Prof. Smyser and the class of '99 desire to thank those who so kindly assisted in any way in the graduating exercises.

The Ladies' Aid society has concluded to postpone their entertainment announced for the Fourth until some future date.

Miss Martha Bollman visited her sister in Chicago the first of the week. She expects to return to her home in Minnesota in a few days.

The members and friends of the Ladies' Aid society are invited to a sewing bee at Mrs. Hattie Clark's next Wednesday at 2 p. m.

Officer Law is collecting dog taxes. Don't get frightened if you see him coming around with his paper, thinking it is a warrant for your arrest.

D. B. Wood and daughter, Mrs. Castle, of Elgin, were in Palatine the first of the week. Mr. Wood had his household goods moved Wednesday.

Conrad Blum brought the first new potatoes into town this spring. He was selling them for 40 cents a basket last Wednesday. Nearly as cheap as old ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Kranz are living with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harming, in this place. Mr. Kranz's instructor in the new grammar school at Arlington Heights.

The people from out of town, who attended the graduating exercises, were very much impressed with them. Such exercises cannot but help impress the people with the high standard of our High school. The board hopes to see many pupils from other towns in attendance next year.

In addition to the regular program announced last week of the concert to be given by Prof. J. I. Sears and pupils at Palatine on Tuesday evening, June 26, the Barrington Junior orchestra will assist the Palatine orchestra. A clarinet solo will also be rendered by Herbert Plagge.

Brockway street has been raised several inches with gravel in the business portion of town. Assistant Superintendent Moulton of this division of the C. & N. W. R'y. was in town Monday and seeing the improvement going on he sent five carloads of gravel down the next day to be spread between the railroad track and the first crossing south.

Alderman Taylor was the subject of numerous jokes the first of the week. He built a new sidewalk on the north side of his lot and the first "rubber" that came along discovered that he had built it on the line instead of according to requirements. He went out the next day and fixed it right, and now, when they say anything to him, he simply smiles.

The school year just past has been one of the best—if not the best—in the school's history. This is the first year that a class has graduated from a regular four-year course. Last year's class took a post graduate course to receive diplomas for the four years' course. Very few pupils left school before vacation, which was a drawback to other years. Mr. Smyser will be at the helm again next year and the outlook is bright for a good beginning next September.

On July 1, 2, 3 and 4 the North-Western line will sell excursion tickets at low rates to points on the North-Western system within 200 miles of selling station, good returning until July 5, inclusive. Apply to agents Chicago & North-Western R'y.

TENTH ANNUAL CONCERTS.

Prof. J. I. Sears' Pupils Render Fine Programs at M. E. Church.

Prof. J. I. Sears and pupils gave their tenth annual concert in the Barrington M. E. church Tuesday afternoon and evening and also Wednesday evening to the delight and pleasure of all present. The programs were all rendered in an able manner by the pupils and the audiences were well pleased and expressed themselves as being more than satisfied with the programs they witnessed, being the best ever rendered by the pupils.

Many new faces were seen among the talented pupils and many from the lower grades of music last year. The audience was astonished to see them playing compositions rendered by the academic and collegiate grades in music, such wonderful advancement being made.

Prof. Sears may well feel proud of his work, and as an instructor cannot be surpassed by many of the leading professors of music in large cities. The best evidence of his success as a teacher is the fact that over one hundred pupils are striving to master the art of music under his care, and to see the wonderful gains made at the concerts a large percentage will no doubt succeed.

The people of Barrington can well feel proud of having one in their midst who is so highly versed in music as Prof. Sears.

At the close of the concerts Rev. T. E. Ream presented certificates to Miss Edna Smith and Master Chester Catlow, they having successfully passed the examinations in the preparatory grades. He also gave a baccalaureate address to the graduates, and thanked the people of Barrington, in behalf of Prof. Sears, for their patronage and confidence placed in him. EXPORTS SHOW A DECREASE.

Figures for the Year Are Below Those of 1898.

STILL VERY SATISFACTORY.

Total Is Certain to Be Very Much in Excess of Any Other Year Except the Last—Trade Influenced by the Good Crops Throughout the World.

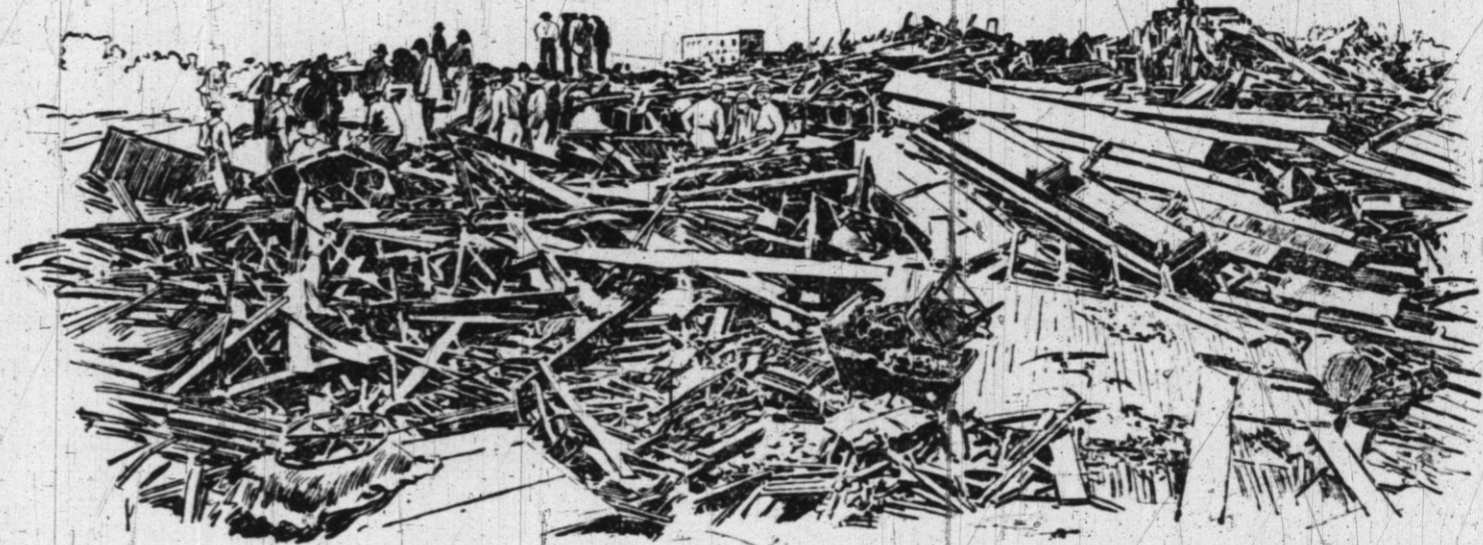

Good crops in all the world in the years 1898-99 will probably make our export figures for the fiscal year about to end a few million dollars less than those of the banner year—1898. The figures covering the exports during the eleven months ended with May, which have been received by the treasury bureau of statistics, indicate that during the eleven months the total exports are about $6,000,000 less than those of the corresponding months of the preceding year, and it is quite probable that the total for the full year will be slightly below those of the great and unprecedented year 1898. That they will be much in excess of any other year, however, is equally apparent. For the eleven months of the year 1899 the total exports are $1,130,629,572, while in no earlier year except 1898 did the total exports of the eleven months reach the billion-dollar line.

Timely Aid Given by Gen. Wheaton—Shrapnel from His Guns Mows Down the Enemy—Our Casualties Thirty—Native Loss Heavy.

An all-day battle between Gen. Wheaton's force and the insurgent army was fought near the city of Imus, in the Philippines, June 19. One battalion of the Fourth infantry, while reconnoitering, was attacked in the rear by a band of supposed friendly natives. The Americans stood their ground pluckily, but were out of ammunition and in great danger, when Gen. Wheaton and his staff, with the Second battalion, two mountain guns and one field piece, went to re-enforce the troops attacked.

The insurgents fought well, taking advantage of the woods, and were driven back with difficulty. Little progress was made until late in the afternoon, when the native force was dislodged from a dense timber. The Americans lost five in dead and twenty-five in wounded.

Gen. Wheaton reports that ninety-three dead Filipinos, including two officers, were found on the only portion of the field that was searched by the Americans.

It is generally believed that 2,000 rebels were advancing to attack the American forces when discovered by our scouting party.

A COLONIAL EXPOSITION

Remarkable Achievement For the Day—Show That Is About to Begin.

THE GATES GO OPEN JULY 1, 1899.

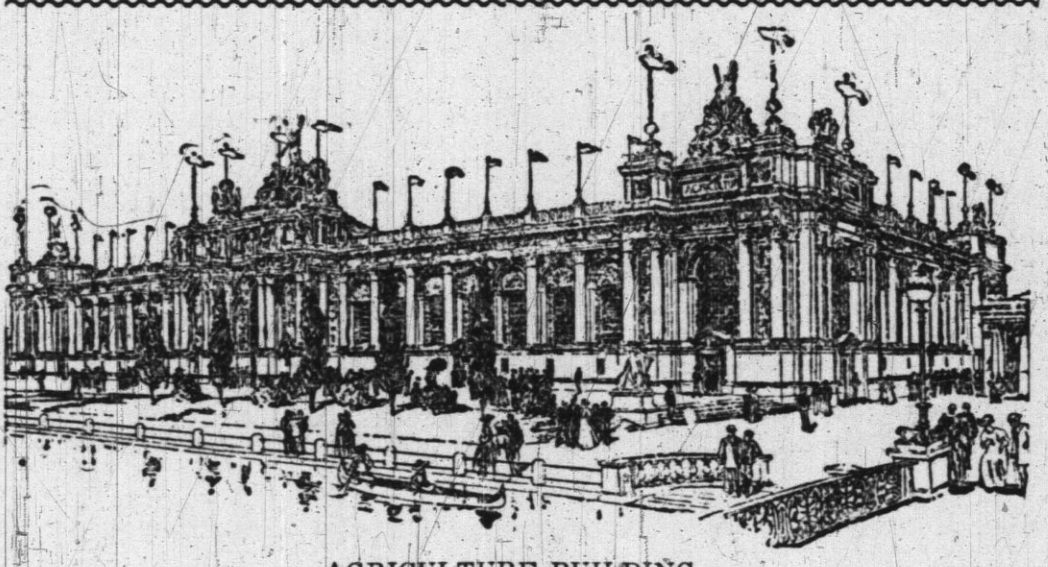

A Great Collection of Interesting Exhibits Brought From Our New Colonial Possessions—Vast Sums Spent to Bring Together that Which Will Edify and Instruct.

Never before in the history of exposition building have such grand results been accomplished in the same length of time as in the First Greater American Colonial Exposition, to be held in Omaha from July 1 to November 1. The buildings and grounds of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition, tion on a vital question and to furnish enlightenment to thousands who are discussing territorial expansion and are intensely interested in the outcome of the new policy which the nation is entering upon. Few are thoroughly informed on any phase of this important issue and this fact is due to the general lack of definite knowledge of the several islands and their inhabitants.

The First Greater America Colonial Exposition solves a perplexing problem.

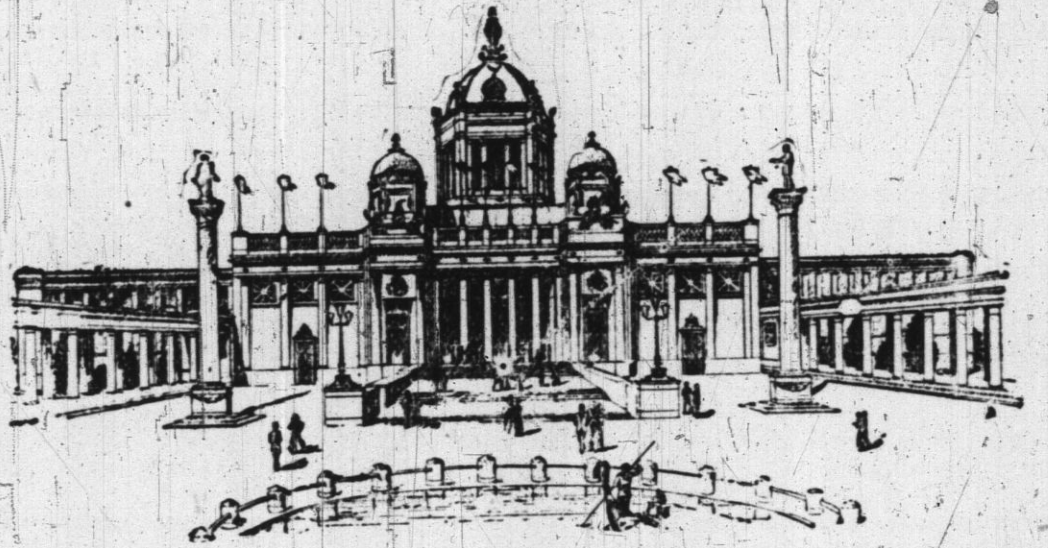

It would be impossible for the majority of the people of the United States to visit these far away islands, but it is comparatively an easy undertaking to bring to this country representatives of the native people and exhibits showing their resources, industries, and the possibilities of the islands wherein they live. This has been done, and when the gates of the Exposition open on July 1st those who are seeking facts upon which to base conclusions, will find that which could not be seen and learned in months of travel and research.

Many improvements have been made in the grounds and buildings. Thousands of trees, plants, shrubs and flowers from tropic and sub-tropic lands have been added to the ground decorations, and the night illumination which won so much praise last year has been vastly improved upon. A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF HAPPENINGS FOR SEVEN DAYS.

The Senate Committee Making Developments—Lampen Centured at Carlyle—Monument for Shiloh Field—Tanner to Address Germans at Chicago.

Governor Tanner to Meet Germans.

A committee representing the German Veterans' society of Chicago called upon Governor Tanner the other day and invited him to attend the reunion on Aug. 13, 14 and 15, to be held in Chicago. The society is composed of Germans who have served in the German army. Governor Tanner said that the society was composed of an excellent class of citizens, and that he had promised his German friends in Chicago to be with them at their picnic on Sunday and to speak to them on Monday, provided he was in the state at the time, and if it was impossible for him to be there, he would have Lieut.-Gov. Northcott represent him on that occasion.

Baxter's Chicago Committee.

The senate investigating committee has struck a sinkhole of iniquity in the special assessment department of Chicago's government. Rich property owners, as a general rule escape taxation altogether, while the property of poor people is confiscated. Several special assessors may be indicted as a result. The saloon license system is also found to be manipulated for profit. Favorites of the police are allowed to open liquor dispensaries close to public parks and schools in violation of state law. Chicago papers are charged by the senate committee with endeavoring to smother the developments. All the Chicago dailies but one are said to be in a trust.

Says Books Show Shortage.

Expert G. H. Weber, who was engaged by the county board of supervisors to examine the accounts of ex-county Clerk John C. Lampen of Carlyle, has submitted his report. It says that the affairs of the office during Lampen's administration have apparently been loosely managed. There is an alleged shortage of nearly $2,500, due for fees and saloon licenses. Lampen made a previous statement claiming that a portion of this amount had not been collected and that the county owes him $3,200 for extra clerk hire. He has engaged counsel for his defense. A legal controversy will follow.

Monuments for Shiloh Field.

A meeting of the Illinois Shiloh battlefield commission was held in Springfield Friday and a committee was appointed, with Major A. F. McEwen of Litchfield as chairman, to select designs for monuments to be erected on the battlefield to the Illinois troops participating. Gen. John A. McClelland of this city presided and Major George Mason of Chicago is secretary. There will be a general monument to cost $10,000 and twenty-seven monuments to the infantry, ten to the cavalry and twelve to the artillery.

Lewis H. Miner Postmaster.

Lewis H. Miner, managing editor of the Illinois State Journal, has been appointed postmaster at Springfield to succeed William Barrett Ridgely, whose resignation reached Washington Friday. Senator Cullom telegraphed Mr. Miner's name to Washington and President McKinley immediately sent it in. Mr. Miner secured the appointment over several other candidates, among them being Harry Kummel of the Springfield Evening News and William J. Butler, at present an employe in the postoffice.

Death of Dr. B. F. Fowler.

Dr. B. F. Fowler, a prominent physician of Galena, widely known in Masonic circles, died Friday, aged 74 years. He leaves a wife, two sons, Dr. Charles A. of Bellevue, Iowa, and B. F. Jr., ex-attorney-general of Wyoming; three daughters, Almira M., a member of the Illinois Woman's Press association; Mrs. Anna Rogers, Mrs. G. T. Budrow, and a brother, Dr. H. M. Fowler of Scalesmound.

Weds Her Divorced Husband.

Charles A. Northrup of Aurora and Mrs. Edna Northrup of Rockford were married at Rockford the other day. Two months ago she secured a divorce from the same man on the grounds of desertion and nonsupport, not having seen him for three years. They were first married at Oshkosh, Wis., ten years ago, when she was 16, and have four children.

Tuberculosis Found in Cows.

The fine herd of cows at the state farm of the asylum for feeble-minded children at Lincoln has been tested for tuberculosis. Out of 135 head tested twenty-two were condemned and five ordered held for retest. However, Superintendent Athon does not wish to take any chances and will ship the 27 to Chicago on Monday.

Saturday, June 24, 1899.

There is something very refreshing about the life of the Kansas hero, Fred Funston, especially in his mother's account of it. It is so delightfully free from the cornucopia and sizzling peculiarities of most modern heroes. His mother declares that he was just a plain, ordinary boy, with a boy's variation from good to bad, as the humor seized him. She does not consider him a genius at all. He was not an extraordinary scholar. He never dazzled anybody, never astounded the community, never executed any eccentricities nor performed any miracles, but always did his duty in a straightforward way as a man and a citizen without making any fuss over it or exacting any special credit for it. By these signs we esteem the Kansas hero, because everybody else who has attracted attention of late, from Kipling to Richard Harding Davis, is the best and brightest and greatest the world ever saw or ever will see. Fred Funston, after having all his antecedents rooted into, down to his pinafore period, turns out to be the very best type of all round average American, the man that you bet on, but don't exude over—the kind of man, in brief, that makes up the bravery, the success and the invincibility of America.

One of the liveliest of the moral contentions in England has been over the question, Shall women smoke? And a tremendous outpouring of virtuous indignation issued from the British matrons, who all assumed that they had the queen on their side. Then occurred a very absurd incident. One of the queen's daughters, when leaving Windsor castle, was detained in the waiting room of the railway station. When she departed, the station master found in the waiting room her silver cigarette case, which she had left behind her, and upon it was engraved these words: "From Your Loving Mother"

Captain Coghlan's little indiscretion, committed in the boisterous moments of a club, has been treated with true British magnanimity in England. The English papers admit the indiscretion, but sagely remark, "True, but what would a club be if there were no indiscretions in it?" Even the kaiser is reported to have laughed with good nature at Captain Coghlan's freshness. And what would a navy be if there wasn't any freshness in it?

The house of commons has decided that under the new London government women shall not be eligible for any of the higher municipal offices, and the woman's antisuffrage party is now strong enough in London to make a good fight against women, even as councilors to the new corporation.

William Waldorf Astor's complaint that the American press distorted and caricatured his great-grandfather's life and character out of pure malignity has created the wildest astonishment in all parts of the United States. There was, until this complaint made itself heard, a very general impression that the original John Jacob Astor had been highly esteemed by the country as a shrewd, self made man, every way typical of our early thrift and hardihood. It would be hard indeed to find anywhere in the historical papers of America any reference to John Jacob Astor that did not do justice to these qualities. One wonders what papers Mr. Waldorf Astor has been in the habit of reading.

Sir Charles Howard Vincent, M. P., and colonel of the Queen's Westminster volunteers, is very anxious to get the Seventh regiment of New York over to England on a visit, and has sent an invitation to its colonel. In his letter he says, "If our invitation is accepted, we will make England ring in honor of our visitors." There is not the slightest doubt of that, but the prosaic and practical Colonel Appleton of the Seventh informs Colonel Vincent that he is mixing up the United States volunteers with the national guard; that the members of the national guard are business men who could not spare the time for such a jaunt, and that the volunteer regiments in the service cannot of their own free will get up such a surprise party.

An Englishman sleeps soundly if he only knows that a new ironclad is building. Nothing keeps the various elements of British society in good humor with each other so effectively as a fresh batch of warships. Before the present year closes the British government will have spent $175,000,000 for ironclads, and there will be a snug little navy of 110,640 men. The attempt of France to keep up with this pace is winding her. One of the French papers throws up its hands and says: "England intends to maintain her crushing superiority at all costs, and unfortunately she is in a position to do it. France can do nothing but submit."

Herr Bernstein, a conspicuous German writer, has seriously ruffled the surface of socialism by publishing a book in which he proves that the common belief that the rich are becoming richer and the poor poorer is altogether an error. It is upon this dictum that most of the socialistic agitation in Germany is based, and any disturbance of the belief with facts must have a large effect. The book has not yet reached this country, but it is waited for with much interest, because there is at present a growing popular belief that the concentration of capital, which is now going on at an unprecedented rate, is somehow ominous.

A novel has recently been written by a woman the purpose of which is to advocate suicide. Other novel writers have achieved that end without advocating it.

Everybody has doubtless heard of the rattlesnake that took two days in trying to charm a stuffed owl, but that isn't a circumstance to a recent British coroner's jury that sat on a mummy. It was left at a railway station, and the coroner was duly notified. It being a human body, the due processes of law had to be executed. After an hour's consultation the usual verdict was given—came to his death by means unknown to the jury at a time and place not discoverable.

Kansas has cabled to the gallant Twentieth to select by vote the city in that state which shall have the honor of welcoming the regiment for muster out. The three cities that are in the race are Topeka, Leavenworth and Kansas City. What's the matter with letting the rest of the country get a back at the boys? Kansas seems to think they belong to Kansas. Not altogether. They belong to the whole nation.

One of the women's departments in a Sunday journal says that the dowagers are taking to the skipping rope exercise to keep down their flesh and to renew their youth. Almost everybody thought woman had rope enough without coming to this.

There can be no doubt that the reputable people of Georgia regret more than anybody else the recent appalling cases of lynching. So brutal and incredibly fiendish was one of these cases that many of the newspapers of the country have refused to print the details out of very shame. It would be very unjust to say that the civilized portion of Georgia looks upon such an exhibition as this with equanimity. But what Georgia needs to do now, and what indeed the press of Georgia is trying to get the people to do, is to so array public opinion as to wipe out this form of savagery.

Lord Salisbury has publicly declared that whether the peace conference effects any improvement in the relations of the nations is problematical, but the fact that such a conference has been called in the nineteenth century is a splendid omen for the future. Twenty-five years ago the mere idea of such a conference would have been scouted as an impossibility.

Some gruesome stories have been brought to the African coast from the interior by an exploring expedition which came upon a ghastly native celebration in which human sacrifices were being offered up and a number of live women were crucified. The details of the story almost exceed credibility in their ghastliness and the fact that barbarism of this revolting kind is still carried on almost under the eyes of the British government has given missionary England a start.

One hundred and thirty thousand deaths occur in London annually, and there are only 200 acres of burial land within easy distance of the metropolis. Sir Arthur Arnold has called attention to the startling fact that as many as 20 people have been buried in one grave.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspapermen who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper." CARTER H. HARRISON, Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider it make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically." "WASHINGTON HESING." The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country." MARTIN J. RUSSELL, Editor-in-Chief Chicago Chronicle.

The funeral of Mark Bangs, Wauconda's earliest settler, was held at the Baptist church Tuesday at 3 o'clock p. m. He leaves six children, three sons and three daughters, besides numerous other relatives and friends to mourn the loss of a kind father and friend.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

The commencement exercises last Friday evening were without a doubt the finest ever witnessed in our village. The church was most tastefully decorated with flags, flowers and bunting and presented a most beautiful appearance.

At 7:30 o'clock the crowd began to assemble and at 8:30 every seat in the church had been taken and standing room was hardly obtainable.

Rev. D. C. Dutton opened the evening's program by an invocation after which the Lakeside orchestra struck up the march—"American Parade," followed by a chorus—"Sailor Boy's Glee," by the choir.

An essay—"The Progress of the Nineteenth Century," by Miss Edith Ray Turnbull, was most highly enjoyed and appreciated, carrying the audience from the beginning of the 19th century up to the present time, explaining carefully the many wonderful inventions, the most important of which are the telephone, telegraph, steam-boat, railroad, and steam and electric inventions, in general; what importance they have had in the growth and welfare of our country, etc. Miss Turnbull certainly did fine, executing her essay with the most expertness and coolness.

The orchestra then played the "Waubansee," which was followed by "The Manager's Troubles" by the quartette. An essay—"Humble Beginnings of Great Men," by Miss Florence M. Grace, was most interesting and instructive, taking for example some of our great men, such as Washington, Lincoln, Webster and Clay, who began at the lowest round of the ladder and worked their way steadily on and on until they reached the top-most round. It certainly was a masterpiece and deserves all credit bestowed upon a fair graduate.

A duet—"The Robin and the Rose," was the next number on the program, followed by Sousa's March by the orchestra.

An essay—"Ambition," by Miss Laretta Vera Geary, was certainly a masterpiece. She discussed the subject from all its standpoints and plainly illustrated her subject and it was a lesson which doubtless set many to thinking how they might strive and gain a most important position in life if they but had the ambition to leap forward. The execution was certainly fine and she may well be proud of the work.

This was followed by another selection by the orchestra—"Gay and Festive," after which the class address was delivered by W. H. Strayer. It is needless to say the address was fine and highly appreciated by all.

The quartette next rendered a selection—"Lady Bird Fly Away Home," which was followed by another selection by the orchestra, after which Prof. Hubbard made a few closing remarks, thanking the choir, the orchestra, flower girls, ushers and all who had so kindly assisted in carrying out the evening's program and invited the guests to attend the Alumni banquet Saturday evening, after which Rev. D. C. Dutton gave the benediction.

The tenth annual concert given by Prof. J. I. Sears and pupils at the M. E. church Thursday evening was fine and the large audience was well pleased with the program, which was carried out in an elegant manner by the pupils, all taking their parts well. The orchestra did fine and was at its best, and a marked improvement was noted by all. Prof. Sears can justly feel proud of the advancement made by his Cary pupils.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. CHAPTER XXIV.—(Continued.)

The morning dawned with a smooth sea and a bright blue sky; the raft had been borne to leeward of the cluster of uninhabited islands of which we spoke, and was now without hopes of reaching them; but to the westward were to be seen on the horizon the refracted heads and trunks of coconut trees, and in that direction it was resolved that they should tow the raft. The breakfast had been served out, and the men had taken to the oars, when they discovered a proa full of men sweeping after them from one of the islands to windward. That it was a pirate vessel there could be no doubt; but Philip and Krantz considered that their force was more than sufficient to repel them, should an attack be made. This was pointed out to them; arms were distributed to all in the boats, as well as to those on the raft; and that the seamen might not be fatigued, they were ordered to lie on their oars, and await the coming up of the vessel.

As soon as the pirate was within range, having reconnoitered her antagonists, she ceased pulling, and commenced firing from a small piece of cannon which was mounted on her bows. The grape and langridge which she poured upon them wounded several of the men, although Philip had ordered them to lie down flat on the raft and in the boats. The pirate advanced nearer, and her fire became more destructive, without any opportunity of returning it by the Utrecht's people. At last it was proposed, as the only chance of escape, that the boats should attack the pirate. This was agreed to by Philip; more men were sent in the boats; Krantz took the command; the raft was cast off, and the boats pulled away. But scarcely had they cleared the raft, when, as by one sudden thought, they turned round, and pulled away in the opposite direction. Krantz's voice was heard by Philip; and his sword was seen to flash through the air; a moment afterward he plunged into the sea, and swam to the raft. It appeared that the people in the boats, anxious to preserve the money which they had possession of, had agreed among themselves to pull away and leave the raft to its fate. The proposal for attacking the pirate had been suggested with that view, and as soon as they were clear of the raft, they put their intentions into execution. In vain had Krantz expostulated and threatened; they would have taken his life; and when he found that his efforts were of no avail, he leaped from the boat. "Then we are lost, I fear," said Philip, addressing the pilot, who stood near to him.

"Lost—but not lost by the pirates—no harm there! He, he!"

The remark of Schriften was correct. The pirates, imagining that in taking to their boats the people had carried with them everything that was valuable, instead of firing at the raft, immediately gave chase to the boats. The sweeps were now out, and the proa flew over the smooth water like a sea-bird, passed the raft, and was at first evidently gaining on the boats; but their speed soon slackened, and as the day passed, the boats and then the pirate vessel disappeared in the southward; the distance between them being apparently much the same as at the commencement of the chase.

The raft being now at the mercy of the wind and waves, Philip and Krantz collected the carpenter's tools which had been brought from the ship, and selecting two spars from the raft, they made every preparation for stepping a mast and setting sail by the next morning.

The morning dawned, and the first objects that met their view were the boats pulling back toward the raft, followed closely by the pirate. The men had pulled the whole night, and were worn out with fatigue. It was presumed that a consultation had been held, in which it was agreed that they should make a sweep, so as to return to obtain provisions and water, which they had not on board at the time of their desertion. But it was fated otherwise; gradually the men dropped their oars, exhausted, into the bottom of the boat, and the pirate vessel followed them with renewed ardor. The boats were captured one by one; the booty found was more than the pirates anticipated, and it hardly need be said that not one was spared. All this took place within three miles of the raft, and Philip anticipated that the next movement of the vessel would be toward them, but he was mistaken. Satisfied with their booty, and imagining that there could be no more on the raft, the pirate pulled away to the eastward, toward the islands from among which she had first made her appearance. Thus were those who expected to escape, and who had deserted their companions, deservedly punished; while those who anticipated every disaster from this desertion discovered that it was the cause of their being saved.

The remaining people on board the raft amounted to about forty-five; Philip, Krantz, Schriften, Amine, the two mates, sixteen seamen and twenty-four soldiers, who had been embarked at Amsterdam. Of provisions they had sufficient for three or four weeks; but of water they were very short, already not having sufficient for more than three days at the usual allowance. As soon as the mast had been stepped and rigged, and the sails set (although there was hardly a breath of wind), Philip explained to the men the necessity of reducing the quantity of water, and it was agreed that it should be served out so as to extend the supply to twelve days, the allowance being reduced to half a pint per day.

There was a debate at this time, as the raft was in two parts, whether it would not be better to cast off the smaller one, and put all the people on board the other; but this proposal was overruled, as, in the first place, although the boats had deserted them, the number on the raft had not much diminished, and moreover, the raft would steer much better under sail now that it had length, than it would do if they reduced its dimensions and altered its shape to a mere mass of floating wood.

For three days it was calm, the sun poured down his hot beams upon them, and the want of water was severely felt; those who continued to drink spirits suffered the most.

The night closed in as before; the stars shone bright, but there was no moon. Philip had risen at midnight to relieve Krantz from the steerage of the raft. Usually the men had lain about in every part of the raft, but this night the majority of them remained forward. Philip was communing with his own bitter thoughts, when he heard a scuffle forward, and the voice of Krantz crying out to him for help. He quitted the helm, and seizing his cutlass ran forward, where he found Krantz down, and the men securing him. He fought his way to him, but was himself seized and disarmed. "Cut away—cut away!" was called out by those who held him; and in a few seconds Philip had the misery to behold the after-part of the raft, with Amine upon it, drift apart from the one on which he stood.

"For mercy's sake! my wife—my Amine!—for Heaven's sake, save her!" cried Philip, struggling in vain to disengage himself. Amine also, who had run to the side of the raft held out her arms—it was in vain—they were separated by more than a cable's length. Philip made one more desperate struggle, and then fell down deprived of sense and motion.

CHAPTER XXV.

It was not until the day had dawned that Philip opened his eyes, and discovered Krantz kneeling at his side; at first his thoughts were scattered and confused; he felt that some dreadful calamity had happened to him, but he could not recall to mind what it was. At last it rushed upon him, and he buried his face in his hands.

"Take comfort," said Krantz, "we shall probably gain the shore today, and we shall go in search of her as soon as we can."

He offered such consolation as his friendship could suggest, but in vain. He then talked of revenge, and Philip raised his head. After a few minutes' thought, he rose up. "Yes," replied he, "revenge!—revenge upon those dastards and traitors! Tell me, Krantz, how many can we trust?"

"Half of the men, I should think, at least. It was a surprise." A spar had been fitted as a rudder, and the raft had now gained nearer the shore than it ever had done before. The men were in high spirits at the prospect, and every man was sitting on his own store of dollars, which, in their eyes, increased in value in proportion as did their prospect of escape. Philip discovered from Krantz that it was the soldiers and most indifferent seamen who had mutinied on the night before and cut away the other raft, and that all the best men had remained neutral.

"And so they will be now, I imagine," continued Krantz; "the prospect of gaining the shore has, in a manner, reconciled them to the treachery of their companions."

"Probably," replied Philip, with a bitter laugh; "but I know what will rouse them. Send them here to me."

Philip talked to the seamen whom Krantz had sent over to him. He pointed out to them that the other men were traitors not to be relied upon; that they would sacrifice everything and everybody for their own gain; that they had already done so for money, and that they themselves would have no security, either on the raft or on the shore, with such people; that they dare not sleep for fear of having their throats cut, and that it were better at once to get rid of those who could not be true to each other; that it would facilitate their escape, and that they could divide between themselves the money which the others had secured, and by which they could double their own shares. That it had been his intention, although he had said nothing, to enforce the restoration of the money for the benefit of the company as soon as they had gained a civilized port, where the authorities could interfere; but that if they consented to join and aid him, he would now give them the whole of it for their own use.

What will not the desire of gain effect? Is it therefore to be wondered at that these men, who were, indeed, but little better than those who were thus, in his desire for retaliation, denounced by Philip, consented to his proposal? It was agreed that if they did not gain the shore, the others should be attacked that very night and tossed into the sea.

But the consultation with Philip had put the other party on the alert; they, too, held council and kept their arms by their sides. As the breeze died away, they were not two miles from the land, and once more they drifted back into the ocean. Philip's mind was borne down with grief at the loss of Amine; but it recovered to a certain degree when he thought of revenge; that feeling stayed him up, and he often felt the edge of his cutlass, impatient for the moment of retribution.

It was a lovely night; the sea was now smooth as glass, and not a breath of air moved in the heavens; the sail of the raft hung listless down the mast, and was reflected upon the calm surface by the brilliancy of the starry night alone. It was a night for contemplation—for examination of one's self, and adoration of the Deity; and here, on a frail raft, were huddled together more than forty beings, ready for combat, murder and for spoil. Each party pretended to repose; yet each was quietly watching the motions of the other, with their hands upon their weapons. The signal was to be given by Philip; it was to let go the halyards of the yard, so that the sail would fall down upon a portion of the other party and entangle them. By Philip's directions Schriften had taken the helm, and Krantz remained by his side.

The yard and sail fell clattering down, and then the work of death commenced; there was no parley, no suspense; each man started upon his feet and raised his sword. The voices of Philip and Krantz alone were heard, and Philip's sword did its work. He was nerved to his revenge, and never could be satiated as long as one remained who had sacrificed Amine. As Philip had expected, many had been covered up and entangled by the falling of the sail, and their work was thereby made easier.

Some fell where they stood; others reeled back and sank down under the smooth water; others were pierced as they floundered under the canvas. In a few minutes the work of carnage was complete. Schriften meanwhile looked on, and ever and anon gave vent to his chuckling laugh—his demoniacal "He! he!"

The strife was over and Philip stood against the mast to recover his breath. "So far art thou revenged, my Amine," thought he; "but, oh! what are these paltry lives compared with thine?" And now that his revenge was satiated, and he could do no more, he covered his face up with his hands and wept bitterly, while those who had assisted him were already collecting the money of the slain for distribution. These men, when they found that three only of their side had fallen, lamented that there had not been more, as their own share of the dollars would have been increased.

There were now but thirteen men besides Philip, Krantz and Schriften left upon the raft. As the day dawned the breeze again sprang up, and they shared out the portions of water which would have been the allowance of their companions who had fallen. Hunger they felt not; but the water revived their spirits.

The Kaiser's Two Sides.

While Poutney Bigelow was in the midst of a lecture before the Sesama Club (London) on "The human side of the German emperor," a witty lady in the audience scribbled down these lines and sent them up to the speaker. They were read with much laughter:

They say the Kaiser has a human side, I know not what they mean. Of course it is His Majesty's Inside—The side that's never seen.

BATTLE WITH A TUNA

THE FISH SWAMPED AND WRECKED THE BOAT.

Was Finally Captured—One of the Men Swam a Long Distance to a Launch, Keeping Up a Constant Fight with the Fish.

One of the most remarkable experiences ever recorded in fishing annals took place near Avalor, Catalina island, Cal., recently, almost resulting in the drowning of three men. C. F. Holder, president of the Tuna club, and T. M. Townsend of Philadelphia, with "Jim" Gardner as boatman, started for Long Point, towed by the launch Minnehaha. Off White's Landing they struck a large school of tunas, darting in every direction. Townsend had the first strike, but failed to hook his fish. A second later Holder had a strike and in a moment the boat was rushing astern after the fish. "After a hard struggle the fish was brought to gaff," Holder passed the tip of his rod forward and Gardner hooked the fish with the gaff and proceeded to haul it in.

Just as it was landed the fish gave a convulsive leap and capsized the boat. The fishermen were about a mile from shore and the launch was some distance away, having kept off to avoid the line when the fish was playing.

Holder, seeing that the boat would not hold them all, struck out for the launch, which he finally reached, greatly exhausted. The other two men were having a serious time, as the fish rolled the boat over several times, and the wire ladder of Holder's line was wound around Townsend's legs. Gardner also started to swim to the launch, leaving Townsend alone with the boat, which was now turned bottom up, allowing the latter to climb on to the keel. Gardner was still holding on to Holder's fish and performed a most remarkable feat of courage. Sometimes he was on top of the fish and sometimes the fish was on top of him. Three times the game creature made desperate plunges and carried Gardner under water. Finally Gardner reached the launch exhausted. He did not release his grasp on the fish until Holder and Mrs. Gardner drew it in. When the fishermen were rescued the water for an acre around looked as though there had been a wreck. Oars, clothes, rudders, gaffs, hats and other debris floated about. Gardner was badly cut and scraped by his fight with the fish.

Longevity in Animals.

The elephant sometimes undoubtedly attains the age of 150 years. As a basis for this opinion we have the famous Bheemsuttee, owned by his highness the Maharajah of Mysore. This elephant was captured in 1805, when about 3 years old. In 1876 she was in excellent health and showed no evidence of great age. The natives of some of the Indian tribes believe that an elephant never dies, for the reason that they have never found a dead one. The Singhalese believe that the elephant has a certain place—a deep valley which no man has ever seen—to which they retreat when about to die. The whale is undoubtedly a long-lived animal, and is accredited with a century of life. A quiet, uneventful life, without great exertion, is conducive to longevity, which perhaps explains why the turtle attains such great age. In 1821 there died a tortoise which had lived in the Bishop's gardens at Peterborough for over a century, and from the records and account of it, kept from time to time, it was estimated to have attained the ripe old age of 223 years. In 1625 a friend presented Archbishop Laud with a tortoise which he placed in the grounds of Lambeth Palace, where it lived until 1753, or 128 years, dying then, not from old age, but on account of the neglect of the gardener. An interesting case of longevity was seen in a turtle brought from the Seychelles in 1766 by the Chevalier Marion du Fresne. He delivered it to the authorities of the Mauritius, who kept it until 1853, when Sir Charles Colville, then governor of the island, sent it to the London Zoological Gardens. This gave the tortoise a known age of 67 years, and as it was fully grown when first brought to Mauritius, it may easily have been a centenarian. Fish are known to attain great age, and instances of fishes living twenty and thirty years are not uncommon. It is supposed that some of the golden carp in the parks about Paris are over 100 years old, and a pike in an English pond had a silver tag to the effect that it was 90 years old.

Credit Where It Is Due.

"I am afraid that our new son-in-law's aristocratic traditions will make it difficult for him to hold his own in financial affairs." "I kind of felt that way," replied her husband, "but don't let's be hasty in judging him. I must say he talked right up like a business man when it came to fixing a dowry." —Washington Star.

"Better Be Wise Than Rich."

Wise people are also rich when they know a perfect remedy for all annoying diseases of the blood, kidneys, liver and bowels. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is perfect in its action—so regulates the entire system as to bring vigorous health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Never Disappoints

The Power of Prayer.

A Reading (Pa.) woman has a strange method of warding off assaults from her husband. She does not go to law, as her religion would not permit her to do that. She and her husband are both Dunkards, says the Reading Herald, and when the husband so far forgets his manhood as to attempt brutal measures, the wife falls upon her knees and prays to heaven to stay his arm. Invariably he stops instantly at such a unique appeal. He fears neither police magistrate nor court, but the religious training makes him sober down quickly when his wife petitions Providence to interpose.

Diners to Salt Lake.

A new and pleasing feature in travel through Utah and Colorado to California and the Pacific coast was inaugurated on June 1 when the Rio Grande Western Railway began operating its new dining car service, serving all meals on all its through trains. This new service will rob the transcontinental journey of much of its tedium and fatigue and will enhance greatly the popular Rio Grande Western. The new diners are of the finest ever turned out by Pullman; the cuisine is perfect; service being a la carte so that the traveler may have his coffee and rolls for breakfast or may order from a menu as elaborate and complete as the market can supply.

A Few Timely Pointers.

The up-to-date farmer has learned the wisdom of doing his own thinking, and in selecting a binder or mower to weigh carefully the actual points of superiority and to avoid mere "talking" or "selling" points. The "life" of a machine depends largely on its main frame, which should be solid enough to outwear the working parts and yet not heavy enough to tear itself to pieces through its own inertia. The Deering Ideal Binder has a high-carbon steel frame, hot-rieveted at the joints. This machine has stood the most severe tests ever put on a binder. It has a cutting apparatus that will cut any crop that grows; elevators that will elevate anything it cuts; a simple reel with greater range of adjustment than any other, operated with a single lever; the famous Deering Knotter and Binder which never misses; the only bundle carrier worthy of the name, and finally Deering Roller and Ball Bearings, making it the lightest draft binder that ever cut a swath.

The Summer Bath for Health.

The bath in summer is not only a luxury, but a necessity for health and beauty. To take it properly, fill a tub with luke warm water, use Ivory soap, rub the flesh until it glows, rinse in cool water, and dry on a soft towel. A daily bath thus taken will keep the system in good condition during the warm weather.

"One year ago last June three doctors gave me up to die, and as I had at different times used your Vegetable Compound with good results, I had too much faith in it to die until I had tried it again. I was apparently an invalid, was confined to my bed for ten weeks. (I believe my trouble was ulceration of womb).

"After taking four bottles of the Compound and using some of the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, at the end of two months I had greatly improved and weighed 155 pounds, when I never before weighed over 138. We would like to publish the essays, they are high class in every particular, but we have not the space.

During the exercises many valuable presents and choice bouquets were presented to the graduates.

THE CAMP MEETING.

Large Gatherings Attend the Meetings.

SPIRITED ADDRESSES DELIVERED.

The first camp meeting bell rang for service on Saturday evening. Rev. F. Busse, presiding elder, spoke on the "Power of United Prayer." Sunday, there were three services. Throughout the week ministers from the various fields came in and preached in great power, and the spirit of the old evangelical camp meetings manifests itself in many ways. Thursday morning the Lord's supper was celebrated, and about two hundred people partook of the eucharist. A day of especial interest was Old People's Day, Friday. The good weather, together with the heartiness with which the people enter into every service, made it greatly enjoyable. Besides the ministers from the Chicago district and the bishop, there have been present Rev. H. Messner, of N. Northfield; Rev. E. S. Woodring, of Chicago Adams street church; Rev. C. G. Nuangst, of Geneseo; Rev. F. W. Landwer, of Manhattan; Rev. Jos. Henn, of Chicago; Rev. Theo. Suhr, of Ashton. Bishop Dubs delivered forcible sermons during the week, and will be here until Monday.

Saturday evening Rev. H. H. Thoren, of Naperville, will preach.

Sunday morning, Bishop Dubs will preside over the meeting.

In the afternoon at 1:30 the Keystone League of C. E. will have a general rally, to be addressed in English by Rev. H. H. Thoren.

The G. A. R. will be addressed by Bishop Dubs at 2:30, and all the G. A. R. members are specially invited to this extra service. All are welcome.

In the evening at 7:30 Rev. Thoren will preach an English sermon, to be followed by Rev. A. Lutz, who will preach in German.

Rev. H. Messner will preach Monday forenoon, the closing service of the camp meeting.

The interest is developing. Already three persons have been converted, and much enthusiasm is manifested in the religious work.

Letter from C. F. Meyer.

The following letter was received from C. F. Meyer by Messrs. Cameron & Matson this week, which will be of interest to our readers:

LIVERPOOL, ENG., June 2, 1899.
CAMERON & MATSON.
OLD PARDS.—We arrived here by River Mursey at 8 p. m. last night, but as the tide was out we were obliged to leave the steamer and take a tender to landing stage, which is a floating dock. We were at the Compton hotel at 10 p. m., but it was as light as day. We retired at about 11:30, but could not go to sleep for about an hour on account of the light, as 12 o'clock here means 6 o'clock at home. Today we took in the town and special sights and at 3 p. m. called on Judge Campbell's brothers, Hugh and Dave Craig. Hugh took us over to his home in New Brighton. Dave is in business with him and they reside together. We stayed to tea and I spent one of the most pleasant evenings that I ever spent in my life. Tell the judge (Campbell) I have a lot to tell him and saw his picture and pictures of members of his family in several places in their comfortable home.

We arrived at Chester Saturday and put up at Westminster hotel, took in town and walked around the stone wall that surrounds the city. The wall was built in 1567. We also saw Eaton and Hawarden castles.

We left Chester Sunday and went to Leamington and Warwick and took in the sights. From these places we went to Stratford and took in everything about Wm. Shakespeare and Anna Hathaway. From here we went to London and on our way went through Oxford and saw Windsor castle. We arrived in London and talk about State street; don't mention it. We saw cabs galore. They number as small as 32 and we saw one numbered 28,000. We have stopped at all the hotels on Gaze's list and they are all fine.

This month is the busiest month of the year, as all of the rich people visit London to do their shopping and sight seeing.

The Strand is the busiest street in London and we are just half way between Charing Cross and the Bank of England.

I will now close with regards to all.

Yours truly, C. F. M.

Value of Cheese Food.
Cheese is a very rich and valuable food, likely to form a very large constituent in the future and, especially for the workingman, to be very extensively used. There is a difference in stomachs in their ability to digest this article.

The writer is able to make an entire meal of cheese, with very little bread, and digest it more easily than rice or oatmeal, but in most stomachs it is less digestible, in some extremely so. Each person must learn for himself. It is a convenient form of animal food and, when good, particularly agreeable.

There is a great difference in the composition of cheese both in its water, fat and nitrogenous matter. In general, however, it may be remarked that every variety contains a large amount of nitrogenous matter, and it is for this that it is especially useful as a food. Skimmilk cheese is especially rich in this constituent, but less rich in fat. Those who abstain from flesh food will find in cheese abundance of nitrogenous matter to take the place of that found in flesh.—London Family Doctor.

Othello Whitewashed.

Othello is the latest historic disreputable to have a good character established. Italian papers claim certain manuscripts concerning the Moor have been found in the archives of a convent in Venice. They are notes taken in 1542 by a Cretan diplomat sent on a mission to the republic of Venice. The writer knew Othello well and vouches for the fact that the lady was never killed at all. In fact, she survived Othello, died a natural death and gave the coroner no trouble at all. So that there never was a tragedy of the moor of Venice.
