwell had some trouble at his home and assaulted several of the members of his family with a razor. Two of them ran to the house of Miss Gentry, and he pursued them. Arriving there he attacked his stepdaughter with the razor, and she fired two shots at him with a revolver. One took effect and Caldwell fell dead.

Plano, Ill., Special.-Lewis Steward died at his home here Thursday evening of muscular rheumatism, aggravated by an injury received in Chicago about three years ago. Lewis Steward was born in Wayne county, Pennsylvania, Nov. 20, 1824. He came to Kendall county at the age of 13 years, and had since been closely identified with local interests. In 1875 he was a candidate for governor of Illinois on both the granger and democratic state tickets. He was defeated by but 5,000 votes in a state giving a usual republican majority of between 30,000 and 50,000. He was made a member of congress in 1891, serving but one term. He was defeated by Robert Childs of DuPage county in a contested election by 17 votes. He also served as assessor and in the general assembly. He was twice married. His first wife died in 1858. He leaves a widow and four grown sons.

Society and the Bicycle.

Here is a question of wheel or woo which is agitating the mind of English society and will soon reach these shores: Is the bicycle becoming so common that it must be tabooed by fashion? London society is inclined to think so, and some of the framers of social usages over there are seriously considering the advisability of sounding the death knell of the so-called craze. The question was raised by the fact that a month or so ago two servants were seen riding bicycles in Rotten row. They were the butler and maid of a well-known family. The story of this untoward appearance circulated rapidly and caused much consternation. But really, why should fashionable people deny themselves the pleasure of wheeling because their seryants also find enjoyment in it .-- Buffalo Commercial.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 5, 1896.

THERE seems to be a tendency among our citizens to "buck" one another whenever any new enterprise for this community is spoken of, on account of the fact that someone else may get a little more glory out of the matter than somebody else. If you have the interests of your town at heart you are a very poor business man to discourage a new business venture, no matter of what nature as long as it will benefit the community. Put your shoulder to the wheel and say: "Here goes for the best interests of my city." Endeavor to keep it in front, don't try to retard its growth.

THERE are a great many of our citizens who go to Chicago to purchase the necessities of life-goods that they can buy just as good and as cheap in a course tend to make your town prosperous and encourage the people of the country settlements to do their trading here? We can hardly expect it. Your merchants are your friends. They give life and stability to your town. They share with you your misfortunes and they are entitled to receive a part of your prosperity. Do you think that by patronizing some other town you are helping your village? Never. If you want your community to thrive give your business men a fair showing. Patronize them. and by so doing you will be helping yourself.

THE board of county commissioners have decided to let the voters of Cook county vote on Nov. 3d on the question of abolishing township organization in Cook county. This practically means the abolition of the towns, as the vote of Chicago will swamp the country voters. This is an ontrage. ment, and is done simply to make a few fat offices for some political henchmen, and as a rule these henchmen are about as capable to conduct the affairs of their offices as the Barrington fire department would be of extinguishing a fire in the Masonic temple after it was well under way. What would one of those city political sharks know what value to place on property in the rural districts when it came to assessing it for taxes? THE REVIEW is of the opinion that a remedy will be found to knock this infamous scheme out of sight.

pelled to appear as defendents in a suit or two before they will have them repaired?

There does not seem to be a member on the Board that cares to push these improvements. Why? We can only see two reasons for the inaction of our village trustees, namely, they have never given the subject any consider-ation or they have not the backbone to bear the "kicks" that a few old mossbacks, who would be com-pelled to put in a few new planks or cut a few weeds, might make. Which

To the many discoveries of this amazing nineteenth century there bids fair to be added that of a method whereby we may see around the world by electricity. Apparently it would not be impossible. Science has proved that sound, light, heat and electricity are produced successively by waves or vibrations that gradually increase in rapidity. What it is that vibratcs scientists are not yet agreed on, but they are sure that the theory of vibrations is correct.

The telephone is an instrument which enables us to talk at a long distance. A wire is electrically charged. Thus charged it transmits the vibrations of sound produced by the voice of the man who talks at one end of the wire and reproduces them at the other end of the wire where the listcner is stationed. With perfected apparatus it will be possible to talk around the world.

The next question is this: If electric-Barrington as in Chicago. Do you, ity can send sound vibrations over a think this is a good policy? Will such wire from Chicago to San Francisco, why can it not also send light vibrations? The proper answer is that it can and will. One of the men who make this answer is Dr. Frank M. Close of Oakland, Cal. He has invented a machine which he believes will enable an operator to telegraph a man's face as effectually as the sound of the voice is now telegraphed.

A Swedish scientist has invented a similar apparatus. Undoubtedly one or the other of these, or some other one that is better still, will be perfected before the end of the century. Then when we in Kalamazoo or Oshkosh converse by telephone with our friend in London, we shall be able not only to talk to him, but also to see him at the same time.

Up to Date Farmers.

Every great manufacturing plant has now its chemist. Every mining company has its expert who is expected to know whether it will pay to work this It is an infringement on self govern- or that lead and what the cost will be. Every railroad company has its mechanical engineers, its corps of inventors and superintendents of construction. Only the farmers of this and other countries have supposed they could slump along haphazard, anyhow and every how, and work just as their ancestors did 100 years ago. The consequence is that the agriculturists of this country and of Europe have been left. They are down in the mouth; they are abandoning their farms. The reason is not far to find. They have not improved on the old slow and laborious methods and peasant 1gnorance of a century ago. If agriculturists will wake up from their Rip Van Winkle sleep they will find mechanical and chemical invention will do as much for them as for anybody else. The government has taken their case in hand. The bulletins periodically issued from the United States department of agriculture many of them contain knowledge priceless to the farmer, knowledge that is distributed free. The agricultural colleges now give him really practical information how to improve his condition. Let him avail himself of such sources of improvement. Let him know that in these days it is no more necessary for the manufacturer of breadstuffs, meat and dairy products to be a drudge and a serf than it is for the manufacturer of soap or silks or railroad cars. It is a sorrowful comment on our nineteenth century civilization that a very large per cent of city public school children have never looked on a sheep, a pig or a calf and would not know one if they saw it. Many have never even seen a cow. To enlighten this deplorable ignorance it has been proposed that teachers give the children easy and familiar lessons on the appearance and habits of common domestic animals. This would be an excellent plan where the teachers themselves knew anything of the subject, but in the largest cities many of them are almost as ignorant as the pupils themselves. The most interesting way to impart the instruction would be to bring a real live lamb or pig into the schoolhouse at the time of of Illinois holds incorporated villages the lesson and exhibit it to the young ones. These would be the jolliest object lessons of the year to benighted city children. It would not be difficult to

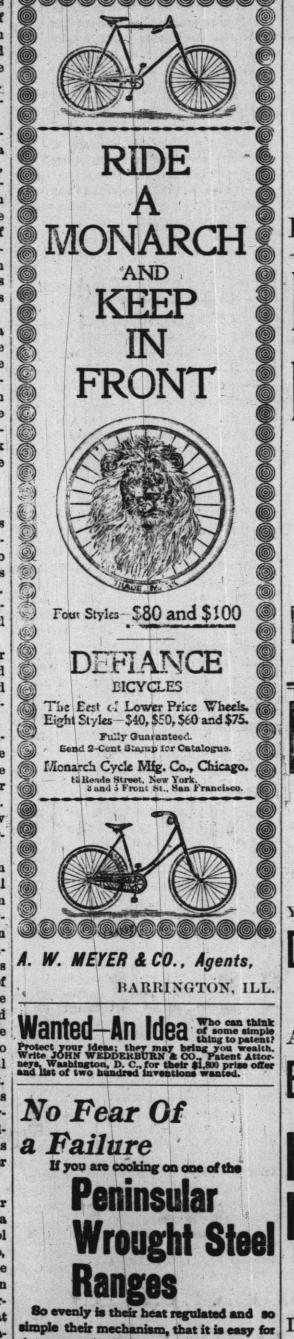

to another and keep them going. It is true that with the great number of heavy lessons now in the schools it would be difficult to find time for familiar talks on animals, birds, insects, etc. Still, when we remember how little of the heavy school instruction sticks to the child, it does not seem as though skipping some of it now and then could do much harm.

TAKE PRIDE IN YOUR TOWN.

If our worthy village fathers would only look around a little they could put in their time at 'the Board meetings very profitably to the village in general. Why would it not be wise for our village authorities to put a few men to work cleaning the streets. Of all the streets in the different incorporated villages that we have ever been in we think the streets of Barrington are the worst. The majority of her citizens seem to think the streets are the proper places to deposit their refuse, consisting of tin cans, barrels, old iron, etc.

Our village fathers have the power to keep the streets clean. They can put a stop to this nuisance.

There is not a street in our village but what is raising a good crop of beautiful flowers of the burdocks and several other varieties. Parks For Country People.

It is probable that the people who appreciate the beauty and glory of nature the least of any are those who live in the country the year around. The utility and educational value of the public park for the common people of the large cities has been long acknowledged, but it does not yet appear to have cccurred to many that a park for the rural inhabitants is just as desirable.

A plot of land, the more rugged and uncultivable the better, for then, it could be cheaply obtained and could be made an example of to show what could be done in the way of improving it, might be purchased by the authorities of each county. Donations from generous private individuals would help to beautify the grounds. There should be brooks and lakes. Tree planting, sodding, the laying out of walks and drives, the culture of flowers and ornamental shrubs, should be gone into on the most approved principles of landscape gardening. From the county park the farmer and inhabitant of the rural village might learn how they could make their own smaller domains a thing of beauty.

Practical lessers in forest culture should be inculcated in the county park by the careful cultivation of every tree that would grow in the given region. A wooden inclosure with seats where great public meetings, Fourth of July

The clouds were breaking in the west, and a gleam of sunshine gilded the tall tower of St. John's. Arch shouldered this broom, and whistled a merry tune as he took his way homeward. His bright dark eyes sparkled as he thought how the sight of his earnings would theer his feeble mother. She could have tea now, with real milk and some ingar in it, and an orange, too. Only yesterday she was wishing she had an orange.

Arch's way led past a horticulturist's store, and his eyes wandered longingly over the display of flowers in the window. He must have just one wee white rose, because, only the Sabbath before, while he sat at his mother's feet, she had wept in telling him about the sweet roses that used to grow under the window of the little country cottage where her happy youth had been spent.

The white rose would be like bringing back to her ever so little a bit of the happy past. It could not cost much, and Arch felt wealthy as a prince. He stepped into the store and asked the price of a white rose. The clerk answered him roughly:

Get out of the store, you young raseal. You want to steal something."

"I am not a thief, sir," said the boy, prondly, his sallow cheeks crimsoning hony. "I want a rose for my mother. guess I can pay for it!"

"It's half a dollar, if you want it," aid the man sneeringly. "Show your money, or take yourself off this min-"ate!"

erch's countenance fell. He had not Thall's dollar in all. He turned sadly eyes. He took her cold hands in his , his head drooping, his lip quiv- own, and stood there all night long,

"I am a street sweeper, miss." RCH Trevlyn had "Oh, that accounts for it, then. It's very muddy today, and you must be had a good day. tired. Hark! there's Florine calling me. Business had been brisk. The rain Good-by, Archer."

> She vanished, and a moment later daybreak, the boy say her disappear within the street glittering carriage, which, loaded down with fragrant blossoms, was driven slowly away. He stood a little while ankle looking after it, then, pulling his cap mud. down over his eyes, and grasping the street stems of her flowers tightly in his little purple hand, he started home.

> > Home! It could hardly be called so, and yet it was home to Archer. His mother was there-the dear mother who was all the world to him. It was a poor part of the city-an old, tumble down wooden house, swarming, with tenants, teeming with misery, filth and crime.

> > Up a crazy flight of steps, and turning to the right, Arch saw that the door of his mother's room was half open, and the storm had beaten in on the floor. It was all damp and dismal, and such an indescribable air of desolation over everything! Arch's heart beat a little slower as he went in. His mother sat in an arm chair by the window, an uncovered box in her lap, and a miniature locket clasped in her hand.

> > "Oh, mother! mother dearest!" cried Arch, holding up the flowers, "only look what I have got! An angel gave them to me! A very angel, with hair like the sunshine, and a blue frock, all real silk! And I have got my pocket full of pennies, and you shall have an orange, mother, and ever so many nice little things beside. See, mother dear!"

He displayed a handful of coin, but she did not notice him. He looked at her through the gloom of the twilight, and a feeling of terrible awe stole over him. He crept to her side and touched her cheek with his finger. It was cold as ice. A mortal pallor overspread his face; the pennies and the flowers rolled unheeded to the floor.

"Dead! dead! My mother is dead!" he cried.

He did not display any of the passionate grief which is natural to childhood -there were no tears in his feverish smoothing back the beautiful hair It was thus that Mat Miller found him the next morning. Mat was a little older than himself-a street sweeper, good friends: they sympathized with each other when bad luck was on them, and they cheered lustily when fortune she was subject So they robed her for the grave, and when all was done, Arch stole in and laid the pinks and roses on her breast.

"Oh, mother! mother!" he said, bending over her in agony, "she sent them to you, and you shall have them! I thought they would make you so happy! Well, maybe they will now! Who can tell?"

The funeral was a very poor one. A kind city missionary prayed over the remains, and the hearse was followed to Potter's Field only by Mat and Arch-ragged and tattered, but sincere mourners.

CHAPTER II.

HEN they came back Mat took Arch's hand and led him into the wretched den she called home. "You shall stay here, Arch, with Grandma Rugg and me. She said you might if you'd be a good boy, and not plague the cat. Grandma's a rough one, but she ain't kicked me since I tore her cap off. I'm too big to be kicked now. Sit down, Arch: you know you can't stay at home now."

Yes, to be sure he could not stay there any longer. No one knew that any better than Arch. The landlord had warned him out that very morning. A half-quarter's rent was still due, and the meager furniture would hardly suffice to satisfy his claim. Hitherto, Mrs. Trevlyn had managed to pay her own expenses, but, now that she was gone, Arch knew that it was more than folly to think of renting a room. But he could not suppress a cry of pain when they came to take away the things, and when they laid their rude hands on the chair in which his mother died, poor Arch could endure no more, but fied out into the street and wandered about till hunger and weariness forced him back to the old haunt.

He accepted the hospitality of Grandma Rugg, and made his home with her and Mat. The influences which surrounded him were not calculated to develop good principles, and Arch grew rude and boisterous, like the other street boys. He heard the vilest language oaths were the rule rather than the exception in Grigg Court, as the place was called-and gambling, and drunkenness, and licentiousness abounded. Still, it was singular how much evil Arch shunned.

But there was growing within him a principle of bitter hatred, which one day might embitter his whole existence. Perhaps he had cause for it; he thought he had and cherished it with jealous care, lest it should be annihilated as the years went on.

"No, they're not my folks," replied the boy with a touch of bitterness in his wolce.

"Well, Archer, when you get home, you wash your face, do! It's so dirty." The boy flushed hotly. If one of his companions had said that to him, he would have knocked him down instantty. But he forgave everything this little girl said, because she was so beautiful and kind.

"Oh, Arch!" cried the girl, sinking down beside him on the desolate hearth, "it's a hard world to live in. I wonder if, when folks be dead, they have to sweep crossings, and be kicked and be cuffed round by old grandmas when they don't get no pennies? If they don't then I wish I was dead, too, Arch!"

"I suppose it's wicked, Mat. She used tired of waiting for God's own timeher very words, Mat. Well, now her time has come, and I am all alone-all alone! Oh, mother-mother!" He threw himself down before the dead woman, and his form shook with emotion, but not a tear came to his eyes. Only that hard, stony look of hopeless despair. Her father, Hubert Trevlyn, had come of a proud family. There was no bluer blood in the land than that which ran in the veins of the Trevlyns. Not very far back they had an earl for their ancestor, and, better than that, the whole long lineage had never been tarnished by a breath of dishonor.

Hubert was the sole child of his father, and in him were centered many bright and precious hopes. His father was a kind parent, though a stern one, who would never brook a shade of disobedience in this boy upon whom his fondest hopes and aspirations were fixed.

When Hubert was about twenty-four he went into the country for his health, which was never very robust, and while there he met Helen Crayton. It was a case of love at first sight, but none the less pure and steadfast on that account. Helen was an orphan-a poor seamstress, but beautiful and intelligent beyond any woman he had ever met. They loved, and they would not be cheated out of their happiness by any worldly opposition. Hubert wrote to his father, informing him of his love for Helen, and asking his consent to their union. Such a letter as he received in return! It bade him give up the girl at once and return home. If he ever spoke of her again he was disowned forever! He might consider Hubert had some of the proud Trevlyn blood in his composition, and this letter roused it thoroughly. A week afterward he was the husband of Helen Crayton. He took his young wife to the city, and, having something of a talent for painting, he opened a studio, hoping to receive sufficient patronage from his friends to support his family in comfort.

"THE SOFT TONGUE" LAST SUN-DAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text; "A Soft Tongue Breaketh the Bone"-Proverbs, Chapter 25, Verse 15 - Solomon's Wisest Saying.

When Solomon said this he drove a whole volume into one phrase. You, of course, will not be so silly as to take the words of the text in a literal sense. They simply mean to set forth the fact that there is a tremendous power in a kind word. Although it may seem to be very insignificant, its force is indescribable and illimitable. Pungent and all-conquering utterance: "A soft tongue breaketh the bone."

If I had time, I would show you kindness as a means of defense, as a means of usefulness, kindness as a means of domestic harmony, kindness as best employed by governments for the taming and curing of criminals, and kindness as best adapted for the settling and adjusting of international quarrel; but I shall call your attention only to two of these thoughts.

And first, I speak to you of kindness as a means of defense. Almost every man, in the course of his life, is set upon and assaulted. Your motives are misinterpreted or your religious or political principles are bombarded. What to do under such circumstances is the question. The first impulse of the natural heart says: "Strike back. Give as much as he sent. Trip him into the ditch which he dug for your feet. Gash him with as severe a wound as that which he inflicted on your soul. Shot for shot. Sarcasm for sarcasm. An eye for an eye. A tooth for a tooth." But the better spirit in the man's soul rises up and says: "You ought to consider that matter." You look up into the face of Christ and say: "My Master, how ought I to act under these difficult circumstances?" And Christ instantly answers: "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you," Then the old nature rises up again and says: "You had better not forgive him until first you have chastised him. You will never get him in so tight a corner again. You will never have such an opportunity of inflicting the right kind of punishment upon him again. First chastise him, and then let him go." "No," says the better nature, "hush, thou foul heart. Try the soft tongue that breaketh the bone." Have you ever in all your life known acerbity and acrimonious dispute to settle a quarrel? Did they not always make matters worse and worse and worse? About fifty-five years ago there was a great quarrel in the Presbyterian family. Ministers of Christ were thought orthodox in proportion as they had measured lances with other clergymen of the same denomination. The most outrageous personalities were abroad. As, in the autumn, a hunter comes home with a string of game, partridges and wild ducks, slung over his shoulder, so there were many ministers who came back from ecclesiastical courts with long strings of doctors of divinity whom they had shot with their own rifle. The division became wider, the animosity greater, until after awhile some good men resolved upon another tack. They began to cxplain away the difficulties; they began to forgive each other's faults; and lo, the great church quarrel was settled; and the new school Presbyterian church and the old school Presbyterian church became one. The different parts of the Presbyterian order, welded by a hammer, a little hammer, a Christian hammer that the Scripture calls "a soft tongue." You have a dispute with your neighbor. You say to him, "I despise you." He replies, "I can't bear the sight of you." You say to him, "Never enter my house again." He says, "If you come on my door sill I'll kick you off." You say to him, "I'll put you down." He says to you, "You are mistaken; I'll put you down." And so the contest rages; and year after year you act the unchristian part, and he acts the unchristian part. After awhile the better spirit seizes you, and one day you go over to the neighbor, and say, "Give me your hand. We have fought long enough. Time is so short, and eternity is so near, that we cannot afford any longer to quarrel. I feel you have wronged me very much; but let us settle all now in one great hand-shaking. and be good friends for all the rest of our lives." You have risen to a higher platform than that on which before you stood. You win his admiration, and you get his apology. But if you have not conquered him in that way, at any rate you have won the applause of your own conscience, the high estimation of good men, and the honor of your Lord who died for his armed enemies. "But," you say, "what are we to do when slander assaults us, and there come acrimonious sayings all around about us, and we are abused and spit upon?" My reply is: Do not go and attempt to chase down the slanders. Lies are prolific, and while you are killing one, fifty are born. All your demonstrations of indignation only ex-

of insects are coming up from the meadows and disturbing you and disturbing your family, bring up some great "swamp angel," like that which thundered over Charleston, and try to shoot them down. The game is too small for the gun. But what, then, sre you to do with the abuses that come upon you in life? You are to live them down! I saw a farmer go out to get back a swarm of bees that had wandered off from the hive. As he moved amid them they buzzed around his head, and buzzed around his hands, and buzzed around his feet. If he had killed one of them they would have stung him to death. But he moved in their midst in perfect placidity until he had captured the swarm of wandering bees. And so I have seen men moving amid the annoyances, and the vexations, and the assaults of life in such calm. Christian deliberation, that all the buzzing around about their scul amounted to nothing. They conquered them, and, above all, they conquered themselves. "O," you say, "that's a very good theory to preach on a hot day, but it won't work." It will work. It has worked. I believe it is the last Christian grace we win. You know there are fruits which we gather in June, and others in July, and others in August, and others in September, and still others in October; and I have to admit that this grace of Christian forgiveness is about the last fruit of the Christian soul. We hear a great deal about the bitter tongue, and the sarcastic tongue, and the quick tongue, and the stinging tongue; but we know very little about "the soft tongue that breaketh the bone." We read Hudibras, and Sterne, and Dean Swift, and the other apostles of acrimony, but give little time to studying the example of him who was reviled, and yet reviled not again. O that the Lord, by his Spirit, would endow us all with "the soft tongue that breaketh the bone." I pass now to the other thought that I desire to present, and that is, kindness as a means of usefulness. In all communities you find sceptical men. Through early education, or through the maltreatment of professed Christian people, or through prying curiosity about the future world, there are a great many people who become sceptical in religious things. How shall you capture them for God? Sharp arguments and sarcastic retort never won a single soul from scepticism to the Christian religion. While powerful books on "The Evidence of Christianity" have their mission in confirming Christian people in the faith they have already adopted, I have noticed that when sceptical people are brought into the kingdom of Christ, it is through the charm of some genial soul, and pot by argument at all. Men are not saved through the head; they are saved through the heart. A storm comes out of its hiding-place. It says: "Now we'll just rouse up all this sea;" and it makes a great bluster, but it does not succeed. Part of the sea is roused up -perhaps one-half of it or one-fourth of it. After awhile the calm moon, placid and beautiful, looks down, and the ocean begins to rise. It comes up to high-water mark. It embraces the greah headlands. It submerges the beach of all the continents. It is the heart-throb of one world against the heart-throb of another world. And I have to tell you that while all your storms of ridicule and storms of sarcasm may rouse up the passion of animmortal nature, nothing less than the attractive power of Christian kindness can ever raise the deathless spirit to happiness and to God. I have more faith in the prayer of a child five years old, in the way of bringing an infidel back to Christ and to heaven, than I have in all the hissing thunderbolts of ecclesiastical controversy. You cannot overcome men with religious argumentation. If you come at a sceptical man with an argument on behalf of the Christian religion, you put this man on his mettle. He says: "I see that man has a carbine. I'll use my carmy argument." But if you come to that man, persuading him that you dehaust yourself. You might as well on | chief and spread it over his face, and passed on. The man roused himself up from his debauch and began to look at the handkerchief, and, lo! on it was the name of a highly respectable Christian woman of the city of Richmond. He went to her, he thanked her for her kindness; and that one little deed saved him for this life, and saved him for the life that is to come. He was afterward attorney- general of the United States; but, higher than all, he became the consecrated disciple of Jesus Christ. Kind words are so cheap, it is a wonder we do not use them ofteper. There are tens of thousands of people in these cities who are dying for the lack of one kind word. There is a business man who has fought against trouble until he is perfectly exhausted. He has been thinking about forgery, about robbery, about suicide. Go to that business man. Tell him that better times are coming, and tell him that you yourself were in a tight business pass, and the Lord delivered you. Tell him to put his trust in God. Tell him that Jesus Christ stands teside every business man in his perplexities. Tell him of the sweet promises of God's comforting grace. That man is dying for the lack of just one kind word. Go to-morrow and utter that one saving, omnipotent, kind word. Here is a soul that has been swamped in sin. He wants to find the light of the Gospel. He feels like a ship-wrecked mariner looking out over the beach, watching for a sail against the sky. O, bear down on him. Tell him that the Lord waits to be gracious to him, that though he has been a great sinner, there is a great Saviour provided. Tell him that though his sins are as scarlet, they shall be as snow; though they are red like crimson, they shall be as wool. That man is dying forever for the lack of one kind word. There used to be sung at a great many of the pianos all through the country a song that has almost died cut. I wish somebody would start it again in our social circles. There may not have been very exquisite art in the music, but there was a grand and glorious sentiment:

Kind words never die, never die; Cherished and blessed.

O, that we might in our families and in our churches try the force of kindness. You can never drive men, women, or children into the kingdom of God. A March northeaster will bring out more honeysuckles than fretfulness and scolding will ever bring out Christian grace. I wish that in all our religious work we might be saturated with the spirit of kindness. Missing that, we miss a great deal of usefulness. There is no need of coming out before en and thundering to them the law unless at the same time you preach to them the Gospel. The world is dying for lack of kindness. These young people want it just as much as the old. The old people sometimes seem to think they have a monopely of the rheumatisms, and the neuralgias, and the headaches, and the physical disorders of the world; but I tell you there are no worse heartaches than are felt by some of these young people. Do you know that much of the work is done by the young? Raphael died at thirty-seven; Richelieu at thirty-one: Gustavus Adolphus died at thirty-eight; Innocent III. came to his mightiest influence at thirty-seven; Cortez conquered Mexico at thirty; Don John won Lepanto at twenty-five; Grotius was attorney-general at twenty four; and I have noticed amid all classes of men that some of the severest battles and the toughest work come before thirty. Therefore we must have our sermons and our exhortations in prayer meeting all sympathetic with the young. And so with these people further on in life. What do these doctors and lawyers and merchants and mechanics care about the abstractions of religion? What they want is help to bear the whimsicalities of patients, the browbeating of legal opponents, the unfairness of customers, who have plenty of fault-finding for every imperfection of handiwork, but no praise for twenty excellences. What bine. I'll answer his argument with does that brain-racked, hand-blistered man care for Zwingle's "Doctrine of Original Sin," or Augustine's "Ansire his happiness on earth and his thropology?" You might as well go to eternal welfare in the world to come, a man who has the pleurisy and put on his side a plaster made out of Dr. Parr's "Treatise of Medical Jurisprudence."
