ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY.

Bold Attempt to Rob the Palatine Bank.

CASHIER BADLY WOUNDED

Only for the Arrival of H. Plagge a Different Story Would be Chronicled.

The most desperate attempt at robbery and murder ever attempted in Palatine occurred Wednesday afternoon. Fred J. Filbert, cashier of the Palatine bank of Charles H. Patten, was seriously injured in the affair and Henry Plagge, an aged farmer living a few miles west of the village, was badly cut about the head by the assassin.

The story in form is as follows: A man came to the bank one day last week and stated to Mr. Filbert that he owned a farm of 200 acres near Wheeling on which he wished to secure a loan of $3,000, giving his address as Chicago and stated that he was in the real estate business there. He had no abstracts or other papers showing he owned such land, but said he would call again and bring the papers with him. This is supposed to be the man who appeared at the bank Wednesday for the purpose of robbing it, but cannot be proven until a statement can be had from Mr. Filbert.

Last Wednesday afternoon a tall, well-built and neatly-dressed man alighted from the Lake Geneva train which arrived here from Chicago at 2:05. He was unnoticed and, it seems, failed to attract any attention. He went into the bank a little before 3 o'clock while Cashier Filbert was alone. Henry Plagge drove up to the bank shortly afterwards, and going into the bank he was accosted by the robber, as he stood in the doorway leading to the cashier's desk, who asked what is wanted. "I want to see Mr. Filbert," answered Mr. Plagge. "He is in here, and is sick or hurt. Come in and see him," was the answer. Mr. Plagge, suspecting nothing, went behind the desk, which is hidden by tall colored glass front and as he approached the prostrate form of the cashier, he was struck on the head by a large tack hammer in the hands of Lawton. Mr. Plagge then realized the situation and grabbed the robber around the lower part of the legs and threw him to the floor. The robber fell on top and commenced to beat Plagge with the butt end of a revolver, which he had drawn. Although 69 years of age, Mr. Plagge succeeded in warding off most of the blows and finally got hold of the revolver and it is supposed that during this struggle the assassin was struck in the groin, through the small intestines. Plagge finally overpowered the man and then loudly called for help. Lawton then asked Plagge to let go the revolver that he might kill himself. William Garms was standing a few rods north on the depot walk and hearing the noise, he rushed to the bank, where he found Mr. Filbert lying across the front door, but failed at first to recognize him. It seems that Mr. Filbert crawled from behind the desk to the front door of the bank during the struggle. Mr. Garms stopped to assist Mr. Filbert, at the same time calling for help. Alfred Hanns, the depot baggageman, and Chris Blum rushed into the bank and secured the robber until the arrival of Officer John Bergman who, with Alderman R. M. Putnam, took him to jail.

In the meantime a crowd of citizens had gathered around the bank and Dr. Muffatt was rendering medical assistance at once, having come down from his office to find out the cause of the disturbance. Mr. Filbert was found to have received three blows on the head from the hammer, the worst wound being behind the left ear, which fractured the skull. Mr. Plagge was struck three times, the worst blow being a big gash on the left side of the scalp. Dr. Black dressed and sewed up his wounds and he returned home with his son that night. Dr. T. N. Davis, jr., the celebrated

Chicago physician, was sent for and arrived on the first Barrington train. He made an examination of the wounds and, with Doctors Muffatt and Black, performed an operation and removed two bones as large as a man's finger from the fracture in the back of the head. The patient is resting well, and yesterday morning he had regained consciousness. His chances of recovery are among the possibilities.

Mr. Patten was notified by telephone soon after the occurrence and drove from Lake Zurich to Palatine as fast as he could urge his horse, but found that the bank books and cash had not been touched and that Mr. Filbert was receiving all possible attention.

The robber was interviewed and made the statement that Mr. Filbert had broken up his home in New York city five years ago and that he saw him on the streets of Chicago about five weeks ago and followed him to see where he was going and found he lived in Palatine. He stated that he came out here prepared to "do him up." He had the small hammer concealed under his coat, it being held by two strings fixed so the hammer could be easily removed. He gave his name as Walter Lawton and his residence as New York city, but positively refused to tell any more of his history except that he had been in Chicago for some weeks. His story in regard to Mr. Filbert is believed by all to be false in every particular, as everyone who is acquainted with Mr. Filbert knows he has not been in New York for 20 years. The man was, no doubt, attempting to throw the people off as to his wickedness in trying to implicate Mr. Filbert in wrong doing. It is believed it was simply the crafty statement of a man who would not only kill a man for a few paltry dollars and would, in order to shield himself, try to destroy his good reputation at the same time. He also stated that Mr. Filbert shot him during a quarrel of words while standing behind the cashier's desk.

The probability is that the man got Mr. Filbert to step outside his room under some pretense of business and while looking over the county map struck him on the head with the hammer. Mr. Filbert must have fought hard to save himself, as nothing but phenomenal determination could have withstood the terrific and murderous blows which he received. The assailant then threw Mr. Filbert under his desk beneath the cashier's window. If Mr. Plagge had not come in just at the time he did the robber could have gathered up the cash, amounting to over $5,000, and throwing the catch on the front door, walk out, and leaving the door locked, board the 3:19 train for Chicago, and in all probability reach there before anything would have been suspected.

Lawton was given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Whipple the evening and he was bound over to the grand jury. He was taken to Chicago on the 7:03 train that night, accompanied by Officer Bergman, Mayor Olms and Trustees Horstman and Ost and Dr. Schierding. He was lodged in the hospital department of the county jail. The bullet which passed through the small intestines, lodged under the back next to the skin and had not been removed before Lawton was taken to Chicago.

Lawton died of his wounds Thursday morning.

Notes.

Deputy Coroner Milan Reynolds took the testimony of Henry Plagge Thursday afternoon to present to the jury in Chicago yesterday. In looking at the revolver of the burglar he found that the guard to the trigger had been bent back so far that it forced the trigger back and the revolver must have been discharged. This probably occurred when he struck Plagge while he was stooping to see Mr. Filbert and the bullet naturally struck the assassin in the groin.

Much relief was felt when the news of the death of Lawton Thursday morning was received.

Mr. Filbert's revolver was not touched during the affair, which refuted Lawton's story.

Conference at Chicago Listens to All Sides of the Question—William J. Bryan Submits a Plan for the Regulation of Combines.

Proceedings of the third day's session of the trust conference:

At the morning meeting Louis F. Post of the Single-Tax league delivered an address. Thomas J. Morgan spoke on "The Trust from the Socialist's Point of View."

In the afternoon David Ross of the Illinois bureau of labor statistics and M. L. Lockwood of the Anti-Trust league delivered addresses.

The evening was occupied by an address by William Dudley Foulke of Indiana, who was followed by Edward Rosewater of Nebraska.

William J. Bryan addressed the trust conference at Chicago Sept. 16. His proposition for the regulation of combinations is summed up as follows:

- 1. Every state has or should have the right to create any private corporation which in the judgment of the people of the state is conducive to the welfare of the people of that state.
2. The state has or should have the right to prohibit any foreign corporation from doing business in the state, and it ought to have the right to impose such restrictions and limitations as the people of the state may think necessary upon any foreign corporation doing business in the state.
3. Congress has or should have the power to place such restrictions and limitations, even to the point of prohibition, upon any corporation organized in one state and that wants to do business outside of the state.

Remarkable Career of a Well-Known Western Capitalist, Manufacturer and Philanthropist.

Among the leaders of the progressive element for which the middle west is famous, Mr. John C. Hubinger, of Keokuk, Ia., reigns without a peer. As a manufacturer, as an enterprising capitalist and as a philanthropist his fame has spread over many states, and his financial enterprises have developed many obscure towns into progressive, thrifty and wide-awake cities.

By inclination and force of circumstances his attention was early directed to the manufacture of starch by improved processes, and in the course of time he became the head of a concern having an annual business of millions of dollars.

He is planning to distribute millions of packages of this starch to the housewives of America, at a merely nominal price to the consumer, in order to make its merits known without delay.

While Mr. Hubinger will devote his best energies to the manufacture of this new and wonderful starch, he will not retire from the various financial enterprises in which he is interested—street railways, electric lighting plants and the Mississippi Valley Telephone Co., with 10,000 telephone subscribers in Minneapolis and St. Paul—nor will his augmented activity interfere with his social obligations and exercise of the splendid hospitality which he dispenses at his palatial Keokuk home.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE QUEENS OF HOME, LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text, Sol. Song, 6: 8, as follows: "There Are Three Score Queens"—Many Sympathies Stirred and Memories Recalled.

(Copyright 1899 by Louis Klopsch.)
So Solomon, by one stroke, set forth the imperial character of a true Christian woman. She is not a slave, not a hireling, not a subordinate, but a queen. In a former sermon I showed you that crown and courtly attendants, and imperial wardrobe were not necessary to make a queen; but that graces of the heart and life will give coronation to any woman. I showed you at some length that woman's position was higher in the world than man's, and that although she had often been denied the right of suffrage, she always did vote and always would vote by her influence, and that her chief desire ought to be that she should have grace rightly to rule in the dominion which she has already won. I began an enumeration of some of her rights, and now I resume the subject.

In the first place, woman has the special and the superlative right of blessing and comforting the sick. What land, what street, what house, has not felt the smittings of disease? Tens of thousands of sick-beds! What shall we do with them? Shall man, with his rough hand and clumsy foot, go stumbling around the sick-room, trying to soothe the distracted nerves and alleviate the pains of the distressed patient? The young man at college may scoff at the idea of being under maternal influences, but at the first blast of typhoid fever on his cheek he says, "Where is mother?" Walter Scott wrote partly in satire and partly in compliment:

O woman, in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy and hard to please;
When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou.

I think the most pathetic passage in all the Bible is the description of the lad who went out to the harvest field of Shunem and got sunstruck—pressing his hands on his temples and crying out: "Oh, my head! my head!" And they said: "Carry him to his mother." And then the record is: "He sat on her knees till noon, and then died."

It is an awful thing to be ill away from home in a strange hotel, once in a while men coming in to look at you, holding their hand over their mouth for fear they will catch the contagion. How roughly they turn you in bed. How loudly they talk. How you long for the ministries of home. I know one such who went away from one of the brightest of homes, for several weeks' business absence at the West. A telegram came at midnight that he was on his death-bed far away from home. By express train the wife and daughters went westward; but they went too late. He feared not to die, but he was in an agony to live until his family got there. He tried to bribe the doctor to make him live a little while longer. He said: "I am willing to die, but not alone." But the pulses fluttered, the eyes closed and the heart stopped. The express trains met in the midnight; wife and daughters going westward—lifeless remains of husband and father coming eastward. Oh, it was a sad, pitiful, overwhelming spectacle! When we are sick, we want to be sick at home. When the time comes for us to die, we want to die at home.

In our Civil War, men cast the cannon, men fashioned the musketry, men cried to the hosts, "Forward, march!" men hurled their battalions on the sharp edges of the enemy, crying, "Charge! charge!" but woman scraped the lint, woman administered the cordials, woman watched by the dying couch, woman wrote the last message to the home circle, woman wept at the solitary burial, attended by herself and four men with a spade. We greeted the generals home with brass bands and triumphal arches and wild huzzas; but the story is too good to be written anywhere, save in the chronicles of heaven, of Mrs. Brady, who came down among the sick in the swamps of the Chickahominy; of Annie Ross, in the cooper-shop hospital; of Margaret Breckinridge, who came to men who had been for weeks with their wounds undressed—some of them frozen to the ground, and when she turned them over, those that had an arm left, waved it and filled the air with their "hurrah!"—of Mrs. Hodge, who came from Chicago, with blankets and with pillows, until the men shouted, "Three cheers for the Christian Commission! God bless the women at home;" then sitting down to take the last message: "Tell my wife not to fret about me, but to meet me in heaven; tell her to train up the boys whom we have loved so well; tell her we shall meet again in the good land; tell her to bear my loss like the Christian wife of a Christian soldier"—and of Mrs. Shelton, into whose face the convalescent soldier looked and said: "Your grapes and cologne cured me." And so it was also through all of our war with Spain—women heroic on the field, braving death and wounds to reach the fallen, watching by their fever cots in the West Indian hospitals, or on the troop-ships, or in our smitten home-camps. Men did their work with shot and shell and carbine and howitzer; women did their work with socks and slippers and bandages and warm drinks and Scripture texts and gentle strokings of the hot temples and stories of that land where they never have any pain. Men knelt down over the wounded and said, "On which side did you fight?" Women knelt down over the wounded and said, "Where are you hurt? What nice thing can I make for you to eat? What makes you cry?" Tonight while we men are sound asleep in our beds, there will be a light in yonder loft; there will be groaning down the dark alley; there will be cries of distress in that cellar. Men will sleep, and women will watch.

Again: woman has a special right to take care of the poor. There are hundreds and thousands of them all over the land. There is a kind of work that men cannot do for the poor. Here comes a group of little barefoot children to the door of the Dorcas Society. They need to be clothed and provided for. Which of these directors of banks would know how many yards it would take to make that little girl a dress? Which of these masculine hands could fit a hat to that little girl's head? Which of the wise men would know how to tie on that new pair of shoes? Man sometimes gives his charity in a rough way, and it falls like the fruit of a tree in the East, which fruit comes down so heavily that it breaks the skull of the man who is trying to gather it. But woman glides so softly into the house of destitution, and finds out all the sorrows of the place, and puts so quietly the donation on the table, that all the family come out on the front steps as she departs, expecting that from under her shawl she will thrust out two wings and go right up toward heaven, from whence she seems to have come down.

O, Christian young woman! if you would make yourself happy, and win the blessing of Christ, go out among the destitute. A loaf of bread or a bundle of socks may make a homely load to carry, but the angels of God will come out to watch, and the Lord Almighty will give his messenger hosts a charge, saying, "Look after that woman; canopy her with your wings, and shelter her from all harm;" and while you are seated in the house of destitution and suffering, the little ones around the room will whisper, "Who is she?" "Ain't she beautiful!" and if you will listen right sharply, you will hear dripping down through the leaky roof, and rolling over the rotten stairs, the angel chant that shook Bethlehem: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men."

Again, I have to tell you that it is a woman's specific right to comfort under the stress of dire disaster. She is called the weaker vessel; but all profane, as well as sacred history attests that when the crisis comes she is better prepared than man to meet the emergency. How often have you seen a woman who seemed to be a disciple of frivolity and indolence, who, under one stroke of calamity, changed to a heroine? Oh, what a great mistake those business men make who never tell their business troubles to their wives! There comes some great loss to their store, or their companions in business play them a sad trick, and they carry the burden all alone. He is asked in the household again and again: "What is the matter?" But he believes it a sort of Christian duty to keep all that trouble within his own soul. Oh, sir! your first duty was to tell your wife all about it. She, perhaps, might not have disentangled your finances, or extended your credit, but she would have helped you to bear misfortune. You have no right to carry on one shoulder that which is intended for two. Business men know what I mean. There came a crisis in your affairs. You struggled bravely and long; but after a while there came a day when you said: "Here I shall have to stop," and you called in your partners, and you called in the most prominent men in your employ, and you said: "We have got to stop." You left the store suddenly. You could hardly make up your mind to pass through the street and over on the ferry-boat. You felt everybody would be looking at you, and blaming you, and denouncing you. You hastened home. You told your wife all about the affair. What did she say? Did she play the butterfly? Did she talk about the silks and the ribbons and the fashions? No. She came up to the emergency. She quailed not under the stroke. She offered to go out of the comfortable house into a smaller one, and wear the old cloak another winter. She was the one who understood your affairs without blaming you. You looked upon what you thought was a thin, weak woman's arm holding you up; but while you looked at that arm there came into the feeble muscles of it the strength of the eternal God. No chiding; no fretting; no telling you about the beautiful house of her father, from which you brought her ten, twenty, or thirty years ago. You said: "Well, this is the happiest day of my life. I am glad I have got from under my burden. My wife don't care—I don't care." At the moment you were exhausted God sent you a Deborah to meet the host of Amalekites and scatter them like chaff over the plain. There are sometimes women who sit reading sentimental novels, and who wish that they had some grand field in which to display their Christian powers. What grand and glorious things they could do if they only had an opportunity! My sister, you need not wait for any such time. A crisis will come in your affairs. There will be a Thermopylae in your own household where God will tell you to stand. There are scores and hundreds of households today where as much bravery and courage are demanded of women as was exhibited by Grace Darling, or Marie Antoinette, or Joan of Arc.

Again, I remark it is woman's right to bring to us the kingdom of heaven. It is easier for a woman to be a Christian than for a man. Why? You say she is weaker. No. Her heart is more responsive to the pleadings of divine love. She is in vast majority. The fact that she can more easily become a Christian I prove by the statement that three-fourths of the members of churches in all Christendom are women. So God appoints them to be the chief agents for bringing this world back to God. I may stand here and say the soul is immortal. There is a man who will deny it. I may stand here and say we are lost and undone without Christ. There is a man who will contradict it. I may stand here and say there will be a judgment day after a while. Yonder is some one who will dispute it. But a Christian woman in a Christian household, living in the faith and the consistency of Christ's gospel—nobody can refute that. The greatest sermons are not preached on celebrated platforms; they are preached with an audience of two or three, and in private home life. A consistent, consecrated Christian service is an unanswerable demonstration of God's truth.

Lastly, I wish to say that one of the specific rights of woman is, through the grace of Christ, finally to reach heaven. Oh, what a multitude of women in heaven! Mary, Christ's mother, in heaven! Elizabeth Fry in heaven! Charlotte Elizabeth in heaven! The mother of Augustine in heaven! The Countess of Huntington—who sold her splendid jewels to build chapels—in heaven! While a great many others, who have never been heard of on earth, or known but little, have gone into the rest and peace of heaven. What a rest! What a change it was from the small room, with no fire and one window (the glass broken out), and the aching side, and worn-out eyes, to the "house of many mansions"! No more stitching until twelve o'clock at night; no more thrusting of the thumb by the employer through the work, to show it was not done quite right. Plenty of bread at last! Heaven for aching heads! Heaven for broken hearts! Heaven for anguish-bitten frames! No more sitting until midnight for the coming of staggering steps! No more rough blows across the temples! No more sharp, keen, bitter curses!

Some of you will have no rest in this world. It will be toil and struggle and suffering all the way up. You will have to stand at your door, fighting back the wolf with your own hand, red with carnage. But God has a crown for you. I want you to realize this morning that he is now making it, and whenever you weep a tear he sets another gem in that crown; whenever you have a pang of body or soul he puts another gem in that crown, until, after a while in all the tiara there will be no room for another splendor, and God will say to his angel: "The crown is done; let her up, that she may wear it." And as the Lord of Righteousness puts the crown upon your brow, angel will cry to angel, "Who is she?" and Christ will say, "I will tell you who she is. She is the one that came up out of great tribulation, and had her robe washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." And then God will spread a banquet and he will invite all the principalities of heaven to sit at the feast, and the tables will blush with the best clusters from the vineyards of God and crimson with the twelve manner of fruits from the Tree of Life, and waters from the fountains of the rock will flash from the golden tankards, and the old harpers of heaven will sit there, making music with their harps, and Christ will point you out, amid the celebrities of heaven, saying, "She suffered with me on earth; now we are going to be glorified together." And the banqueters, no longer able to hold their peace, will break forth with congratulation, "Hail, hail!" And there will be handwritings on the wall—not such as struck the Babylonian noblemen with horror—but fire-tipped fencers, writing in blazing capitals of light and love, "God hath wiped away all tears from all faces!"

AGREE TO PARDON DREYFUS.

Action Decided On by the French Council of Ministers.

PART OF GOVERNMENT PLAN.

The Accused Withdraws His Appeal for a Reversal of the Finding—May Be Sent Abroad in Order to Avoid Demonstrations.

The French council of ministers decided to pardon Dreyfus in principle. Dreyfus has relinquished his appeal for a reversal of the judgment of the court-martial. He is still at liberty to seek his vindication through proceedings before the Court of Cassation. It is said that Dreyfus will be sent

GEN. BRAGG AGAIN CHOSEN.

President of the Iron Brigade for the Ensuing Year.

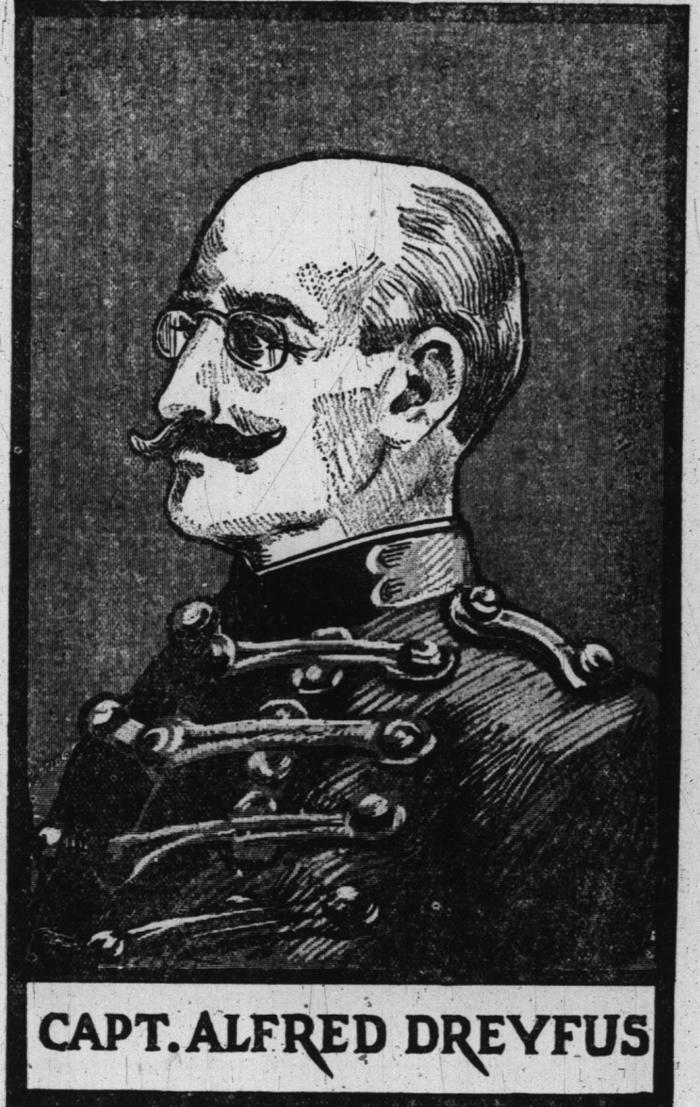

Gen. Edward S. Bragg, Fond du Lac, was chosen president of the Iron Brigade for the ensuing year. The next reunion of the brigade will be held in Chicago in 1900, a day or two previous to the national encampment of the G. A. R.

Dutch in South Africa to Revolt Against British Rule.

It is said the Transvaal has completed arrangements for a Dutch uprising through south Africa, which will take place about a fortnight hence. The conflict will cover a wide area.

abroad, before the promulgation of his pardon, in order to avoid demonstrations.

The announcement that Dreyfus was to be pardoned had already been discounted by predictions, and there was absolutely no excitement in Paris.

The pardon is a part of the general policy of amnesty by the present government, and is the logical outcome of the incongruous verdict. By formal condemnation the military chiefs are satisfied and pressing reasons for their prosecution is avoided. Much of the force must be knocked out of the Dreyfus campaign, and incidentally out of foreign criticism.

Leading newspapers of the world unanimously interpret Dreyfus' pardon as an admission of the government's conviction that the verdict was opposed to the evidence. They say that if it is otherwise the government has deliberately condoned treason.

Heavy Loss by Fire.
Fire at Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 16, caused a loss of $500,000. It started in the North block, occupied entirely by printing firms, and destroyed that structure. From there it spread to the Masonic temple, Methodist church and Webster block, which were also destroyed. Several small buildings were also burned.

New Baseball League Organized.
The American Association of Baseball Clubs has been organized. The new league will have a circuit of eight cities, as follows: Chicago, St. Louis, and Detroit in the west, and New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore in the east.

Desire Mediation of America.
The Orange Free State, it is said, desires to secure the intervention of the United States in the dispute between the Transvaal and Great Britain, and hopes that as a disinterested party the United States will consent to mediate.

To Purchase Willard Statue.
Gov. Tanner has appointed commissioners to purchase a heroic statue of the late Frances E. Willard, to be placed in statutory hall, Washington. The last legislature appropriated $9,000 for the purpose.

Privilege for Dewey's Chinamen.
The authorities will permit the landing of three Chinamen from the battleship Olympia upon the arrival of that vessel at New York, in order that they may take part in the parade in honor of Admiral Dewey.

For Russian Ships Only.
When the middle Europe canal and the Siberian railway are completed, in 1901, all important Russian ports on the Pacific, Baltic and the Black sea will be closed forever to any but Russian ships.

Alliance Stories Are Untrue.
Information received at the state department shows that there is no truth in the reports of an alliance of the South and the Central American republics against the United States.

Aguinaldo Would Release Prisoners.
Aguinaldo is willing to release all sick and civilian Spanish prisoners, but Major-Gen. Otis refuses to allow Spanish vessels to proceed to Filipino ports to receive them.

Great Britain Leases Land.
Great Britain and Portugal, it is reported, are about to sign a convention by which the latter leases to the former certain territory and stations in Portuguese east Africa.

Cannot Visit Indiana.
To Indiana friends President McKinley has explained that it will be impossible for him to go to Evansville on the occasion of the tri-state reunion of the blue and gray.

Schley Will Accept Command.
Admiral Schley says he will accept the command of the south Atlantic squadron or any other duty to which the president may assign him.

Entire Regiment in Quarantine.
The Thirty-first regiment, United States infantry, is quarantined at San Francisco on account of an outbreak of smallpox in the ranks.

Must Expect No Assistance.
The German government has emphatically informed President Kruger to expect no assistance in the event of war with Great Britain.

Can Have a Horse if He Wants It.

A correspondent of a New York paper recently suggested that Admiral Dewey should ride a horse in the land parade in his honor in that city, so that the people would have a better opportunity to see him. The paper then proceeds to have lots of fun with the correspondent and says, "The incongruity of placing a sailor on a horse should be apparent at once."

There is nothing at all incongruous about it. Nothing pleases an "old salt" so well when he gets ashore as to bestride a horse. The old vikings, whom many Americans can count among their ancestors, were famous riders of "barbed steeds" as well as of the "steeds of the sea," as they called their swift ships, and the "Heimskringla" makes frequent allusions to the fact.

Not a few of the naval officers in the civil war, and probably in the later war as well, often took a change for land service, and the cavalry was usually their choice.

Although other arrangements have been made for him, if the hero of Manila wants a horse, a horse he should have, and it's dollars to doughnuts that there'd be no equine shipwreck.

The Paris exposition of 1900, according to all indications, will be the brilliant climax of a series of expositions which have been held in the French capital during the past hundred years. The first on the list of great industrial exhibitions with which the name of Paris has been identified was that of 1798. This, we believe, was the initial movement in the way of world's fairs. It cost the modest sum of $12,000, and there were 110 exhibitors represented. What the original acorn is to the subsequent forest oaks the exposition of 1798 was to the subsequent industrial expositions in Paris. During the century which has elapsed since the first world's fair in the French capital there have been many similar expositions, each more brilliant and extensive than its predecessor and each marking a definite step in the world's advancement in industry, science and art. The last great exposition was held in 1889, and the exhibits showed the marvelous strides the world had made during the century. The cost was represented by as many millions as the first fair did thousands, and the exhibitors were numbered by thousands instead of hundreds. With the prestige which Paris has acquired from past experience in the conduct of such enterprises, together with the spur and rivalry which she has felt in observing what other countries have done in this direction, she is well equipped for adding new laurels to those she has already won, but whether she will surpass our great Centennial exposition in Chicago in 1893 remains to be demonstrated. At all events it will be a great show, and the United States will be there with exhibits which will indicate our foremost rank in the industrial world.

It is authoritatively stated that when George Dewey was a commander in the United States navy at the time of the Virginius massacre he, in common with almost everybody else, thought that war with Spain was inevitable. He requested that in the event of hostilities the duty of capturing the city of Manila should be assigned to him. There was no war at that time, and Dewey was compelled to wait many years for an opportunity to demonstrate that his opinion of the vulnerability of the Queen City of the Philippines was correct. But when the time came he was on hand to make history and a naval hero in a few hours. There was not half so much luck in the destruction of the Spanish fleet by Dewey as many persons are wont to assert, and the careful historian will be morally certain to admit that fact when the events of that memorable May day come to be written dispassionately.

Sir Thomas Lipton possesses many of the characteristics of the true sporting man. He declares that if the Shamrock is beaten he will not have a word of complaint to make, and the first thing he will think of in that event will be the best plan for building another vessel sufficiently faster to win the cup next year. The matter of fair play he does not consider for a moment, saying that that is something which is taken for granted and which he is just as certain to get in this country as he would be in his own. If Dunraven had exhibited the same spirit when he was last here, there would not have been the disgraceful fiasco which marked the Defender-Valkyrie III contests.

The aeronaut who descended with force and his parachute on the top of a Chicago street car, resulting in damage both to himself and the passengers, should be warned that such proceedings are not to be tolerated. Even street car companies and, much more, their passengers have their rights. The transit by local railways has drawbacks enough as it is, and if the public is to be subjected to a rain of aeronauts from the aerial heights the situation will become impossible. Parachute divers must be warned to respect the street cars as well as other vested rights.

While Admiral Dewey is an extremely resourceful man, it is doubtful whether he can succeed in resembling all the portraits that have been printed of him.

It is said that a man does not stop to think when the order comes in battle to charge, but just ducks his head and goes forward in a sort of wild-charge. Certainly something of that sort fell upon Private A. A. Smith, the cook of Company K of the Colorado regiment, in the Philippines. He had gone out to the lines to try to provide the men of his company with some breakfast when the order to charge was given. He had nothing in his hand but a large spoon, which he had been using to dish out the beans, but he dashed ahead with the other men. The element of comedy disappeared when he found a gun beside the dead body of one of the enemy and, appropriating it, did good execution. His comrades have not yet ceased to celebrate his famous charge with the bean spoon, and they are right. The action of the cook showed that he was made of the stuff of which heroes are manufactured. The war in the far east has been prolific in incidents which go to show that the average man in this country is of good material.

A new indictment has been found against the rubber tired buggy wheel. In Pittsburg a young man who was held in $2,000 bail on the charge of embezzlement said in extenuation of the crime: "It's all the fault of that plaguy rubber tired buggy of mine. It would take a bank president's salary to keep it in repair." When a bicycle tire is punctured, it is bad enough. The explosion of a buggy tire is a much more serious matter. As for the big tires of the automobile cabs, they make a noise like a cannon when they let go. One of them exploded the other day, frightening a horse so badly that he bolted and jumped into a ratskeller, smashing chairs and tables and almost choking a peaceful German by causing him to swallow his glass of beer "the wrong way." Still, even this is not so serious as the insinuation that rubber tired wheels are a direct incentive to dishonesty.

It is not many years ago that farmers in the west were compelled to burn corn for fuel. Railroad freight rates were so high that there was no profit in sending the crop to market, and corn was used as a substitute for wood and coal. This season the farmers of Kansas have the largest corn crop in the history of that state, and, in spite of the low price of corn as compared with 20 years ago, every bushel of the crop will be marketed that the growers see fit to spare. Reduced freight rates have made this possible, and, as has been experienced before, the railroad companies as well as the farmers will profit as the result.

At the beginning of the trouble in the Philippines one of the most pleasant tasks of the newspaper man was the recounting of the deeds of heroism performed by our gallant officers and soldiers, but there are so many brave men wearing Uncle Sam's uniform in the east that to attempt to keep track of the many acts of heroism would be to attempt the impossible. It is that spirit of indomitable dash which comes to the surface whenever it is necessary that makes the typical American soldier practically invincible.

One of the Norwegians who accompanied the Wellman arctic expedition is reported as saying that he kept his spirits up by reciting Ibsen's poetry to himself. The sort of gloom that could be illuminated by Ibsen's verse must have been opaque indeed.

WAUCONDA.

Harry Fuller transacted business in Chicago Monday.

Supervisor Cooke is spending the week at Waukegan.

Editor Carr made a business trip to Chicago Wednesday.

A. R. Johnson of Chicago spent a few days of last week with friends in our village.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard entertained relatives from Crystal Lake the first of the week.

Mrs. Tidmarsh and son Willie of Elgin are spending a few days with relatives in our village.

Mrs. Harry Grantham, who has been spending a few days with relatives in Chicago, returned home Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Blank, jr., of Chicago are spending the week with relatives and friends in our village.

Merritt McCracken, who has been spending the summer at Meadow View, returned to Chicago Monday.

Herbert Van Natta is again a resident of our village and will soon enter the employ of J. D. Spencer making sorghum.

Mr. and Mrs. Beatty and family, who have been occupying Miss Mary Glynche's village residence during the summer months, returned to Chicago Tuesday.

Quite a noticeable change in the atmosphere the past few days and instead of wearing crash suits the inhabitants think an overcoat quite comfortable.

Take in the club dance tonight at Ficke's hall, Lake Zurich. The affair is under the auspices of the Barrington Social and Athletic club, which alone is a guarantee of a good time.

Emmitt Reiley is now marshal of our village, entering upon his duties Tuesday morning. C. L. Pratt resigned the position with expectation of securing employment in the city in the near future.

Our school opened again Monday with a good attendance as usual and the same corps of teachers, viz: Prof. Orton Hubbard, advanced room; Miss Lillian Tidmarsh, intermediate; Miss Estella Grace, primary.

J. H. Forbes lost his horse Monday morning. He drove it Sunday night and from appearances the horse felt alright, but it appears to have never regained its strength since the sick spell a few months ago.

Mr. Spencer informs us that the sorghum mill is nearly ready for work and within few days will turn out the finest syrup ever made in our village or vicinity. Don't forget the Wauconda mill when sugar cane is ready. Satisfaction guaranteed.

A party of our young people have been occupying Camp Thomas for a week's outing and they report a very pleasant time. Saturday afternoon and evening they tendered a reception to a few of their intimate friends and treated them to a most bountiful supper, after which music and a general good time was the order of the evening.

The best and last event of the season is the Mystic Workers' picnic at Harvard next Tuesday. Large preparations have been made for the occasion and nothing will be left undone to make the day one of enjoyment, to all. The program of the day will open with a parade at 10:30 and a prize will be given to the lodge having the largest per cent. in line. This will be followed by addresses by E. L. Downes, president of association; Edmund Jackson, supreme secretary of order; C. H. Ferguson, Rockford; R. C. Cowan, supreme vice-master; Rev. D. C. Dutton, Wauconda. Sports and all kinds of amusements in the afternoon. The principal feature will be a game of ball between the Harvards and Algonquin Indians. There will also be a balloon ascension and parachute drop.

Wm. Prehm is putting the finishing touches on H. Karsten's new house.

John Brommelkamp and John Hatje of Barrington were in town Monday.

The rains this week have been very beneficial to the farmers in this section.

John Welch has returned to Wauconda, after a brief clerkship in Seip's store.

Mr. Oaks of Wauconda was a business caller the first of the week in our village.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ficke and Mrs. Hammer visited at Ivanhoe the first of the week.

F. G. Fox has returned from Chicago and will go into the employ of Harris & Foley.

Charles M. White is the name of the new station agent and we wish him success here.

The farmers hereabouts are taking their sugar cane to the mill now in large quantities.

The harvest party last Saturday was well attended and everyone present enjoyed themselves.

Herman Prehm has been named as a grand juror for the October term of court at Waukegan.

Our village is now almost deserted, and the summer boarders have returned to the cities.

Mr. Matthews and family, who have been occupying Oakley hall for the summer, returned to Chicago Thursday.

Arnold Schauble of Barrington was here Wednesday repairing some machinery at the factory for C. H. Patten.

The roads between here and Barrington are to be gravelled this fall. This a good move in the right direction and people that travel this road are well pleased.

The dance to be given tonight by the Barrington Social and Athletic club at the Ficke's hall will be an affair worth attending. Everybody invited. Turn out and help the boys add another success to their long list of social events.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

A WELL KNOWN VIRGINIA EDITOR Had Almost Given Up, but Was Brought Back to Perfect Health by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

From the Times, Hillsville, Va. I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow-sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man to-day and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. R. MOORE. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

"What's the matter, old man? Been losing on wheat?" "No, not that, forgot to take Rocky Mountain Tea last night. Wife said I would be sick today. Ask your druggist."

Resolutions.

Great indignation was expressed by Mr. Filbert's friends at the dying utterances of the wounded robber, reflecting on the good name of the bank cashier. The following communication was issued in connection with the matter:

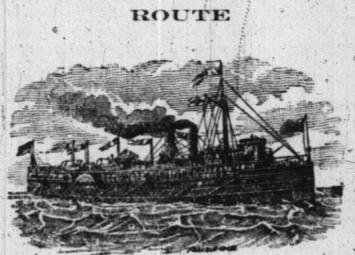

"We, the undersigned citizens of Palatine, having known Frederick J. Filbert for many years, hereby protest to the press and to the public in general against the statement of his assailant, Walter Lawton, that Mr. Filbert was the means of breaking up his home in New York. It is the defamation of a man of good character and a source of annoyance and great injustice to his wife and family. Mr. Filbert has for years been an earnest worker in church affairs and his home life has been of the happiest."

The statement was signed by A. S. Olms, mayor; C. H. Patten, president Palatine bank; F. B. Hardin, pastor M. E. church; C. W. Ost, C. D. Taylor, J. G. Horstmann, R. M. Putnam and August Kimmet, trustees; H. C. Matthei, postmaster; Ernest Beutler, justice of the peace; G. H. Arps, agent Chicago & North-Western railway; P. H. Matthei, H. W. Harmening, W. R. Comfort, G. H. Anderson, H. F. Batterman, Robert Mosser, W. L. Hicks, James Wilson, F. A. Keyes, H. W. Meyer, R. E. McCabe and Milan Reynolds, deputy coronor.

Private information from Cape Town to New York wholesale merchants indicates that the war scare in the Transvaal is having a serious effect on trade generally. Shipments from New York during the past week to British South Africa barely reached $150,000. This is hardly half the amount of the exports from New York during any week under ordinary conditions. Steamers now leaving for African ports carry considerable lumber and manufactured iron, but only a limited amount of other customary effects.

Canada seems to have made good use of the Halifax award of $5,500,000 paid by the United States, having devoted it to fishing bounties. The latest Dominion report of the department of marine and fisheries shows that from 1882 to 1897 Canada has paid $2,521,900 in fishing bounties, while the catch in the last year recorded in the report, that of 1897, was the largest in the history of the department, being of the value of $22,783,546, the bounty upon which was $157,504. Germany also is now preparing to develop the fishing fleets of the Baltic and North seas and has spent some $3,000,000 in opening up fishing harbors. In France in 1897 the sum of $124,187 was spent upon fishing vessels, and Japan last year voted $75,000 per annum to develop its deep sea fisheries.

THE PLANO is the simplest and best.

The following are a few of the points why the Plano machines are the best over other makes:

In the Plano Jones Lever Binder the knottter contains only 16 pieces, while the Deering has 44, McCormick 28 and the Champion 33. It is the only binder put up with lever power, carrying spring, friction clutch reel and jointless main frame. The main drive wheel is two inches wider than any other made, consequently the machine will not mire or settle down in soft or loose ground.

Farmers should examine this machine before placing their order.

LOVE AND LAW.

By the author of
BONNY'S LOVERS.

"Possession is nine points of the law," I answered. "I am afraid it will be a difficult matter to eject Mr. Branscombe unless we can produce the colonel's will."
"Which we cannot?"—"Which we cannot at present?"
"Then nothing can be done?"
"I fear nothing, excepting to apprise the heir-at-law of the possible existence of the will made in Miss Branscombe's favor, and to warn him that it may any day be brought forward."
"Humph!" growled the rector. "And if it should never turn up—if, as I begin to suspect, there has been some deep-laid plot—some rascality of which Master Charlie is, as usual, the head and front, what then?"
"Then," I replied, "Master Charlie will remain in possession."
"And Nona will be a beggar," said Mr. Heathcote sadly. "Poor child, poor child!"
"Is Miss Branscombe at Forest Lea?" I ventured to inquire presently.
"No; she and Miss Elmslie are with us. Mr. Charlie's bachelor establishment was hardly a fitting home for her, and we thought it advisable that she should leave the neighborhood at present—at all events—until we had heard your opinion."
"In the circumstances I should advise Miss Branscombe to retire," I said gravely.
"Yes, yes, exactly," assented the rector. "In the circumstances—as I now understand them—she must of course leave the neighborhood."
We drove on for some time after this in silence. I was occupied with rose-colored dreams of a future for the dispossessed heiress—a future which had evidently not entered into the rector's calculations, from the same point of view at all events.
"If the fellow were not what he is, the poor colonel's original plan would have settled the difficulty," muttered Mr. Heathcote, as he touched up his stout cob. "But he was right—he was right; it would be a sacrifice not to be thought of—not to be thought of."
As he spoke we were passing the combe showed me a half-startled, surprised glance of recognition—a swift, shy blush, in return for the grave bow with which I acknowledged hers. The meeting had upset the rector's equanimity as much as it had mine. He spoke no more until we turned in at the rectory gate.

CHAPTER XII.
Nona was not in the drawing room before dinner. Miss Elmslie was, and received me with tearful cordiality. "It's a sad change," she whispered, "especially for the dear girl. But she doesn't seem to feel it. I really believe she is glad that Charlie is at Forest Lea." And then she asked the inevitable question, which had come to be almost an exasperating one to me—"Any news of the will, Mr. Fort?"
"None," I answered; "its loss is as great a mystery as ever."
It was not until we were seated at the dinner table that Nona slipped quietly in, and took a place by Miss Elmslie opposite to mine. There was a consciousness in her manner, a deprecating timidity, as she met my eyes, which confirmed my fears. She was lost to me, and the Gordian knot of the Forest Lea difficulty was cut by her hand, in a way for which I at least ought not to have been wholly unprepared.
The rector was called away on some parochial business after dinner, and I, not caring to join the ladies in my perturbed condition of mind, slipped out through the open dining room window and wandered about the old-fashioned rectory garden, and presently out into the green lanes, sweet with the perfume of late-blooming honeysuckle and silent in the hush of evening's rest from toil and labor.
The rector was called away on some parochial business after dinner, and I, not caring to join the ladies in my perturbed condition of mind, slipped out through the open dining room window and wandered about the old-fashioned rectory garden, and presently out into the green lanes, sweet with the perfume of late-blooming honeysuckle and silent in the hush of evening's rest from toil and labor.
Love and courtship were certainly in the air of that corner of Midshire, and I was always condemned by some malicious fate to be, not an actor in the sweet drama, but a listener and an intruder. For the third time since my introduction to the neighborhood I encountered a pair of lovers.
They were leaning against a gate, looking into a meadow, hidden from which had passed—bless the groom and the lady's maid—possibly Plutus had as much to say in the matter as Cupid. Miss Woodward might have savings which the shrewd Londoner had scented. The man overtook me presently, as, lost in the intricacies of stable-yard and back entrance, I was trying to find my way back to the garden and lawn.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said, civilly. "That path leads to the kitchen, this"—opening a gate—"will take you to the side entrance into the hall."
"Thank you," I answered. "Good night."
"Good night, Mr. Fort."
I looked up, surprised at the sudden change of tone and manner. The man's eyes met mine.
"Widdrington!" I had almost exclaimed, but that his hand touched mine on the gate latch and checked the word.
"You left this in the dog cart this afternoon, sir," he said, handing me a letter. "I picked it up when I cleaned the trap."
I took the paper from him and passed on with another good night. My mind was in a wild state of alarm; Widdrington was on the track of the secret—nay, with Woodward under his influence, the secret was probably already his. How could I warn Nona—how save her?
The opportunity was not far to seek. When I entered the drawing-room Miss Branscombe was there alone, save for Mrs. Heathcote's sleeping presence. The rector's wife lay back in her comfortable arm-chair by the fire, blissfully asleep. Nona sat by the tea-table in the opposite corner, her soft-shaded lamp the one spot of light in the room. Her elbow rested on the table, her cheek on her hand, her pale, sweet face grave and sad. The eyes she raised at my entrance fell almost immediately, and a deep flush, painful in its intensity, spread over cheek, neck and brow.
"You will have some tea?" she said, beginning to arrange her cups with hands which trembled so much that she was forced to desist. Then she looked me resolutely in her lap and looked up at me, making, as I could see, a strong effort at composure. "Mr. Fort," she went on, in almost a whisper, "you are angry with me; and you have been so kind, I am sorry that you cannot forgive me now that everything has come right. And I do want to tell you how thoroughly I understand and thank you for all your kind thought for me, although I am afraid I must have seemed ungrateful in opposing you, and—and—all."
I bowed. I was afraid to trust myself to speak just then. And yet the precious moments were flying! Mrs. Heathcote stirred in her chair.
"I wish you would believe that this—as things are now, I mean—is the very happiest thing for me, as well as for her," she added, bending towards me in her earnestness.
"I hope you will be very happy," I said, conquered by the sweet humility of her appeal, whilst the words seemed to scorch my heart.
"I am very happy," she answered tently. "Why do you speak in the future? I shall never regret—never. I could never grow to be so sordid, and I should like to be sure that you are not vexed about it. We all owe so much to your kindness in those sad days." The rosy color flamed in her cheeks again. "I should like to feel that we are friends."
"Why not?" I responded, with uncontrolled bitterness. "It is not for me to prescribe to Miss Branscombe what is for her happiness. It is to be presumed that she is herself the best in this case, perhaps, the only—judge."
The blushes faded and left her white as a lily. Something in her look made me feel as if I had struck her a blow.
"Forgive me," I cried. "Miss Branscombe—Nona"—as she raised her shaking hands and covered her face—"what have I done—what have I said?"
And then—I do not know how it happened; I have never been able to reduce the next supreme moments to any coherent memory—but her dear head was on my shoulder, my arms were round her as I dropped upon my knees by her side, and without a spoken word I knew that neither Charlie Branscombe nor any other barrier stood between me and my darling. She was mine, and mine only, and the gates of Paradise had opened to me at last.

"FORGIVE ME," I CRIED. "MISS BRANSCOMBE—NORA."

Forest Lea woods, which here swept down to the edge of green turf bordering the road. From one of the glade-like openings two figures emerged in front of our carriage, sauntering slowly along on the grass, too deeply absorbed in conversation apparently to be aware of our approach. One—a slim girlish figure, dressed in black garments, with graceful, fair head bowed like a lily on its stalk—was, as I knew at once, Nona's; and it needed not the rector's impatient exclamation and sudden, quick jerk of the reins to tell me that the slight, almost boyish figure by her side was that of her cousin, Charlie Branscombe.
In an instant the half-scotched serpent of jealousy was roused again and stung me to the heart. All my old doubts and suspicions rushed back like a flood. Fool that I had been ever to dream of hope in the face of what I had seen and knew.
There was something of mockery in the elaborate bow, returned by a curt nod, with which Mr. Charles Branscombe greeted the rector; and, as I read it, a gleam of triumph on the handsome fair face in which I recognized the fatal beaute de diable I had heard described.
A passing glimpse of Miss Brans-me until I was close upon them by a great tangle of traveler's joy, wreathing a jutting bush of wildbrier rose at the corner of the hedge. It was too late for me to retire when I came upon the couple, so there was nothing for it but a discreet cough, which I had the presence of mind to set up for the emergency. The woman turned hastily at the sound, and to my surprise I saw that it was Woodward, Nona's maid.

To my surprise, I say, for there was something in the staid settled plainness of the maid's appearance which was incongruous, to my fancy, with lovers and love-making. Decidedly I should not have given Woodward credit for having a sweetheart. Yet there she was, keeping a twilight tryst amongst the clematis and the honeysuckle, like any maid of eighteen. And if anything could have added to my astonishment it was the discovery that the swain whose arm was about her waist, whose head was bent down over hers, was the rector's smart, new groom! There must, I decided, be something more in the middle-aged maid than met the eye, since she had carried off the prize from all her young and pretty rivals. Possibly, I thought, with a little contempt for the passion

"God Bless Our Home."
"In a home in the country, not far from town," says the Catlettsburg (Ky.) Independent, "there may be seen quite a pile of sewing lying on the floor, nearly in the middle of the room, that has been undisturbed for more than six months. At that time the head of the house wanted a chair, and, seeing but one handy, he dumped to the floor the sewing which lay upon it. His wife asked him to pick it up. He said he wouldn't do it. She told him, as he threw it there, it could remain until he got ready to pick it up. She would never touch it. And there it remains, a memorial to an incompatibility of disposition."

NEGRO MINERS SHOT DOWN.

Bloody Conflict in the Streets of Carterville, Ill.

RENEWAL OF THE OLD STRIFE.

Bad Feeling Between the White and Colored Miners Results in a Deadly Battle—Blacks Seem to Have Been the Aggressors in the Fray.

In a pitched battle between negro and white miners, fought in the city's main street of Carterville, Ill., Sept. 17, five of the colored men were killed and two others wounded. The town is practically under martial law, the streets being patrolled by state troops, rushed from nearby towns.
Rumor says several wounded white men were carried off by their friends, but there is no definite knowledge of this.
Two colored men came into the city in the morning, intending, as they claimed, to go to the county seat to attend church services. Words passed between these men and white miners, and the colored men left for the mine, claiming as they left that they would return with men who knew how to shoot.
Soon after thirteen negroes arrived from the Brush mines. They passed through the city and to the depot, which is situated on the eastern part of the town, without being molested or without any hostile demonstration being made. At the depot the negroes renewed the war of words, and fired one shot, the shot piercing the fleshy part of a small boy's hand.
White miners appeared on the scene, and the negroes at once threw rocks at the men, who started down the main street of the city. They had not gone far before they were re-enforced by about fifteen heavily armed men, who at once opened fire on the negroes. The negroes started to run, and were pursued by the miners. One block from the business center three negroes fell dead, literally riddled with bullets.
Still the pursuit was continued, and when only one block from the police station another negro was shot dead. A little further on Sim Cummins fell, mortally wounded. Still the pursuit was made until not a negro was in the streets of the city, all who lived through the few moments of carnage being safe within the village of Greenville, which surrounds the shaft.
Gov. Tanner was notified and at once made arrangements to send troops to the scene. Further trouble is not feared.
The militia arrested eighteen white miners who were returning from Herrin, they being employed in the shaft there, who had been in Carterville. They were lodged in the Williamson county jail. The prisoners are accused of being in the mob that killed the negroes. They were charged with murder, and Col. Bennett has sent a detachment of soldiers to Marion to guard them lest they escape.
The following are the dead in the battle of Sept. 17: T. J. Floyd, Sid Cummins, Huz Bradley, Will Prentiss and John Black.
Willis Carney, Lem Shadowen, Will Kelly, Wesley Shadowen, J. N. Muley, Charles Shadowen, Math Walker, John Wallace and Elmer James were arrested by Deputy Sheriff Odum and taken to Marion. It is claimed the prisoners were engaged in Sunday's battle. All are miners.
The preliminary trial of the eighteen persons arrested on the road from Carterville to Herrin, for alleged participation in the Carterville riot, resulted in the discharge of all the prisoners.

SUFFERED 25 YEARS.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, Congressman Botkin says:
"My Dear Doctor—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Pe-ru-na Congressman Botkin, of Winfield, Kan. and Man-a-lin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Pe-ru-na is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections."

J. D. Botkin.

The most common form of summer catarrh is catarrh of the stomach. This is generally known as dyspepsia. Congressman Botkin was a victim of this disease twenty-five years. Pe-ru-na cures these cases like magic. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., for a free book.

The Burmese.

The Burmese will sacrifice any prospect of money-making to go to a feast. These are called pives, and often the entertainment is elaborate. I remember going to one in Upper Burma. There was a good deal of dancing, but neither the host nor his guest danced; that would have been undignified. The dancers were paid, and they twirled lazily or jumped excitedly as occasion required. Most of the time, however, was spent in chatter and smoking. Smoking is the only thing at which the Burmese are industrious. They start smoking at the early age of 3, and they smoke themselves in the next world. Girls smoke quite as assiduously as the men, and as the cigars are very big many a pretty mouth is strained to accommodate a giant cheroot—Fall Mall Magazine.

Birds Not Afraid of Wasps.

Mr. Murray, a Scottish naturalist, in a paper on the habits of wasps, tells how a blackbird will stand at the side of a hanging wasps' nest and deliberately tear it in pieces in order to get at the larvae, apparently undisturbed by the swarms of angry insects, whose stings instantly put to flight the human curiosity-seeker who ventures near to watch the demolition.

PROGRESS.

With time, comes progress and advancement in all lines of successfully conducted enterprises. Success comes to those only who have goods with superior merit and a reputation. In the manufacture of laundry starch for the last quarter of a century J. C. Hubinger has been the peer of all others and today is placing on the market the finest laundry starch ever offered the public under our new and original method.

Ask your grocer for a coupon book which will enable you to get the first two large 10 cent packages of his new starch, RED CROSS, TRADE MARK brand, also two of the children's Shakespeare pictures painted in twelve beautiful colors as natural as life, or the Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, all absolutely free.

All grocers are authorized to give ten large packages of RED CROSS STARCH, with twenty of the Shakespeare pictures or ten of the Twentieth Century Girl Calendars, to the first five purchasers of the Endless Starch Chain Book. This is one of the grandest offers ever made to introduce the RED CROSS laundry starch, J. C. Hubinger's latest invention.

TOLD BY FIGURES.

One of the oldest cannon in existence has just been fished out of the bottom of the Thames river near Twickenham. This archaic cannon is 28 inches in length and about 4 1/2 inches in diameter, being made of bars of iron strengthened with hoops of the same metal welded together. Compared with one of our modern "peace-makers," as they are ironically called, one of these old cannon is a mere child's toy. They were originally mounted on rude blocks of wood, sitting in a sort of socket. Their discharge was a very undecided feature in their operation, and the death-dealing articles fired at random from their mouths were round stones and rough globes of iron.

Music Kills a Horse.

Music caused the death of a beautiful 3-year-old filly at Florence, Ala., the other day. A farmer drove his valuable young mare into town, and as he was driving up the principal street a brass band suddenly struck up its blatant music. The mare had never heard any sound like that before and so startled was she that she dropped dead in the shafts of the trap. A veterinary surgeon who examined the carcass declared that the mare had died of heart failure, due to excitement, caused by the sound of the unaccustomed music of the brass band.—Roanoke News.

TRACING CIRCULATOR OF SPURIOUS COIN.

After a "Shover of the Queer" Beginning and Ending in Cincinnati—Roses Worked by the Gang—Pose as Shopkeepers.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: "The tracing of counterfeiters back to the 'shover' is curious and exciting work," said an ex-government employe. "One day back in the seventies a bank clerk in Cincinnati detected a 'queer' twenty-dollar bill in the deposit of a small retail grocer. He sent for me and I started to work. I found that the grocer had received the bill from a shoe dealer, who had it from a dentist, who had it from somebody else, and so on, until I finally traced it to an invalid woman who had used it to pay her physician. When questioned she said the money had been sent to her by her brother, who lived in New Orleans. I looked up her brother's pedigree and was certain I had my man. He had a bad record, was the proprietor of a dive, and was just the sort of person likely to be a confederate of counterfeiters. I came here with the handcuffs in my pocket, but as things turned out I was a little premature. The man proved to my complete satisfaction that he had received the money as rent for a small house he owned in Pittsburgh, Pa. That was discouraging, but I couldn't give up after going so far, and took the next train for Pittsburgh. The tenant of the house turned out to be a traveling oculist, who spent most of his time on the road. He was then away in the west, but I saw him on his return and he at once recognized the bill. It had been given him by a patient in Cincinnati, the very point from which I started. The patient was a boss carpenter. I got his address from the oculist and made a bee line for the city. I had a premonition that something very strange was going to happen, and I wasn't disappointed. The carpenter was an honest old fellow and told me without hesitation that he had received the bill from Mr. — for repairing his barn. Mr. — was the small grocer in whose bank deposit the counterfeit had turned up. I flew for his store as fast as a cab could carry me and found it closed. He had skipped. Afterward it was shown beyond question that he was the regular agent of a gang. His shop was a mere blind. That the bill which he gave the carpenter should get back again into his own till after traveling all around the continent was one of those miracles of chance for which there is no explanation."

ETHICS FOR TYPEWRITER GIRL.

The New York Christian Advocate, the eastern organ of the Methodist Episcopal church, has created a sensation in religious circles here by advice it recently gave to an inquirer. "Suppose," wrote the applicant for information, "that a young woman employed as a stenographer has to write what she knows to be flat contradictions of truth, what she knows is meant to deceive and the object of the deception is to take pecuniary advantage of others. Also that sometimes profane language and language of questionable character on other moral grounds is dictated, should she write it or modestly decline to do so?" To this query the Advocate makes answer: "We know an instance of a young woman who declined to write profane language and lost her situation in consequence. We highly approve her course. She may be a machine in a certain sense, but if she professes to be a Christian or a modest woman she ought not to write anything which no one having any respect for Christianity or modesty would utter in the presence of a modest woman. But on the question of flat contradictions of truth in the way of business statements; it is quite possible that a stenographer may be altogether too sensitive. How does she know what view her employer may take of what seems to be a flat contradiction of truth? Is he to explain to her all his business affairs and make known to her all elements involved in every transaction in which profit and loss are concerned? With regard to his business dealings she is but a machine, and her ears are not polluted by statements of fact or otherwise. Her mind should be sufficiently under control not to reason about anything that he dictates, except to direct attention to verbal or other mistakes in composition. But no stenographer, male or female, should write things, which, passing through their ears into their minds, and to the machine through their fingers, could not but defile. The stenographer need not make an issue. If a man happens to use profane language let her furnish the copy without the profane language. Then if an issue is made it will be by the man's insisting upon it, and if he does insist upon it she will do well to take her departure, trusting in the 'Power that makes for righteousness.'"

DEWEY'S VICTORY.

Dewey Will See His Famous Battle Re-fought at Chicago in October.

The Battle of Manila, Wabash avenue and Hubbard court, Chicago, surpasses all previous and combined attempts at battle reproductions. Every visitor to Chicago should see this wonderful piece of art mechanism and reality. The night storm at sea, the night fring of the Spanish forts, the Ardois night signals, Manila Bay by moonlight, exploding mines, sunrise on victory, terrific roar of the guns from the American fleet, the entire battle described by men who fought behind the guns at Manila. This wonderful exhibition is open every day, Sunday included, from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. Above all, do not miss Manila when you go to Chicago.

Court That Travels About.

An interesting story comes from Indian Territory regarding a United States court there, judge, attorney, clerk, sheriff and marshal, with all necessary assistants and paraphernalia, which travels from place to place over the territory, holding forth as occasion demands. This novel institution is in the northern section of the territory, where the towns are few and far apart, and where it is cheaper for the court to go to the people than for the people to go to the court. Much money is saved the people each year by the movable outfit. This is a small house on wheels, resembling a mover's wagon, in which the court travels, and in which the court records are kept. Here, also, in towns where there are no better accommodations, court is held and justice dispensed. It is claimed that criminals can be reached in this manner more conveniently than in the old way, as it is often dangerous to conduct criminals from town to town without a heavy guard, rescuing parties being numerous. With the court is a complete cooking outfit, presided over by a first-class culinary artist, who sees to it that the court does not want for food even if it does want for some of the other things which are common in civilized communities.

Tall Women in England.

The Duchess of Portland is the tallest woman in England. She married the duke in 1839. She was then Miss Dallas Yorke. The duchess devotes most of her time to the furtherance of temperance work.

The Same Thing.

Mrs. Binks (sick of it)—Really, John, how can you bear to spend your time whip—whip—whipping at the stream all day long and never a single fish taking the least notice of you? John—Ah, but think of the delight, Maria, when you do get a fish! Lor' bless us, my dear, have you forgotten the day when you hooked me?—Punch.

DIZZY SPELLS.

COLOMA, Wis., April 14, 1898. The free sample of Zaegel's Swedish Essence of Life you so kindly sent me in response to my letter arrived, and was prepared and used according to your directions. I am pleased to say the medicine acts admirably in my case. Since taking it my general health has wonderfully improved, and the dizzy feeling in my head is entirely gone, enabling me to think and act with a clear mind. MRS. C. ROCK.

Two Week's Treatment Free.

The great blood purifier Zaegel's Swedish Essence of Life is to be given away free to readers of this paper. CAPABLE MOTHERHOOD

MRS. CORA GILSON, Yates, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Two years ago I began having such dull, heavy, dragging pains in my back, menses were profuse and painful and was troubled with leucorrhoea. I took patent medicines and consulted a physician, but received no benefit and could not become pregnant.

"Seeing one of your books, I wrote to you telling you my troubles and asking for advice. You answered my letter promptly and I followed the directions faithfully, and derived so much benefit that I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. I now find myself pregnant and have begun its use again. I cannot praise it enough."

MRS. PERLEY MOULTON, Thetford, Vt., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine. I took several bottles of it before the birth of my baby and got along nicely. I had no after-pains and am now strong and enjoying good health. Baby is also fat and healthy."

MRS. CHAS. GERBIG, 304 South Monroe St., Baltimore, Md., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was unable to become pregnant; but since I have used it my health is much improved, and I have a big baby boy, the joy and pride of our home."

She Likes Pretty Clothes.

Holland's young queen has a decided fondness for pretty clothes. A large assortment of dress goods was sent to the palace the other day and her mother proceeded to choose for the queen some alpaca and plain material, but Wilhelmina flatly refused to abide by the selection and chose figured silks and brilliant dress materials even for morning wear. She said that her mother might make use of the plain stuffs if she liked them, but she wanted something prettier.

A Word to Mothers.

Mothers of children affected with croup or a severe cold need not hesitate to administer Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It contains no opiate or narcotic in any form and may be given as confidently to the babe as to an adult. The great success that has attended its use in the treatment of colds and croup has won for it the approval and praise it has received throughout the United States and in many foreign lands. For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

Don't expect everybody to be your friend in this world. There are people in this world who rather see you make a flat failure in life than see you successful. There are people whom you have put yourself to trouble and expense to serve that would rather speak evil than good of you. Merit is not always respected even by ones kith and kin. Remember that if you have burdens laid upon your shoulders to bear then patiently and in silence. The approving conscience will be an ever faithful friend, a monitor we can always afford to heed in sunshine or shade.

Mr. and Mrs. Waterman Entertain.

Last Thursday afternoon and evening Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Waterman of Barrington Center opened their beautiful and spacious home to neighbors and friends in honor of Rev. T. E. Ream, who bids farewell to the people of that vicinity. In the afternoon a few of the older people, who could not be present in the evening, gathered to enjoy an old-fashioned visit, but it was not until evening that the great majority of people came. There were nearly a hundred present, coming not only from Barrington Center and vicinity, but also from Dundee, Elgin and Barrington. In addition to the purely social part of the gathering, games and singing were indulged in to the delight of all. Then Mrs. Waterman and her friends served a delightful lunch to all present.

Rev. Ream showed, not only by his words, but by his looks as well that he thoroughly enjoyed the occasion. When he bid them all good-bye many regrets were expressed because of his departure from them, and with trembling voices wished him Godspeed.

Obituary.

Gerhardt H. Lageschulte, who died on September 14 after four days of suffering at his home near Barrington, was born on November 28, 1828 at Schladen, Westphalia, Germany and was 70 years, 9 months and 16 days old at the time of his demise.

Mr. Lageschulte came to America in 1865 and made his home at Dunkler's Grove and in the same year became a christian and joined the Evangelical church. About two years later he moved to a farm near Barrington and here married Elizabeth Muller, who died several years ago. Their union was blessed with four sons, one of whom preceded his father in death.

He leaves to mourn his death three sons, six step-children, two brothers and one sister.

Mr. Lageschulte was a hard-working man and a careful father. He was true to his God, his church and his duty to his neighbor until called away by death. His children lose in him a father who sacrificed his comfort for their well-being.

The funeral was held Sunday, Rev. Strickfaden officiating.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following is a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Barrington Sept. 22, 1899:

D. A. Pierce, J. Elneff.
H. K. Brockway, P. M.

Edith Hager Surprised.

A surprise party was held Saturday evening on Miss Edith Hager and a good time was had by all present. The following were present:

Misses.	Messrs.
Emma Meier	Fred Behnhoff
Lydia Behnhoff	Wm. Rieckle
Emilite Pawelskie	George Behnhoff
Anna Becker	Gustav Blum
Frieda Gottschalk	Richard Strouback
Sophie Schrage	Harry Kirschner
Estella Kirschner

Games and social amusements were indulged in, after which all partook of an elegant lunch.

Colorado Women Legislators.

Addison sought to frighten some progressive and strong minded English dames of his time out of their interest in political affairs by telling them that such a course would make them home-ly. Had Addison lived in the present time and visited some of the feminine members of the Colorado legislature he could not have honestly advanced that argument. In the main they are handsome women, whose faces beam with intelligence as they talk of governmental principles and political issues. Nor does their activity in affairs of state lessen their interest in domestic concerns. A new cooking recipe, a bit of information about home decoration or a pattern sheet of the latest fashionable gown interests them just as much as though they were not stateswomen.

Some of the most beneficent laws on the Colorado statute books were introduced by these women legislators. Dr. Mary Barry, a talented young physician of Pueblo, introduced and secured the passage of a measure which provided that chattel mortgages must have the signature of the wife; that all property acquired by a man or a woman after marriage should be a community property, not to be disposed of or mortgaged by either without the signature of the other. Mrs. Frances S. Lee, the mother of five children, introduced bills pertaining to the proper lighting and ventilation of school-rooms and improvements along municipal and social lines. Mrs. Wright introduced an antichild labor and compulsory education bill; an amendment to the law for the commitment of girls to the state industrial school, which provides that a matron shall accompany the sheriff and girl prisoner to the school; a bill to prevent evils in the placing out of orphans and a pre-cinct local option bill.

Thus it may be seen that, while they studied and discussed all measures considered by the Colorado legislature and served on important committees, the bills they introduced show especial interest in education, childhood and womanhood, nor do they appear to have lost any of their womanly attractiveness by reason of their participation in public affairs.

It will be recalled that the Boers were not represented in The Hague peace conference. They will probably now remind the world that they never promised not to use the dum-dum bullets.

According to the Frenchman's code of ethics, as amply illustrated by recent events in France, he may do any kind of a dishonorable thing to "preserve his honor."
