Considerable Work Was Done by the Committee During the Past Week—All Our Citizens Should at Once Make a United Effort to Secure this Noble Institution for Barrington.

The college committee met Wednesday evening and reported progress. Their books show upward of $5,000, and the committee decided to make a vigorous canvas this week. It seems that a number of our leading citizens are still hesitating about naming what they will do. That is not the right thing to do. It is a brake on the wheels of progress. Other towns are at work and the Board of Education want the various propositions completed in the near future.

Rev. Mr. Caton, the financial agent of the college, met with the committee Wednesday evening. He spoke encouragingly of the prospects of Barrington, provided the conditions shall be promptly met. There are many things in Barrington's favor, but the building fund is a very important consideration. Mr. Caton has received encouragement from another town that has not been actively in the race, and unless our people act promptly he may take up the matter and draw them out. Now, there is no reason why our people should hesitate at the small sum of $10,000 for a building fund, especially when all of it and an equal or larger sum raised by the college people is to be put into a handsome building that will be an ornament to the town and an enduring monument to the enterprise of our people.

We fear our people do not sufficiently appreciate the advantages of such an institution in our town, to which we called attention two weeks ago. The contributions to this building fund ought not to be regarded as donations, but as the most profitable kind of an investment. It will multiply its self several times in the increased value of real estate, in money saved to school patrons, and the increased volume of business.

Let everyone take hold of the matter and secure this enterprise for the town.

What Transpired at the Barrington Village Board Meeting.

The Board of Trustees of the Village of Barrington met Monday evening.

After the minutes of the previous meetings had been read and accepted the following bills were presented and accepted:

A. S. Henderson, salary as night watch.....	$35 00

Joseph Zorno, labor.....	5 85
Fred Klammer, labor.....	5 70
J. D. Laney & Co., material.....	25 46

Quite a wrangle, in which nearly all the trustees participated, was indulged in. For a few minutes there was some hot talk, but it finally quieted down.

A communication from some of the property owners along Main street from Cook to Hough street requested the Board to order the sidewalk on the south side of that street be put on grade line. The matter was referred to the judiciary committee.

A. W. Meyer offered $100 towards bricking Main street from Hough to the railroad right-of-way. After some talk it was decided to instruct the street committee to get figures as to what the difference would be between graveling and bricking.

A. W. Meyer asked the Board to put in a catch basin on the corner of Walnut and Main street.

Is Called Home.

Mary Harriet, the year-old darling of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Shipman, died Sunday morning last.

Funeral services were conducted at the residence on Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. Hageman of the Baptist church officiating. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

The sympathies of the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Shipman are extended to them in this, their hour of bereavement.

Contributed by a Friend.

The death of little Mary Shipman, a child well cared for in a good home, suggests the following query:

WHY?

O God! Why hast thou called this child?
So many little waifs there are,
On whom fair fortune never smiled,
Thou mightst have taken, better far,
Or so 'twould seem to mortal mind,
But since Thou doest all things well
We must believe Thy judgment kind,
And not against Thy will rebel.

The Y. P. M. S. Meeting.

CORONER'S VERDICT.

The Verdict as Rendered—Funeral of Fred Gieske—Condition of the Other Victims.

The inquest conducted Wednesday over the remains of Fred Gieske, was attended by a number of attorneys. Only two witnesses were present: Mrs. Fred Gieske, widow of the unfortunate man, and Conductor Fred Brauner. The coroner and attorneys afterwards went to the Columbia hotel and took the statement of Fred Kunzmann, one of the four men injured.

The evidence tended to show that the train was going about three miles an hour. The verdict brought in by the jury was in accordance with the evidence adduced, and was as follows:

"We, the jury, find that the deceased, Fred Gieske, came to his death from shock and injuries accidentally received caused by being shoved off from a gravel car by a gravel plow and run over, said gravel car being pushed ahead by engine No. 443, belonging to the C. & N. W. R. R. Co., about one-quarter of a mile south of depot at Barrington on September 2nd."

Emil Schaefer, Charles Jahnke, Charles Boyce, Horace Church, M. A. Bennett and Herman Schwemm composed the jury.

FRED GIESKE'S FUNERAL.

The funeral services of Fred Gieske, who met such a tragic death on the C. & N. W. railroad last Friday evening were held Sunday afternoon at the Zion's Evangelical church, Rev. Haller, pastor of Zion's church, assisted by Rev. T. E. Ream of the M. E. church, officiating. The services were attended by a large concourse of people, and was a most impressive and beautiful one. Interment was at Deer Grove cemetery.

The deceased was born in Barrington on March 29, 1865, and has resided here all his life. He had many friends, being of a genial and cheerful disposition. He was an industrious young man, and was well liked by his comrades on the railroad force.

Mr. Gieske leaves a wife and baby, mother and father, three brothers and two sisters to mourn his untimely death.

THE OTHER VICTIMS.

Gus Blum is suffering considerable pain, the injuries to his spine being the most serious, but there are indications of gradual improvement.

Fred Boehm is slowly improving, but is not yet able to be around. His left limb was severely bruised.

Fred Kunzmann is around, but is suffering from bruises and breach of the chest.

A ROMANCE

CHAPTER I.

It was a glorious spring day. The old oak hall in the spacious hall of the Wilderness has just announced slowly to all those whom it may concern that noon is past. Again the house has sunk into stillness, save for the distant echo of a fresh young voice singing, from very gladness of heart, at broken intervals.

Going down a long passage covered with frayed cocoanut matting and opening the thick oak door one comes upon what seems to be the only inhabited room in the house. Here again is space—ample space, and a lofty ceiling—though certainly, as regards any modern luxuries in the way of furniture, the apartment is bare enough. A faded rug covers the center of the floor, eked out round the edge by oil-cloth which has long since failed to boast more than faint visions of pattern. An old square piano with a short yellow keyboard stands open at one end of the room littered with music; some half-dozen chairs of no particular pattern, and most of them of an uncompromising nature, are hidden under snippings of dark blue print and mysteriously-shaped pieces of lining; the shabby old sofa is also piled with various articles of feminine attire.

Both windows are thrown as high as the sashes will permit, so admitting the genial sunshine and sweet flower-scented air—before one stands a very practical-looking sewing machine, before the other is an old wicker table strewn with fashion-plates and paper patterns.

Bending over the solid table which stands in the middle of the room is Shell Wilden. She is at present making a determined onslaught with a pair of formidable scissors on a section of the blue print before mentioned. She has ceased singing for the moment; her brows are slightly puckered, whilst her keen grey-green eyes follow anxiously the line to be taken by her shears. There is a decision and energy in every curve of her girlish rounded figure as she leans over the work; the right sleeve of her dark dress is pushed up nearly to the elbow to allow of free play, so disclosing a plump, rounded arm of almost snowy whiteness.

Shell's fine pure white skin is her one personal attraction; but, as her sister Ruby often remarks, she pays for it dearly, for Shell's complexion is accompanied by a wealth of wavy shimmering red hair, faintly marked eyebrows, and a pair of eyes which are positively pale green in certain strong lights, though they deepen almost to purple under strong emotion or in the dreamy gloaming of a summer evening. She is a little below the middle height, possessing a round, childish face, with eyes that speak so often when her tongue is wisely silent that her sister Ruby many a time takes umbrage at her expressive looks.

She has just finished her critical piece of work, and is again breaking into unconscious song, when the door opens quickly, admitting a tall, graceful woman of some thirty summers, whose light spring costume sets off her dark classical beauty to advantage.

Ruby, for she it is, differs from her sister as much in temperament and disposition as in form and expression. No stranger at first sight would have taken these two young women to be related, yet such of their acquaintances who were addicted to the pursuit of psychological inquiry were fond of pointing out that behind the widely different manifestations of the personality of each there was the same original force and insistence.

"Did you get it?" questions Shell, pausing at her work, and looking a little blankly at her sister's empty hands.

"Get it! Get what?" asks Ruby, clearing a space upon the sofa, and sinking down upon it languidly.

"Why, the tape, of course! I haven't an inch left; and how can I get on with the killings without tape?" cries Shell, with a pathetic ring in her voice.

"Dear me, your mind never seems able to soar above dress-making!" says Ruby, slightly shrugging her shoulders.

"We got the tape all right—fortunately Violet remembered it."

"Has Vi got it, then?" asks Shell, in no way affected by her sister's low opinion of her intellect.

"Got it!" sneers Ruby. "You surely don't imagine, child, that we are going to burden ourselves with parcels on such a broiling day as this?"

"I surely did not imagine that even you would make any poor errand-boy tramp a whole mile to bring a few pieces of tape that would have fitted into your pocket if you were ashamed of carrying them openly," responds Shell with spirit.

Then there is a period of silence, during which Shell looks quite stern and even haughty, while Ruby does not appear to be altogether as self-satisfied as she would wish to be—possibly because it irritates her to see Shell more at ease than herself. Shell meanwhile sews steadily on, and the conversation threatens to come to a sudden termination, when a somewhat sarcastic glance from Shell causes it to revive.

"There is no greater mistake than bringing parcels oneself," pursues Ruby in an injured tone—"parcels are such a nuisance! and why should one do errand-boy's work—they are paid for it?"

Shell makes no answer, but, bending over the table, begins to fit a tissue paper pattern on her stuff, making a scornful and expressive grimace of contempt at her sister's affectation.

"I know you dote on carrying parcels; but then you do so many things purposely to annoy that it is no use attempting to stop you," continued Ruby, sighing gently.

Shell still keeps silent, only smiling knowingly at her pattern as she twists it from side to side.

"You were very wise not to go down into the town this morning," Ruby goes on after a short pause. "Not that there was much sense in the excuse that you hadn't time, for I see you have been wasting it in the grounds"—pointing with her sunshade to a large vase full of lilac which stands in the center of the chimney piece. "It is so absurd to put flowers in this horrid old room."

Shell turns her head sharply and smiles at the mauve and white plumes behind her.

"I just couldn't resist them," she says softly. "I took a rush round the grounds before setting to work, and I felt I must bring a bit of sweetness back with me."

Ruby is not listening to the explanation; her eyes are gazing absently through one of the open windows.

"We heard some news in the town," she observes with a deliberate suddenness.

"Did you?" returns Shell carelessly, as she continues to adjust her pins.

"Yes—Robert Champley is expected home next week."

"Is he?" says Shell, pausing suddenly in her work and opening her green eyes to their fullest extent. Then she continues musingly—"Poor fellow!"

"Your pity seems rather ridiculous," observes Ruby impatiently. "A man with over two thousand a year is not to be pitied."

"Not even when he has lost the only person who could make that two thousand a year worth having?" queries Shell, with a curl of her lip.

"Absurd! He must have got over his wife's death by this time," says Ruby, tapping her sunshade restlessly on the carpet; "besides, he has his children."

"Poor little things!" muses Shell, with a short sigh.

"Why poor? Of course he will marry again; and they will be well looked after."

"Will they?" says Shell dubiously. "I am sure I hope so; besides, it remains to be proved that Robert Champley will marry again—I think it very doubtful myself."

"As if you, a child of nineteen, could possibly form an opinion!" exclaims Ruby. "Why, you were a perfect baby when his wife died—I wonder that you can even remember her."

"Let me see—I must have been sixteen," remarks Shell, with provoking accuracy, "because I know it happened four years since; and I shall be twenty the day after to-morrow."

"Of course you would remember him—I didn't exactly mean that," owns Ruby—"only at that age you could not possibly understand much of his character. Now poor Clara used to say that I comprehended him so thoroughly—nearly as well as she did. You know Clara and I were close friends."

"I always thought Mrs. Champley was Garnet's great friend," observes Shell, with just a shade of unbelief in her tone.

"At one time," admits Ruby in some confusion; "only after Garnet married and went to India I took her place."

"No one person can take another's place," says Shell decidedly. "I know Garnet corresponded with Mrs. Champley up to the time of her death—I have often heard mamma say so."

"I am very glad that he is coming home," pursues Ruby, ignoring this last allusion of her sister's intimacy with Mrs. Champley. "I have often felt it a weight on my mind that I have not been able to carry out dear Clara's wish, and look after her children."

Shell has straightened her back, and now stands staring full at Ruby with such a quizzical glance that her sister says with an impatient flush—

"Well—have I said anything so very extraordinary? You look as if you were going to eat me."

"Well, it certainly sounded odd, to say the least of it," replies Shell, resuming her work, "to hear that you were going to look after Robert Champley's children. I should imagine that he is pretty well able to look after them himself."

"As if a man could possibly know anything about the training of children!" answers Ruby contemptuously. "Of course he can't. I promised their poor mother that I would do my best to look after them, and I shall allow no conventional scruples to prevent my fulfilling that promise."

"I am quite sure you won't," says Shell in a low tone to her work. Then suddenly a happy thought strikes her. "Perhaps he won't have the children home," she says, with a hopeful laugh—"he can't do better than leave them where they are, at his sister's."

"Ah, but she is going abroad for her health; and it is solely because he must now take charge of the children himself that he is coming home!" rejoins Ruby, with a triumphant gleam in her fine brown eyes.

"Well, I suppose it is easy enough to get competent nurses when one has plenty of money," says Shell; and then, dismissing the subject with an impatient shrug of her shoulders, she asks, holding up a long narrow piece of tissue paper, "Will you have your back cut in four parts or six?"

Ruby's mind soon descends to the practical, advancing to the table, she at once enters into the most minute instructions for the cutting out of her dress.

"I think this pale sateen such a sweet shade," she says, holding up a bit of the material admiringly. "I have half a mind to get a pale pink, too."

"If so, please look sharp!" remarks Shell, in a tone of anything but keen delight. "I like to get all the summer dresses over in one batch and not keep on at it for months."

"But, my dear Shell," expostulates Ruby, "I thought you liked cutting out and fitting. I am sure you always tell mamma so; besides, you are so clever, at it."

"Oh, I don't mind!" admits Shell, rather crossly. "Of course one of us must play at being fond of it, since we can't afford a maid. Only it does rather annoy me for any one to be so insane as really to imagine that I prefer working on a morning like this to being out of doors," and she heaves a sharp little sigh as she glances out at the waving, tender-green boughs of the newly-budded trees.

"Why that heart-rending sigh, my sweet sea-Shell?" asks a tall, willowy girl with blue eyes, who has just entered the room. As she speaks she lays her arm caressingly around the girl's firm shoulders.

"She is quite overcome at the prospect of cutting me out a second washing dress," answers Ruby, in a tone which implies, "Hasn't she an unfortunate temper?"

"Oh, dear—and I was just going to ask her to fix my buff print, because she is so clever at that sort of thing!" says Violet, in a tone of consternation.

"All right, Vi dear—I adore cutting out," laughs Shell. "Bring your buff print by all means—and any other material that you can lay your hands on. 'In for a penny, in for a pound.' It is a pity that we are not all three the same figure—in that case I could cut out half-a-dozen at the same time."

"Do you seriously mean you would be kind enough to do more than one—because there is my new flannel tennis-frock to arrange?" asks Violet coaxingly.

"I'll do it," answers Shell rather shortly—"only, if I do all the cutting and fixing and trimming, I must bargain that you and Ruby help with the machine work."

"Yes, dear, of course—only that stupid old machine will never work for me," responds Ruby, with a vicious look at that useful but inartistic piece of furniture.

"I'll make it work for me, or I'll know the reason why!" laughs Vi, seating herself before the machine and commencing to arrange her cottons.

"Now, Shell, toss me over your skirt, child!"

"How can you be so energetic, Vi, after our long walk?" says Ruby, rising from the sofa with a slight yawn. "I have quite a headache with the heat and must rest till lunch, or I shall be fit for nothing during the remainder of the day," and then she leaves the room with a languid step, and the "click, click" of the old sewing machine echoing pleasantly in her ears.

(To be Continued.)

Gaust is the smallest republic in the world. It has an area of one mile and a population of 140. It has existed since 1648, and is recognized by both Spain and France. It is situated on a flat top of a mountain in the Pyrenees, and has a president who is elected by the council of twelve.

A QUICK COURTSHIP.

It Did Not Take Them Long to Reach an Understanding.

From the Chicago Journal: She entered the train at California avenue, and sat down with a nervous but triumphant air. "I vas mos' got lef," she said, addressing the passengers, cordially. "Cos I vassn't so young like I vonce vas und de train hurry up. Vonce I vould jump on—but I got some crandchilluns, now already—and I vas better vait a miquete den go deadt."

Her blue eyes were mild, and deeper roses burned in her cheeks than American lassies wear. An old German right across looked at her from around the Staats Zeitung's edge, saying at intervals, admiringly: "Vell, vell, vell!" After a while the man began to cough, and the eyes of the old lady were turned toward him with deep interest and compassion in their depths. "Oh, dot vas too bat! How you got dat col? Oh, my, oh, my!" There were many smiles among the spectators, but the old man seemed delighted with the sympathy. He patted his chest and shook his head to show how serious the case was, and the old lady went over to the vacant seat by his side, leaning forward anxiously. "Haf you got some honey?" she asked. "Ah, dot est goot. Honey vas de bes' medicine. But you musn't put nodding in mit it. De Lord sen' de bees to take all kinds of extracts vat ve need from de flowers und crains. Ef he vant some visky in it—he vould tell! Den he make it all up nice und say: 'Here vas vat I make you.' Den ve eat und lif all de time, already." She folded her mittened hands and spoke quite simply; and the old man beamed and nodded impressively. By and by he said: "You got some chil'ren? Yah? dat est goot! You got some money? Nein? Some—husban'—nein?" The old lady shook her head and the man relapsed into meditative silence. Then he leaned forward and took her hand. "Maybe ve get married, some day, eh?" he asked, questioningly. And, all unconscious of the smiling people about her, she gravely nodded and said: "Yah!"

MIXED THE TERMS.

And Consequently Their Egg-nog Has a Peculiar and Distressing Effect.

This is an Easter reminiscence: A downtown family, wishing to celebrate the day by appropriate libations of egg-nog, sat about preparing a large bowl of that seductive beverage, from time immemorial held sacred to that joyous occasion, says the Philadelphia Times. They found a recipe for its concoction in a daily paper, and cutting it out, started to gather together the ingredients named therein. Whisky and eggs they had, but a third important component was lacking. This was Jamaica rum. The recipe said so plainly enough, but there was another liquid far more closely associated in the bosom of that family with the name of the West Indian island than rum—namely, Jamaica ginger. It may have been a slip of the tongue, but whatever it was the boy dispatched for the missing constituent of the "nog," asked for and received a liberal quantity of the fiery foe to cramps and colic, and upon his return it was unhesitatingly poured into the bowl. Then the libations began. "I don't taste just right yet," declared Vaterfamilias; "I guess we haven't got enough whisky in it." So the quantity of "rye wine" was doubled! The taste was still queerer, but no one knew how to improve it now, so they gasped and choked down the whole bowlful. It didn't take long to get in its work, and in a surprisingly short time there wasn't a single member of that family who cared whether it was Easter or Christmas. Next morning they picked themselves up one by one from the casual spots where sleep had overtaken them and with parched lips forswore the foamy drink. Of course they tried to keep it quiet, but—well, children will talk, and now the "ginger egg-nog" is all over the neighborhood.

Rabbit Luck for Fishing.

S. P. Lazarus tells of an odd experience which fell to his lot some time ago while fishing for bass in one of the northern lakes. "While rowing the boat across the lake," he says, "I saw something swimming in the water some 200 feet away. I overtook it, and discovered a rather tired rabbit swimming for dear life. I reached out and gathered it in out of the wet, and with a piece of twine tied the rabbit to the seat, where it sat in the sun perfectly quiet. It shivered for a time, but soon became warm and animated. I kept it in the boat the remainder of the afternoon while fishing. Talk about the hind foot of a churchyard rabbit! It isn't in it with a live, four footed rabbit. Bass began to bite, and in short order I took in sixteen. When I reached the shore the rabbit was released, when, with a wink of thanks, he made a leap, and in an instant was out of sight in the brush. I have told this to quite a number of my friends, and it has never been doubted."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The War Is Over.
 And now our thoughts are all of peace and home. There are, too often, people to be found who have no home, and it is to them these few words are addressed. If you really want a home you can easily get one, but you should act at once before the relapse from the war puts prices on the advance. In Marinette County, Wisconsin, the very finest farming land is to be had now at a most modest figure. Excellent home markets are at hand to take whatever the farmer raises, and good prices are given. These lands are on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and full information concerning them will cheerfully be furnished by G. E. Rollins, Immigration-Agent, 461 La Salle Street, Chicago.

WORKS OF ART.

How a Business House Has Made It Possible for Every One to Possess Them.

Probably at no time in the world's history has so much attention been paid to the interior decoration of homes as at present. No home, no matter how humble, is without its handiwork that helps to beautify the apartments and make the surroundings more cheerful. The taste of the American people has kept pace with the age, and almost every day brings forth something new in the way of a picture, a draping, a piece of furniture or some form of mural decoration. One of the latest of these has been given to the world by the celebrated artist, Muville, in a series of four handsome porcelain game plaques. Not for years has anything as handsome in this line been seen. The subjects represented by these plaques are American Wild Ducks, American Pheasant, American Quail and English Snipe. They are handsome paintings and are especially designed for hanging on dining-room walls, though their richness and beauty entitles them to a place in the parlor of any home. These original plaques have been purchased at a cost of $50,000 by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., manufacturers of the celebrated Elastic Starch, and in order to enable their numerous customers to become possessors of these handsome works of art they have had them reproduced by a special process in all the rich colors and beauty of the original. They are finished on heavy cardboard, pressed and embossed in the shape of a plaque and trimmed with a heavy band of gold. They measure forty inches in circumference and contain no reading matter or advertisement whatever.

Until October 1 Messrs. J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co. propose to distribute these plaques free to their customers. Every purchaser of three ten-cent packages of Elastic Starch, flat-iron brand, manufactured by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., is entitled to receive one of these handsome plaques free from their grocer. Old and new customers alike are entitled to the benefits of this offer. These plaques will not be sent through the mail, the only way to obtain them being from your grocer. Every grocery store in the country has Elastic Starch for sale. It is the oldest and best laundry starch on the market, and is the most perfect cold process starch ever invented. It is the only starch made by men who thoroughly understand the laundry business, and the only starch that will not injure the finest fabric. It has been the standard for a quarter of a century, and as an evidence of how good it is twenty-two million packages were sold last year. Ask your dealer to show you the plaques and tell you about Elastic Starch. Accept no substitute. Bear in mind that this offer holds good a short time only, and should be taken advantage of without delay.

 The snow is falling fast today,

An Imperial Peacemaker.

Mingled with the iron in the blood of the Romanoffs there runs a current of idealism and sentiment which every other generation has shown itself in extraordinary fashion. Alexander I, inflamed by his sympathy with the new spirit of the age, was when a young man full of the most ardent plans for the regeneration of his people and a passionate admirer of his contemporary, Napoleon. He afterward became intensely Russian in his policy, domestic and foreign, while his enthusiasms exhaled in philosophical dreams, fed by his egotism, Mme. Von Krudener. His grandson, Alexander II, who was slain by a nihilist bomb, moved by humanitarian political ideals, freed the serfs of Russia about the same time that Abraham Lincoln freed our slaves. But the second Alexander finally became intensely reactionary and an incarnation, by force of the iron traditions which reasserted their sway, of the spirit to which his earlier years had given the lie. Now Nicholas II, his grandson, displays a noble idealism and invites a peace congress of the leading nations to consider the best means of securing universal peace. Among the preliminary steps he suggests a cessation from further armament by the powers.

The manifesto is a document of great strength of statement. Its spirit is not only lofty in the recognition of moral truth, but its grasp of the practical conditions as a question of international economics such as to increase greatly one's respect for the young czar's intellectual powers. He cites the fact that in the professed desire to guarantee peace the great states have developed their military forces in an unprecedented degree, and still continue in the same path. But all these efforts have failed to bring about the desired result. He says:

"Economic crises, due in great part to the system of armaments a ontrance, and the continual danger which lies in this massing of war material, are transforming the armed peace of our days into a crushing burden which the peoples have more and more difficulty in bearing. It appears evident, then, that if this state of things is prolonged it will inevitably lead to the very cataclysm which it is desired to avert, and the horrors of which make every thinking being shudder in advance. To put an end to these incessant armaments and to seek a means of warding off the calamities that are threatening the whole world is a supreme duty which today is imposed on all states."

This promulgation of opinion, so often preached by irresponsible political thinkers and moralists, comes with the most vivid power at such a time and from such a source. If the current notion as to the political ambition of Russia is true, the czar's stand indicates that he has snapped all leading strings and takes plain issue with the policies which have hitherto guided Russian statesmen. But the other day the world read of a plan for an extraordinary increase of the imperial navy. The same papers which recorded his invitation to a peace congress also bristled with comments on the resolute and skillful strategy of his servants in the march toward the dismemberment of China and the imminent chances of a struggle with Great Britain—on the one side facts threatening to let loose all the dogs of war; on the other, an inspiring humanity, worthy of the finest souls who have adorned human history.

The whole episode strikes the mind with wonder and sets it to speculating how such a thing could have come about. That Nicholas is sincere in this enthusiasm for peace, advocated with such practical directness, is beyond doubt. We cannot suspect him of any arriere pensee. That the nations will respond to the invitation may be considered certain. That there will be any result from the conference is far less certain. The egotistic spirit of nations cannot be so easily exorcised. But it should be an admirable beginning. Even if the proposition leads to a partial success in result it will glorify the name of Nicholas among the greatest potentates of the age. But the surest guarantee of success will be that Russia herself first put the doctrine into practice.

Has Nicholas the iron will to match his beautiful aspiration and carry it out against all kinds of baffling opposition?

Or will splendid impulse, as in the case of his grandfather and that grandfather's grandfather, retreat back, beaten in the fight, into the old traditional lines of Muscovite ambition, reckless as that of a Roman Caesar? Time only can tell.

The Dreyfus Scandal.

No disgrace more ignoble in her history has ever attached to the French name than that involved in the Dreyfus scandal. It was sufficiently palpable at the time of the trial to those who followed the case that the unfortunate victim of anti-Semitic prejudice and of the spirit of militarism was condemned on evidence which in England or America would have been hooted out of court. But it was felt that there were mysteries in the case which made the guilt of Dreyfus possible. In view of the methods of French courts, both civil and military, which give the prisoner the least possible chance to prove his innocence, a certain condonation was allowed to a verdict that chained the poor wretch, like Prometheus, to a barren rock. Further light filtered gradually on the facts, making his guilt still more questionable. Later followed the Zola and the Picquart episodes, proving that the French government was so far at the mercy of military dictation that it preferred to do flagrant wrong with its eyes open to the risk of offending its uniformed oligarchy. The spirit which dominated the treatment of these two men was more odious even than the tyranny which had organized the conviction of Dreyfus. It was the malignant bitterness which turned what might have been an honest mistake into a fixed determination to subvert all the principles of civil liberty and justice. So blinded, too, was public opinion in its rage that none but a few resolute spirits dared to lift a voice of protest. It raised the query, "Is the modern Gallic mind so blind in its perversity once its national animosity is aroused as to be impenetrable to every ray of justice?" Certainly the whole history of the monstrous affair in its various phases up to that time would indicate this.

The French government has been given another opportunity to show that it is not beyond repentance and reclamation. New evidence practically nullifies not only the conviction of Emile Zola and justifies Colonel Picquart, but knocks away the most substantial prop of the incriminatory evidence against Dreyfus. Colonel Henry, a French military official of the war bureau, has been led to confess that a letter which was the very cornerstone of the professed belief of the justice of the Dreyfus conviction, was his own forgery, deliberate and cold blooded. He was arrested and at the earliest practicable date committed suicide. No amount of punishment of those primarily responsible for the Dreyfus wrong will expiate that unless the Faure administration makes the most profuse amends. A seat on the stool of repentance and the cry of "Peccavi!" will alone satisfy the world that there is still latent in France any sense of righteousness.

The coronation of Queen Wilhelmina, the charming young queen of Holland, at the Nieuwe kerk of Amsterdam, the Westminster of the Dutch kingdom (one had almost written the Dutch republic, remembering the splendid career of the Dutch under that form of government), on Sept. 6, was an auspicious occasion. The placid and sluggish Hollander might well find excuse for an unwonted enthusiasm in the accession of a beautiful and high minded girl. Wilhelmina comes of that heroic Orange blood which has furnished a shining muster roll of great statesmen, warriors and patriots to the Netherlands. Since the age of William the Silent no European family has been starred with such an array of celebrities as this princely house. The young queen will probably have no occasion to display the more striking qualities of her ancestors, but it is a fact endearing to the Dutchman's heart that she inherits her dignity from such forbears.

The trade which Emperor Wilhelm learned as a child, in accordance with the custom of some royal families, was printing. He has not been true to the affiliation in his willingness to choke the press, nor has it yet been announced that he has applied for position of first proofreader on Bismarck's memoirs. He would probably accept the place without pay.

The diet of the Greater Republic of Central America is said to be gravely pondering the question why the United States proposes to build the Nicaragua canal. Of course it has no other reason than to gobble up Nicaragua and to rule all Central America with a rod of iron.

The resignation of "Farmer" Dunn from the business of weather forecasting in New York city under Uncle Sam's orders has cost that individual about $3,000 a year in extra expense. The Manhattan Life Insurance company built the admirable weather observatory on the top of their skyscraper according to Dunn's plans and gave the use of it to government free of charge, but the condition was made that "Farmer" Dunn should use it, and he alone. Now the company asks for a big rent or the prompt vacation of the quarters. Rumor has whispered that The World's enterprising Pulitzer will install Dunn there again as weather seer. It would be a characteristic stroke of modern newspaper enterprise.

"When one seeks the cause of the successes of great generals, one is astonished to find that they did everything necessary to insure them," said Napoleon. "When a successful campaign is studied, we are amazed that it was won in spite of so many blunders," said Gugausus Adolphus. Which is right?

Schiller's patent of nobility has been recently found among the archives of the Wurtemberg government, whereupon the Frankfurter Zeitung waxes ironical and suggests that it is time for Germans to recognize the true nobility of Goethe and Schiller in their works, not in the comic prefix "von."

Consideration for woman is the one infallible measure of a nation's moral and social life.

The bill introduced into the British parliament providing for loans to colonies under certain specified conditions is in accordance with the general policy of the country in binding its dependencies by the most genuine helpfulness. But it is difficult to see what practical end can be served. The same conditions which the proposed bill specifies are so confirmatory of the solvency of the borrowers that they would justify the easy sale of colonial bonds. If Great Britain wishes to help its colonies in this way, it would be a more easy and direct way to indorse the bonds, thus giving them still greater security. The same purpose would be effected in a way probably more acceptable to colonial pride. It looks as if this measure was an entering wedge for the revival of the great Chamberlain scheme, of which there was so much discussion a year or two since.

A charitable girl never gives her rival's age away.

About one month ago my child, which is fifteen months old, had an attack of diarrhoea accompanied by vomiting. I gave it such remedies as are usually given in such cases, but as nothing gave relief, we sent for a physician and it was under his care for a week. At this time the child had been sick for about ten days and was having about twenty-five operations of the bowels every twelve hours, and we were convinced that unless it soon obtained relief it would not live. Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommended, and I decided to try it. I soon noticed a change for the better; by its continued use a complete cure was brought about and it is now perfectly healthy.—C. L. Boggs, Stumpdown, Gilmer county, W. Va. For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

There's a Tenderness

About our meats that is appreciated by the cook.

It is not necessary to pound the steaks with a mallet to make them yield up their juiciness. Nor to use great care in broiling or roasting.

Our beef, lamb, veal, mutton and pork is so good in itself that the chances of spoiling them in bad cooking are small.

Every piece of meat we sell is cut from prime, well fed and carefully handled animals.

HEROES OF WAR.

From the Chicago Times-Herald.

The feeling of admiration for heroes of war seems to be innate in the human heart, and is brought to the surface as the opportunity and object, for such hero worship presents itself.

Among those who proved their heroism during our Civil War was A. Schiffereder, of 161 Sedgwick Street, Chicago. He is an Australian by birth, came to America at the age of twenty, and soon became an American citizen. He was living at Milwaukee when the call for volunteers came, early in 1862, and he promptly enlisted in Company A, of the Twenty-sixth Wisconsin Volunteers.

He received a wound.

In the Army of the Potomac our hero saw much fighting, campaigning in the Shenandoah Valley.

In the first day's fighting at the battle of Gettysburg, Schiffereder received a wound in the right side, which afterward caused him much trouble. With a portion of his regiment he was captured and imprisoned at Bell Island and Andersonville, and afterward exchanged. He returned to his regiment, which was transferred to the army of General Sherman, and marched with him through Georgia to the sea.

In this campaign Mr. Schiffereder's old wound began to trouble him and he was sent to the hospital and then home. He had also contracted catarrh of the stomach and found no relief for years.

"I happened to read an account of Dr. William's Pink Pills for Pale People about a year ago," he said, "and thought that they might be good for my trouble. I concluded to try them. I bought one box and began to take them according to directions. They gave me great relief. After finishing that box I bought another, and when I had taken the pills I felt that I was cured. I recovered my appetite and ate heartily. I can testify to the good the pills did me."

Mr. Schiffereder is a prominent Grand Army man in Chicago, whither he moved some years ago with his family.

Military Girls.

Two or three pretty maids, with the war spirit sparkling in their eyes and tongues, were talking about the various officers they had been meeting, the mother of one of them listening in silent pleasure to the chatter. "Who is it, Ruth," she asked of her daughter, when the others had gone, "you speak of as Mr. Sixteen-inch?" "O," laughed the girl, "that's Lieut. Blane of the artillery." "And why do you call him Sixteen-inch?" "Because, mamma, he's such a great bore, don't you know?"—New York Sun.

Mr. Riley came to the Baltimore & Ohio South Western Railway from the C. C. & St. L. Railway about a year ago, and has earned his promotion by meritorious services.

Knew the Password.

Spanish Cortes Meets.

Madrid, Sept. 7.—The cortes opened Monday, and, contrary to general expectation, small interest was shown in the proceedings. The public galleries were densely crowded, but those occupying them were silent.

In the senate Prime Minister Sagasta read a bill authorizing the government to conclude peace with the United States and also authorizing the alienation of territory. Senor Sagasta read the bill with emotion.

He said that the immense superiority of the Americans deprived the country of means of defense. The destruction of the squadrons compelled Spain to seek peace and necessitated the acceptance of the dismemberment of the colonies proposed by the United States.

He asked the senate to discuss the bill at secret sittings. Senator Rivera vainly attempted to protest, and the president ordered the galleries cleared.

THE NEWS OF ILLINOIS.

Happenings of a Week Recorded in Short Telegrams.

Stand by the Mother Tongue.

Kankakee, Ill.—A two days' reunion of the Association of Canadian-French Americans closed at Bourbonnais. Two hundred were present. The principal business was the discussion of parish schools, higher institutions of learning, and the teaching of the French language. It was the sense of the delegates that English should be taught in all French schools primarily, but that the French language should not be neglected. The daily press and the necessity of distinguishing between good and bad journalism was another topic discussed. Among the speakers were Father J. R. Magnon of Muskegon, Mich., Father Boucher of Fond du Lac, Wis., T. H. Proux and Z. P. Brosseau of Chicago, Fathers Letellier and M. J. Marisle of Bourbonnais.

Carried Ear in Envelope.

Michael Doll of Chicago was forced to yell with pain when a portion of his ear was bitten off in a fight, but he had the presence of mind to save the pieces. Doll startled the desk sergeant at the stock yards police station by casting an odd-looking envelope on his desk and emitting a howl of rage and pain as a preamble to a recital of his troubles. The policeman found the envelope to contain part of Doll's anatomy, which Doll explained was a piece of his ear. Doll said he lived at 4000 Ashland avenue, and said that he had quarreled at his home with Albert Matuszowski, and during the scuffle the other man had bitten off a part of his left auricle. In Justice Fitzgerald's court Matuszowski was charged with mayhem, but was granted a continuance.

Gypsies in Chicago Suburbs.

Melrose Park is no sooner ridden of tramps than gypsies arrive to fill the vacancy created. Thursday marshals of Maywood, Melrose Park and the neighboring police were deluged with complaints from residents of petty thefts committed by members of a band of gypsies which spread its camp a mile west of Melrose Park. The band consists of about 150 nomads and its camp is very picturesque. One old woman who tells fortunes is attired in a gown of remarkable brilliancy, resplendent with bits of glass and beads. The depredations of the band were so flagrant that Marshal Bailey of Melrose Park drove its members from the village. For this he was threatened with dire punishment by Ross, the tropy queen of the band.

Leader Urges Moderation.

Elgin, Ill.—Vice President James O'Connell of the Federation of Labor, in his conference with the striking finishers and other employes of the watch factory, counseled moderation in all things and urged that no other workmen quit the factory at present unless asked to take up the finishers' work. He stated that he and President Gompers would meet the management of the factory in Chicago Saturday. No threats will be made, but the matter will be placed before them in a plain, business light. He thinks the trouble will be easily adjusted. If no agreement is possible a general strike may be ordered.

Danger in Soldiers' Bodies.

Dr. Egan, secretary of the state board of health, has been informed by railroads centering in Chicago that they are daily receiving dead bodies of persons, presumably soldiers, who have died of typhoid fever at eastern and southern points. These bodies come in coffins of the most inferior kind and without the certificates of undertakers which the law provides as to treatment of bodies. Dr. Egan looks upon this matter as serious and has wired the secretaries of the state boards of health of Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, Kentucky and Tennessee in regard to it.

Forty-Seventh Senatorial District.

Alton, Ill.—The Republicans of the Forty-seventh senatorial district met here and nominated a full ticket for both branches of the legislature. Colonel J. J. Brenholt of Madison was named for senator and William McKittrick of Madison and J. K. Cadwallader of Jersey for representatives. Calhoun county, which had a candidate in the person of Captain C. L. Wood, was given no recognition. Resolutions indorsing everything that is Republican and claiming all that was accomplished in the late war as the result of Republican patriotism and statesmanship were adopted.

Issues in Campaign.

The Democratic state central committee met at the Tremont House, Chicago, Thursday to formulate plans for the campaign. Every member was present. So were the candidates for state offices, and last, but not least, ex-Gov. Altgeld, now a private citizen, but no less the leader of the party in the state. There was some sentiment in favor of conducting the campaign on local issues. This would have been pleasing to the gold Democrats. Consequently there will be no campaign on local issues. National issues were made paramount, local ones merely incidental. Silver of course will be the slogan as in 1896.

Mystery of Jessie Tucker.

Jessie Tucker, 15 years old, resented a scolding from her father, who reprimanded her for staying out late one night without first asking his permission, and the next morning she left her father's house at 3144 Armour avenue, Chicago. Recognition of a Newspaper's Worth.

The Sidney (Ia.) Herald tells of an instance of appreciation at the hands of a local college which has warmed its editor's heart and made his nearby contemporaries jealous. Tabor College has heretofore given its printing to the Herald when it would meet the prices of large city offices. Now, however, under a change of policy, the Herald is to have all of the college printing, for reasons given by its president, as follows: "I take this view: that every issue of our home paper is advertisement for the town and the college, of greater importance for us to maintain than an advertisement in any other form without it; and the least we can do is to turn over to its publishers our entire printing for them to execute at fair prices. No matter if some of it is outside their capacity, let them have the order and give the work a home imprint. They are attracting the attention of the public to the progress of the college, and are deserving of fair treatment at our hands." It is this feeling that should actuate every man in his dealings with his home paper, upon which he depends for information of local doings, and which is doing more for the advancement of the interests of the town than all the business men of the town collectively.

PORTRAITS OF PERSONS PROMINENT IN DREYFUS CONTROVERSY.

Contagious Sore Eyes Among Cattle.

A bulletin of the Indiana experiment station says: For the past two weeks notices have been received by the station relative to outbreaks of sore eyes among cattle. These reports indicate that the disease is new to many localities and of unusual severity in places where it has occurred before. The losses are always stated to be large and the cattle go blind and are unable to graze and keep out of trouble. The percent affected ranges from ten to fifty per cent of the herd. Contagious sore eyes makes its appearance by a swelling of one or both eyes, a partial or complete closing of the lids and a profuse flow of tears. The eye-ball becomes inflamed, "blood-shot," and in a few days the central part of the eye over the pupil will bulge out. The bulging portion will be from the size of a pea to that of a grain of corn. Underneath the surface there will be a yellowish white color, due to pus. In some cases the bulged portion breaks across. The disease is quite painful. The principal changes take place within a week, but it requires about six weeks to run the full course. The result is that a few are blind in both eyes, many are blind in one eye, and some escape blindness, but the sight, as a rule, is impaired. It interferes greatly with grazing during the time of the disease, and may permanently.

Treatment: The disease is contagious, and therefore a separation of the diseased from the healthy should be made as soon as the first symptoms appear. Whenever practical keep the cattle up in the stable during the day and let them out at night. This can be done as a rule with cows. The local treatment of the eyes is to apply a one per cent solution of atropine twice a day, and apply calomel dust once a day. The calomel can usually be applied by using one of the small insect dusting boxes. A wash of a saturated solution of boracic acid has been found to be of some service. The attendant should be sure to wash his hands with carbolic acid solution, or some other disinfectant after giving the treatment, as there is a possibility of conveying the disease from cattle to people.

A. W. Bitting, Veterinarian.

Cutting Trees to Save Forests.

Doctor Fernow, chief of the forestry division of the department of agriculture, says that trees must be cut down and ought to be cut down, not only for commercial and industrial uses, but also for the good of other growing trees, and all that the scientific forester asks is that the cutting should be done judiciously. The ignorant lumberman who does not look to the future cuts down all his forests at once, while the forester cuts the trees so as to make it a permanent investment. The old fable of the man who killed the goose that laid the golden eggs has been wasted on many lumbermen in the past, but it is to be hoped that the establishment of the school of forestry in Cornell university, the first in the country, is destined to work a great revolution in the ideas of intelligent people.

Coming Season's Orange Crop.—The prospects of the coming orange crop and the disposition to buy supplies to the best advantage is seen by the fact that the Southern California Fruit Exchange advertised in Los Angeles on Monday for bids for furnishing 1,500,000 boxes to be used in the packing of the coming season's orange crop. The figures, which show that an enormous increase in the production in southern California is anticipated, will give a basis for estimates of the increased shipments over previous years which may be looked for. Not only are the conditions for a full yield favorable, but there is a great increase in the acreage of trees now coming into full bearing.—Pacific Rural Press.

Some Ben Davis History.—The first bearing Ben Davis trees known to the writer, west of the lakes, were in the orchard of Avery Aldrich, at Tiskilwa, Ill. Tyler McWhorter, of Aledo, Ill., secured scions in 1858 and began its propagation. A son of Mr. McWhorter soon after started a nursery at Brooklyn, Iowa, and began the first propagation of the variety west of the river. In 1861 we began its propagation in the Benton County Nurseries. The Duchess and Ben Davis were the leading varieties sent out for several years and at that time the Ben Davis was regarded equal to the Duchess in hardiness and this opinion was not dispelled until we had passed through the test winter of 1870-1.—Iowa State Register.

Flower Bill of New York.—New York City pays annually for flowers more than the entire rye or buckwheat crop of the whole country is worth; nearly as much as the total annual imports of tea; more than the value of all the lead mined, and nearly as much as the natural gas production is valued at. This, in most of its phases, is strictly a luxury, but it is a luxury the indulgence in which, by those who can afford it, does only good. Its effect every way is beneficial. It gives profitable employment to a large and very worthy class of gardeners, and the product cannot but have a good effect on those who spend money in this way.—Farmer's Home.

This is a victory for the Village Board. The other cases will now be pushed.

Complaint was made that there was a disturbance at 2 o'clock in the morning on a recent Monday which annoyed the neighbors. It was evident that the Board was determined to have these disturbances stopped or they will revoke the license of the place. There was also some talk in regard to stopping disturbances on the streets which are of frequent occurrence.

The boys that loaf around in the vicinity of the Methodist church also received attention, and if they don't mend their ways arrests will follow. We hope the Board will carry out the wishes of the public in regard to these matters and we expect they will.
