The harvest supper given by the Ladies' Aid society in the Methodist church parlors Tuesday night was a decided success. The rooms were prettily decorated with vines, fruits and vegetables and was a credit to those who did the work. The supper was good, as usual, and there was scarcely anything left after all had dined. The ladies netted nearly $30 from the affair. An interesting program was given after the supper.

Attend the Methodist annual conference now in session at Garfield Park church. This affords a splendid opportunity for our people who care about it to see the workings of the Methodist conference. The general conference of last May removed the time limit and now the presiding elders say there is more worrying than in any previous year. The prediction is that in four years' time the general conference will go back to the three or five year limit.

Married at St. Paul's Evangelical church, Thursday, October 4, 1900, Mr. Henry Daverman and Miss Lizzie Garms, Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister officiating. The groom is a young man well known here and is a hard worker and industrious. The bride is a daughter of Wm. Garms and is a young lady who is popular in her circle of friends. After the ceremony at the church a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where many friends gathered to feast and make merry.

Henry H. Davermann, father of Mrs. G. H. A. Thomas, died last Thursday. The funeral services will be held at the home of Conrad Schroeder Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and the remains shipped to Graceland cemetery, Chicago, for interment. The deceased was nearly 77 years of age and was born in Germany. He came to this country 55 years ago. He was on his way to visit his brother north of town when taken ill and remained at the home of Mr. Schroeder.

Miss Cocroft, president of the Physical Culture society of Chicago, will lecture in the M. E. church Thursday evening, Oct. 11, subject, "Poise, Mental, Moral and Vital, or The Harmonious Woman." The lecture will be illustrated. The press speaks highly in her praise. Miss Cocroft's Josephine gown allows full play for the muscles and shows to an advantage the effect of a well developed physique. All are invited. While the lecture is free a collection for the incidentals of the church will be taken.

Republican Rally.

A big republican rally will be held in Battermann's hall next Thursday night. The meeting will be preceded by a torchlight procession and Congressman George Edmund Foss and Assistant United States Attorney Clark J. Tisdell will make addresses. Mr. Foss was elected congressman from this district in 1896 and since that time he has gained more than national distinction. He was placed at the head of the navy committee after the serious illness of Congressman Boutelle and has served in this capacity with wonderful adeptness. Our German friends will remember that Congressman Foss was highly honored by Kaiser William by being received on board his own ship and given special privileges in inspecting their naval equipments. Congressman Foss should attract people for miles around as he can talk on the issues of the day, having taken part in the recent acts of the government. Clark J. Tisdell is one of the brightest and interesting young men in the campaign. Mr. Tisdell was elected to the Illinois legislature from this district in 1896, and while there he won the hearts of his constituents by standing for their interests at every opportunity. He resigned this office to enter United States Attorney's office in Chicago. Many people who heard him four years ago expressed a desire to hear him again.

The glee club will sing. Let everybody turn out and hear these distinguished speakers on the real issues of the campaign.

Village Board Meeting.

The Palatine village board met in regular session last Monday night and the meeting was exciting at times.

Trustee Taylor moved that Robertson avenue be graveled from Plum Grove avenue to Brockway street, and although the motion received no second, the matter occasioned an exciting discussion. The other trustees, however, agreed with the president that until the property owners filled in their curbs the gravel would not be forthcoming.

It was moved by Trustee Putnam, seconded by Trustee Taylor, that the chairman of the committee on police have the village cart, used by the lamp lighter, repaired. Motion prevailed.

The village clerk was instructed to notify various parties who were raising pigs in the village to keep pens in a sanitary condition or steps would be taken to compel them to do so. Instructions were also given to notify all property owners whose hedge extended over the walks, to trim same to the sidewalk line.

President Olms informed the trustees that the railroad company would put parks on both sides of the tracks between Bathwell streets and Plum Grove avenue, provided the village would stand part of the expense. The board took no action as the matter properly should be presented to the citizens. The following bills were ordered paid:

Never in any national campaign in the history of the country has there been presented such a long list of entries for the presidential stakes from which to "pick a winner." While most of those on the list will be found after Nov. 6 in the "also ran" column, the nominations were made with as much formality as if it were expected that each would poll several million votes. As election day is some little time hence, it is possible that there may be other entries before the list is closed. If there is any American citizen who has any notions as to the way this country ought to be run not embodied in the platforms upon which these several nominees stand, let him speak right up, and he will probably be provided with a new ticket.

In a recent issue of the New York Herald the Earl of Rosslyn tells in terms anything but complimentary what he thinks of Richard Harding Davis. This is in reply to a previous publication of Richard Harding Davis' opinion, which was in no respect flattering, of the Earl of Rosslyn in the latter's capacity as warrior and war correspondent. As Sir Lucius O'Trigger would say, it is a pretty fight as it stands, but it is not one in which the public at large has any considerable interest. It, however, gives The Herald an opportunity to remark upon the reprehensible manner in which some newspaper correspondents misinterpret their functions and neglect their obligations by giving their opinions and views of things instead of giving the news that they are sent to collect. The point is well taken, particularly as regards the work of most of the war correspondents in South Africa. But few of them have given us good descriptions of the battles fought there or of the movements of the contending armies. They have, rather, chosen to set themselves up as strategists and military critics on their own account, with results that have been confusing and unsatisfactory, to say the least. The same was true of the work of some of the correspondents in the Spanish-American war, nor was Richard Harding Davis above criticism in this respect while acting as a correspondent in Cuba. The best correspondents, whether they write in war or peace, are those who describe what they see and hear rather than those who tell what they think they ought to have seen and heard.

Agricultural reports indicate that there is a shortage in the California prune crop. If driven to it by extreme necessity, the people may be induced to forswear the prune habit.

It was perhaps fortunate for her that Atlantic City had her census taken while a good many shutters were up in so many other places.

The Galveston Disaster.

With all man's vaunted power, with all his science, with all his knowledge of the terrestrial ball upon which he spends his brief mundane existence, the elements are still his master. He may make the winds and the waves do his bidding, he may harness the electric currents and cause them to furnish light and propulsive energy and convey his messages over land and under sea, but he cannot abate the fury of the storm. The impotence of man as compared to the irresistible forces of nature is again illustrated in the terrible disaster which has overtaken the city of Galveston and a considerable section of the country bordering on the gulf of Mexico. The disaster is without doubt the worst that has ever been experienced in this country, not only in the number of dead and injured and the loss of property, but in the horror of the conditions following it—famine, pestilence and pillage.

It is highly creditable to the American people, whose sympathies are quickly stirred and who respond with alacrity to the call of distress, that efforts were promptly put forth to relieve these terrible conditions. Even before Galveston had sufficiently recovered from the stunning blow inflicted by the storm to appeal for aid preparations for the work of rescue and relief were begun all over the country, and as soon as her people made definite statement of their needs the universal sympathy took the form of prompt and generous assistance. This is no more than should have been expected, but it speaks well for the great heart of the American people and for the solidarity of the nation in the hour of peril and distress. Doubtless by this time all immediate and pressing cases of starvation and distress which it has been able to reach have been relieved, but the need of assistance will not soon be over, particularly in the outlying sections devastated by the storm. It will take the people of Galveston and its environs a long time after hunger has been appeased and shelter provided to again get upon their feet, and aid should not be discontinued with the passing of the first generous impulse. Tens of thousands of people have been made homeless by this greatest of our disasters, and their sources of subsistence for many months have been cut off. Months must elapse before a great majority of the survivors of the storm can emerge from a state of dependence. Let the good work be continued until the distress is fully relieved. There can be no worthier object of benevolence than the one which the sad picture of Texas' devastation presents.

According to Rudyard Kipling, the Mongolians are likely to overwhelm the world. Mr. Kipling must have been away on a vacation and failed to have heard about Chaffee and his brave boys.

An usher in a fashionable New York church stole $50,000 from his employers and got off with a reprimand from the court. This seems to be a rather reckless use of the church pull.

Couldn't Translate It.

We received a letter recently we were unable to read. We failed to determine the nationality of the writer. The only words we were able to make out were, "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cures Indigestion." Chas. E. Churchill.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic; got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. J. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week; had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without relief then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine I have ever tried." For sale by Chas. E. Churchill, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine is a newspaper for bright and intelligent people. It is made up to attract people who think. Is not neutral or colorless, constantly trimming in an endeavor to please both sides, but it is independent in the best sense of the word. It has pronounced opinions and is fearless in expressing them, but it is always fair to its opponents.

Matters of national or vital public interest get more space in THE TRIBUNE than in any other paper in the West.

For these reasons it is the newspaper you should read during the forthcoming political campaign.

THE TRIBUNE's financial columns never mislead the public.

Its facilities for gathering news, both local and foreign, are far superior to those of any other newspaper in the West.

It presents the news in as fair a way as possible, and lets its readers form their opinions.

While it publishes the most comprehensive articles on all news features, if you are busy the "Summary of THE DAILY TRIBUNE" published daily on the first page gives you briefly all the news of the day within one column.

Its sporting news is always the best, and its Sunday Pink Sporting Section is better than any sporting paper in the country.

It is the "cleanest" daily printed in the West.

The Market Day again has come and gone but not without its results. The attendance was a great deal larger than it was last month, people coming from many surrounding towns and the sellers found buyers. What could not be sold at private sale was sold at auction and all that was offered was sold except a few Dakota horses. The day is bound to be a great success in our village.

Orton Hubbard left for Chicago Monday where he will begin his course in surgery at the Northwestern Medical college. Mr. Hubbard who has been a resident of our village the greater part of his life, was the principal of our school for the past three years is meeting with excellent success and was again appealed to to take the school for another year but having decided to take up surgical work would not reconsider. He is starting upon a good profession and when once accomplished will be well provided for the rest of his life. We wish him the best of success.

James Blanck sr, one of our old residents passed away at his home in our village Monday morning at 9 o'clock, at the advanced age of 85 years. He had been very feeble for the past few years although in apparently good health, but the final stroke came and his age could not withstand. The funeral was held from the M. E. church at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, Rev. Dutton officiating, the remains being interred in the Wauconda cemetery. The deceased leaves a wife four sons and two daughters. James, the eldest, resides in the city and has a good position with a commission house; Mrs. Bessie Comstock also resides in the city; Andrew is a resident of our village making his home with his parent, and John, who also lives at home, is employed in The Leader office. Laura and Willard, the two younger children, are at home.

FROM OUR NEW POSSESSIONS.

SANTA CRUZ, P. I. Aug. 11, 1900.

Dear Brother:—I received your letter a few days ago and it found me in the hospital, but I was there only a few days and am alright now. We have been so busy marching the last few days that I have not found time to write to you.

We left Majajjay the first of August and went to Santa Cruz but we had gone only a few miles when we were attacked by the niggers and they made it pretty warm for us for a little while. We had a doctor killed and one man wounded out of this. We found three mules wounded. We found one nigger wounded after everything was over. The troops are having lots of trouble with them all over the Islands.

Norman Granger came back from Calamba last night where he has been in the hospital since last May. He is looking good now. I had a letter from

Geo. Walmsley a few days ago and one from Will Hodge. Walmsley is in Co. M. of the 36th and Hodge is in Co. E. of this regiment.

It is pretty warm in this town. It rains half of the time and we are having lots of guard duty. We are living fine here in town. Some days we get beefsteak for breakfast and supper and for dinner we get roast beef. We get mustard greens for dinner four times a week; if they only keep this up I think I will get fat. We can buy fish in this town for 15 cents apiece; one will make two fellows a good meal. Chickens 25c each; eggs are 5 for 10c.

Hoping this will find you as well as it leaves me, I remain,

Your brother,
OSCAR FLEMING,

PEPSIN SYRUP CO., Monticello, Ill.

Gentlemen—I feel it my duty to express to you my gratitude for what your remedy has done for me. I was completely run down with a complication of stomach disorders. For ten months I could not speak and was treated by three eminent physicians. One insisted upon operating on me, declaring nothing short of an operation for appendicitis would cure me. A friend induced me to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and from the first dose I began to improve and have not had any trouble since. I have gained 25 pounds in weight and am enjoying the very best of health. I never fail to say a good word for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for I know what it has done for me it will do for others.

Gratefully yours,

CHARLES CURRY.

In the Desert

A Story Illustrating the Horrors of War

By H. B. WELSH...

"You have come," he said, pantingly, his voice so weak she could hardly hear what he said. "It is good—brave—of you. If you knew all you would shrink from me—with loathing."

"No, no!" she said quickly. "None of us have a right to do that to another, Major Rayburn. If you have wronged me in any way, and are sorry for it, I forgive you freely, as I hope to be forgiven."

"God bless you for these words!" he said, weakly; "I have never known an hour's happiness since I vowed that, if you would not be mine, you should never be another man's. I am bad enough, God knows; but not so bad as that."

And then, weakly and pantingly, he told her all.

"I knew where the Khalifa was," he said. "I had a black boy who had deserted from his camp in my boy, and he told me. I felt confident Cleland would take that direction, and sooner or later fall into their clutches. And I believe he has done so. I believe he is still there, unless he is—dead."

He paused. Adrienne lifted her head to speak, but he went on rapidly:

"I have more to tell you. Wait! It is about myself. I wish to tell you that you may tell Doctor Margaret Crawford, who is in Cairo just now."

"I joined the army under a false name. My real name is, strangely enough, the same as that of the man I counted my enemy. It is Paul Story Cleland. We spell it with two 'l's.' We were not connected in any way with the other Clelands. It is a common enough name in Scotland."

"Dr. Margaret Crawford's father believed that he had done me a great wrong—he had altered a cheque of my father's which I went to cash. But I had committed a greater crime. I had forged my father's name to it! The shock killed my father. I left home, changed my name, joined the army, and worked my way upwards from the ranks."

"That is all. Will you tell Doctor Crawford? It is possible her father may have told her."

"I will tell her," whispered Adrienne. Her lips were as white as death. With a woman's intuition she had guessed the whole truth; the dying confession had been to her as a revelation.

"Will you also say once more—that you forgive me?" asked the dying man. His voice was almost gone now.

Adrienne bent her head for a moment; then suddenly she laid her hand on the fingers that were so restlessly toying with the white fringe of the coverlet.

"I forgive you," she said, slowly, and may God in His great mercy also grant you forgiveness. We all have need of that forgiveness, and of His great help."

A strange sound left the dying man's lips. It startled Adrienne, who beckoned to the nurse who had just entered the room. Ere the nurse had reached his bedside all was over. Paul Cleland, so long known as Phillip Rayburn, had gone into the presence of the only Judge who dare temper justice with mercy.

CHAPTER IX.

"Yield, you Christian dog! Become a Moslem, or, by Allah, you die! Look out there and see the end of those who have refused to bow to Islam or yield to the power of the Khalifa!"

Paul Cleland staggered feebly to the door of the miserable hut, in whose black and filthy depths he had spent the last few days, and looked out on the scene pointed out to him by his grim gaoler. It was one that might make the boldest shudder.

It was Metemneh—the corpse of a town. The mud houses were mere shells—broken beams, tattered curtains fluttering in the breeze, shattered roofs, through which the rain poured. Facing Cleland and his guardian stood a strange construction of wood—two upright posts with a cross-bar between. Below lay some brown palm-fibre rope, and mixed with it a decaying mass of human bones.

For what Cleland was looking upon was a gallows.

He was weak—almost too weak to walk. For three months of starvation, torture, suspense—three months passed in dark and loathsome huts, black as the mouth of a pit, close and foul as the black hole of Calcutta, with hardly any water to drink, and only the loathsome food offered him—were sufficient to reduce any man to the lowest ebb. Sometimes Cleland almost prayed for death; then, again, the love of life, common to every human being, came back to him with full force, and he told himself that while there was life there was hope—hope of rescue or of escape.

How often in those days and nights of misery and physical suffering did the memory of Margaret's pale, sweet face come to comfort and strengthen him!

He turned now to his gaoler—no other than Osman Agrak himself—after his first involuntary shudder and shook his head.

"I have already given you my answer, and that scores of times. I shall not renounce my faith to escape death!"

"Then, by the sword of the prophet, you have chosen your own fate!" exclaimed the fierce fanatic. He turned away from Cleland and uttered a peculiar call.

In answer to it half a dozen black-bearded, fierce-eyed dervishes sprang as it were from the earth itself—in reality, out of some of the trenches near at hand—and came to his side. Osman uttered his instructions in low, rapid tones, and two of the tallest and strongest, coming forward, laid each a hand under Cleland's arm, and led him forward towards that awful black thing facing him.

Then he knew that the end had come at last. Without preparation he was to be hurled out of life into the great Unknown beyond. In five minutes more he would be beyond all hope of rescue or escape—he would be in eternity.

Only those who have seen death thus suddenly near at hand know how dear life is to all. "The weariest and most loathed worldly life" becomes the most precious of all possessions, because to lose it is to lose all that we have ever been familiar with.

Thus Cleland felt for a moment; but it was only for a moment. The next he was ready to meet death like a man and a Christian.

One thought of Margaret—rare, pale Margaret, soon to be separated from him more completely than ever she had been by the "unblinded, salt, estranging sea"—who might never even hear of his death; one passionate, mute farewell—"Good-by, my love, my one, first and last love. We shall meet some day, some day, Margaret"—and then his thoughts were turned to the solemn moment before him.

"My God, I commit myself into Thy hands. Thou wilt keep me, for I have trusted in Thee." The wordless prayer in his heart might so have been translated.

They were at the gallows now. One of the dervishes held Cleland, while the other skillfully threw a long strand of brown rope into a noose. It was finished; he was just about to throw it over Cleland's neck, when—

A wild shriek broke on the sultry air, the sound of galloping horses accompanied it; and Cleland, looking up, saw many-colored flags and banners floating on the air. At the same moment Osman's voice was heard calling something in Arabic. At the sound the dervish who held the rope dropped it, and turned from Cleland with a scowl.

The next moment Osman himself approached.

"It is the will of Allah you should be spared just now," he said, addressing Cleland. Then to the dervishes: "Take him back to the hut."

But Cleland, unable to stand any longer from sheer weakness, had dropped on the ground. They lifted him up and carried him to the hut, where he was chained to a huge stone. Presently he recovered himself a little; and was able to get up to his feet.

Then he was conscious of a great noise outside—braying of donkeys, stamping of horses' feet, the shrill cries of Arabs, the sound of camels' heavy tread. It lasted for about ten minutes, then suddenly ceased, and perfect silence succeeded it and it reigned so long that Cleland felt vaguely uneasy. He moved at last slowly across the hut, and, by pushing away some of the brushwood, was able to look out.

The place was deserted! There was not a tent, a donkey, a camel, or an Arab to be seen. He was alone—alone and chained up like a dog, with little or no hope of being able to release himself.

Even if he could, what then? He knew he was at Metemneh, in the heart of the desert, without food or drink. Even if he were free could he ever find his way to the British camp? He had no idea as to where they were; he had not even heard that they were again on the move.

Despair came to Cleland. It would have been better if they had killed him at once. Swift death was to be preferred to this fearful thought of dying inch by inch.

Still, he must do something rather than lie down in inaction and despair. He would try to file away his chain that bound him.

It was five days later when the Anglo-Egyptian troops marched through Metemneh on their southward way.

"A town of the dead! But, good heavens! what is that, Reid?" exclaimed Colonel Beauchamp, as he rode by the side of one of his subalterns, pointing to the hut. "I could almost fancy there seems to me something like a man lying there on the sand!"

A moment later the command "Halt!" was given; the moving mass of camels and men came to a dead stop. The colonel and his subaltern dismounted and ran up to the hut.

True enough, there was a man in British attire, lying there on his face. They turned him over; the colonel uttered a startled exclamation!

"Oh, God! It's Paul Cleland!"

He was to all appearances dead. They raised him up, poured brandy-and-water down his throat, and had at last the satisfaction of hearing him sigh faintly.

THE CAPTAIN SWORE

And He Wasn't the Only One Who Cursed.

It was supposed that the captain never swore because he had been a minister, but it was only one of the lieutenants who had been a minister, and he had decidedly fallen from grace. The right of swearing had been a question of continued discussion aboard ship. The executive officer swore because he was all bile, the navigating officer because he was jolly, and when the captain remonstrated with him he said: "What can I do? The whole shipload of men are swearing, captain, ensigns and seamen, and I've got to beat them all to show my position, haven't I?" However that was, excitement generally followed a public swearing by the captain, except on one day when the excitement preceded it. That day the sea was calm and nothing much was going on aboard ship save the constant watch of the blockading Cuban port and the sea horizon. The air was clear, the sun was bright, and for some unusual atmospheric reason everything that appeared over the horizon was tremendously magnified. A puff of smoke was seen beyond the sky line and all hands watched eagerly for the appearance of the steamer. Up she came, puffing away, and in the clear light she looked like the Great Eastern. She flew no signal flags, she looked strange, and she bore down on the blockading cruisers as straight as a die. On she came, growing larger and larger, while the crew waited breathlessly for some word from the captain. The officers on the bridge stood watching her fixedly, muttering because they could not make her out. Finally the captain said: "Well, she doesn't answer our signals, and it's not our fault if she gets hurt." Then turning to the bugler he said: "Sound 'clear ship for action.'" This process was no mean job, but when a scrap was in sight it could be done quickly, and in five minutes all hands were ready to answer the call to quarters. Again there was anxious waiting. Then a queer change came over the appearance of the approaching craft. She had gotten well out of the horizon zone, and as she came near enough for the water to be seen foaming at her bow she grew peculiarly small. Officers and men began to look foolishly at each other, and still the stranger grew smaller. Looks of surprise grew to looks of disgust, and despite the fact that they were standing at quarters, the men began to act as if they were unconscious of the approaching vessel, as though no one had ever suggested a scrap. The steamer, shrunken to a tug, turned broadside as she came within hailing distance, displaying a large white flag at the stern labeled "New York" and a tin horn voice spoke through a megaphone: "Can you please tell me where the main fleet is, and if you expect to encounter the enemy's ships?" Then it was that the captain swore.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Magnificent Gift Modestly Made.

The Presbyterian hospital, New York, was this week made the recipient of a handsome gift in a rather unusual manner. On the condition that the name of the donor be not divulged, $200,000 was appropriated for the erection of another building, to afford quarters for the nurses and members of the resident staff, who at present occupy nearly one-third of the ward building of the hospital. The donation may be said to be rather the building than the money, as the structure is to be built at the expense of the benefactor on property at present owned by the hospital. It is expected that the new building will be completed within a year.—Utica Globe.

STRIKE IS NOT YET SETTLED.

No Offer of a Compromise Has Been Announced.

MITCHELL SURE OF VICTORY.

A Big Parade Tuesday in Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Ten Thousand Men and Boys Marched Through the Streets—The Union Claims It Has Come to Stay.

"The strike is drawing rapidly to a close," said President Mitchell to 20,000 striking miners at Wilkesbarre Tuesday afternoon, and the 20,000 cheered wildly. Then came the surprise of the day, which had been expected to mark the turning point in the strike. President Mitchell brought no news of a compromise. He made no statement to show that the coal companies would grant more than their formal notices indicated. He had no tidings from the independent operators, who at present hold the key to the situation.

Ten thousand miners, men and boys, paraded through the streets of Wilkesbarre Tuesday. Another 10,000 stood on the sidewalks and cheered the marchers, while probably 20,000 gathered at the West Side Park, and listened to the speeches of Mitchell, Dilcher, Purcell, and their other leaders. These leaders predicted great results from this show of numbers, for the 20,000, to a man, promised not to go back to work until they went as a solid body, 140,000 strong. A number of operators watched the vote at the meeting, but made no move to compromise.

The parade was one hour and thirty-five minutes passing the reviewing place, and several thousand marchers from outlying districts never found that place. Many marched with the precision of soldiers, for a large portion of the miners here are foreigners who have served in European armies.

Mottos on the Banners.

There were numerous banners in the column, all voicing steadfast devotion to Mitchell and the miners' cause. Among the most noticeable were these:

"We want our dinner pails filled with substantial food, not coal baron's taffy."

"We are fighting a cause that is just and right."

"Stand by President Mitchell and the union."

"Our union must be recognized."

"We will no longer be slaves."

"2,240 pounds for a ton."

"We want two weeks' pay."

The breaker boys carried banners which read:

Will Ignore Operators' Offer.

The operators are in no hurry and will wait the pleasure of the strikers. The miners, however, have about made up their minds that they will not consider the offer. The increase, they say, is a mere trifle and not worthy of consideration.

The fact that the operators have made what appears to be a studied effort to ignore the miners' union is what aggravates the strikers most. They say it is useless to talk of a settlement unless the presidents of the big coal companies make up their minds to recognize the union. One of the officers of the United Mine Workers' council of this district said today:

"I don't see how an agreement can be reached so long as the union is left out of the negotiations. The operators might as well understand now as later on that the union has come to stay and that it will insist on its demands being granted."

Reading the First to Act.

The following notice, bearing date of Oct. 1, was posted Sunday in the vicinity of all the collieries of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company in the anthracite region:

"This company will pay an advance of 10 per cent on the wages of all men and boys employed at its collieries. This advance takes effect today."

"R. C. LUTHER,

"General Superintendent."

Beneath this notice another was posted which read as follows:

"Fellow Mine Workers, United Mine Workers of America: Do not pay any attention to this notice posted by Mr. Luther of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company, but wait until you hear from President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America, or until you have decided by your own locals what is right for you to do."

"POTTER."

Mr. Potter is an officer in the district branch of the United Mine Workers of America. President Mitchell said he did not order the mine workers' notice to be placed along with that of the Reading company, but he thought it was done as a result of his warning to the strikers last week to the effect that they should not go back to work until ordered to do so by the union officials. The strikers, he said, probably chose the poster scheme as one of the methods of keeping the men in line.

Many a woman, sick and weary of life, dragged down by weakening drains, painful irregularities, depression, and the hundred and one ailments which affect women only, has found in Pe-ru-na a bright star of hope, which has changed her misery to joy, her suffering to health.

No woman need suffer from the derangements peculiar to her sex, if she will give Pe-ru-na a fair trial.

The majority of weaknesses which make woman's life a burden, spring from a simple cause. The mucous membrane which lines the pelvic organs becomes weakened and inflamed owing to strain, cold, overwork, etc. This causes catarrhal congestion, inflammation, painful irregularities, depression of spirits, irritability, weakness and suffering. It shows in the haggard lines of the face, the dull eyes, the sallow complexion and angular form.

For the prompt cure of such ailments try Pe-ru-na. It does away "the blues," clears the complexion, brightens the eyes, changes thinness to plumpness, and cures pains, aches and drains, because it immediately strikes at the root of such troubles and removes the cause.

Waived in Life and Death.

Some sixty years ago six young ecclesiastics of the Roman Catholic diocese of Roseau, in Hungary, completed together their theological course in the seminary, and were together ordained priests. For sixty years they labored side by side as priests in the same diocese. On the very same day they all celebrated the diamond jubilee of their ordination. United as they had been in life, they were united in death, for within the space of two months all six have died, at the respective ages of 82, 83, 88, 86, 80 and 81.—Philadelphia Record.

Odd Lawsuit Between Brothers.

William H. Utter and Jeffrey W. Utter, brothers, own adjoining farms at Amity, Orange county, N. Y. William's farm is peaches, while Jeffrey goes in for bees. William alleges that his brother's bees in seeking material for honey have punctured and so destroyed his finest peaches. He therefore sues for $100 damages. Jeffrey's defense is that even if the peaches were injured by bees, it cannot be shown that his bees are at fault. Good lawyers have been retained and as both brothers are wealthy there is prospect of a stubborn fight.

South Carolina Insurance Decision.

A stipulation that suit can be brought on an insurance policy only "within twelve months next after the fire" is held, in Sample vs. London and Liverpool Fire Insurance company (S. C.), 47 L. R. A. 696, to give the insured twelve months after the accrual of his right of action, where the policy provides that suit cannot be brought until after full compliance with numerous requirements, and that the loss shall not be payable until sixty days after notice and proof of loss and an award by appraisers, if appraisal is required.

Preserve for Elk.

M. V. Giltner of Jackson's Hole, Wyo., seeing that elk were becoming scarce and having in mind the fate of the buffalo, has established a preserve of twenty acres, inclosed by a fence, in which he has a herd of nineteen elk. He started four years ago with half a dozen and, as these animals, in their wild state are rapidly exterminated, he hopes that in a few years handsome returns will come for his foresight.

A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF HAPPENINGS FOR SEVEN DAYS.

Dr. Hobbs Has Raised $600,000 for the Indian Famine Sufferers—Dr. Lectuyse, Who Is Touring the World Afoot, Walks into Illinois.

Want an Earlier Fair Date.

Considering the inclemency of the weather, the attendance at the state fair Thursday was something phenomenal. The people spent the day inside the great buildings viewing the exhibits, and every building was crowded. The unfavorable weather that has prevailed for several years during the week of the state fair has created a sentiment among the members of the state board of agriculture for an earlier date and an effort will be made to hold the fair hereafter during the second week in September. To make this change may necessitate the breaking away of Illinois from the western state fair circuit, which would mean a reduction in the size of the livestock exhibits. Thursday was governor's day at the fair, and Gov. Tanner and several members of his staff were entertained at luncheon by the state board of agriculture and afterward made a tour of the buildings. The executive board of the State Poultry association had a meeting at the fair grounds and arranged for holding its next annual poultry show at Bloomington Jan. 12 to 19, 1901.

Suburban Service company, Chicago; capital stock, $100,000; incorporators, Gordon J. Murray, Harry H. Phillips and F. M. Walters. Buckskin Fiber Box company, Chicago; capital stock, $2,400; incorporators, Charles Silverman, Charles D. Woolworth and Henry Waterman. Dixon Cereal company, Dixon; capital stock, $9,000; incorporators, John Forrest, Hugh MacCartney and J. A. Forrest. Drexel Railway Supply company, Chicago; capital stock decreased from $600,000 to $100,000.

Sues Asylum Officials.

Daniel W. Storms, said to have been a member of the Chicago board of trade for the last twenty-five years, has filed in the Kankakee county court a declaration in a $25,000 damage suit against the Eastern insane hospital, William S. Booth of Chicago, Dr. W. G. Stearns, former superintendent, and several attendants at the insane hospital. Storms bases his claims for damages on injuries he is alleged to have received at the hands of attendants, permanently affecting his health, and the fact that he was kept at the hospital for twenty months, although quite sane. The records show that Storms was regularly committed to the insane hospital by a jury of six, including Dr. Bluhardt.

Alleged Highwayman in Jail.

James Bennett, who attempted to hold up John Collier, the wealthy Ipava farmer, and his son, near Enion last Saturday night, and when Collier refused to obey his orders to halt, shot him in the head, was arrested Thursday at Beardstown, Ill., and taken to Lewiston and lodged in the county jail. Bennett refuses to talk. He has been in prison before for the same crime, having been liberated from the penitentiary at Joliet on Sept. 3. The younger brother, Fred Bennett, who was arrested Tuesday, has confessed the crime and implicated the older brother.

Aid For Famine Sufferers.

Rev. Dr. Richard S. Hobbs, who has been engaged for several months past in securing subscriptions with which to purchase corn for the relief of the famine sufferers in India, has returned to Springfield from New York. Dr. Hobbs states that $600,000 has been secured by him, acting as manager in the enterprise for Editor Klopsch of the Christian Herald of New York, for the starving people in India, and 200,000 bushels of corn purchased.

Sees the World Afoot.

Dr. Arnold Lectuyse of Brussels, Belgium, who is making a tour of the world afoot, visiting all its countries, was at Waukegan Friday. He left for Chicago, where he met his parents on Saturday. He began traveling on Dec. 18, 1898, his plan being to traverse each continent from north to south.

John Waite Is Dead.

John Waite, one of Jefferson county's pioneer citizens, died at his home near Mount Vernon at the age of 70 years. He was born in England, saw active service throughout the war of the rebellion as a member of Company I, 44th Illinois Volunteer infantry, and lost an arm in the service of his country. He followed the occupation of farmer the latter part of his life and died possessed of a large fortune.

Biggest Dwarf in the World.

A north side commuter, says the Chicago Chronicle, tells this among other stories of his recent trip across the water: While in England he attended a country fair where a showman was exhibiting a dwarf. A bucolic spectator denounced the show as a humbug, saying: "Why, your dwarf is nearly as big as I am, and I'm not a small man." "That's just it," blandly said the showman; "it's the biggest dwarf in the world."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

"I could not Sew another stitch to Save my Life."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night. The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time. To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause. Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system. For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhoea. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."

The Barrington Township annual meeting of the Sunday schools, held at Zion's church Sunday afternoon and evening was a grand success. Mr. Pierce, the secretary for Cook county, rendered very valuable service; his addresses were superior. The musical selections furnished by each church was beautiful and finely rendered. The attendance was large. The old officers were reelected.

The highway commissioners of Cuba township met at Buck's crossing Monday afternoon to hear remonstrances relative to the changing of the railway crossing at that point by the syndicate people. No one appeared to oppose the petition and the commissioners will grant the prayer of the Chicago Highlands management and accept the new road as laid out on the plat of the proposed town.

This year the ballot given out to the voters of Chicago will be the biggest, longest and fattest ever voted in that city. On every ballot there will be 625 names. If all of the tickets printed for Chicago and the town of Cicero could be placed end to end they would cover a distance 564 miles in length, and if they could all be piled up one on top of the other they would make a stack 154 feet higher than the Masonic Temple, or 508 feet in height.

Town Federation in Conference.

Last Saturday afternoon the Federation of Country Towns in Cook county held a meeting in Chicago. About thirty representatives were in attendance and the session proved interesting. Henry C. Senne of Maine, carried there a resolution which he desired should pass. Senator Humphrey was there and led the opposition to Mr. Senne and a tempest was the result. Charges were made that what is known as the "machine republicans" of Chicago were preparing to oppose the new county scheme because it would deprive them of power—that Cook county would be democratic.

Mr. Senne's resolution called for the appointment of a delegate from each town in the county to ascertain the feeling of the people on the proposition of a withdrawal by country towns from Cook county. Senator Humphrey spoke against the passage of the resolution and to the consternation of many the same was tabled.

Mr. Senne thrust his point of view the fifth rib of Chairman Thielmann accompanied by the following: "If a certain gentleman who two months ago so warmly favored the formation of a new county has now changed his mind the resolution will not be offered. If we do not want to know the will of the people I have no more to say." Mr. Thielmann denied having changed his mind but said he was opposed to the formation of several small counties and was in opposition to the Senne proposition.

The change of front on the part of several delegates was hard to understand—by some. It is said that at the next meeting a full representation will be present and the resolution will be taken up and passed.

A communication was read by the secretary by which the Civic Federation invited the executive committee of the County Towns' Federation to a conference on the points of difference. A tax of $5 per towu was laid to pay for stationery and necessities. The next meeting will take place Saturday Oct 27, at 10 o'clock.

Will Vote on Reserve Fund.

The question of an emergency or reserve fund for the Modern Woodmen of America will be voted upon by the members at the first regular meeting in the month of December of the several camps and the head camp which will meet at St. Paul next summer will take such action as the members throughout the country direct them.

It has been patent to thoughtful members of the M. W. A. as of all other fraternal insurance societies that some provision for the future must be made or sometime in the future the society would find itself up against it. Some fund must sooner or later be established for reinforcement of the society's benefit fund in case of possible future excessive death losses or increased cost of carrying Woodmen insurance. It is the belief of leading men of the order that now is the time to change to a reserve fund basis. The cheap insurance—in fact, the cheapest to be had—has been one of the main causes for the remarkable growth of the order, although to students of life insurance it has all along been clear that such cheap rates could not be maintained forever. This fact has been freely admitted by head officers of the order. The change to an emergency fund or reserve basis can be made in the near future without danger of rupture in the order.

Those advocating the change believe that the reserve fund is the only safe plan of fraternal insurance. Without it the increasing age of members will bear heavily upon the growth.

The settlement of the question is in the hands of the membership. They possess the power to make the certificate now in force—worth over $950,000,000—as good as gold at maturity, ten, twenty or thirty years hence; or they may so vote next December that the Woodmen society will be compelled to yield its place at the head of the fraternal column to some more vigorous rival.

Curbstone Musings.

In competition's arduous race
Dost thou desire a foremost place?
Does high ambition fire thy soul,
Men's minds and pockets to control?
Then listen to this counsel wise,
And largely—freely—advertise.

Four souls with but a single thought
Four hearts that beat as one, occupied 4 square feet of sidewalk in front of Wagner's market Saturday evening and quoted poetry on the departure of suzmer. The Adam's of that quartet are confirmed bachelors but not insensible to the bewitching glances cast by rustic beauties. Just such innocent flirtations have often led to matrimonial entanglements. We hope for the best.

While strolling down Ela street the other evening our attention was attracted by the music of a buck saw. The saw was operated by female power and was making good headway through a stick of scrub-oak while an able-bodied ought-to-be-ashamed-of himself descendent of Adam stood by and witnessed the work. We are told that the young woman indulges in the exercise because she is obliged to and not as a calisthenic. The man who captures that girl will get a general all-round helpmate.

He had seen better days. There was no doubt about that. His raiment was of sufficient quantity to flag a hand car. His nasal appendage was polished a royal purple by the liberal use of O.F.C., Belle of Nelson, Hunter, and other complexion promoters. He was a victim of the labor trust. He was willing to make an affidavit that not a morsel of food had entered his stomach for 48 hours. He only required a dime to appease his hunger. His appeal did not go unheeded. Ten minutes later we noticed him satisfying his hunger from the contents of a tin can that had once contained barn paint.

We are requested by one of the 200 of Barrington smart set, who has accumulated sufficient reserve fund to become the possessor of an umbrella of his own, to announce to the lady or gentleman who abstracted that umbrella from the vestibule of the Methodist church, that if she or he will send address he will mail free of charge a good roads map to that place where brimstone is used quantitles.

A young lady asked us the question lately, "Why do you use the plural pronoun 'we' in Musings? Why do you not use the singular 'I'?" Well, there are several reasons. Self preservation is the first law of nature, and there is some human nature about a newspaper reporter, public opinion to the contrary, notwithstanding. When speaking of some slab-sided individual who is not your admirer it is far better to say "we." It creates an impression that the editorial force consists of a small army. When a victim comes around to wipe the earth with the writer of an item it is pleasant to have the identity of the guilty party buried in the obscurity of the plural "we." When advising the minister how to preach "we" is used to induce the belief that the staff is composed of ex-ministers. There are many good reasons. In fact "we" is used because of the writer's modesty.

Six events were pulled off in the ring erected in the audience room of a well-patronized livery stable the first day of the week. Lovers of the manly art were there and enjoyed the fun. It opened with a bantam contest and closed with a pretty bout between two gentlemen who had evidently donned the gloves on previous occasions. A number of citizens were present who would not countenance a boxing contest at a ring side in Chicago or elsewhere, but they will show up early and stay to see the finish of a semi-public clawing match. That is consistency.

Two Barringtonians are in deep trouble.
