Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Schwerman were tendered a surprise party by a number of their young friends. The evening was spent in an enjoyable manner and games of various kinds were played. Refreshments were served to which all did ample justice.

Married at High Noon.

On Tuesday, February 14, at high noon, occurred the marriage of Miss Lizzie M. Catlow, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Catlow, to Mr. Almond O. Rockenbach of Vernon township, at the home of the bride's parents, a few miles east of Barrington. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. T. E. Ream of this place in the presence of about thirty relatives and friends. After the ceremony all were invited to partake of a most excellent wedding dinner and enjoy that hour of sociability which ever characterizes the "happy wedding day."

The bride is well known in Barrington and vicinity and has a large circle of friends and acquaintances here. She is a graduate of the Barrington High school and is very much esteemed and loved by all who know her. She will be greatly missed by her young friends, as she leaves this place for her future home in Vernon township.

The groom is known to be an excellent young man and is highly respected and honored by all who have made his acquaintance.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Snetsinger, Lake Zurich; Mr. and Mrs. O. I. Rockenbach, Vernon; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Catlow, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Ream, James Kitson, Misses Gertrude and Ethel Kitson, John Irsel, Barrington; Wm. Plagge, Geo. Rockenbach, Deerfield; and Miss Estella Catlow, Cary.

May Experience a Boom.

L. H. Higley and Thomas Freeman were in Chicago Wednesday and had an interview with several of the officials of the Chicago & North-Western railway in reference to the possibility of the syndicate, which owns several hundred acres of land near here, making some extensive improvements this summer. This land was purchased by a Milwaukee syndicate in 1892-93 and it was their intention to build up a manufacturing town here. The panic of 1893 came on and they were obliged to let everything drop until now. There is, apparently some prospect of something being done in the near future towards the improvement of this land, which is too valuable to remain as farming property. The land is nearly half paid for, but the mortgages are long over due. It is the desire of the syndicate to renew these mortgages for a term of five years and they are asking the parties of whom they purchased this land to renew the mortgages on the basis of the same security which was first taken. In this way they hope to secure all their property along the right-of-way of the Chicago & North-Western railroad free of all incumbrance, and yet protect the property owners with ample security for the amount due. If this can be done it is not at all unlikely that a great deal of work will be done this year. The original owners of this property do not seem to have confidence in the intention of the syndicate to do what they say they will.

We believe that Mr. Miller, who is here representing the syndicate, is thoroughly honest and competent to carry out the plans he has been explaining to the people interested in this matter. We think they should not hesitate in the assisting in the promotion of this enterprise and that they would have better security within six months than they now have.

The Advertiser Flakes Close Prices.

Time after time the profitability of advertising in THE REVIEW has been fully proven. Only a short time ago we happened to overhear a party from a neighboring town, who being a stranger here, making inquiries as to a certain business house in Barrington that was advertising quite extensively in THE REVIEW. He stated that he had for a long time observed advertisements of the firm in question in this paper and had resolved to make the place a visit to make some purchases. The several bundles loaded in his vehicle after he was through trading was evidence that he found not only the goods there alright, but the prices.

Close buyers always look to the man who advertises for close figures because they know he is anxious to sell, therefore his prices are always found down at the bottom notch.

Mrs. Charles Nitz died at her home near Langenheim, Tuesday, of pneumonia, aged 43 years. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at St. Paul's Evangelical church, Rev. Menzel officiating. The funeral was largely attended. Interment took place in the Lutheran cemetery. The deceased leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her loss.

It is said that the committee appointed at the last meeting of the Village Board had quite a lively discussion on the proposition of the electric light company to pump the water for the village at their meeting held Monday evening. If it is found that the village will have to still retain a man to look after the waterworks plant it is not likely that the committee will report favorably on the letting of the contract for pumping.

Nearly Everybody Knows

That a poor harness is dear at any price. My business is strictly confined to the manufacturing of Harnesses and the sale of Horse Goods. My constant attention given in the handling of Leather Goods for a number of years has some significance in the selection of materials. You couldn't expect a man who has spent most of his life in a grocery store to be as good a judge of steel as a blacksmith, who has made a life study of that particular material. I select personally all Leather used and the manufacturing of it into Harnesses is done by me or under my direction. I make Harnesses at as low a price as anyone.

It Hangs On

If it was only health, we might let it cling. But it is a cough. One cold no sooner passes off before another comes. But it's the same old cough all the time. And it's the same old story, too. There is first the cold, then the cough, then pneumonia or consumption with the long sickness, and life trembling in the balance.

CONSUMPTION

A Wonderful Discovery.

It may surprise our readers to hear that Consumption carries off more people than any other disease. This is due no doubt to the fact that physicians did not thoroughly understand this disease until Dr. Louis Weigert of Berlin made the wonderful discovery that dry hot air would destroy the germs, "Tubercle Bacillus," and since the introduction into the United States of Dr. Weigert's method, many marvelous cures have been made.

The Coe Roborant Company of New York City, whose advertisement appears in another column, send free to all who write for it, a treatise on Pulmonary Diseases, fully explaining this wonderful discovery.

Whale Fishery Dying Out.

Fifty years ago the whale fishery was one of the most lucrative and important industries of New England. Almost every coast town, as well as many of the Long Island villages, were ports from which one or more vessels sailed upon whaling cruises; but now there are less than forty vessels in the whaling business, scattered over every sea.

Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cents and 25 cents per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

PHANTOM SHIP

—OR—

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARRYAT.

"That, Philip, I shall never be. I feel that death claims me; and, oh, my son, were it not for you how I should quit this world rejoicing! I have long been dying, Philip—and long, long have I prayed for death."

"And why so, mother?" replied Philip, bluntly; "I've done my best."

"You have, my child, you have; and may God bless you for it. Often have I seen you curb your fiery temper—restrain yourself when justified in wrath—to share a mother's feelings. 'Tis now some days that even hunger has not persuaded you to disobey your mother. And, Philip, you must have thought me mad or foolish to insist so long, and yet to give no reason, I'll speak—again—directly."

The widow turned her head upon the pillow, and remained quiet for some minutes; then, as if revived, she resumed:

"I believe I have been mad at times—have I not, Philip? And God knows I have had a secret in my heart enough to drive a wife to frenzy. It has oppressed me day and night, worn my mind, impaired my reason, and now, at last, thank Heaven! it has overcome this mortal frame; the blow is struck, Philip—I'm sure it is. I wait but to tell you all—and yet I would not 'twill turn your brain as it has turned mine, Philip."

"Mother," replied Philip, earnestly, "I conjure you let me hear this killing secret. Be Heaven or hell mixed up with it—I fear not. Heaven will not hurt me, and Satan I defy."

"I know thy bold, proud spirit, Philip—thy strength of mind. If anyone could bear the load of such a dreadful tale, thou couldst. My brain, alas, was far too weak for it; and I see it is my duty to tell it to thee."

The widow paused as her thoughts reverted to that which she had to confide; for a few minutes the tears rained down her hollow cheeks; she then appeared to have summoned resolution and to have regained strength.

"Philip, it was of your father I would speak. It is supposed—that he was drowned—at sea."

"And was he not, mother?" replied Philip, with surprise.

"Oh, no!"

"But he has long been dead, mother?"

"No—yes—and yet—no," said the widow, covering her eyes. Her brain wanders, thought Philip, but he spoke again.

"Then where is he, mother?"

The widow raised herself, and a tremor visibly ran through her whole frame, as she replied:

"In living judgment."

The poor woman then sank down again upon the pillow, and covered her head with the bed clothes, as if she would have hid herself from her own memory. Philip was so much perplexed and astounded, that he could make no reply. A silence of some minutes ensued, when, no longer able to bear the agony of suspense, Philip faintly whispered:

"The secret, mother, the secret; quick, let me hear it!"

"I can now tell all, Philip," replied his mother, in a solemn tone of voice. "Hear me, my son. Your father's disposition was but too like your own. Oh, may his cruel fate be a lesson to you, my dear, dear child! He was a bold, a daring, and, they say, a first-rate seaman. He was not born here, but in Amsterdam; but he would not live there because he still adhered to the Catholic religion. The Dutch, you know, Philip, are heretics, according to our creed. It is now seventeen years or more since he sailed for India in his fine ship, the Amsterdammer, with a valuable cargo. It was his third voyage to India, Philip, and it was to have been, if it had so pleased God, his last, for he had purchased that good ship with only part of his earnings, and one more voyage would have made his fortune. Oh, how often did we talk over what we would do upon his return, and how these plans for the future consoled me at the idea of his absence, for I loved him dearly, Philip—he was always good and kind to me and after he had sailed, how I hoped for his return! The lot of a sailor's wife is not to be envied. Alone and solitary for so many months, watching the long wick of the candle, and listening to the howling of the wind—foreboding evil and accident—wreck and widowhood. He had been gone about six months, Philip, and there was still a long, dreary year to wait before I could expect him back. One night you, my child, were fast asleep; you were my only solace, my comfort in my loneliness. I had been watching over you in your slumbers; you smiled and half pronounced the name of mother; and at last I kissed your unconscious lips, and I knelt and prayed—prayed for God's blessing on you, my child, and upon him too—little thinking, at the time, that he was so horribly, so fearfully cursed."

The widow paused for breath, and then resumed. Philip could not speak. His lips were sundered, and his eyes riveted upon his mother, as he devoured her words.

"I left you and went downstairs into that room, Philip, which since that dreadful night has never been reopened. I sat me down and read, for the wind was strong, and when the gale blows, a sailor's wife can seldom sleep. It was past midnight, and the rain poured down. I felt unusual fear—I knew not why. I rose from the couch, and dipped my finger in the blessed water, and I crossed myself. A violent gust of wind roared round the house, and alarmed me still more. I had a painful, horrible foreboding; when, of a sudden, the windows and window-shutters were blown in, the light was extinguished, and I was left in utter darkness. I screamed with fright; but at last I recovered myself, and was proceeding toward the window that I might reclose it, when whom should I behold, slowly entering at the casement, but—your father—Philip! Yes, Philip, it was your father!"

"Merciful God!" muttered Philip, in a low tone almost subdued to a whisper.

"I knew not what to think—he was in the room; and although the darkness was intense, his form and features were as clear and as defined as if it were no night. Fear would have inclined me to recoil from—his loved presence to fly toward him. I remained on that spot where I was, choked with agonizing sensations. When he had entered the room, the windows and shutters closed of themselves, and the candle was relighted—then I thought it was his apparition, and I fainted on the floor."

"When I recovered I found myself on the couch, and perceived that a cold—oh, how cold!—and dripping hand was clasped in mine. This reassured me, and I forgot the supernatural signs which accompanied his appearance. I imagined that he had been unfortunate, and had returned home. I opened my eyes, and beheld my loved husband, and threw myself into his arms. His clothes were saturated with rain; I felt as if I had embraced ice—but nothing can check the warmth of woman's love, Philip. He received my caresses, but he caressed not again; he spoke not, but looked thoughtfully and unhappily. 'William—William,' cried I; 'speak, Vanderdecken; speak to your dear Catherine!'"

"I will," replied he, solemnly. "For my time is short."

"No, no, you must not go to sea again; you have lost your vessel; but you are safe. Have I not you again?"

"Alas, no—be not alarmed, but listen, for my time is short. I have not lost my vessel, Catherine, but I have lost—Make no reply, but listen. I am not dead, nor yet am I alive. I hover between this world and the world of spirits. Mark me."

"For nine weeks did I try to force my passage against the elements round the stormy Cape, but without success; and I swore terribly. For nine weeks more did I carry sail against the adverse winds and currents, and yet could gain no ground; and then I blasphemed—ay, terribly blasphemed. Yet still I persevered. The crew, worn out with long fatigue, would have had me return to the Table Bay, but I refused; may more, I became a murderer—unintentionally, it is true, but still a murderer. The pilot opposed me, and persuaded the men to bind me, and in the excess of my fury, when he took me by the collar, I struck at him; he reeled; and with the sudden lurch of the vessel he fell overboard, and sank. Even this fearful death did not restrain me; and I swore by the fragment of the Holy Cross, preserved in that relic now hanging round your neck, that I would gain my point in defiance of storm and seas, of lightning, of Heaven, or of hell, even if I should beat about until the Day of Judgment."

"My oath was registered in thunder, and in streams of sulphurous fire. The hurricane burst upon the ship, the canvas flew away in ribbons; mountains of seas swept over us, and in the center of a deep overhanging cloud, which shrouded all in utter darkness, were written in letters of livid flame, these words: Until the Day of Judgment."

"Listen to me, Catherine, my time is short. One hope alone remains, and for this I am permitted to come here. Take this letter. He put a sealed paper on the table. "Read it, Catherine dear, and try if you can assist me. Read it, and now farewell—my time is come."

"Again the window and window-shutters burst open—again the light was extinguished, and the form of my husband was, as it were, wafted in the dark expanse. I started up and followed him with outstretched arms and frantic screams as he sailed through the window; my glaring eyes beheld his form borne away like lightning on the wings of the wild gale till it was lost as a speck of light, and then it disappeared. Again the windows closed, the light burned, and I was left alone!

"Heaven have mercy! My brain!—my brain! Philip!—Philip!" shrieked the poor woman; "don't leave me—don't—don't—pray don't!"

During these exclamations the frantic widow had raised herself from the bed and, at last, had fallen into the arms of her son. She remained there some minutes without motion. After a time Philip felt alarmed at her long quiescence; he laid her gently down upon the bed, and as he did so her head fell back—her eyes were turned—the Widow Vanderdecken was no more.

CHAPTER II.

Philip Vanderdecken, strong as he was in mental courage, was almost paralyzed by the shock when he discovered that his mother's spirit had fled; and for some time he remained by the side of the bed, with his eyes fixed upon the corpse, and his mind in a state of vacuity. Gradually he recovered himself; he rose, smoothed down the pillow, the tears trickled down his manly cheeks. He impressed a solemn kiss upon the pale, white forehead of the departed, and drew the curtains round the bed.

"Poor mother!" said he, sorrowfully, as he completed his task, "at length thou hast found rest—but thou hast left thy son a bitter legacy."

And as Philip's thoughts reverted to what had passed, the dreadful narrative whirled in his imagination and scathed his brain. He raised his hands to his temples, compressed them with force and tried to collect his thoughts, that he might decide upon what measures he should take. He felt that he had no time to indulge his grief. His mother was in peace; but his father—where was he?

He recalled his mother's words—"One hope alone remained." Then there was hope. His father had laid a paper on the table—could it be there now? Yes, it must be! his mother had not had the courage to take it up. There was hope in that prayer, and it had lain unopened for more than seventeen years.

Philip Vanderdecken resolved that he would examine the fatal chamber—at once he would know the worst. Should he do it now, or wait till daylight?—but the key, where was it? His eyes rested upon an old japanned cabinet in the room; he had never seen his mother open it in his presence; it was the only likely place of concealment that he was aware of. Prompt in all his decisions, he took up the candle and proceeded to examine it. It was not locked; the door swung open, and drawer after drawer was examined, but Philip discovered not the object of his search; again and again did he open the drawers, but they were all empty. It occurred to Philip that there might be secret drawers, and he examined for some time in vain. At last he took out all the drawers, and laid them on the floor, and lifting the cabinet off its stand he shook it. A rattling sound in one corner told him that in all probability the key was there concealed. He renewed his attempts to discover how to gain it, but in vain. Daylight now streamed through the casements, and Philip had not desisted from his attempts; at last, wearied out, he went into the adjoining room, threw himself upon his bed, and in a few minutes was in a sleep as sound as that permitted to the wretch a few hours previous to his execution.

During his slumbers the neighbors had come in, and had prepared everything for the widow's interment. They had been careful not to wake the son, for they held as sacred the sleep of those who must wake up to sorrow. Among others, soon after the hour of noon, arrived Mynheer Poots; he had been informed of the death of the widow, but having a spare hour, he thought he might as well call, as it would raise his charges by another guilder. He first went into the room where the body lay, and from thence he proceeded to the chamber of Philip, and shook him by the shoulder.

Philip awoke, and, sitting up, perceived the doctor standing by him.

"Well, Mynheer Vanderdecken," commenced the unfeeling little man, "so it's all over. I knew it would be so; and recollect you owe me now another guilder, and you promised faithfully to pay me; altogether, with the potion, it will be three guilders and a half—that is, provided you return my vial."

Philip, who at first waking was confused, gradually recovered his senses during this address.

GEN. MILLER TAKES ILOILO.

Stronghold Bombaraded by American Warships.

NO CASUALTIES ON OUR SIDE.

The Insurgents Hastily Evacuate the Town, After Setting It on Fire—Flames Easily Extinguished—Rebels Loss Is Believed to Have Been Heavy.

The United States forces under Brig. Gen. Miller captured Iloilo, capital of the island of Panay, and seat of the so-called Visayas federation, Feb. 11, after a bombardment.

The rebels set the town on fire before evacuating it, but the American troops extinguished the flames.

There were no casualties on the American side.

It is believed that the enemy's loss during the bombardment by the warships was heavy.

BOARD SCORES MILES.

Commanding General in Fault in Import Matters.

The war investigating committee has made public its report. Maj.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles is the only one of those censured by the commission for whom no excuse is found. It is stated that, although he claimed to know the soldiers were being fed meat which might injure their health, he permitted the matter to pass unnoticed for months, until he was called before the inquiry board. It is stated, too, that Gen. Miles himself selected at least one camp site that proved unsatisfactory.

It is admitted that the secretary of war's department failed to grasp the full scope of the situation.

The quartermaster-general's department is shown to have been poorly managed in some respects. The commission holds it to blame for the confusion at Tampa.

The medical department comes in for a share of reproval for lack of supplies and shortage of nurses.

No evidences of corruption in the letting of contracts is proved.

Investigation proved that James Ringle, recently buried at Pendleton Ind., was interred alive. He had regained consciousness and had evidently been suffocated.

Ten lives were lost at Sherman mountain through a snowslide that descended Cherokee gulch, near Georgetown, Colo. The victims were Italians.

SUN BOXES.

For Consumption, and How to Use Them.

Sun boxes for the cure of consumption away up in mountainous regions have long been in use. There are many people who never heard of the remedy and who haven't the slightest idea as to what a sun box is. A sun box, then, is a structure about six by ten feet, made with a frame of quartering and a covering of weather boards. If you haven't got boards, bark will do. There is this difference, between a hut and a sun box, that the former is a fixture unless a bush fire or a hurricane comes along, whereas a sun box should be constructed on a pivot, or, failing that, on wheels, so that its front may be readily turned away from the wind. The reason is that while fresh, pure air and sunlight mean renewed health to the consumptive patient, the wind is injurious. If you have no sun boxes the patient must be taken indoors whenever the wind blows, but given your sun box to present its back to the wind, no matter what quarter it comes from, and the patient may remain there all day. In each of these boxes from two to three patients are placed on mattresses, and there they lie all day long and drink in the pure mountain air. If they are very weak, their food is taken to them; otherwise they get it in the home. The sun boxes do not cost much—probably from $25 to $50 each. Placed in a pure, sunny atmosphere, these simple appliances are the very latest that medical science has to recommend for the cure of consumption. The patients, of course, must be given abundant food.

Shop-Worn Socks.

The National Advertiser tells a story of an old bachelor who bought a pair of socks and found attached to one of them a slip of paper with these words: "I am a young lady of 20 and would like to correspond with a bachelor, with a view to matrimony." Name and address were given. The bachelor wrote and in a few days got this letter: "Mamma was married twenty years ago. The merchant you bought those socks from evidently did not advertise or he would have sold them long ago. Mamma handed me your letter and said possibly I might suit you. I am 18 years old."

Dr. Kay's Lung Balm for coughs, colds, and throat disease

Locomotor Ataxia and Paralysis Can be Cured.

These extreme nervous disorders were treated with wonderful success by the discoverer of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, previous to his discovery being offered to the public generally. This remedy is the only known specific in many diseases that, until recent years, were pronounced incurable. Here is the proof:

James Crockett, a sturdy old Scotchman living in Detroit, Mich., at 83 Montcalm St., was cured of Locomotor Ataxia by these pills. For many years he has been a chief engineer of one of those big passenger palace steamers plying upon the great lakes. This is a position of great responsibility and the anxiety causes a great nervous strain. Mr. Crockett says: "For fifteen years I watched the big engines and boilers without a single accident, and only noticed that I was getting nervous. Suddenly without warning I was taken sick, and was prostrated. I had the best of physicians but grew gradually worse. At a council of doctors, they said I had nervous prostration, and had destroyed my whole nervous system and would never recover. For three years I was unable to move from my bed. The doctor said I had locomotor ataxia, and would never be able to walk again. "The pains and suffering I experienced during those years are almost indescribable. The friends that came to see me bid me good-bye when they left me and I was given up. The doctors said nothing more could be done. My wife kept reading to me, articles about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. We finally decided to try them. The first box gave me relief. I continued to use them for about two years before I could get strength enough to walk. I am nearly sixty-five years old and there is not a man in this city that can kick or walk further than I can and to-day I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for they saved my life."—Detroit Evening News.

HEALTHY MATERNITY.

Two Grateful Women Tell of the Help They Have Received From Mrs. Pinkham.

The climax of life force in woman is capable motherhood. The first requisite for a good mother is good health. Health of body means health of the generative organs.

Read what Mrs. G. A. NOSHAMAKER, Bluffton, Ohio, says about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and how well it prepared her for maternity:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must say a word in praise of your Vegetable Compound. I used three bottles of it when I was pregnant, and labor was not nearly so long as it was with my other babies; and my baby is so healthy to what the others were. I think every woman should use your Compound when pregnant, it will save them so much suffering and misery. I cannot say enough in praise of it. If ever I need medicine again, I shall use your Compound."

The most successful tonic known to medicine for women approaching maternity is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a safeguard for every woman who uses it, and the fullest benefit comes from its use with Mrs. Pinkham's advice freely offered to all woman. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

Here is a convincing statement, bearing directly on this subject, from Mrs. E. BISHOP, of 1848 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am a great believer in your Compound. I was almost despairing of ever again being well, as I was a great sufferer, and had been for years. I suffered from womb trouble, and had terrible blind fits. After writing to you I tried your Compound. The result was astonishing. I have used it and advocated it ever since. In childbirth it is a perfect boon. I have often said that I should like to have its merits thrown on the sky with a search-light, so that all women would read, and be convinced that there is a remedy for their sufferings."

The Czar's Programme.

A synopsis of the czar's plan for the convocation that is to consider the question of a better peace basis for Europe has reached this country. As to the practicability of carrying out the views he has expressed against the rivalry and military competition of the other great powers no very definite view can be expressed at this time. But to the mass of mankind the evident desire of the czar is to take some rational measures to mitigate if not to utterly prevent some of the horrors of modern warfare. He would limit the use of high explosives in the destruction of life; interdict their use in balloons; abolish submarine torpedoes and do away with rams on ironclad vessels; extend the rules of the Geneva convention to the navies of the world; neutralize vessels that attend battles on errands of mercy, and accept the principles of mediation in all cases where war can be justly avoided. This programme on the face of it coincides so exactly with the abstract views of all Christian peoples that it is difficult to see how a deliberate consideration of it can be avoided by Christian nations without falling behind the czar in humanity. The main difficulty to be encountered by the congress will be the selfishness and greed of each nation and the impossibility of bringing mere diplomats up to a large view of humanity. But whatever the outcome of the czar's proposal he will have distinguished himself above all his imperial predecessors as the one sovereign who attempted to call a halt to the prodigious war preparations of the century and the first to invite Europe to come together and take counsel less like sovereigns than as human beings.

Minnesota wants another national park, and it wants it in its own state. There are 300,000 acres of the most beautiful pine forests in the world not three hours ride by rail from Duluth, and the preservation of this timber will be of the utmost importance to the whole Mississippi valley. The ideas of some of the projectors of the park are quite expansive. They believe that the advantages of the proposed reservation will be very great in the way of preventing floods, as a health resort and as a vast game preserve in the only country east of the Rocky mountains where large wild game still exists in abundance. It is also claimed that the preservation of this tract will temper the climate of Minnesota, and that long before the woods surrounding the limits now set are entered upon by the loggers the state and the nation will demand the enlargement of the limit and thousands more square miles will be added, taking in a large share of the entire upper Mississippi country, and thus ultimately affecting the climatology of the whole Mississippi valley.

A very important movement has been started by a large number of Christian and Jewish ministers and laymen looking to the organization of state conferences under the auspices of all the religious bodies in the state. The idea is that co-operation on questions of public morals would be advantageous to the community and conducive to toleration in the churches. The call for the first conference has received the names of prominent Jewish rabbis and conspicuous clergymen in the Episcopal, Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist and Reformed churches. It states plainly that there is a common point where all denominations can meet on questions of public weal without intruding their special beliefs. Obviously the objects of such a congress will be to discuss the questions of temperance and educational reform, about which nearly all churches substantially agree.

The world may be roughly divided between those who carry their dominating brains just behind their eyes and those who carry such convolutions just behind their ears. The one class would be useless without the other.

The rarest jewel of character in the world is found in that man or woman whose goodness is genuine through and through, yet perfumed with delicacy and tact. It is what may be called the divine coquetry of virtue.

The results of the conference held at Marlborough House to prevent the spread of consumption do not appear to be very conclusive. Sir William Broadbent, physician in ordinary to the Prince of Wales, who appears to have been the instigator of the meeting, declared that there were now 60,000 deaths a year in England and Wales from tuberculous disease. He also declared that, although science had shown us the way to prevent consumption, it had not yet arrived at the means of curing it. While the meeting was in session the announcement was made that Meers, Wernber and Beit, the financiers, had given the large sum of $100,000 for the erection of a sanitarium for consumptives. Lord Salisbury, who was present, made an address, in which he said that the society could only effect its object of improvement by means of slow education.

Social economists in France who have been worrying for some time over the declining birth rate have now varied their amusement by trying to measure the increasing divorce rate. The investigations are rather startling. The number of divorces, which were only about 7,000 in 1892, increased to 11,000 in 1896, and a few days ago the chamber of the tribunal of the Seine, during a session of four hours, decreed no fewer than 294 divorces, thus beating all previous records. Quite a chorus of indignation has been raised by MM. Leroy Beaulieu and Francisque Sarcey over this state of affairs.

Two aeronauts have crossed the channel from England to France, which is considered the most successful feat recently accomplished in sailing in the air. The distance is not so great, but the difficulties and dangers of passing over the water gave great interest to the experiment. It was also made with the purpose of testing the possibility of steering a balloon by means of a trail rope in the water. This is said to have been the device adopted by Andree, the arctic explorer.

A young woman in Chicago, Miss Belle Clisbee, has come out as a man's shopper. She takes orders from bachelors to purchase clothing, room adornments and presents for women. The theory is that she knows what women want better than the men. She declares that she finds it much pleasanter and more profitable to purchase for men than for women, and as for the bachelors, they seem to like it as far as heard from.

The woman suffragists have received aid and comfort from Governor Roosevelt's recommendation that they receive greater attention. The flag is flying on Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton's house, and Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake has ordered a new empress gown, with demitrain, trimmed with ermine.

The introduction of the date tree by the government into Arizona appears to have proved a success. The date palm is said to grow well in places where all other fruit is driven out by the conditions of the atmosphere.

Cases of suspected poisoning continue to attract attention. Cyanide of potassium can hardly be called a plentiful drug in the market, but the suspicion of it is.

A ghastly little drama was enacted in New York city on the 13th. A passenger on a cross town car had some kind of altercation with a conductor, who, it is now said, put him off the car. The man attempted to get back again while the car was in motion, and the conductor kicked him in the face. The man fell back into the street and died. A policeman who saw the occurrence arrested the conductor. A well known citizen then identified the dead man as Wilson P. Marchbank, his stenographer. Certain papers on the man's person seemed to corroborate this belief, and the authorities settled down to the fact, when Mr. Marchbank, having read the papers, suddenly appeared on the scene and insisted that he was not dead. Later, the victim was identified as William Byrne. Mistaken identity continues to be one of the perils of civilization.

The curfew law will not ring in Vineland, N. J., tonight. Every bell of the proper tone refuses to clang a curfew, and there has suddenly risen up a party called the anticurfewists, who call the law a relic of the middle ages.

The United States senate now proposes to take a hand in the investigation of the army contract scandals. This looks as if we may have an investigation of the

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper." - CARTER H. HARRISON, Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news, unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically." - "WASHINGTON HESING," The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats-Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country." - "MARTIN J. RUSSELL," Editor-in-Chief Chicago Chronicle.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

Week's Proceedings in the House and Senate.

PASS M'ENERY RESOLUTION.

The Senate Practically Adds a Rider to the Peace Treaty—Nicaragua Canal Proposition Tacked On to the Civil Appropriation Bill.

Friday, Feb. 10.

In the senate unanimous consent to have a time specified for a vote on his resolution as to the status of the Philippine islands was asked, but objection was made by Mr. Mallory (dem., Fla.).

A joint resolution, proposing an amendment to the constitution, so as to make United States senators elective by the people, was introduced by Mr. Allen and went over.

The consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was resumed. After disposing of seventy-one of the 127 pages of the bill it was laid aside for the day, and the message from the president urging the establishment of a Pacific cable line was laid before the senate. The senate, at 3:30 o'clock, went into executive session, and afterward adjourned.

The entire session of the house was occupied in general debate on the sundry civil appropriation bill. It contained nothing particularly new or important. Wednesday, the 23d inst., was set apart for the delivery of eulogies upon the late Senator Morrill of Vermont.

Monday, Feb. 13.

The house, in committee of the whole, considered the sundry civil appropriation bill. A speech by Mr. Sulzer of New York against the ship subsidy bill gave rise to an hour's debate, in which Mr. Cannon's speech of last Thursday was thrashed over again, and there was a renewal of the debate on the army bill regarding military control and despotism. Sixty pages of the bill were disposed of.

In the senate Mr. Bacon (dem., Ga.) gave notice that he would address the senate next day on the McEnery resolution. The house census bill was laid before the senate and read in full. It went over.

The agricultural appropriation bill was taken up and passed. It appropriates $3,717,322.

The senate at 3:30 o'clock went into executive session and afterward adjourned.

Tuesday, Feb. 14.

In the house Mr. Wheeler of Kentucky announced his intention to vote against the appropriation of $20,000,000 to carry out the terms of the treaty of peace, and denounced the war with the Filipinos. Messrs. Williams of Mississippi and Lewis of Washington urged the house and the democratic party to stand by the national faith and the soldiers in the Philippines. Mr. Hull (rep., Iowa) reported the army appropriation bill from the committee on military affairs. The Nicaragua canal bill was offered in the house as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill.

By a vote of 26 to 22 the McEnery resolution passed the senate. The republicans in the main voted in the affirmative. The resolution provides that by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands.

Firemen Hurt in Montreal.

WASHINGTON ANGRY.

BUT DID HE SWEAR AT BATTLE OF MONMOUTH?

Tradition Affirms That He Used an Oath—He Certainly Had Sufficient Provocation for Strong Language—General Lee the Victim.

TRADITION says that on one occasion the father of his country so far forgot his religious training and principles as to have used an oath. Profanity does not comport with the generally accepted character of George Washington, and there are many who deny the tradition.

It was at the battle of Monmouth where Washington is supposed to have lost his temper and swore at Gen. Charles Lee for disobeying orders and retreating, thus endangering the whole American army. If ever man was tried, it was Washington at Monmouth, and if ever profanity was excusable it was on that occasion. Lee, according to some historians, was a designing traitor, who, envious of Washington's popularity, schemed to defeat his army. It is quite certain that he hesitated when the oath of allegiance, required by the continental congress, was administered at Valley Forge. Washington was himself administering the oath to Lee, Greene, Stirling and others, the officers placing their hands on a Bible. When Washington began to repeat the prescribed oath, Lee suddenly removed his hand from the Bible, and the commander-in-chief asked why he did so. His answer was: "As to King George, I am willing enough to absolve myself from all allegiance to him, but I have some scruples about the prince of Wales."

Even the grave Washington joined in the laugh that followed this explanation. But Lee eventually took the oath with the others, and subscribed his name to one of the blanks now on file in the archives at Washington. When the British under Clinton suddenly evacuated Philadelphia in June, 1778, and began their retreat across New Jersey, Washington, with his whole army, pushed on as rapidly as possible to intercept them before they reached New York. Late on headed off the British, went into camp near the enemy on the plains of Monmouth. Lee was next to Washington in command, and there can be no doubt at this time that envy and hatred were strong factors in the breast of the subordinate. Lee's instructions were to advance early and attack the enemy as soon as they began to move, unless there was some powerful reason for not doing so. It seems that this very slight discretionary power given him furnished the pretext for his conduct. Lee had under him such men as Lafayette, Wayne and Morgan's famous riflemen.

The conduct of Lee on this occasion is a puzzle to the student of human motives. At one moment he seemed in earnest and determined, at the next he was weak, hesitating and uncertain. In the council of war held at Hopewell Lee advised against the attack, and showed a very faint heart throughout the fight. When the British began to move he made a feeble attack, which was followed up by half a dozen blunders in rapid succession. He held Lafayette in check until it was too late for him to cut off some of the British army, and weakened Wayne's forces by withdrawing from him some of his best soldiers, and finally ordered a general retreat all along the line. Along a narrow pass, with a morass on either side, the Americans fled on that hot June day, pursued by the yelling Britons. The weather was so excessively warm that many of the soldiers perished from sunstroke. Washington, who was bringing up the main army to attack the British in such a way as to cut off their retreat to New York, after the cannonading early in the morning, was astonished and perplexed to hear no more firing. Anon the shouts of the victorious Britons and the occasional musket shot fell on his ears, and, with a feeling of distrust, he galloped forward, accompanied by his entire staff. They met the head of the retreating army under Gen. Lee. Just at this point, according to tradition, Washington did his "cussing." History records the first words uttered by Washington as:

"Sir, I desire to know what is the reason, and whence arises this disorder and confusion?" Tradition says that the sentence began with "By God, sir."

According to tradition, Washington, after meeting Lee, ordered Oswald's battery to unlimber and open on the enemy; that he then galloped down toward the advancing enemy, and fired his holsters at them, wheeled his horse about, rode back and formed the retreating hosts into a line of battle to meet the foe. Without doubt the father of his country was greatly provoked at Lee, and the evidence at Lee's trial shows that "hot and angry" words passed between them. But it is still a matter of doubt whether Gen. Washington swore. Such terms and colloquialisms as

"Egad," "By gad" and "Zounds," a genteel sort of profanity, were in common use in those days, but Washington has never been accused of using them. In the midst of the excitement and confusion attending a battle, and the rallying of routed hosts under the heavy fire of a victorious enemy, it is doubtful if spoken words can be successfully reported, and some other word may have been used by Washington which his enemies distorted into "by." Is it not more probable that the "father of his country," instead of swearing, made use of some sort of supplication? White with anger, and boiling over with disappointment and chagrin, what would be more natural than that he should, on meeting Lee, cry out: "My God, sir, I desire to know what is the reason, and whence arises this disorder and confusion?"

The man who gave rise to the rumor of the use of profanity may have been Lee himself, who was anxious to malign the man who had rebuked him on the battlefield. It was an easy matter to report his "my" as "by," and thus change the whole tenor of Washington's remarks. This theory is certainly the most reasonable as well as the most charitable, and, after an investigation of almost 120 years, it ought to be adopted.

After Washington, at the risk of his life, had brought order out of chaos, and formed the routed troops into an invincible line of battle, he rode back to where Lee sat on his horse in a bad fit of sulks, and, pointing to the rallied troops, asked:

"Will you, sir, command in that place?"

"I will," Lee eagerly exclaimed.

REMOVED HIS HAND FROM THE BIBLE.

"Then," said Washington, "I expect you to check the enemy immediately." "Your command shall be obeyed, and I will not be the first to leave the field," returned Lee.

The advancing foe was held in check. Washington brought up the remainder of the army, and all that long Sabbath day the battle raged, but the Britons and their allies were defeated and stole away during the night.

After it was all over, Lee demanded an apology, but Washington, instead of apologizing, placed Lee under arrest. He was tried and dismissed from command for twelve months. He never entered the army again, but sulked throughout the war and died in Philadelphia Oct. 2, 1797.

Knocked Washington Down.

Washington was an eminently fair man. He had a quick temper, but as a rule he kept it under control. Sometimes, however, it got the best of him. This was the case once in Alexandria. One of the county officers told me the story, as we stood on the second floor of the market house in Alexandria and looked down at the open court within which is now filled with hundreds of booths where the farmers bring their products for sale on market days. "It was on that spot," said the officer, "Washington was knocked down by Lieut. Payne. Payne was a candidate for the legislature against Fairfax of Alexandria. Washington supported Fairfax, and when he met Payne here, he made a remark that Payne considered an insult, and Payne knocked him down. The story went like lightning through the town that Col. Washington was killed, and some of his troops who were stationed at Alexandria rushed in and would have made short work of Payne had Washington not prevented them. He pointed to his black eye and told them that this was a personal matter and that he knew how to handle it. Every one thought that this meant a duel. The next day Payne got a note from Washington asking him to come to the hotel. He expected a duel, but went. Washington, however, was in an amiable mood. He felt that he had been in the wrong, and said, 'Mr. Payne, I was wrong yesterday, but if you have had sufficient satisfaction, let us be friends.' There was a decanter of wine and two glasses on the table which Washington had ordered to smooth over the quarrel. The two drank together and became such strong friends after that that Payne was one of the pallbearers at Washington's funeral."

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE.

Condensed Report of Week's Proceedings in Both Houses.

HONOR PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

Legislature Adjourns Until Tuesday Morning Because of the Birthday of the Great Son of Illinois—Bill to Pay Illinois Volunteers.

Thursday, Feb. 9.

The senate agreed to adjourn from today until next Tuesday afternoon because of Lincoln's birthday celebration.

The house sent to the rules committee the Curtis resolution barring all but committee bills after March 3. Concurred in senate resolution for adjournment until Tuesday.

The following bills were introduced during the day: In the senate—Appropriating $250,000 to pay Illinois volunteers from date of enlistment until mustered into United States service; to enable school districts to enlarge boundaries by a popular vote; allowing mutual fire insurance companies to become joint stock companies; also a bill to amend arbitration law, being a bill prepared by the state board.

In the house—Appropriating $250,000 to pay Illinois volunteers from date of assembling at home stations to date of muster in United States service; imposing fine of $5 on every legal voter who fails to vote at an election at which he is entitled to vote; also bill to punish fraudulent registration of voters; amending arbitration law, being bill prepared by state board.

Friday, Feb. 10.

In the house bills were introduced as follows: Amending the school law by making it the duty of the county superintendents of schools to issue certificates to teachers for terms ranging from one to five years, according to the percentage attained in the examination; regulating the charges of stock yards; amending the law in relation to the formation and disbursement of a police pension fund by providing that in the event of the death of a retired officer his widow or minor children under 16 years of age, if any survive him, shall be entitled to the pension provided for the widow and children of officers who die while in actual service; it is provided, however, that no annuity shall be paid to the widow of a deceased member of the police department after she has remarried.

The senate met with Senator Dunlap in the chair. No business was enacted.

Monday, Feb. 13.

But few members of the legislature were here to-day. Owing to the adjournment on account of the observance of Monday as Lincoln's birthday, there was no session of either house. It is expected that the subcommittees of the senate committee on municipalities and the house committee on municipal corporations to consider all pending street car bills and to prepare a substitute bill, will at once report back to their respective committees the result of their labors. Should the substitute bills meet the approval of the general committees, the bills may be reported to the senate and house on Wednesday.

Tuesday, Feb. 14.

The senate passed the Campbell bill authorizing organization of surety companies by citizens of Illinois; also Berry bill providing no tax levy for 1898 shall be declared invalid because of failure to observe board of review feature of new revenue law; also sent to third reading Humphrey bill appropriating $9,000 for statue of Frances E. Willard for Statuary hall in Washington.

Among bills introduced were the following: In the senate: Authorizing election commissioners to use automatically registering voting machines, to be approved by the state board; specifying a charge of 3 cents per name for personal property and 3 cents per line for real estate, by newspapers in publication of assessment lists; to compel Joliet penitentiary officials to mark all manufactured articles sent out from that institution.

In the house: To provide for payment of all wages in lawful money, checks or drafts actually advanced; requiring fraternal beneficiary societies and corporations conducting life and accident insurance on assessment plan to file with superintendent of insurance itemized monthly statement of all moneys received and paid out and to send a copy to each member.

A Matter of Caution.

"What do you mean by saying that a joke is too serious a matter for you to have anything to do with?" "Well," answered the gentleman with a foreign accent, "I was a journalist in Berlin for some years. If you make an article criticising the government long enough and use big words enough the chances are that the emperor will give up and quit reading it. But if you put it into a joke he'll see the point immediately and have you locked up before you know it."—Washington Star.

A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

MINOR HAPPENINGS OF PAST SEVEN DAYS.

Murder at the Flatham Coal District—Prisoner is Slain by His Accuser—Killed with an Ax—Wanderer Spreads Smallpox—Horse-shoers Have Trouble.

Prisoner Slain by Accuser.

Pana, Ill.—Another murder was committed in the Flatham district early the other morning, when Alexander Ward's throat was cut by John Jennings, who, it is claimed, was assisted by Samuel Reed. All are negroes, Ward being employed as cook at the Springside Coal company's hotel, and Jennings and Reed in the mines. Ward, returning home late last night, found Jennings and Reed with his wife. He attacked Jennings, driving him from the place. Ward was arrested and started with the officers to the police station. On his pleading to be allowed to re-enter the house to speak to his wife, the officers granted his request, returning with him. No sooner had Ward entered the door than Jennings sprang upon him and with a razor almost severed his head from his body. Jennings admitted having killed Ward, but claimed self-defense, while the officers declared it a cold-blooded murder.

Have a Grievance.

Chicago special: Chicago journeyman horse-shoers are charging bad faith on account of the deposition of Thomas L. Botheroyd from the state board of examining horse-shoers. According to some of the union men, the governor has favored the master horse-shoers, with whom the journeymen are at war, and has left only one union workman on the board to four masters. The state board of examining horse-shoers reorganized last week with S. F. English, a master horse-shoer, in place of Botheroyd. Another master horse-shoer, J. B. Finze of Aurora, took the place of A. T. Eager, treasurer of the old board. The new organization, according to the union workmen, leaves only one of their representatives on the board. Members draw $5 a day for actual days employed. The state board of examining horse-shoers met in the afternoon at Medinah Temple and organized, the following officers being chosen: President, Matthew Wilson of Mendota; secretary, S. F. English of Chicago; treasurer, James G. Kirwan of Chicago.

Kills His Wife with an Ax.

Burlington, Iowa, special: Isaac Neice, of Gladstone, Ill., killed his wife with an ax Wednesday morning. The cause of the terrible deed is unknown. Neice went to the house of a neighbor and asked that some one be sent for a doctor. He explained that one of his children was very sick and needed immediate attention. The man seemed cool and no one suspected the terrible deed he had committed until the doctor came and with a neighbor went to the house. The woman lay prostrate on the floor in a great pool of blood. The murderer gave himself up to Sheriff Murray of Oquawka. He is now in jail. The coroner's jury is investigating. Neice is 40 years of age and has eight children, ranging in age from 2 to 16 years.

Wanderer Spreads Smallpox.

Nashville, Ill.—George Ballman, a laborer in a forlorn condition and showing symptoms of smallpox, applied for admission into the county poorhouse today, but he was denied entrance. Ballman had just come from Cairo and said that there were four or five well-developed cases of smallpox in that city, which had not been made public. It has been learned that there are four cases in Cairo, all of which are said to be convalescent. Ballman left this part of the county immediately after being denied his request.

Was Highly Enjoyed.

The Maennerchor concert and ball at Battermann's hall, Palatine, last Friday night was a big success, exceeding the anticipations of the members. Before the hour set for the concert to commence the hall was crowded and standing room was at a premium. Neat programs were distributed and every number was enthusiastically received. The variety of the program was well arranged and the way in which Prof. Hugo Schmoll carried out the parts was gratifying to the audience. We have not space to give each part the notice it deserves, but cannot fail to give Miss Olga Schmoll special mention as a skilful violinist. Her playing was grand and captivated the audience. The parts by the visiting Maennerchor, Palatine band, the Elite orchestra and the duets by Misses Bertha Horstmann and Lydia Knigge were all splendidly rendered. President Olms made a splendid address of welcome and Ernst Prellberg and Mayor Battermann made short but interesting addresses. The play presented in song by the Palatine Maennerchor kept the audience interested to its close. After the concert the hall was cleared and the big crowd tripped the light fantastic toe until late the next morning. The Maennerchor feels highly elated over the patronage they received.

The Deadly Grip

Is again abroad in the land. The air you breathe may be full of its fatal germs! Don't neglect the "grip" or you will open the door to pneumonia and consumption and invite death. Its sure signs are chills with fever, headache, dull heavy pains, mucous discharges from the nose, sore throat, and never-let-go cough. Don't waste precious time treating this cough with troches, tablets or poor, cheap syrups. Cure it at once with Dr. King's New Discovery, the infallible remedy for bronchial troubles. It kills the disease germs, heals the lungs and prevents the dreaded after effects from the malady. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Money back if not cured. A trial bottle free at H. T. Abbott's drug store.

The case of Louis Diekman vs. Fred Kropp of Lake Zurich was tried before Justice Waterman Tuesday. Mr. Diekman claimed that he sold a horse to Fred Kropp about January 5 for $80. Mr. Kropp's son called for the horse the day following the sale and they kept the animal for nearly a month. The horse was returned to Mr. Diekman's farm a short time ago when Mr. Diekman was not at home. Mr. Kropp claims that the horse went lame before he reached home and consequently refused payment. The case was decided in favor of Mr. Diekman, he being allowed a judgment for the purchase price of the horse and $4 for two weeks board. An appeal has been taken to the circuit court.

Long Illness Ended.

Mrs. Lucinda Maria Henderson, wife of Alfred S. Henderson, died at her home shortly after noon Thursday with cancer of the liver, aged 57 years and 14 days. Her entire family was at her bedside when she breathed her last.

Mrs. Henderson had been in very feeble health since last November and despite all that skilled physicians and loving hands could do, she gradually pined away.

The deceased was born at Palatine Feb. 2, 1842, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fosket. She was married to Robert D. Boyce in October, 1860, at Palatine. Two children blessed this union—Mrs. Elizabeth G. Bennett of Chicago and Chas. R. Boyce of this place. Mr. Boyce lost his life in the Rebellion while in the service of the United States. In 1891 she was married to Alfred S. Henderson by Justice M. B. McIntosh. Two children, Burton A. and Rex M. Henderson, were born to them.

Mrs. Henderson was known as a woman of kind heart and great sympathy, whose interest extended to all persons who came under her acquaintance. By her death a husband has been bereft of a faithful wife, the children of a loving mother and the village of a highly respected citizen.

The funeral will take place at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the family residence, at which Rev. Hageman of the Baptist church will officiate. Interment at Evergreen cemetery.
