It was decided to issue the bonds in denominations of $1,000 each to be paid off at the rate of $2,000 per year after 1905, the same to draw 6 per cent interest:

Adjourned Meeting.

On Wednesday evening the Board met in adjourned session to pass a water works bond ordinance, but ow- ers. ing to the fact that the payments of $1,000 was not satisfactory to the members of the Board it was returned to the village attorney for correction.

C. H. Patten was present and exhibited plans for the combined pump house and city hall, but as he had not yet figured the cost of such a building, the matter was left over until next Monday.

The Board then adjourned to Monday evening, November 15th.

Before the Board was called to order President Boehmer, with a light, springy step and broad smile, passed around cigars to all present. The cause of it was the arrival of a pretty little daughter at his home.

Remembered by Many Friends.

Thursday evening at about 8 o'clock a host of Harry Kirschner's young friends tendered him a surprise party in honor of his 21st birthday. The time sped only too quickly in various amusements until 11 o'clock, when a delicate and bountiful lunch was served. Time had crept along well up into the wee sma' hours before the guests departed for their liomes. All expressed themselves as having passed a very enjoyable evening. Among those present were:

Messrs. Arthur Runyan, John Lageschulte. John Rieke, Ed Rieke, Will Rieke, Otto Rieke, Edward Wessel, Ernest Wessel, Will Crane. Harry Frick, Robert Hudson, Frank Allensby, Frank Homuth and Fred Grabenkort.

THE PHANTOM TRAIN.

(By Mrs. Mary R. P. Hatch.)

stances prevented our setting forth at the proposed hour, so it was nightfall ere we passed through Colebrook; indeed, lamps were lit in many of the stores and dwellings Upon inquiry we learned that we were still ten miles from the Notch. We decided, however, to go forward, although our horses were tired and did not pull well together, being both off horses which had never before been driven side by side.

The twinkling lights grew less frequent and finally disappeared altogether, which led us to conjecture that we were now in the Dixville region. The stars came out and the moon gave a faint light, but this only served to make more apparent the gloom of the impenetrable forests and rocky cliffs, and as we observed all this, we regretted that we had not refained at Colebrook until morning, for the road if not actually dangerous, was dreary enough. We seemed as much out of the world, or at least from the abodes of man, as though we had been traveling days instead of hours. The cry of a loon, or some other bird of night, occasionally broke over the silence which settled over us; for the gentlemen were too much engaged in their efforts to keep the horses in the narrow path to indulge in any but laconic remarks, and Miss Alden and I, with tightly clasped hands, sat rigid and still, waiting for the carriage to be overturned or hurled downwards into the far-reaching darkness.

"Aren't you afraid?" exclaimed Miss Alden.

"No, I feel as safe as though I were in my mother's lap," returned Charlie, but immediately before the laugh subsided he drew the horses up suddenly. Mr. Ackley got down and discovered that he had narrowly escaped being thrown down a precipice.

"Shall we go on?" I asked anxious-Iy.

"We can't turn around, and I suppose we must," returned Charlie.

The gloom increased, the darkness thickened. Trees grew thick on either side of the road, the curtains of our carriage were down, and Miss Alden and myself were thus enveloped in total darkness. As for my little boy, he had fallen asleen.

"Let us not interrupt his recital." said Mr. Ackley as we all exchanged glances.

"You see," said the old man. "I was T was in the fall of hostler down to Cohos, and I was a 1881, Sept. 20, that tendin' to my duties, when into the a party of five, instable comes a young man, genteel but cluding myself. sorter dissipated lookin', and with started on a trip to somethin' in his eye that I didn't like Dixville Notch, a the looks of. wild and romantic

"'They tell me at the house that I pass situated some can't get to Dixville tonight, but I'll go fifty miles north of if the devil will help me, and I believe the White Mounthe will.' ains. Circum-

"They say he helps his own,' says I, perlitely, but he didn't seem to mind what I said.

"'You see,' says he, 'there's a young lady with me, an' her mother is very sick; if we can get through the Notch tcnight maybe she will see her mother before she dies. We've got to go an' we will go.'

"'But there ain't no train and there ain't no team that goes this time ernight,' says I, and I turned round to card one er the hosses and when I looked 'round he wa'n't there. I was surprised, because you see, the stable doors opened and shut terrible hard and squeaked on their hinges.

"Well, he was gone. Vanished like. I went up to the house an' the cook an' the chamber maid was a talkin' about a lady in the parlor.

"'She's handsome as a drawn picture,' says Mary, 'and her feller, is handsome, too. They're a runaway couple, I b'leve.'

"'Handsome!' said the cook, 'He's too wicked lookin' to be handsome!'

"'I wish I could see her.' says I: for you see I pitied the girl if she was going to run off with that man.

"'Well, come with me,' says Mary. I guess you can get a look at her, for I am jest a goin' to ask if she wants anything.'

"I followed Mary as fur as the parlor door, but in a minute she comes out lookin' scared. 'She ain't there,' says she.

"Wall, ladies and gentlemen, no one ever set eyes on them after that, but strange sights and strange sounds was heard that night by more'n one. Miss Higgins, the milliner, was waked by a noise like a train passin' her winder, and Dick Henderson was run over by a train and had his leg broke. There wa'n't no track, mind you, where they found him, and a good many folks said Dick was too drunk to know what hurt him.

"But old Mr. Fellows is the soberest man you ever saw, and he heard a train a tootin' and bellerin' that night, like all possessed. I heered him tell on't down to the store. He thought the day of judgment had come. And the Widder Storm, a mother in Israel, if there in' as though he was in a fit. I shook him pretty rough an' he set up and gasped.

"Wall, Ki,' says he, 'I never believed nothin' before that you ever see it, but that's a phantom train, sure 'nough. Where's it goin' to?'

"Sure's the world, I never thought of that, but Jim's a readin' feller, you see. At the rate that train traveled it could go round the world pretty quick, or down to Chiny, and 'round t'other way, for it don't need no rails, you see. But who was the feller an' who was the girl, an' was it a lie about her sick mother? I've figgered on it pretty stiddy, but I don't git no nigher the truth.

"Wall, two or three years after a tall, melancholy man come to the Phenix to inquire after his daughter; said he'd tracked her so fur; said he supposed she'd gone off with a stranger to him. His daughter got acquainted with him somewhere to school. Course no one could tell anything about her, and there wa'n't no one could bear to tell him the turrible stories goin' 'bout the phantom train, so he went back to Canady."

MANUSCRIPT ROOM.

Most Interesting Place in the Whole British Museum.

In the bewildering maze of the British museum, where many miles of shelves and cases are filled with world's treasures, there is one little room that attracts a greater number of visitors than any other, says Lippincott's. The crowds that throng about the cases in this room are composed of persons of curiously diverse characteristics. It is a center of interest for scholar and literary people, and yet seems as attractive to the least learned of the visitors. This is the room which contains the department of autographs and manuscripts, and the treasures within it are perhaps the most humanly interesting in the whole museum. Here are all manner of writings by the hands of the world's great men of many ages and countries. There are personal letters of kings and popes, queens, ministers and courtiers, whose names in history, in story and in song seem not to stand for real men and women, but rather for legendary beings; and these letters reveal in some homely phrase or bit of simple sentiment a touch of human nature which seems to make them more akin to those who curiously scan the documents to-day. Here one may come, as it seems, to actual acquaintance with the most notable of the characters in Shakespeare's historical dramas, and get a new reading, in the quaint original, of passages in his works. Here are charters and state

Seven Days' Happenings, Condensed-So-

Suddenly we heard the shrill whistle of a locomotive and the thunder of a train broke the silence. Our horses quivered with fright so that their harness shook, and they began plunging and rearing. Bending forward to peer out, we saw, high up on the crags, the lights of a passing train. Another whistle, a rumble, and it had vanished.

"Heavens!" exclaimed Charlie, "we have seen the phantom train."

"Phantom train!" repeated Miss Alden, "I see nothing remarkable about it.'

"Nothing remarkable when there is not a railroad track within twenty miles of here! That train," said Charlie. "if it did not float in the air, ran over the points of stones bristling several feet apart, and at an altitude that surveyors have thus far not interfered with."

"Is this true?" I asked.

"It is indeed," he replied. "I have heard of this phantom train, but never believed in its existence until now. It only appears one night in a year, and I suppose, luckily or unluckily, we have chanced upon that night."

Absurd as the story has always appeared to me, I did not, in the uncanny darkness which surrounded us, find it too strange for belief. Indeed, had we not seen with our own eyes, the phantom train?

"Shall I tell you the story as I heard it?" asked Mr. Ackley.

"O, no, not until we are out of this slcom," said I.

"If we ever are," said Miss Alden.

We went on, past one or two lumbering camps, untenanted and solitary. and just as we began to feel hopelessly shut in by dangers, seen and unseen, we entered a cleared space, and in a moment drew rein at a large, pleasant, well-lighted hotel, the Dix house.

The change was wonderful. Out of the dreadful darkness into the cheerful house and the pleasant parlor where quite a number of guests, remnants of the summer visitors, were sitting cozily together.

"See it? Yes, I see It every 20th of September for years till the landlord took to having me here to tell the story of his company," broke from one corner of the room, and then we observed a tall, weather-beaten old man who looked strangely out of place in the midst of the group of well-dressed city people.

"Hezekiah Winters," said one gentleman, rising and placing chairs for Miss Alden and myself, "was about to tell of the Phantom Train which is popularly supposed to appear every 20th of September."

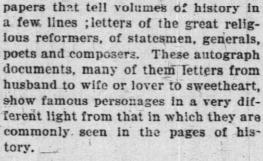

A TRAIN TEARING ALONG. ever was one, says she was a comin' from a sick neighbor's and saw right before her an ingine, but she didn't see no one else till the car passed her, and then, sittin' by the winder that was all lit up, she saw a beautiful young lady and she was a cryin'.

"She felt so sorry for her, the Widder Storm did, that she says she never thought of there bein' no track for the car till she got home and then she said she shook like a leaf, and she remembered that the smoke had a dreadful curious smell.

"Just a year from that night I happened to be camped out in Dixville woods, and long towards midnight, I saw passin' high up on the peakid rocks a train tearin' along at a terrible rate. It was all lit up, but there wa'n't only the ingine and one car. 'Twas too fur off to see inter the windows, but I knew it was the same train. That feller was a tendin' of the ingine, and the pretty girl was cryin' inside. I was sure on't, fur when a man calls on the devil as he did, he's sure to git help, and he's pretty sure to git more'n he wants on't.

"Wall, the next year me and Jim Gallgher thought we'd git nigher, if we could, an' so we set out to climb the rocks, 'long in the afternoon, but sure's your born, we never got no higher, though we clim' an' clim'. When night came, we was in a different place, but no higher. By an' by the train came tearin' along. It looked wickeder this time. The ingine seemed possessed, an' belched an' blowed an' quivered, and throwd fire, and this time I could just make out the figger of a man walkin' on the car. I looked 'round at Jim an' he laid on the ground rollin' an' twist-

THE HOLY ALLIANCE.

Alexander of Russia a Man of Religions Mind.

The Emperor Alexander of Russia was a man of a mystical, it may be said a superstitious, habit of mind, deeply impressed with the divine right of kings, and, it must be added, with e tional qualification, lengthens the term a corresponding conviction of the obligation to govern according to what he regarded as Christian principles, says | lowed a salary of $750 each per annum the Ninetcenth Century. He proposed, | therefore, that the sovereigns in congress should enter into a holy alliance, in which each pledged himself personally to rule according to the Christian standard, and to come to the assistance of any other in the case of domestic as well as international difficulty. Lord Castlereagh, as the representative of this country, demurred to a pledge which his sovereign could not undertake independently of parliament. But he desired to avoid all possibility of disagreement with the other powers. and especially not to offend the susceptibilities of a personage who had been so influential in overcoming the common enemy; and after correspondence with Lord Liverpool at home, the prince regent wrote a friendly letter expressing his personal interest and sympathy with the aims of the other sovereigns, while refraining on the ground of constitutional necessity from entering, on his own part, into any obligations such as were proposed. The other powers had no such hesitation. They undertook the sacred duty of crushing trouble at the beginning by lending their forces to put down any movement, whether strictly domestic or not, which threatened to interfere with an established organization. The general outcome of the settlement was a series of guarantees against international aggression, supplemented by the special obligations of the members of the holy alliance to suppress internal disorders.

Husband-"My friend Charly recognized you today." Wife-"That's strange, for I wore the same hat you bought for me three years ago."-Filegende Blatter.

it is dearned that it recommends the removal of Trustees Harlan and Wolfe and alludes in a milder tone to the case of Superintendent Magner. In the case of the latter the governor is asked to review the evidence carefully and act as his best judgment dictates. The committee thinks that Trustee Fage should be retained, as he had no part in the friction between the superintendent and the other trustees.

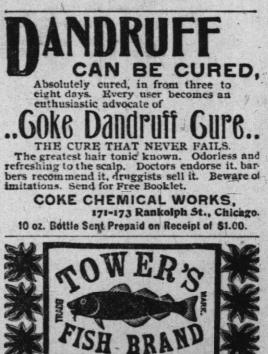

Springfield.-The supreme court has adopted its new rules of practice, which will introduce some very radical changes. The portion of the rules relating to the admission of students to the bar is of more than ordinary interest from the fact that it materially raises the standard of educaof preparation and appoints a permanent board of examiners, who are aito be paid out of the examination fees. The examinations are to be held as formerly at Ottawa, Chicago, Springfield and Mount Vernon on the first Tuesdays in March, May, September and December respectively. The fee for examination is fixed at $10, and cut of the fees received by the board of examiners they are to pay all necessary expenses, the remainder of the fund thus acquired to be divided equally between the examiners, provided that no examiner shall receive more than $750 per annum, any surplus remaining to be paid over to the succeeding board and to constitute a ratt of the receipts for the succeeding year. Every application for admission to the bar must be made in term time and open court, based upon a report of the board of examiners. Each examiner is appointed for a term of three years, except that under the first appointment they shall serve one for one year, two for two years and two for three years. The length of the required course of study for applicants is changed from two to three years. A student must develop in his examination or otherwise a general education equal to that required to obtain a diploma from a good graded school or college and a legal knowledge equal to that required by a reputable law school in a three years' course. As a result of this new rule the students who have applied for examination at the present term of the Appellate court are required to pursue their studies for another year. The first board of examiners consists of George W. Wall for the state at large, Julius Rosenthal for the first Appellate district, Jas. Stearns, second district; N. W. Branson, third district, and W. W. Wright, fourth district,

SPAIN ANSWER TO Department Officials in State

Consultation.

NO CHANGE IN POLICY LIKELY.

Full Text of the Correspondence Will Be Submitted to Congress-United States Will Not Interfere Unless Something Unforeseen Occurs.

The full text of the Spanish reply to the note of United States Min.ster Woodford has reached the state department in the last mail and is now under examination by the officials. The president will make this note and the correspondence leading up to it the basis for one of the most important chapters of his forthcoming message to congress upon the reassembling of that body in December next, and meanwhile it is not believed to be probable that any radical change in policy will characterize the correpondence between the two countries unless something unforeseen occurs.

Only Two of the Crew Escape. Louis La Force. Jr., the second mate, and William Gill, a deck hand; are the only survivors of the wreck of the steamer Idaho early Saturday morning near Long Point, in Lake Erie. They fought eight hours against wind and wave, and when rescued by the Mariposa were in an exhausted condition. Nineteen men were drowned.

Train Held Up in New Mexico.

The Atlantic & Pacific passenger train No. 2 from the west was held up by four men near Grant's station, ninety-five miles west of Albuquerque, N. M., Saturday evening. After blowing open the express company's safe, the robbers wrecked the train, which caught fire, the express, baggage and smoking cars being totally destroyed.

Will Court-Martial Weyler.

PENSION ROLLS INCREASE.

Fifty Thousand Names Added to the List This Year.

There were added to the pension rolls of the United States during the year the names of 50,101 new pensioners, and there were restored to the rolls 3.971 persons who had previously been dropped, a total of 54,-072. During the same period the losses to the roll were 31,960 by death, 1,-074 by remarriage of widows and mothers, 1,845 by legal limitation (minors), 683 for failure to claim pensions for three years, and 4,560 for other causes, an aggregate of 41,122. The whole number of pensioners on the rolls June 30, 1897, was 976,014. The net gain over the previous year was 5,336.

RICH GOLD DISCOVERIES.

True El Dorado Believed to Have Been Found in Wyoming.

News has reached Rawlins, Wyo., of the discovery of gold at Grand Encampments in such quantities as staggers belief. It is thought the true El Dorado has been found. Mining experts who have looked over the ground believe that development will uncover an entire mountain of gold, which will relegate all other gold districts to insignificance.

Fire at Louisville, Ky.

Plain Words Frem Mrs. Pinkham; Corroborated by Mrs. Charles Dunmore, That Ought to Bring Suffering Women to Their Senses.

If you were drowning and friendly hands shoved a plank to you, and you refused it, you would be committing suicide!

Yet that is precisely what women are doing if they go about their homes almost dead with misery, yet refuse to grasp the kindly hand held out to them!

It is suicidal to go day after day with that dull, constant pain in the region of the womb, and that bloating heat and tenderness of the abdomen, which make the weight of your clothes an almost intolerable burden to you. It is not natural to suffer so in merely emptying the bladder. Does not that special form of suffering tell you that there is inflammation somewhere?

Shall I tell you what it is?

It is inflammation of the womb!

If it goes on, polypus, or tumor, or cancer will set in. Commence the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of women in this condition have been cured by it. Keep your bowels open with Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills. and if you want further advice, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn; Mass., stating freely all your symptoms-she stands ready and willing to give you the very best advice. She has given the helping hand to thousands suffering just like yourself, many of whom lived miles away from physician. Her marvelous Vegetable Compound has cured many thousands of women. It can be found at any respectable drug store. MRS. CHARLES DUNMORE, 102 Fremont St., Winter

Hill, Somerville, Mass., says: "I was in pain day and night; my doctor did not seem to help me. I could not seem to find any relief until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had inflammation of 7 the womb, a bearing-down pain, and the whites very badly. The pain was so intense that I could not sleep at night. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for eight 1 months, and am now all right. Before that I took morphine pills for my pain; that was a great mistake, for the relief was only momentary and the effect vile. I am so thankful to be relieved of my sufferings, for the pains I had were something terrible. I am, indeed, very grateful for the good Mrs. Pinkham's remedies have done me."

Slush.

A young woman who deliberately murdered another that seemed to be winning her young man away from her writes to a newspaper between intervals of blubbering and sniveling in prison, "Don't blame girls in love if their love leads them in desperation to destroy a rival." This is the kind of slush on which some hundreds of thousands of young women from 15 to 25 nourish their alleged brains. No doubt the morbid passion of this monstrous murderess will be echoed and applauded by many of those who fancy themselves affected with that peculiar disease known among them as being "in love." The plain fact is that there is not an atom of real love in this poisoned state of mind. It is slush, pure slush. Whether the object of the true affection is near at hand or 1,000 miles away is all one.

True love is its own reward and cares only for the happiness of the beloved object, not for ownership of it.

It is slush that makes respectable white girls elope with negroes and circus performers. It is also slush that makes them want to kill themselves or somebody else because of disappointment in "love." If the silly things had some sound, wholesome work in which they were interested, it would quickly rid them of their foolishness. In truth, good, solid, steady work cures anybody of a tendency to slush in the mind.

When a man who wants an office professes the greatest interest in the welfare of the people, when he expresses the warmest feelings of friendship for them and their families, when he tells you he knows a cure for the old man's rheumatism or asthma, it is slush, invariably slush. When there is an apparent great religious revival in a neighborhood, when toughened sinners are moved to shout and cavort about and shed tears and embrace around generally and after the excitement is over settle back again in exactly the old tracks, it shows there was no religion at all in their minds, only slush.

When robust, full grown women profess entreme sensibility to suffering and cry over a sick dog or scream and faint

The Voice In Which We Speak. One is glad to perceive that the subject of the American speaking voice is attracting some attention. In our country a clear, soft, musical speaking voice is so rare that when one is heard instantly all ears and eyes are turned in its direction to see the owner of it. Such a voice in the midst of the harsh. rasping clack of our men, women and children 'in ordinary life is like an æolian harp breaking upon a tin pan serenade. American women and children have more disagreeable voices than American men.

Sweet singers are plentiful enough among us at present. It is time now in all earnestness for us to try to improve away that crude, disagreeable voice which characterizes at least nine out of every ten native Americans. It is indescribable. It strikes on the ear with a flat. jarring crack. Such voice is a sure sign of an uncultivated æsthetic nature.

How to correct it? Form your words distinctly. Speak the words from the lips, teeth and tip of the tongue, not back in the throat. One conscious of his needs in this respect should study the pronunciation of the most cultivated people he knows and imitate it Actors in general have correct pronunciation and pleasant voices. Listen to the sound of your own voice. also that of others and note the effect as it falls on the ear. It is possible to practice speaking certain words and short sentences correctly till one acquires a round, soft, mellow tone. Guard as you would against smallpox against that nasal voice which is the mark by which the uncultured American is known the world over. When we begin to fix our attention on this matter, our cars will be opened wonderfully to our American deficiencies in respect to the speaking voice.

If any department of our national government pays for itself, it is the United States life saving service. The total cost of the service during the past year has been $1,472,943. In return for this the brave, athletic life crews saved and helped to save 471 vessels that, with their cargoes, were worth $3,015,040. In addition to this they gave assistance to 401 vessels in distress and warned 229 of danger. What is more, there were on board the vessels which the life crew saved 4,445 persons, and of these only 53 were lost all told. This is a striking tribute to the strength, courage and skill of the United States life saving service. Altogether there are now 259 life saving stations. Fifty-five are on the coast of the great lakes, whose waters are more dangerous than those of the Atlantic itself. There is only one inland station, and that is situated at Louisville at the falls of the Ohio river.

We have seen a picture of Mr. Henry Savage Landor, the London Daily Mail's correspondent who attempted to travel through Tibet disguised as a Chinese pilgrim. The picture represented him in his Chinese dress. After seeing that one understands his failure. No Chinaman, pilgrim or laundryman, ever carried in front of him such a vast stomach as that with which Landor tried to get into Tibet. It could only belong to the hated and despised outlander from Europe. There was no disguising it, and it was a dead give away.

The ruler of savage little Korea, who decided that the title of king was not large enough for his small greatness and accordingly named himself an emperor, has likewise made up his mind to change the name of his country. His majesty believes that the name Harn will suit the country of an emperor better than that of Cho Sen, and he has decreed that this it shall be. To outsiders it remains Korea.

when somebody says the house is on fire, it is the same, just the same, slush, and slush only. When a man cheats and robs and skins other people in order that he may secure every luxury for his family under pretense of piously providing for his own household, it is the wickedest kind of slush. In truth, fully half of what passes in the world for honest, normal, warm human sentiment is slush, nothing but slush.

Playing Farmhand.

Walter A. Wyckoff, who is doing the country in the guise of a common laborer seeking for employment and reporting his experiences in Scribner's Magazine, tells us how he served as "farmhand" near Wilkesbarre, Pa. He started to cross the continent, getting work at whatever he could find. He began at West Point, working as a gang laborer there, then as a porter at a summer hotel, before he tried the tasks of a farmer's hired man.

The thing that strikes the reader forcibly throughout the whole series is the little difficulty Mr. Wyckoff had in obtaining work almost anywhere. It is said there is an army of 100,000 unemployed men always in New York city and of 40,000 in Chicago. Wyckoff got work after a few trials, often for asking only once, in whatever direction he tramped through the country.

With the farmer in Pennsylvania his experience was pleasantest of all. The farmhouse and its surroundings were spotlessly clean; the owner was prosperous, intelligent and kindly. He told Mr. Wyckoff that his greatest difficulty was in securing farm help. He would have work at good wages the year round for a capable man who would stay with him, and he would have something to do for "any decent man" that came to him any day in the year. It was the old story there as everywhere, however. All the capable young men rushed away to the city to swell the army of the unemployed, while those who remained merely staid because they were too lazy and worthless to get away.

When we look back over the actions of our past lives, it is eminent consolation to conclude that a considerable proportion of them was prompted by temporary insanity.

The present generation will be likely to see-that, too, before many years-a full fledged, independent Indian state as one of the sisterhood in this Union. This seems to be the idea in the mind of the leading chief of the Creek Nation when he calls for a council of the five civilized tribes that they may formulate a government "of Indians for Indians." This government would be in reality Dr. Jose Congosto, knows Americans territorial and no longer tribal and would be a direct step toward state gov. Philadelphia for the past 12 years. Dr. erument.

The Detroit Free Press has evolved from its inner consciousness the best definition of fame extant. It defines fame as the "incredulous surprise which a man's homefolk exhibit when he does anything noteworthy."

We are sincerely sorry to learn that the editor of The New England Magazine is distressed by "lawlessness in our midst." What has the editor been eating that he is thus troubled in his midst?

The New York Journal says on the Union Pacific railroad question: "The Thurman law, pronounced by respectable lawyers to be mandatory, provides that, under the circumstances which the attorney general assumes to have arisen the government shall buy up the first mortgage and retain the road until it shall be otherwise disposed of Here is a plain road for the president to walk in if he feels that action is obligatory."

Krapotkine says the ideal state of society which he and his brethren hope to bring about by blowing up czars and rulers will be "communistie in economics, with full and free scope for the development of the individual."

"Good table etiquette is bound to destroy at least 34 per cent of the normal enjoyment of a meal. says a Texas paper A pig would agree exactly with the Texas paper.

Spain has at present only one iron. clad and a bankrupt treasury.

By next autumn Dr. Sheldon Jackson will have 300 reindeer ready for travel between St. Michael's and Dawson City. They should have been ready this autumn. Of course in two or three years there will be a railroad up the Great Yukon to Dawson City and beyond, but until then the reindeer trotter must be atilized to the atmost.

The new secretary general of Cuba, well, having been consul of Spain at Congosto confesses that the pacification of Cuba is a difficult task "at this stage," but he does hope, does Congosto, that a policy of mildness on the part of Spain will yet bring the island back to the mother country. But when and where in history was a Spaniard known to exercise a policy of mildness?

ANNIVERSARY OF HIS DEATH.

Sixty Years Ago the First Abolitionist Fell a Victim to the Fury of a Mob-Description of the Monument Erected

The people of the state of Illinois have redeemed their debt of gratitude to Elijah Parish Lovejoy for first pointing out to them the way to action in the vindication of the right of free speech. The monument erected to his memory at Alton was dedicated Nov. 9 amid the booming of cannon, singing of songs and forensic effort.

Notwithstanding that the weather was very unfavorable, there were high tribute to the work of his predecessor, Senator Herb, in procuring the appropriation from the state which made the monument possible. Lieutenant-Governor W. A. Northcott was then introduced and spoke in behalf of the state. He was received with a storm of applause, and his words held the great audience in Tapt attention from the first to last.

The monument is a massive granite column 90 feet high, surmounted by a bronze statue of Victory 17 feet high, weighing 8,700 pounds. This shaft, in three pieces, weighing respectively sixteen, eighteen and twenty-two tons each, is one of the largest columns in this country.

The base consists of a round plinth, square cap, die and base in the form of a seat. It stands in the center of a terrace 4 feet in diameter, surrounded on three sides by a granite exedra wall 8 feet deep on the outside, having a seat on the inside. The terrace is floored with 6-inch granite flagging and is reached by seven granite steps. thousands present at the exercises. All | Two large granite pedestals, surmount-

Hit by a Cannon Ball.

A unique distinction belongs to Sir Robert Rawlinson, K. C. B .- that of being the only soldier who has been knocked out of the saddle by a cannon ball without being killed. The identical forty-two pound shot is preserved by Lady Rawlinson as an interesting relic. At the Crimea Sir Robert was riding with a group of artillery officers, when he announced his intention of turning back. At this moment a shot from the Russian lines came whizzing along in front of him, cutting the reins and pommel of the saddle, and wedging a steel purse with terrific force against the rider's hipbone.

The Local Flavor.

An American, who had left his native country to travel in Europe, with the maxim, "When in Rome do as the Romans do," well in mind, found himself in Marseilles. He wanted some ice cream and went into a restaurant and ordered it. "What flavor will you have?" asked the waiter. The American hesitated a moment, and then remembered his maxim, "Oh, garlic, I suppose," he answered.

A novel proposition was made not long ago to the Receivers of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The B. & O has a branch running from what is known as Alexandria Junction, near Washington, to Shepherd's on the Potomac River, where a car ferry is operated in connection with the lines leading south from the Capitol. A pro-fessor of an eastern college desired to lease this short stretch of track for the purpose of educating young men in practical rail-road work. In his letter he explained that he thought there was a wide field for bright and energetic boys who could be thorough-ly well grounded in the practical side of If well grounded in the practical side of railroading, provided they could be edu-cated on a regular line of road. He be-lieved that by the employment of veteran railroad men as teachers that the boys could profitably spend 2 or 3 years work-ing as trainmen, firemen, engineers, switchmen, station agents, and in other capaci-ties required in the railroad service. As this branch of the B. & O. is of considera-ble value the Receivers were compelled to decline the offer.

A Curious Swiss Landslip.

A curious landslip occurred a few days ago in the village of Sattel, in Canton Svchwyz, Switzerland. An inn situated by the side of the road which runs across the slope of a hill was carried, without sustaining any injury, thirty-five feet down the hillside, stopping just short of being precipitated into the River Steinen. The road in front of the house, the garden, and all the immediate surroundings of the inn are intact. By the house were two large elms, and even these have in no way suffered.

Percolation. AN you give me any details of percolation tests?-N. N. *  * We do not know that we have at hand extensive details, but we can give the following from Storer: "So long ago'as 1796-98 the English chemist, feet deep and ten inches in diameter into the soil, filled it with earth, made it level with the surface of the land, and after the first year grew grass upon it. By collecting the water at the bottom of this cylinder he found that 25 per cent of the yearly rainfall had percolated through the earth into it. The difference he attributed to evaporation. Simultaneously with Dalton, Maurice, at Geneva, using an iron cylinder filled with earth, found that the percolation was equal to 39 per cent of a rainfall amounting to 26 inches per annum. Gasparin, in the south of France, in 1820-22, noted 20 per cent of percolation from a rainfall is preferable, as such pails can be got of 28 inches. Dickinson, in England, in 1836-43, at a locality where the average rainfall was 26.6 inches, used a Dalton rain gauge three feet deep and 12 inches wide, filled with gravelly loam and grass-grown at the surface. He found as the average of eight years' observations that 11.3 inches percolated in a year, or about 42.5 per cent of the rainfall, while 57.5 per cent either evaporated or remained in the soil. In round numbers two-fifths of the rainfall would pass out of the land pail will pay well. through the drains, though very considerable variations were noticed, ranging from 33 to 57 per cent, in the course of the experiments. Risler, in Switzerland, (1867-68), by gauging drains that had been laid four feet deep in a compact impervious soil, which bore crops at the time of the experiment, found that 30 per cent of the average rainfall of 41 inches percolated, while 70 per cent. of it evaporated. Pfaff, in Erlangen, and Woldrich, at Salsburg and at Vienna, found that only one-fourth of the yearly rain-

The Milk Pail.

One of the greatest causes of milk polution in the common farm dairy is the milk pail. Only the most advanced dairymen pay sufficient attention to this utensil. Wooden buckets and even paper pails are used for the purpose of receiving milk at milking time. Both of these easily become saturated with the acids formed from the milk, and in a short time, though they may appear clean, are absolutely worthless, if it be desired to keep the milk in a proper state. The wooden pail can be washed and scalded, but the wood pores retain that which will not be loosened by ordinary hot water. But in many cases even no extraordinary attempts are made for their cleansing. With the paper pail it is even worse. Those pails are stiffened by rosin and if they be subject to very hot water they will become soft and easily fall to pieces. We have seen more than one of these pails ruined by carrying boiling water in them. So when they are used on the farm and in the milking stable they are only treated with tepid water. This cannot cleanse them properly. In a short time, also, if they are washed much the paint comes from the inside and the bare rosin walls are laid bare, which tend to impart to the milk a very disagreeable flavor. That they should be abandoned there is no question. Tin pails, if properly kept, are alone suitable for this work. A white iron pail that have no creases in the bottoms, the whole pail being run in a single mould. There are also no creases in the sides. The only crease is at the top where the pail is rolled around the wire that runs around the top. Therefore, the whole pail can be kept clean easily. If it costs more than the others, the cost is soon offset by a saving in work of cleansing, to say nothing about the better condition in which the milk is kept. A proper attention to the milk

"The idea of introducing medicines of some sort into the sap of the tree to kill the germ of pear blight is not new," says E.C. Powell in National Stockman.

"Every once in a while it springs up somewhere through an advocate who thinks he has discovered it. Just now it is having its innings in the Rural New Yorker through the original investigations of an Illinois fruit grower. He had some pear trees which were blighted badly, and undertook to cure them by introducing medicines through

While the character of the soil must In a measure at least be considered in determining whether or not land intended to be planted to crops in the spring should be plowed in the fall, writes N. J. Shepherd in Nebraska Farmer. We have been trying the plan for several years and with our soil and under the conditions that our farming is done, find it quite an advantage. With all crops in the spring we find we are able to get the ground into good condition for the reception of the seed with considerable less work than if the powing was deferred. Then it is possible in nearly all cases to get the planting done earlier, and this here is quite an item. Here with nearly every crop it is the early pianting that gives the best growth and yield and we find it profitable to take every advantage to get the seed in early. If the ground is plowed deep and thorough and good drainage is provided in the fall the ground will dry out easier and warms up quicked than if left undisturbed. This year both with oats and corn those who were able to get the sceding done early raised good cross of both, while the late seeding of both crops were nearly a failure. We find it an advantage in getting the most out of the manure to plow more or less in the fall. During the summer a good part of the stock are kept in the pasture and there is not a very large quantity of manure that can be secured to apply on the cultivated fields. It is during the fall and winter that the greatest amount can be secured. Our plan all through the winter is as far as possible to haul out and apply all of the manure as fast as made and I am satisfied that better results in every way can be secured by applying on plowed land. Load into the wagon direct from the stables sheds or feeding lots, haul to the fields when it is wanted and scatter from the wagon. This saves time and labor and gives good results. The work necessary to put the soil in a proper condition for the reception of the seed will work the manure sufficiently in the roots. A hole was dug near the third percolated when evaporation was tree and a root secured as large as equal to rainfall, and that rather more one's finger. This was cut off and introduced into a large bottle containing the desired remedy, the neck of the bottle stuffed with putty, and the whole thing put under ground again. One in soil upon which grass was growing tree was killed by using too strong a substance, and another was supposed to be helped by using a weak solution of corrosive sublimate. But this tree which blighted badly last year was saved by the vigorous use of the saw and knife. Undoubtedly all the blight was cut out, and the use of the corrosive sublimate proves nothing. It is not along this line that any remedy may be hoped for. The use of a strong spray of Bordeaux mixture in early spring to kill the blight germs will prove of much more help. A careful and thorough pruning out of all affected parts and burning the same at once is the only way to prevent the spread of the blight. Feeding the tree with an abundance of potash and phosphoric acid and not too great an amount of nitrogen, to develop a hard, close-grained wood growth, where the cells are strong and hardy, will also be of advantage."

Apples for Cold Storage.

Prof. Craig of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Canada, takes a hopeful view of the matter of keeping apples in cold storage, says an exchange. It may be questionable whether Prof. Craig is wholly right in his optimistic views, but here is what he says:

"Before long you will see a revolution in the apple trade. Winter apples will not be a necessity. Cold storage will solve the difficulty. Probably before two years are over, you will see in every fruit growing district cold storage houses on the co-operative plan, based on the cold storage buildings at the World's Fair. Fall apples put into cold storage buildings where the temperature is 34 degrees may be kept an indefinite length of time. Thus winter apples will not be necessary. When I was at the World's Fair, in the middle of the hot season, I saw in good condition Duchess of Oldenburg apples which had been ripened early the previous summer and kept in cold storage. While in Montreal recently I noticed in the new cold storage building beautiful California pears."
