Tomorrow evening Rev. F. B. Hardin will deliver an illustrated sermon on "opportunities."

The Ladies' Missionary society will meet with Mrs. W. L. Hicks next Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Grey of Chicago has gone into the barber business in partnership with James Moorehouse.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold their annual harvest home social in the church parlors on November 10th.

The election next month promises to be a spirited one. Nearly 130,000 voters registered in Chicago Tuesday, much to the surprise of both parties.

Owing to the large number attending the Chicago-Northwestern football game in Chicago Saturday, the attendance at the local game was small.

Mrs. Eschenhorst has moved to Chicago. Henry Hitzemann will occupy the first flat of her house and Henry Mundhenk has rented one of the upper flats.

The fire bell last Friday noon brought the fire department out to Mrs. S. Johnson's house but the fire, which was small, was put out before the firemen arrived.

Dr. Muffat's team came home from Quentin's Corners without him Sunday night. He got out to pick up something he had dropped and the team started for home.

All persons wishing to accompany the football team to St. Charles next Saturday will please notify A. G. Smith as soon as possible. A special rate will be given from Chicago to St. Charles and return.

A reception to Rev. F. B. Hardin and family was held in the Methodist church Thursday evening. A good crowd was present to welcome the new pastor and family and a very pleasant social evening was spent. A light luncheon was served.

The next lecture of the Epworth league will be given on November 11 by Rev. Frank Crane, the well known Chicago divine. Mr. Crane gets $100 for his lectures wherever he goes and, of course, no one in Palatine will miss this treat.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Van Horn celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary at their residence Saturday, October 22, 1898. A number of relatives from out of town were present and a most enjoyable time was had. An elegant wedding feast was spread to which the guests did ample justice.

A grand Republican mass meeting will be held in Batterman's hall tonight. Among the speakers will be Hon. E. S. Taylor of Evanston, C. S. Cutting, Esq., of Austin and Wm. Toge of Chicago. The Palatine Military Band will furnish music. Let all turn out and hear the issues of this campaign ably discussed.

Six residences were broken into at Arlington Heights last Saturday night, one of them being that of Dr. Roy Gibbs, but the burglars were scared away before getting anything. Jewelry and other valuables were taken from the other places.

The lecture given by Rev. Bates in the Methodist church last Friday evening was well attended. The lecture was one of the most interesting and thrilling that Palatine people have had the pleasure of listening to. Mr. Bates' escape from Andersonville prison with eighty others was told with thrilling effect and he held the closest attention from young and old throughout his narrative. The league has several more lectures of a high standard by prominent orators which will be presented.

Armour 6, Palatine 0.

The Athletic Club football team was defeated in its first game by the Armour Institute eleven on the home grounds last Saturday. The local team had not been out for practice with a full team, and consequently the lack of team work and endurance lost them the game. Armour scored but once, then in the first half by piercing the line. Palatine succeeded in holding their opponents when in danger of being scored against, but at other times they refused to brace up and stop the line bucking of the Armours. In the second half Palatine played much better and nearly scored on their opponents. B. L. Smith kept the ball in Armour's territory by his punting and Armour could not work the ball back far enough to be effective. Armour's full back did the most telling work and the local team has found a "star" in A. Mundhenk at end, who played a good game.

This afternoon the Wheaton team will play here and next Saturday the big St. Charles game will be played at St. Charles.

North-Western Engine Derailed.

One of the main tracks on the Northwestern road was blocked nearly all day Monday a short distance west of the tower at the crossing of the E. J. & E. railway on account of the derailment of an engine at that point at an early hour that morning. Besides Engineer Stearns and his fireman there were the conductor and two brakemen of the train's crew on the engine at the time of the catastrophe, and all on board were uninjured with the exception of Engineer Stearns, who, although able to be around afterwards, received several gashes about the head. The engine derailed was backing up from the north end of the yard, where they had been switching, toward the Northwestern depot. The towerman, not noticing this engine on its way toward the derail, blocked the Northwestern road to give right-of-way to an E. J. & E. freight train which was approaching. The Northwestern engine was so close to the derail when the lever in the tower was thrown that the engine almost left the tracks simultaneously, carrying with it all on board. Mr. Stearns is the same engineer who was on the engine of the St. Paul train that ran into the flat cars loaded with coal which mysteriously ran off of a side track on to the main track down to a point about two miles west of Barrington a few years ago. Fortunately, however, he was then but little injured. He was afterwards made traveling engineer, but about two weeks ago handed in his resignation and went back to his old position as engineer.

Dancing School Meets With Favor.

The movement started for the organization of a dancing school at Barrington is meeting with much favor. While the field has not been very actively canvassed the past week, yet the list of names is being gradually swelled toward the required number necessary for opening the school. There is now some talk that the little folks will be well represented in the class before the list is completed and the school opened. The plan on which the school will be conducted will be very much after that of two years ago which was then found not only economical but very satisfactory in an educational and social way.

Rev. and Mrs. Ream Tendered a Reception.

A reception of welcome was tendered to Rev. and Mrs. T. E. Ream at the M. E. church on last Friday evening. Nearly 200 invitations had been sent out, and although the evening was exceedingly disagreeable, the church was well filled with many warm friends and admirers of the pastor and his amiable wife. Several guests were present from Elgin and Chicago. Mr. J. E. Heise, chairman of the evening, in a few pleasant remarks extended a greeting to those present, after which a very pleasing program was presented. A quartette, consisting of F. E. Lines, Miss Allie Myers, Mrs. Albert Sherwood and J. E. Heise, furnished some delightful music, while Mrs. Albert Robertson presided at the organ. Dr. Kendall favored the many friends who so much enjoy his singing with one of his fine solos. Prof. Sears' orchestra furnished a selection which was highly appreciated by all.

The address of welcome to Rev. and Mrs. Ream was given by F. E. Lines in a very earnest and eloquent manner. Mr. Lines welcomed the good pastor and his wife especially, in behalf of the members and friends of the M. E. church. In response Mr. Ream thanked his friends for coming out to greet him on such a wet, disagreeable evening, and said that he found that there were two things which bad weather could not effect, one being the Peace Jubilee at Chicago, and the other, any nice time which the people of Barrington might see fit to arrange.

Rev. S. S. Hageman, in his usual kind and genial manner, extended a welcome in behalf of his own and the sister churches of Barrington. Prof. Smith added a greeting, as an old friend of the pastor's, in his accustomed entertaining manner.

M. C. McIntosh spoke on the subject "Preachers, Politicians and other People" in his usual practical and graceful style.

An original poem was given by L. D. Castle in a very able manner. Mr. Castle was warmly applauded at the close of his remarks.

Mrs. F. E. Lines also extended a greeting to Rev. and Mrs. Ream in behalf of the Chataqua Circle. Mrs. Lines said that the circle had ever found in Mr. Ream and his wife earnest workers, and she hoped that in years to come that they would look back upon their membership with that society with genuine pleasure.

At the close of the program the guests all joined in singing "America" after which they repaired to the parlors below where fruit was served and a most enjoyable social hour was spent. A reception committee consisting of six members of Mr. Ream's Sunday school class greeted the guests. They were Mrs. M. C. McIntosh, Mrs. Phillip Hawley, Misses Roby Brockway, Lydia Robertson, Gertrude Meyer and Maud Adams. Although the committee on arrangements had only a few days of very bad weather in which to prepare the entertainment, they feel that their effort was a success and they wish to thank all those who took part and helped to make it such.

Lamey-Collins Wedding.

Miss B. A. Lamey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lamey, was married to John Collins of Chicago Sunday, October 23rd. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. Clancy at St. Ann's Catholic church at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. Miles T. Lamey acted as groomsmen and Miss Mae Hayes of Chicago attended the bride. After the ceremony was over the bridal party, accompanied by a few intimate friends and near relatives of the contracting parties, retired to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Collins left on the 9 o'clock train that evening for Chicago, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Collins' long business career in Barrington brought her in close contact with the public through which she made many friends who, while they regret her departure from Barrington, wish her and her husband happiness and prosperity through life's journey.

Mr. Collins is in business in the city and is held in the highest estimation by all who know him.

Shell Wilden.

A ROMANCE

"Why are you not with Mrs. Wilden and the others?" he continues kindly, as he follows Shell into the drawing-room, which looks bare and desolate, for Shell has not found courage even to renew the flowers during the past few days.

"I did not wish to go," she explains vaguely, as she seats herself on a low chair and takes pipe on her knee. "I thought it would be so stupid and dull on the moor."

Robert Champley stares at her with an amused smile.

"Surely it could not be much duller than you are here?" he ventures with a laugh; and then adds almost sternly, "You ought not to have been left here alone."

"But I wouldn't go!" reiterates Shell decidedly. "It is nobody's fault but my own; they were all very much vexed with me for not going, only—I preferred remaining behind."

"I am afraid you must be a very determined young lady."

"Yes, I am very obstinate," assents Shell, applying the most obnoxious term she can think of to her decision of character; then, anxious to be done with personalities, she continues, "But you came with a message. How are they all getting on at Oakford?"

For a moment there is a look of keen annoyance on Robert Champley's face, then he laughs off the question gaily.

"Oh, your sister seems charmed with the moor; Mrs. Wilden not quite so enchanted; whilst Miss Flower, I hear, has threatened more than once to run away. Amongst other troubles, it seems she is suffering intensely from cold—not having come sufficiently supplied with wraps for the keen bracing air. I am charged with a note begging you to send her all the furs you can lay your hands on—she declares the Arctic regions must be tropical compared with Oakmoor!"

"Vixen always shivery," laughs Shell, as she takes the small tinted note, re-reading of orris-root, and scans the hastily-scrawled lines. "Well, it won't take me long to gather up her bundle of wraps. How does she want them sent, I wonder?"

"By train to Limply station, thence by the carrier to Oakford, I suppose," answers Mr. Champley briskly; then, seeing Shell's involuntary start of surprise, he adds, "I should have been very pleased to take them had I been going that way."

Shell still stares at him in open-eyed amazement.

"I thought you were going to spend the summer at Oakmoor?" she falters; and then a faint smile puckers up her mouth—she cannot help feeling amused at the unexpected turn events are taking.

"Yes, true—I had intended to do so," answers Robert Champley in a slow thoughtful voice, "but I have changed my mind. The children seem so thoroughly happy at the farm that I thought I would take advantage of their being there to take a short run on the continent. Your sister, Miss Wilden, has been, as usual, particularly kind—she has offered to keep an eye on the little ones—so I feel that they are perfectly safe." He finishes his statement with a deep-drawn sigh; and Shell blushes crimson in the gathering twilight as she realizes the fact that he has been driven abroad by Ruby's pertinacity.

"Would they not have been safer at Champley House with Mrs. Tolley to look after them?" ventures Shell doubtfully.

Again the father sighs. "I think the air up there is good for Meg," he answers, drawing his hand slowly across his brow; "the child has not been herself of late—even Rob has turned listless with the heat; but I don't doubt I shall find them strong enough on my return—the Oakmoor air is better than any medicine."

"And yet you are running away from it!" laughs Shell mischievously. "A week of it seemed enough for Ted," explains Mr. Champley, throwing the onus of his departure on his brother's innocent shoulders. "We thought we should have time for a rush through Switzerland before the long vacation. Ted has never been to Switzerland."

"I hope you both will enjoy it," remarks Shell tamely.

Then there ensues an awkward pause—neither guest nor hostess seems to have any further remark to make till Robert Champley's eyes, traveling round the room in search of an object, light upon the piano.

"You were discoursing very sweet music when I broke in upon your solitude," he says, with a quick smile.

"Yes, I was making as much noise as possible to drown my feeling of loneliness," laughs Shell.

"Perhaps it was indiscreet of me, but I listened to your music for fully ten minutes before knocking at the door. I am particularly partial to good music, and it is not often that I get a chance of listening to any so well worth hearing. I could not imagine who was playing—somehow I was under an erroneous impression that Miss Wilden was par excellence the musician of the family."

"Oh, my playing is nothing much!" answers Shell brusquely.

"You are wounding my feelings, for I consider myself a good judge," laughs her companion; "only I should very much like to know why you so persistently put yourself in the background."

"Oh, because putting oneself forward is such a bore!" scoffs Shell. "If people know you can play, you are always being made useful in one way or another."

"Isn't that rather a selfish way to look at it?" asks Mr. Champley gravely. "Surely it was intended that we should all be useful to our fellow-creatures so far as lies in our power."

Shell laughs a little mocking laugh.

"Of course it is very meritorious to be unselfish," she says flippantly; "but I am not given to self-sacrifice, and I am afraid I don't love my fellow-creatures as I ought."

Whilst she is speaking a single knock at the door is heard, and again she breaks into a laugh. "Ah, there is Susan—she is a fellow-creature of course, and at the present moment I feel full of love for her, but I am afraid my motive is a selfish one! You see, I was so awfully afraid that something had happened to her which would have been awkward for me, to say the least of it," and she hurries into the hall to admit the long-looked for Susan.

"You are an enigma," remarks Robert Champley, who, having followed Shell to the door, now holds her hand in his, and gazes down at her with thoughtful, puzzled eyes.

"Am I? How horrid! I never found out an enigma in the whole course of my life—I think them so dreadfully stupid."

"You are not stupid; and I rather like enigmas," returned Robert Champley, falling into a reflection of her own mood—"that is, it amuses me to find them out. By the way, Bob and Meg loaded me with the most affectionate messages for you."

"Did they? How queer!" answers Shell carelessly.

"I don't see anything queer about it," says Robert Champley coldly. They have very affectionate natures, poor little things, and I imagine that you have been kind to them!"

"Have I?" muses Shell in speculative tones. "If so it must have been very passive kindness."

"I am not so sure of that; but I must be going now—I feel that I leave you in some kind of safety, now your maid has returned—but really this place is in too lonely a position for you to be living as you are doing, almost alone."

"Oh, we are safe enough!" laughs Shell. "There is nothing at the Wilderness to tempt robbers; and I am not as a rule a nervous person, although you found me in such an abject fright. Good night," and she holds out her hand in a limp and indifferent way to be shaken.

"Good night," he says, earnestly, as he presses it.

"Good night," laughs Shell, "and happy journey!"

"You are rather premature in your wish. I shall not be leaving home for two or three days."

"Never mind—happy journey when you do start!" persists Shell, with a careless nod, as he moves away.

"A strange girl," muses Robert Champley, as he pauses in the drive to light a cigar—"one of the most unaccountable characters I ever came across. She makes herself out a kind of savage, and yet the children adore her. I wonder what induced her to remain all alone in that big house when the rest took to the moor. By the way, what a nuisance that they fixed upon my neighborhood, and so literally drove me away from my hiding-place! I hope the children will be all right—I do wish Miss Wilden would leave them alone—however, that she evidently won't do. I think I shall have to charter a yacht—she couldn't follow us then"—with an impatient laugh. "By the way, how remarkably well that little Shell plays! I have half a mind to make some excuse for a call at the Wilderness in the morning—wonder if she would play for me? Don't think so, but I'll have a try."

CHAPTER XI.

Robert Champley is not as a rule given to thinking much about his neighbors' concerns, yet the vision of Shell, startled and pale, as she stood before him in the gathering gloom of the hall at the Wilderness, rises more than once and confronts him during the wakeful watches of that summer night.

When breakfast is over the next morning, and the brothers are enjoying their pipes together with the news of the day, under the rose-wreathed verandah which shelters the dining-room windows of Champley House, Robert suddenly breaks the silence.

"I am going over to the Wilderness—will you come?" he asks, addressing his brother.

"To the Wilderness?" repeats Ted in amazement. "Why, what's up? You went to the Wilderness last evening."

"That is no reason why I shouldn't go again this morning!" laughs Robert.

"Not the slightest," assents Ted, with a lazy shrug of his shoulders. "If you have a fancy for stinging-nettles. It may be a weakness on my part, but I have a particular aversion to prickly young women, and Mademoiselle Shell is a perfect hedgehog."

"Then you won't come?"

"Not if I know it; and you can hint to the young lady that she has lost the pleasure of my company entirely through her waspishness of disposition—perhaps then she will mend her ways."

"Yes, that would be likely to make a strong impression on her, I should think," says the elder brother derisively, as he clears the ashes from his pipe and prepares for departure. "The fact is," he continues in explanation, "I think Shell ought to join her mother at Oakford; it is really not safe for her to remain here all alone."

"Oh, she is safe enough! Nobody who has had one interview with her is likely to molest her a second time," scoffs Ted. "However, if she is weighing on your mind you had certainly better get rid of her before we start; so go and give her the benefit of your opinion, if you dare—you always were of a somewhat Quixotic nature."

"Not in the least," returns Robert seriously. "Only where duty so plainly leads one, must needs follow."

"Capital sentiment, no doubt, for the head of a family," draws Ted. "If ever I marry, I hope a sense of my responsibility will fall upon me at the same time. At present my duty plainly leads me to pack, and not to moralize with Shell on the impropriety of her conduct."

"You are a lazy dog, Ted, and no mistake!" laughs Robert Champley, looking down with an indulgent smile at his younger brother, who, instead of bestirring himself for the talked-of packing, has sunk down upon the close-shaven green slope leading to the veranda, and is almost lost to view under the widespread sheet of the Times.

"I am thankful for small mercies," responds Ted, in a tone of unmerited persecution. "Your speech would have been more annihilating had you substituted the word 'puppy' for 'dog.' Now speed you on your way—I have no earthly wish to detain you—and tell Miss Shell, with my best respects, that she is quite welcome to the moor, now we have done with it!"

"All right!" laughs Robert; and the next moment he is walking briskly down the avenue.

As he nears the Wilderness, however, his pace slackens. After all, what business of his is it that Shell chooses to remain at home instead of joining her mother and sister? May she not feel justly annoyed at his interference, and resent it as sheer impertinence? And yet he cannot somehow feel justified in going away and leaving her unprotected. She has been kind to his children—their little hearts seem full of her—her name trips from their tongues twenty times a day; and yet—incomprehensible girl that she is—she never seems to care one jot about them; and, if she speaks of them at all, deems them by her tone "little nuisances."

Well, duty is duty—she can misconstrue him if she will, laugh at him if it so pleases her, but he will have his say, and just tell her plainly and seriously that she ought to go to Oakford.

With this resolution uppermost in his mind he mounts the large, flat doorstep and pulls the bell. As a rule, when the whole family are at home, the hall door stands open to admit the summer sunshine—now it is closed, and Robert Champley notes with a sigh that it badly wants a coat of paint.

European Forests.

North British Agriculturist, in an article on English and continental forests, says:

However much individual opinions may differ as to the quality of the timber grown in this country, or as to the methods of management under which it is produced, what the country has got to face is the fact that, excluding minor forest produce, its timber bill amounts to something like £16,000,000 per annum, £9,000,000 or so of which goes to the Baltic ports for common spruce and Scots-fir, chiefly for constructive purposes. Of the remainder, about £5,000,000 finds its way to the North American ports, chiefly for pines, most of which cannot be grown here, and about £2,000,000 to Asia and Australia for teak and Eucalypti, the latter principally for street-paving.

To a continental sylviculturist who has not had an opportunity of seeing what the resources of the country really are in respect to timber-growing, it might appear, from an examination of the agricultural returns, that Britain was very ill adapted for the purpose. When our woodland area of something like 3,000,000 acres is compared with those of some of the principal timber-producing countries of Europe, it becomes dwarfed almost into insignificance; and when it is taken into account that a very considerable proportion of this area consists of land occupied by ornamental and other plantations of various kinds for amenity, which would not be classed as timber land according to continental ideas, and of large tracts which practically carry no crop of any kind, as in some parts of the New Forest in Hampshire, the area actually under what might be brought under the head of timber land proper is a very small one indeed. The whole woodland area amounts to less than one-twenty-fifth of that of the whole country (including land and water), and of this little more than one-thirtieth is owned by the state. When we turn to some of the principal timber-producing countries of the continent, we are confronted with a very different state of affairs. Russia proper has over one-third of its whole area under timber, fully one-half of which is owned by the state; Sweden has about one-half, of which one-third is owned by the state; Norway about one-fourth, of which one-eighth is owned by the state; Germany fully one-fourth, of which one-third is owned by the state, and a considerable portion by communes; Austria about one-third, of which one-tenth is owned by the state; and France about one-fifth, of which one-tenth is owned by the State. Looking more particularly at the German area, which is undoubtedly the most skillfully managed of all, we find that, from the 34 million acres of land under timber, there is an annual out-turn of timber amounting to the value of from £20,000,000 to £22,500,000, without in any way encroaching on the capital or growing stock, while the expenses of management amount to a little over £4,000,000. But what is of as great importance is the fact that employment is afforded to nearly 600,000 people, representing, it is estimated, something like 3,000,000 of the population.

Lime Water as a Disinfectant.

The value of lime water as a purifier, a disinfectant and a germicide is not generally known, says R. Crowe, assistant dairy expert in Victoria, Australia. Its adaptability for use in dairying places, is far ahead of other things on that line. The chief points of advantage are in cheapness, ease of application, efficiency and harmlessness; for it is not poisonous, as many disinfectants are. No remedy is known that will permanently sweeten a badly contaminated churn which should be destroyed. To prevent a churn from going off, it should be filled periodically, say once a week, right up to the top with lime water and let it stand over night. This water may be used again to wash walls, floors, etc.

To make lime water put in a quantity of slacked lime in a tank or barrel. Fill up with water, then stir well. After settling the water will be clear, with a scum (carbonate of lime) on the surface. Use the clear water without disturbing the lime in the bottom. When emptied fill up again with water and stir, then leave to settle and so on. The quantity of lime may serve for many fillings of the vessel with water. As long as the carbonate of lime appears on the surface after settling it may be considered of sufficient strength. Every factory should have a tank in a high position with taps laid on to places required. Lime water should be used by all milk suppliers to rinse buckets and milk cans after cleaning. The cause of milk turning sour in cans quickly is often on account of the bacterial starter left in the vessels used. A simple experiment will demonstrate this to be true. Rinse one can, after cleaning, with lime water, and after leaving the cover on for some time, compare with another which has not been rinsed with lime water, leaving the cover on this also. Again, if we take two cans, one cleaned in the former way and one in the latter, it will be found that milk will keep much better in the one treated with lime than in the other.

The Work Will Continue.
The divisions of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad west of the Ohio river are to receive the same sort of improvements that have been made on the lines east of the Ohio. Not only are the grades to be reduced wherever it is practicable, but very much heavier motive power is to be introduced. In order to carry the additional weight the bridges on all the divisions are being replaced with heavier structures and the track relaid with heavier steel rail. It has been demonstrated by actual experiment that these changes will result in an increase in train loading in some places of more than 50 per cent. It is the hope of the receivers that within the next two years the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will be an 18-foot grade road from Chicago to Baltimore, with the exception of that portion of it which passes over the mountains where helping engines will have to be used. A great many of the estimates for the different portions of the work have been made, and those who have seen the plans state that the work can be done at a surprisingly low cost considering the return. It is understood that the policy of rehabilitation adopted by the receivers two years ago will be continued by the new company after the reorganization.

The returned soldier paused briefly and poised the fork dexterously.
"This pie of yours is not—"
Wearily, the wife sighed. "You need not finish the sentence, Henry," she said, with somewhat of sadness in her tones. "I know my pies are not as good as those your mother used to make."
"You are entitled to another guess," he rejoined, softly. "I was about to say that this pie of yours is not only better, but infinitely more prepossessing in appearance than those we ate at Tampa."
Ah, yes. The relentless march of time makes it possible for us to remove the cob-web costume from the joke of the past and dress it in the goldfish garments of the present.

The Horrible Part.
"Oh," she said, "I had a horrible dream last night. And—and you were a part of it."
"I?" he exclaimed.
"Yes; I dreamed that you and I were alone upon a deserted island."
"Well," he replied, as he arose to go. "If that's your idea of a horrible dream I guess I may as well be saying good-by."
"But wait," she cried, "until you have heard all. You were standing on the beach waving your coat as a signal for help."
When he left, three hours later, a great change had come into his life.

Unshaken Confidence.
"It's always pretty safe to judge a man by the company he keeps."

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS ABOUT OVARITIS.

Letter from Mrs. Carrie F. Tremper that all Suffering Women Should Read.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation with all its terrors may easily result from neglect. The fullest counsel on this subject can be secured without cost by writing to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and asking for her advice. Your letter will be confidential and seen by women only.
Mrs. Carrie F. Tremper, Lake, Ind., whose letter we print, is only one of many that have been cured of ovarian troubles by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was suffering from congestion of the ovaries, misplacement of the womb, irregular, scanty, and painful menstruation, also kidney trouble. I had let it go on until I could not sit up, and could not straighten my left leg. My physician gave me relief, but failed to cure me. Reading the testimonials of different women, telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for them, I decided to give it a trial. I had almost given up hopes, as I had suffered untold agony. The first dose helped me. And now, after using eight bottles of Vegetable Compound, one bottle of Blood Purifier, one box of Liver Pills, I am proud to say I am as well as I ever was. I might have saved a large doctor's bill and much suffering, had I tried your precious medicine in the beginning of my sickness. All in the village know I was not expected to live, when I had the first and second attacks. In fact, I had no hope until I began taking your Vegetable Compound. It has saved my life."

The Smoke Nuisance.

In all our large cities and towns, east and west, where manufacturing is conducted to any considerable extent the use of bituminous coal is increasing. The limitation of the output of anthracite has forced this in a measure, but in any case the cheaper coal would force its way. The dim hued atmosphere, the begrimed buildings, a certain indescribable sootiness of aspect, marks the physiognomy of cities where the main dependence is on soft coal. Even in New York, where one of the greatest charms of the ensemble has always been noted in a crystalline beauty of the air and sky, the smoke nuisance is casting its shadow. It may be said that the increasing application of electricity to motor purposes, whereby the economical and effective combustion of coal and utilization of its heat units can be accomplished on a large scale, will tend ultimately to lessen the smoke volume from factory chimneys. It is true also that in eastern cities where anthracite coal will always be used for domestic purposes smoke will not be so much in evidence as in western cities. But there is no need in any case that there should be nearly the same amount of annoyance from this cause as actually exists.

In London there has been a perceptible diminution of the effects of smoke, according to the testimony of those in a position to make a continuous comparison. An ordinance exists in that great city compelling all manufacturing concerns which use coal in large quantities to consume the gases of incomplete combustion—for that is the philosophy of smoke—by specially devised apparatus. It is approximately successful, but it can never, of course, fully satisfy the fullness of the ideal. A million or so of households burning soft coal will have their effect, whatever restriction may be placed on the workshops and factories. But something very perceptible has been accomplished, it is alleged. If all large users of soft coal in the United States were obliged by law to adopt the smoke consuming apparatus, it would be found an economy to the user and a blessing to the health and aesthetic taste of the public. The experiment is well worth the trial, specially in many of the big cities of the west, where the smoke nuisance transforms even clear sunshine into a kind of yellow pallor, which is at times almost ghastly to the unaccustomed eye.

An interesting paper was read by Professor Lunstrom of Sweden before the British association at its recent meeting describing experiments made on growing plants through the action of electricity. The trials were continued for more than a month and extended over 161 hours in midsummer. The current was applied for four hours in the morning and four in the afternoon. On a general average there was found to be an increase of their seeds during this period of experiment of 40 per cent and in the roots of from 25 to 75 per cent, the latter increase being in beans, strawberries and raspberries. The time of ripening was shortened fully one-third. The experiments satisfied the author of some things in the philosophy of natural operations. Unless water was given the plants at the same time with the electrical current on hot, sunshiny days the plants were injured. Electrical storms in the state of nature were conceived to be important to vegetation. Professor Lunstrom believed that either the gases in the air were transformed to ozone or nitrous oxides, which, being heavy, fell upon the plants and helped the activity of their vegetation or that the electricity induced the juices of the plants to circulate more rapidly through the capillary tubes. It was claimed that the method was ready to be carried into practical operation. From experiments made in the United States some years ago it was found that artificially applied electricity was of special value in growing fruit, vegetables and flowers under glass, but less reliable in the field.

The Kansas City papers have been having their fun over one of the attractions of their carnival, "her illustrious highness Princess Mban-Na-Uliivan, eldest daughter of Tanno Moafu, king of the Fiji islands, who has already started from her father's capital, Savu-Savu, situated on the island of Moulia Matrari, for San Francisco, and will arrive there on Sept. 25. Her highness brings with her the court costume she will wear when in Kansas City, and before leaving her island home it had been carefully packed in a cigar box and sealed with the royal seal." It seems that the princess at the last moment struck for three copper nose rings and a necklace of human teeth, while the royal father insisted on 25 pounds of scrapiron and a bottle of Medford rum.

It was a pet scheme of Gordon Pasha in his earlier days as governor general of the Sudan to establish a college at Khartoum. Here the western education could be taught, at least in its rudimentary branches, and the sons of the chiefs of the Baggara and of other semi-Arab tribes who swell the ranks of the dervishes might thus be brought under civilizing influences during plastic youth. Education in the Sudan under native auspices simply means a well memorized knowledge of the Koran. The notion of establishing such a college was that of a farseeing statesman. General Kitchener, the brilliant English soldier, who has been walking in Gordon's tracks with more than Gordon's good fortune, has revived the scheme. On his return to Cairo and finally to England the assent of the khedive and of the English government, with the requisite assistance, will be secured. A well pushed enterprise of this kind will tend to make further Mahdism impossible and substitute an equally effective apparatus for the machine gun and the soldier's bayonet.

A strong movement in England is stirring the question of decimal coinage to replace the very complicated and difficult measure of sterling money. That has outworn its usefulness. Merchants are beginning to see in their antiquated coinage one reason why British foreign trade has stood still while that of the United States and Germany has made such tremendous strides. The absurdity of using the metric system of weights and measures in international trade while still clinging to the antiquated figuring in pounds, shillings and pence is evident at a glance.

The utilization of the byproducts of manufacture once discarded as waste is becoming an important feature of industrial economy. For example, the phosphorus eliminated from iron by the basic process is returned to the fields again as one of the most effective manures. At the great packing houses everything in the animal is made valuable. The tomato and fruit canneries use even the skin and core, for out of these can be made excellent soups and jellies.

Nonsense, mere airy folly, is often more amusing than the brightest wit, and it takes a more gifted mind to blow the soap bubbles of clever nonsense than to strike off sparks of wit with the clash of flint and steel. Any social observer has constant occasion to observe the difference.

Human courage is a curious compound in most cases of vanity, shame and temperament, and were it not for its negative side, fear, its highest positive in deeds of heroism would not exist. To dare is to be very conscious of something to be dared.

The most omnivorous readers are not always the most penetrating and luminous minds. The process of digestion and assimilation is often injured by the habit of gross feeding. This is well illustrated by the joke of the old Quaker lady at the expense of Macaulay, who was boasting of the number of books which engaged his attention every day. "Why, friend Thomas, when does thee get time to think?"

The American authorities in Manila, like those in Santiago and Porto Rico, have opened the schools on as liberal a basis as possible. Paper missiles are sometimes more effective in the long run than iron and lead.

The German attache who accompanied General Kitchener's expedition and was present at Omdurman with its frightful carnage in his report accuses the English general of bad strategy and tactics. So, too, General Mack, the Austrian soldier-beaten at Marengo, accused Napoleon of poor generalship on that occasion. Both Napoleon and Kitchener, however, hit the bullseye of success. Pedants are amusing persons.

An order has been issued by the Prussian home minister complaining of the leniency of the police and soldiery in dealing with the election mobs. They are to use the edge of the sword and ball cartridge hereafter. This is in notable contrast with the mildness of England and the United States in dealing with election disturbances.

Matches.

The man who was old enough to know better was chasing up and down a Sixteenth street boarding house, trying to find a match to light a cigarette with.

"Did it ever occur to you," he said to the man who finally found a light for him, "what a boon and a benison the cigarette manufacturer has been to the match manufacturer? Think of it a moment. First, however, give me another match for this cigarette. I don't know how many cigarettes are made in this country, but let us, for the sake of argument, say there are a thousand carloads a year. Well, it takes on an average—another light, please—four matches to the cigarette, and the manufacturer of matches must therefore make 4,000 carloads of matches just to meet the cigarette demand. You may not think 4,000 carloads is a great quantity, but if you knew how hard it was to get one match when your cigarette is out, you would think 4,000 carloads wasn't a few if you had to go around begging them. I have never given serious study to the matter, but, looking at it casually, I should say the match manufacturers owe an inestimable debt of gratitude to the cigarette makers."—New York Sun.

Cash Versus Glory.

An ordinary service to mankind is usually paid for at current rates in legal tender. An extraordinary service, not involving the element of heroism, is rewarded by both legal tender and more or less fame. The highest of all services, rendered at the risk of life, is supposed to receive its full compensation in glory, unaccompanied by more sordid considerations. If, however, the hero of the service last mentioned should not be contented with his meed of glory, but should demand more substantial reward, he may receive it indeed, but at a large discount from the other (and in sentimental estimation more valuable) consideration.

Unlike the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, who receive their quid pro quo without a thought of humiliation, either in their own minds or yours, the man who saves your life at the risk of his own is looked upon as almost if not quite disgracing himself by accepting your proffered pecuniary reward, although he may, in fact, be in far sorer need than any one of the worthy trio who simply contribute to your necessities or comforts.—Edward P. Jackson in North American Review.

The Glowworm's X Ray.

The glowworm's light is said to have been shown to be due to the emission of rays similar to Roentgen's. Three hundred glowworms were caught near Kyoto and placed before photographic plates screened from the light by several thicknesses of black paper, together with plates of brass, copper and aluminum. A piece of cardboard with a hole in it was placed between the metal and the photographic plate, and for two days the arrangement was kept in a dark chamber, sheltered from all foreign lights. On developing the plate it was found to be blackened, except the part opposite the hole in the cardboard. The rays of the glowworm would appear therefore to penetrate metal and excite luminosity in cardboard. When there is nothing between the sensitive plate and the glowworm, the rays are said to behave like ordinary light, but in traversing some metals and cardboard they seem to acquire properties like that of X rays, or it may be that the ordinary glowworm emits X as well as ordinary rays.—Revue Scientifique.

A Mean Trick.

Absentmindedly Brooks stepped up to the cashier's desk and paid for his luncheon. Then, accompanied by Rivers, he went out into the open air.

"Brooks," said Rivers, "you'd better go back and settle for your dinner if you don't want the proprietor to follow you out and dun you right here on the street."

"Great Scott! Didn't I pay for it?" ejaculated Brooks. "Where's my check? I haven't got it."

"I picked it up as we left the table," said Rivers. "Here it is."

"Ah, you have come back to pay the other gentleman's check," said the cashier as Brooks went back, stepped up to the desk a second time and handed out a half dollar.

When Brooks went outside again, a moment later, Rivers was nowhere in sight, and there is another unsettled account between them.—Chicago Tribune.

Nests Which Weigh Five Pounds.
The largest, heaviest and most peculiar nests are to be found in Australia. The jungle fowl of that land build their nests in the form of great mounds, some having been found fifteen feet in height and 150 feet in circumference. They are erected in sheltered spots, and are skillfully interwoven with leaves, grass and twigs. The bush turkey adopts a similar system in constructing his nest, but it is more extensive, and the shape is pyramidal. They build in colonies, and the nests are so large that it would require the services of six or seven carts to remove one. The material of a single nest has been found to weigh upward of five tons.

A Bow and Arrow Duel.
Little more than a hundred years ago, when the silly fashion of dueling still existed in Scotland, a couple of men once met in the meadows of Edinburgh to settle a dispute—not with sword or pistol, but with bows and arrows. They made fools of themselves in the presence of their seconds and a surgeon, and, after firing three arrows apiece without hitting anything, not even a second, they retired from the arrowing scene—"honor" having been satisfied with the ridiculous display. The date of the occurrence was February 10, 1791.

New Jury Law in Ohio.
There recently went into effect in Ohio a law providing that a jury in a capital case, where the accused is found guilty of murder in the first degree, may recommend him to the mercy of the court, and when this is done the judge shall sentence the prisoner to life imprisonment. But the prisoner shall not thereafter be a subject for recommendation of pardon or parole, unless his innocence shall have been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

ANSWERING IN PERSON

"Oh, Mildred, I'm so glad you have called! I'm in great trouble. That dreadful husband of mine—Oh, my heart will break; I know it will!"
Mrs. Moseley's young spinster friend closed the sitting room door of the pretty Kensington flat and prepared for a revelation of connubial tyranny and iniquity.

"Read that!" cried Mrs. Moseley, holding out at arm's length a newspaper with her thumb nail pressed viciously into one corner of an advertisement column, and then bursting into tears.

Mildred Clarke read as follows: "Matrimony—Bachelor, 36, going to the colonies, tall, dark, educated and well connected, with fair income, desires the acquaintance of a healthy, domesticated and refined young lady with a view to marriage. Address 'Carlo,' Guilford chambers, Leadenhall street, E. C."

"Why, your husband's offices are at Guilford chambers!"
"Yes—the monster! And he is 36 years of age, and tall and dark, and he has had the brutality to use the pet name 'Carlo,' by which I have always called him. Oh, the wretched bigamist!"

"But it is impossible that he contemplated committing such a crime."
"I am sure he is bad enough for anything. Only the day before yesterday, just because I said I wished I had never seen his face—he was so provoking in consequence of the eggs being boiled hard—he said that if I really meant it he would go abroad and start life again in one of the colonies. It shows that his mind was running on deserting me. Oh, Mildred, what can I do?"

"I hardly know, dear. It looks very serious."
"Have you any scheme in your mind, Mildred?"

"Yes; first of all we will answer the advertisement in person."
"In person!"

"Fortunately, I have not yet succeeded in meeting your husband, so he doesn't know me. You shall accompany me as a friend—for propriety's sake—in disguise, you know."

An hour later two ladies were shown into the private office of Mr. Moseley. "Are you the gentleman who has advertised under the name 'Carlo?'" asked Mildred.

"Er—yes; but replies should be made by letter."
"I thought a personal interview might be more satisfactory than a letter—in a case of this kind, I hope I—"

"Oh, not at all. I'm sure I am only too delighted to have the opportunity of—I suppose I may take it that you are yourself an applicant—ahem!—that you are interested in the matter on your own account?"

"Quite so. It occurred to me that—"
"You find the position embarrassing? It certainly is rather comical. But let us treat the matter in a business-like way. I presume this lady is—"

"My friend. You may speak as if we were alone."
"Very well, then. You will have learnt from the advertisement that I am 36 years of age and a bachelor."

"I am going to Australia next month, and it is my desire, if I am lucky enough to find a suitable lady who is willing to marry me, to take out an English wife with me. I shall be able to produce satisfactory proofs, I think, of my position, good character and income."
"May I at least hope," he went on,

MY WIFE HAS FAINTED.
"That you will give me some encouragement, and that—good heavens! my wife has fainted!"

He ran forward and caught her in his arms. The word "my wife" told Mildred in a flash that Mr. Moseley had known Ethel all the time in her disguise.

"Ethel, darling," he cried, as his wife opened her eyes, "it's all a joke—I knew you all the time—the advertisement is for a friend of mine. How can you doubt my faithfulness, little wife?"

"Oh, Carlo, it isn't true, is it? You are not going to desert me?"
"But how did you recognize me, Carlo?" Mrs. Moseley asked.

"Principally by that uncommon bangle which you forgot to take off. I had been thinking what you would be likely to do if you happened to see the advertisement. Then the general public would not know that 'Carlo' was likely to be found at Mr. Moseley's office rather than at one of the fifty other offices in this building. Finally, you seem to have forgotten that, though I had never before met Miss Mildred Clarke, her photograph is in your album."

"But I must ask you," said Mrs. Moseley, severely, "to give me explanation as to the real 'Carlo.'"
"He is an old schoolfellow of mine. We drew up the advertisement together, and I let him use this address. I adopted the word 'Carlo' for the simple reason that one word would seem as well as another, and 'Carlo' occurred to me first. The bachelor's name is Herbert Carter—you shall see him."

Mr. Moseley rang his bell.

A tall and handsome man entered and was presented to the two ladies.
"Miss Clarke, I may tell you," said Mr. Moseley, "has called in reply to your advertisement."

Mildred blushed and attempted an indignant denial. But the curious fact remains that in the following month she went out to Australia as Mrs. Herbert Carter.—Philadelphia Item.

A MIMIC SEA.

To start an aquarium sounds a rather formidable undertaking from a financial standpoint; yet it costs nothing to collect the treasures of the sea; and once intelligently collected months of pleasure are secured. The expensive glass globes called aquariums are not necessary, nor even desirable. A top will live in a bottle, and a sea-garden grow in a preserve jar. Instead, substitute a small, new tub, unpainted inside, or a glass box made of window panes set in a framework of wood and cement. Into this tank put two inches of well-washed sea-sand, avoiding all worms and fleas, which would die and poison the water. This layer of sand is for the benefit of the crabs and burrowing snails.

Then, with small, clean stones, free from all vegetable growth, and a little cement build a mimic arcade in the center of the tank, which will provide shade, without which your sleepless fish would soon die. Little lumps of cement, stuck irregularly about the sides of the tub, afford root-room for weed, and so vary its monotony. Having prepared the tank, fill it with deep-sea water to guard against the possible impurities of the shore. As this water evaporates renew with fresh water, since the original salt never evaporates.

The tank must be placed where it will have plenty of light and air, while guarded against heat and dust. Sunlight is necessary for the plant life of the aquarium, but if the water ever becomes tepid the fish will die. Now deposit in the tank half a dozen stones or shells, to which are attached the finer varieties of growing weed, as sea-lettuce and ulvae. It is well to first wash these carefully, lest decayed matter lurk in the froths.

Some careful collectors let the weed get accustomed to its changed condition by placing it in a pail for a day or two. The health of this weed is most important to the success of the aquarium. Under the action of the sun these water plants manufacture oxygen for the fish, and in return receive carbonic gas. It is the old story of what the grass and the trees do for the outer air.

Once the sea-weed begins to thrive and give off glittering oxygen bubbles it is time to preserve green snails to eat the new growth, that would else soon fill the tank. The periwinkle is another weed-eater, and a most industrious glutton. Later, when the tank is stocked, no other food is provided, each fish foraging for itself. Now begin the absorbing occupation of finding finny inhabitants for this mimic sea. Collect, if possible, at the time of the new or full moon, when the tides are especially low.

Avoid the sand-loving fish found in tide-pools, since they soon die in captivity; also the slimy slugs that live beneath stones, and void an inky fluid when disturbed. A boat and a small net, with a few bottles to hold specimens, soon leave nothing to be desired. There are plenty of fish in the sea, and the collector must take care not to overcrowd. Suckers will live for years if they do not succeed in leaping from captivity. The sly little urchins thrive, unless eaten by a starfish. A sober-looking cockle can leap and burrow like a football player when he has a mind, while the painted prawn, aristocratic cousin to the shrimp, will dash about when excited like a runaway rainbow.

The oyster that so calmly lets you swallow him alive is busy getting fat for the process; the little flounder and the stickle-back play with each other's tail. Barnacles there are of any kind, enough to sink a ship; scallops of various colors, sea-anemones, so flower-like it is hard to believe them animals, and flat-shelled limpets, all of which must be found sticking to stones. Uninteresting as they look on the shore, they will soon flaunt their hidden beauties before their new friends in the tank.

The sluggish crab that lives hidden like a hermit is valuable as an eater of dead things. The brilliant cark-wing playing all day amid the rock-work will live on the tiny parasites among the weed. If the tank boasts bivalves, a whelk will keep them from becoming too numerous. As in the bigger world, each lives on its weaker brother; but of all the feeders, the jelly-fish is most interesting, since its internal economy is quite visible.

Soldiers' Hardest Work.
"It was the grave digging," says a soldier quoted by the Worcester Gazette, "that broke down many of the boys. Nothing could be more disheartening than to take the body of a dead comrade out and fight off the buzzards while digging the grave. It is bad enough to hear the earth rattle down on the top of a coffin containing the form of a comrade, but it is shocking to put an uncoffined form into the ground and pile the dirt on top of it. The men detailed for burials were easily disheartened and the soldier who lost heart was a candidate for an early burial."

PICTURE OF OLD TIMES

HISTORIC HOUSE IN WHICH HISTORY WAS MADE.

Illinois' First State House on the Banks of the Mississippi—The Old Pape Mansion Still Stands at Kaskaskia—Sketches of Early Days.

(Nashville, Ill., Letter.)
THE old Pape mansion or the state house, as it was afterward called, is without doubt the oldest brick structure in the Mississippi valley. The old building now stands in what is about the center of the remains of the historic village of Old Kaskaskia, and unless some action is taken against the continual encroachments of the Mississippi river the house will ere long follow all the other old buildings in their course and fall a victim to the relentless waters. The date of the erection of the building is veiled in uncertainty, but it was built some time about the year 1780. The material of which it is constructed, large square bricks, were brought down the Ohio river from Pittsburg, and thence up the Mississippi to Kaskaskia in keel boats. They were the first brick brought into the country then known as the Illinois territory, and though more than 100 years have elapsed since they were put into the building, they are still in a perfect state of preservation. The old house has been repaired from time to time, and at present the outer walls are covered with a heavy coat of cement. The building has a most remarkable history. It was erected as a residence, but as it neared completion, the various councils which met at Kaskaskia having no suitable building wherein they could hold their sessions, and as the Pape mansion was everything that could be desired, the citizens of the town purchased the building and converted it into a public hall. In 1809, when all the territory lying west of the Wabash river and north as far as the Dominion of Canada line was organized into the Illinois territory, Kaskaskia became the territorial seat of government and the Pape mansion was converted into the assembly-house of the territorial legislature. On June 16, 1809, the first territorial legislature that ever met west of the Wabash river convened in this old building. The body was composed of General George Edwards, territorial governor, and Judge Stuart and Judge Sprigg, two of the three supreme judges of the territory. From June 16 until Sept. 16 the counties of Madison, Gallatin and Johnson were organized, making altogether, with St. Clair and Randolph, five counties. One representative from each county was elected and on Nov. 10 Governor Edwards issued a proclamation ordering the representatives to convene at the Pape mansion at Kaskaskia, and here the first laws of the territory of Illinois were enacted. The large hall on the lower floor of the building was used as the assembly-room and the rooms in the upper story served as the offices of the governor and the other executive officers. It was in this building that the legislature incorporated the first bank in the territory, which was located at Cairo. Not only did the territorial legislature hold many sessions in this building, but previous to this time numerous councils had been held in the assembly-room by the people of Kaskaskia and the Indian tribes. In the year 1818 Illinois, owing to her rapid progress, was admitted to the Union as a state. The petition praying for the admission of the state into the Union on an equal footing with the other states is said to have been framed in this old building. The legislature was in session at Kaskaskia in January of that year and the session was held in this building. The convention which was called by congress to draft the constitution for the state of Illinois assembled at Kaskaskia in July, 1818, and completed its labors by signing the constitution on Aug. 26 following. Whether the session was held in the old statehouse or in the new building is a question, as a new state building was erected about that time. It is generally believed, however, that the convention was held in this building and the constitution of the great state of Illinois was therein drafted. Pierre Menard, who afterward served as lieutenant governor of the state and who was the most remarkable personage in the territory and state during its early history, presided over many of the councils held in this building, and some of the deeds conferring some of the greatest land grants made by the United States were recorded there. The interior of the house has now fallen to decay and has long since been abandoned even by the present inhabitants of Kaskaskia.

No man ever has to feel ashamed of the company he keeps out of.

THE PAPE MANSION.

Several of the county officials came over from Waukegan to take part in a Republican rally Tuesday evening. The weather was so disagreeable that the attendance was rather small.
The caddies of the Lake Zurich golf club played an interesting game Sunday. Frank Scholz won the first prize. The boys were served with an elegant dinner by the members of the club. They should receive a cold reception from all, for just so long as they are supported in this way they will continue to disgrace our streets. The men belonging to the band were in the woods south of town while the women were begging for their support.
Among those invited to attend the Harvest social in the Methodist church next Thursday night are: President and Mrs. McKinley, Chauncey Depew, all officers and soldiers of the army, the members of the navy, all civilians, Republicans, Democrats, Prohibitionists, Independents, married people, those who wish they were boys and girls—old and young—and whosoever hath a quarter of a dollar. Chicken pie and beans will be on the bill of fare, besides many other eatables. You are guaranteed to be filled.

We are informed that the road commissioners of the town of Cuba have offered to co-operate with the commissions of Ela in graveling the road from Lake Zurich to Barrington. Nothing would be of more value to Lake Zurich than a good gravel road between Lake Zurich and Barrington. The town of Ela has plenty of money in its treasury and can well afford to carry out this plan. We hope to see the road improved so as to be passable at least.

WAUCONDA.

Next Tuesday, Nov. 1st, is Halloween and we expect the boys will remember it, as usual, if the marshal does not watch too closely. Be careful, boys, and don't do anything rash.

Our first snow storm this season occurred Tuesday evening, although it was not very heavy it gave the farmers a warning to hurry with their fall work and be prepared for the cold and stormy weather which will soon be here.
Dennison Huntington, Democratic candidate for county clerk, called on friends in our village last week. Mr. Huntington is a good man in any position he might be placed and we expect he will receive good support in this vicinity.

A Democratic rally will be held here this (Saturday) evening at the Oakland hall. Frank C. Rogers and Geo. A. Mauman will address our citizens and all are asked to come out and hear the other side of this political situation discussed.

At the reception and dance given at the M. W. A. hall by Prof. Monroe of Waukegan Tuesday evening the attendance was rather small, although it was larger than might have been expected on such a stormy evening. A very pleasant evening was spent by all and at 12 o'clock "Home, Sweet Home" was played. Nearly all present gave their names for a term of lessons. Prof. Monroe will be here again next Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st, to complete the organization of his class and give the first lesson. He is a very able instructor, which was clearly demonstrated Tuesday evening. He guarantees to teach anyone eight round dances, including waltz, two-step, polka and schottische, in a term of 12 lessons or he will refund your money. Don't miss this opportunity as it will perhaps never be of value again. Everybody come and team will be as good as won.

More than last year. Much time was spent in wrangling during the game, which otherwise would have been counted in scores for Palatine. The boys have practiced hard for the game with St. Charles this afternoon and they hope to win. Mr. Benson will probably play with the team and John Fink and John Williams have donned the uniforms and have made the line a hard one for the opponents to move. A big crowd will go with the team this morning, which leaves on the 9:40 train.

There are rumors of coming marriages but we won't mention any names for awhile yet as we might frighten some of our worthy bachelors. Remember "faint heart never won fair lady."

Three Doctors in Consultation.

From Benjamin Franklin.
"When you are sick, what you like best is to be chosen for a medicine in the first place; what experience tells you is best, to be chosen in the second place; what reason (i. e. Theory) says is best is to be chosen in the last place. But you can get DR. INCLINATION, DR. EXPERIENCE and DR. REASON to hold a consultation together, they will give you the best advice that can be taken."

When you have a bad cold Dr. Inclination would recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is pleasant and safe to take. Dr. Experience would recommend it because it never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. Dr. Reason would recommend it because it is prepared on scientific principles, and acts on nature's plan in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions and restoring the system to a natural and healthy condition. For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

How to Prevent Croup.

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out in, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it sold here than of all other cough medicines combined.—J. M. NICKLE, of Lowe, Kle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Minn. For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

MOBS FIGHT WITH POLICE.

Throughout the Intense Excitement the Trouble with Great Britain Appears to Have Been Forgotten—Crisis Turns on Dreyfus Case.

The French cabinet has fallen. It was upset by a vote of "no confidence" in the chamber of deputies, based on opposition to its handling of the Dreyfus case.

Vast crowds gathered in the Palace de la Concorde and began a violent demonstration, crying "Long live the army," "Down with the traitors and down with the Jews."

The police charged upon the crowd, and several persons were injured. A number of the crowd were arrested.

It was noticeable that in the streets, as in the chamber of deputies, the Dreyfus case was ignored. No anti-British cries were raised. The populace are quite unmoved by the international question. Their hostility was confined to Jews, Dreyfusites and revisionists. There were some serious disturbances.

A STORY OF THE TIMES.

"Four Months After Date." By Randall Irving Tyler; published by Stuyvesant Publishing Co., N. Y. A unique book in which the author has made the telling of dry details of modern business transactions very attractive by ingeniously weaving into the whole a thread of love and romance which is bound to hold the attention of the reader to the last.

The following synopsis gives the reader a good idea of the trend of the story and its lesson: "This tale is a glimpse at uniform excess of expense over income, with its accompanying uncertainties and ultimate climax. When Billy's income was three thousand, his demands exceeded five thousand; when he made eight thousand, he spent ten thousand, and was always hard pressed.

"Such personal disbursements as he made were comparatively small, tobacco being his principal vice, and Alice was economy itself. Consequently they presented an appearance of living entirely within their means.

"It was the rolling ball of interest money, the lack of system, the cheerful assumption of debts not created by himself that kept Billy poor."

The present system of national banks, state banks and trust companies is shown up in its true light, with its attendant evils, usurious interest rates, insolvency caused by forced sales, etc.

The home life of Billy Burt is portrayed in a striking manner, showing the inevitable result of his haphazard course and how criminal his defiance of the laws of prudence. The outcome is happy, but at what a cost!

No Path of Roses.

He's the only man now at the summer resort,

Yet the path isn't covered with roses;

And whenever he goes for a stroll on the beach

The maidens all turn up their noses.

For he's the only one left out of six,

And he's sorry he didn't go after,

For two are with Sampson and one is with Schley,

And two are in Cuba with Shafter.

A Good Judge of Goals.
Count Rocco Dianovitch, a rich Polisher, has adopted a very queer business. For thirty-four of the forty-seven years of his life he has lived in gaols for the purpose of gathering information for a book he is anxious to write on the subject. At 13 he left home and went into Prussia, where he was arrested for trespassing and sent to gaol for three months, working at brickmaking. From that time to this he has never been free from his desire to see his prison explorations. Until he was 20 he was in and out of more than twenty prisons in Prussia, Poland and Russia. His experience in gaol life in England, Liverpool, which was one of the best he was ever in, filled with riotous sailors from all over the world. He stayed there six months, he paid his fine and got out. The next time he failed to serve his term. Then he went to Ireland, Spain, Italy, Australia; next to Japan, and then to America. He remained for two years in gaol, most of his time in gaols and in correction. The count concedes that his experience in gaols is the most pleasant of his life.

EVENTS IN ILLINOIS

Seven Days' Doings in the Prairie State—Telegrams Received from Various Points.

Annoys Girl Students.
Evanston—Dean Mary Harriet Norris, with the assistance of the police, a bull dog and the janitor of woman's hall, is prosecuting a search for a disturber of the peace of mind of every fair young woman who studies at Northwestern University. Miss Norris has seen his shadow, the bull dog has secured a piece of his coat tail and the police are endeavoring, with the assistance of the janitor, to put the clews together and produce the man. Dr. R. D. Sheppard, business manager of the university, reported the matter yesterday after several attempts on the part of the bull dog to catch the marauder had proven fruitless. The trouble arose two days ago, when one of the young women, while entertaining company in the parlors of the hall, discovered a man's face pressed against the window pane. She screamed and called for help, and the man disappeared. The police have reached the conclusion that a discharged employe, who, while he was serving as janitor under Dean Emily Huntington Miller, often became intoxicated and imagined he was the guardian of all the feminine beauty in the hall, is the guilty person. He frequently invaded the hall in his intoxicated moments and drove the young women to their rooms. This occurrence became so regular that he was discharged. "Charley," the new janitor, keeps a bull dog in the hall basement and when he freed the animal Wednesday night it ran to the shaded part of the campus fronting Sherman avenue and soon returned with fragments of cloth in his mouth. It is expected that the cloth will match one of the suspect's coats.

Chicago Elopers Is Caught.
Martinsville, Ind.—A man and woman came to this city a week ago and registered at one of the hotels as S. Spencer and wife. They appeared to be fashionable and quite genteel. At the postoffice they received mail addressed to Harry Smith and forwarded from New York, and the woman called for mail in the name of May Belle Spencer. They mailed their letters on the train to avoid having the name of this postoffice appear on the outside of their envelopes. Yesterday the woman was seen at the station. When the train came in two men alighted and began making inquiries. One is the woman's husband, the other a Chicago detective. The woman vanished, having seen them. The husband secured help and immediately set out in search, coming up with her seven miles west, where she was walking along the railway track dressed in a man's clothing. The detective said she was the wife of an aristocrat and eloped last June with the hostler, taking $6,000. Her funds were getting low and she telegraphed to her wealthy grandfather for more. He replied by wire that the money would be sent by first mail, but instead her husband and the detective came. Her husband told the hotel man that he would pay all her bills as soon as he returned home, and as an evidence of good faith gave the address of S. C. Moses, 1426 Congress street, Chicago.

Squash Shaped Like a Foot.
Henry Metzinger, a farmer living near Elmhurst, found a curious vegetable freak recently. While gathering a load of squashes for the market he picked up one that was almost the exact size and shape of a man's foot. The first and second toes are clearly defined and the others marked by seams on the vegetable. One end curved up and made an almost perfect heel and ended in a bulge which had the appearance of an ankle. The farmer saved the curio and the next day was offered $1 for it by a boot agent. Thinking the vegetable was more valuable the owner refused the offer and determined to save it until the next fair should arrive. Unfortunately he hung the squash in his kitchen and the practical Mrs. Metzinger, not having the instincts of a curio hunter, soon converted the coveted freak into an old-fashioned squash pie, much to the disgust of her husband.

Bacharach, Democratic candidate for the legislature, will make application for an injunction restraining Secretary of State Rose from placing the name of James P. Wilson of Oglesby county in the Democratic column of the ticket as a candidate for the legislature, as he has announced his intention of doing. The secretary of state will be here, and service has also been secured on Mr. Wilson and the county clerk of Oglesby county.

Fat Wives.
The people in portions of Africa have many curious customs and superstitions, and among the former may be mentioned the fashion of having fat wives. Being introduced to a great chief's wife, Speke thus describes her: "I was struck with the extraordinary dimensions, yet pleasing beauty of the immoderately fat fair one. She could not rise, and so large were her arms that the flesh between the joints hung down like large, loose, stuffed puddings. The chief, pointing to his wife, said, 'This is the product of our milk-pots; from early youth we keep these pots to their mouths, as it is the fashion at court to have very fat wives.' The daughter of the king sat before me sucking at a milk-pot, at which the father had kept her at work by holding the rod in his hand; for as fattening is the first duty of their fashionable feminine life, it must be duly enforced by the rod, if found necessary."

County Superintendent of Schools.

TO MY FRIENDS AND THE PUBLIC:

I am well qualified for the position and familiar with the duties of the office. I am a successful teacher of thirteen years practical experience (seven years in county schools and six years as principal of village and city schools.) I hold a State Certificate of perpetual validity entitling me to teach in any school district in Illinois. I have had four years experience as assistant county superintendent. If I am elected, all who have the best interests of the public schools at heart, will be proud of the work accomplished. Respectfully, H. C. PADDOCK.

Biography of Albert L. Hendee, Candidate for County Clerk.

Albert L. Hendee, Republican candidate for county clerk, was born in the Town of Avon, in this county. He was educated at the public and high schools of the county until he was twenty years of age when he spent one year at school in the state of New York, when he returned and took a business course in one of the commercial institutions of the state. Shortly after this his father, Harley H. Hendee, died and, having appreciated his ability to manage affairs of importance, appointed him executor of his will and gave him full control and management of his estate for eleven years, when the youngest child had arrived at the age of twenty-one years the administration closed and the estate settled. During this period he had been elected to the office of supervisor six different times, representing the Town of Avon two terms and the Town of Fremont four terms on the county board, the last year of which he was unanimously elected to serve as its chairman, which position he filled with marked ability until November, 1886, when he was selected by the Republicans of the county as county treasurer, which position he held one term. He then accepted a position as deputy county clerk under Lewis C. Dorsett and filled said position until Mr. Dorsett's death, when he was appointed by the county board to fill the office of county clerk, and subsequently was nominated by the Republicans and elected to fill said office.

Mr. Hendee is essentially a business man and has been uniformly successful in all of the positions he has been called upon to fill.

During his residence at the county seat and his connection with county affairs he has acquired a wide acquaintance through the county and has enjoyed the personal friendship of all the attorneys of the county as well as the board of supervisors. In fact, all who have had occasion to do business with him have been treated with respect and made to feel at ease in his presence and free to ask advice.

Mr. Hendee has always been a staunch Republican and a zealous advocate of the party's principles.

He was nominated on Sept. 10th by acclamation, being the unanimous choice of the Republican party. Mr. Hendee has scores of friends outside of his party and there is no question of his election on the 8th of November next.
