John C. Nichol, a farmer residing in Buffalo Grove, was found dead in his barn Friday evening. He had gone to the barn to attend to his evening's work. Not returning, his wife went to find him. The funeral services were held at Buffalo Grove church Monday.

A boy who has been taking tablets from his school mates, was told not to return to school until he brought back some tablets he had taken. He went to Mrs. Matthei and told her that Mrs. Knowe wanted some eggs, and she gave him a half-dozen. The boy went to Mrs. Matthei's son, Phillip, and traded the eggs for two tablets. We understand he is working the town, with the chances good for his return to school as far as the tablets are concerned. We wonder if all the eggs are charged to Mrs. Knowe.

Millions of dollars are wasted every year in this country in buying cheap machines or cheap articles that prove not only a waste of money, but a loss of time as well as incumbrance to the owners. Long experience has taught me the best goods are the cheapest, not only financially but in having the tools ready to use when wanted. A machine generally breaks or gives out when one needs it most, this is not only an expense, but an annoyance, as well as a loss of time, and in many cases losing several times its value in being delayed in work. I am selling old and tested goods: Rotary Standard sewing machine, Stover windmill, Old Reliable Cassidy plow, Burkitt's special watch movements, Burkitt's Special Garland bicycles. These articles are selected by me as the best of their kind on the market and are sold at a low price. An elegant line of jewelry and watches at reduced prices for a short time. Wedding presents a specialty. J. W. BURKITT, Arlington Heights.

Reunion of Campers.

Miss Blanche Shirding entertained members of the camps on Raspberry Point, Twin Lakes, Wis. last summer, at her home Saturday evening. A delightful evening was spent and a fine luncheon served. It was a musical crowd and vocal and instrumental music was participated in and enjoyed by all.

Those present were: Will, Lee and Alvin Huckins, John Carmichael and Frank White of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smyser, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heise, Harry Rea, Misses Cora Johnson, Eleanor Putnam and Cora Schultz. The Chicago parties were entertained by their friends over Sunday.

Proposed Consolidation Dropped.

As a result of the conference held at Chicago last Saturday afternoon between the executive committee of the Country Town Federation and representatives of the Civic Federation committee on consolidation of the outside towns and the city, it is probable that the next state legislature will be asked to pass an amendment to the constitution providing for a special election, at which the citizens of Cook county shall vote upon a proposition to separate the city of Chicago from Cook county and form a new county from that part of Cook county outside the limits of the city.

The former proposition of the Civic Federation to extend the limits of Chicago to include all of that territory now included in Cook county has virtually been dropped, and at the last conference the representatives of the country towns and those of the city agreed that the best plan by which the present complex form of government in Cook county can be improved is by the formation of the city into a separate county.

The plan proposed is similar to that adopted in separating the cities of St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia from the counties of which they formed a part. According to this plan the city of Chicago would become a county by itself, but the functions of the present county authorities would be vested in the municipal authorities, except in the case of county officials who form a part of the state government in counties, including the courts and all of the officials connected with them.

The residents of the country towns are ready and willing to assist the citizens of Chicago in securing the separation of the city from the county and are ready to form new counties or unite with other existing counties rather than be forced into the present city of Chicago. The advantages of the metropolis are highly appreciated by every resident in the country adjacent thereto—they have a pride in Chicago and interested in its growth and importance, but rural life is very agreeable and there is a charm about it which is far more conducive to happiness and low taxation than anything the big city can furnish. We can be friends but cannot leave our happy homes for you.

Meetings of representatives from the towns and city federations will be held soon and the new proposition prepared for presentation to the legislature early in the session.

DEATH IN TORNADO'S TRAIL.

Nineteen Reported Killed—List Is Incomplete.

WIDE SWEEP OF THE STORM.

From Lula, Miss., to LaGrange, Tenn., the High Winds Blow—Scores of Business Buildings, Churches and Dwellings Are Destroyed.

A tornado swept over the country lying between a point three miles north of Lula, Miss., and LaGrange, Tenn., Tuesday afternoon, and caused great loss of life and property. The storm interrupted telegraphic and telephonic communications completely. Nineteen lives were lost and the destruction of property was heavy. It is believed that in the cyclones between the towns heard from numerous farm houses and interior communities of more or less considerable population were struck, and these being cut off from the outside were unable to give notice of their distress. Accompanying the tornado was a rainstorm of terrific proportions.

Many Killed at LaGrange.

Moody, assistant manager of the Pankey & Gaither Plow Manufacturing company; Mrs. May, wife of Brown May, colored; negro woman, unknown. The injured: Robert G. Tucker, manager of Pankey & Gaither Plow Manufacturing company; Edward Smith, railroad agent; Samuel Wadley; William McNamee; Mrs. Fannie McNamee; Jessie Stafford. The residence portion of the town also suffered heavy loss, several buildings being completely demolished and a large number damaged. A perfect deluge of rain was falling when the cyclone came, but its advance was foretold by a roaring, rushing sound, followed by quick, heavy reports which gave the inhabitants warning and they rushed out from the falling buildings.

Bodies Carried Far on Wind.

Reports from Lula, Tunica county, state that three negroes were killed, their bodies having been carried a distance of three miles by the wind. Many outhouses were razed to the ground and the damage to crops cannot now be estimated.

At Coldwater several houses were destroyed and the daughter of John Guy and John Doney were seriously injured. A negro child was killed three miles north of the town. The cyclone passed from southwest to northeast and struck Batesville about 4 o'clock. Several houses were demolished and seven persons were more or less injured. The Methodist church was unroofed.

Pursue Swindler Swazey.

Edward L. Swazey, who fled from Kansas City four months ago, after obtaining a large sum of money from banks throughout the country by means of duplicate cattle mortgages, is being followed closely by detectives in South America. The Kansas City attorney for the Cattle Men's Protective association, which is prosecuting the search, stated that Swazey will be arrested and brought back to Kansas City if he enters a country where the extradition laws would not interfere with his being taken. It appears that Swazey went direct to Montevideo from Kansas City.

Sheriff J. F. Howells of Salt Lake has traced to Omaha the Rev. Francis Hermans, formerly pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church of Salt Lake, Utah. Hermans left Omaha five years ago for Salt Lake with Henrietta Clausen, who had helped him and his wife in church work at Omaha. When Hermans became pastor of the church in Salt Lake another young woman was admitted to his household as a servant. When the members of the congregation began to talk both young women mysteriously disappeared. Prior to this Mrs. Hermans had died suddenly. Hermans was accused of killing the two young women, cutting them up and burning the remains in the church furnace. His arrest is expected.

STORM'S DEATH ROLL GROWING

Sixty-Seven Persons Known to Have Perished.

Latest advices from the storm swept sections of Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee indicate that the loss of life and damage to property are far greater than at first reported. The difficulties in the way of securing information from the devastated sections are almost insurmountable. The places affected are remote and isolated, and at best they are not well equipped with means of communication, and the storm which Tuesday evening carried devastation across the country at the same time swept away the wires, so that telephone and telegraph wires alike were put out of service. Dependence has necessarily been placed in railroad men and travelers coming from affected parts.

Each Met a Violent End.

The death, Wednesday, of Mrs. John Reed of Marysville, Ohio, recalls the fact that her family has been wiped out by a series of fatalities. Nelson Reed, her son, met death in May by being run over by a spiked harrow while at work in a wheat field. In January, 1897, a daughter of Mrs. Reed was killed by a train at Fountain Park while returning home from a dance, and another daughter, who accompanied her, sustained fatal injuries. A year previous to this still another daughter, while riding a horse, was thrown violently to the ground and instantly killed.

Take Exception to President McLean.

Warm discussion characterized the second day's discussion of the Illinois State Federation of Labor at Kewanee. Delegates from Springfield took exception to the remarks made by President McLean in his address to the effect that the boycott on the laundries and butchers of Springfield was not supported by union men. After a hot debate the matter was referred to a committee and the remarks expunged from the address.

Find Body in Reservoir.

The body of George H. Zell, a prominent farmer living eighteen miles southwest of Perry, O. T., was found in the reservoir of the Perry waterworks plant today. The head was badly bruised and cut. Zell came to town yesterday morning, sold a load of hogs and was known to have had a considerable amount of money upon his person. Only a small sum remained in the pockets and the police suspect foul play.

Revives Cleveland Scandal.

A sensational affidavit, made by Charles W. Lapp, a member of the Cleveland council, was made public Wednesday. Councilman Lapp swears that Councilman White told him that "the gang" (meaning certain members of the council) received $5,000 for their votes on the police alarm contract, and intimated that $5,000 more was to be paid for their votes on a contract for the new city fire alarm system.

Escapes Assassination by Bad Aim.

An unknown man attempted to assassinate Dr. Peter Drayer, a prominent citizen of Hartford City, Ind. Dr. Drayer was passing through an alley when a man fired two shots at him at close range, but failed to wound him.

Seated by the glowing embers in the gloomy old firelit hall, watching the flame retreat, advance, flare up in splendor, and then die into a dull glow, was Jack Long. Thirty-five years had elapsed since Jack first saw the light of day, and his life had been as full of joy and misery, of light and shadows, as the ordinary life of mankind.

Typical of the ever-burning glow was a love within his heart which ten years had not smothered.

Like the fire flame leaping high and sinking low, was the hope in his breast.

As Jack sat there alone, gazing into the fire, thoughts of bygone days came over him, trooping at his memory's call.

Mingled with those memories was a fair and radiant maiden, with hair of sunshine and eyes of azure. This image conjured up so vivid and lifelike was his loving, laughing sweetheart, Queenie Graham, as she looked on that Thanksgiving night so long ago.

It would be ten years on the morrow since he had last gazed upon the dimpled, smiling, roguish face which he loved, so well.

They were then betrothed, and she wore the betrothal ring which he had placed upon her finger only a few weeks before.

How vivid that picture came before his eyes. Ten years seemed to have rolled backward, and he was a youth of 25 again, and Queenie Graham, his adored one, a blushing maiden of 18.

The old-fashioned farmhouse, with white, oaken floor, and the boys with their sweethearts, and the jolly old fiddler who played half asleep, only awaking to call out in deep, stentorian tones:

"Swing partners to place."

The lamps swinging from the ceiling flooded the scene with the most brilliant light.

Gay laughter and jest told of light hearts, and happy faces glowed to the soul-stirring music of the "Irish Washerwoman," sawed off by the fiddler.

Jack's love, like all true love, did not run smooth. In fact, love begets its own misery. He was madly jealous when she smiled on Sam Brown, and in swinging partners Sam held her hand too long and squeezed it too ardently to suit the jealous lover.

"Queenie, you're a flirt," he declared, "I saw you wink at Sam Brown."

She turned on him with proud, flashing eyes, and said:

"Don't be surprised if I call you another. You kissed Susie Bell."

"That's not true."

"Yes, you did; for I heard her tell Mary Courtwright."

"It is false, Queenie," he cried, in his indignation. Susie Bell was a round-faced, ugly country girl with no attractions, and tongue given to mischief making.

The dance went on, and the lovers' quarrel with it. As Jack and Queenie whirled in the giddy mazes of the dance that silly, childish quarrel waxed hot, entrancing her beauty with every angry word she uttered.

At last, as the "set was over," she suddenly jerked the betrothal emblem

from her finger, and thrusting it into his hand said:

"Here is your ring; you can marry Miss Sue."

With a heavy heart the angry Jack Long donned his topcoat and winding his muffler about his neck to keep the chill November air from his throat, went out into the night never to look upon the face of that adored being again.

He heard from Queenie occasionally, and at last that she had gone east to live. How far east or what part of the east, he did not know, and was too proud to ask.

She was lost to him forever, and he grew melancholy. He went west, to be as far from her as possible, and engaged in business at a frontier town, with cowboys and ranchmen for his associates.

Then came the mutterings of war with Spain.

He had always loved the weak, and sprang to the first call to arms. Rough riders were wanted, and he had learned to mount the wildest broncho.

He enlisted, and hurried off to the front. At Santiago he landed, and in the march to the city was in the first skirmish.

Then came that noble charge on San Juan hill. He led the charge amid dust and heat, fighting like a mad man until struck down, faint and bleeding, he lay on mother earth to die.

Queenie's beauty was matured and seemed more heightened by time. She was far more lovely than before. After the first moment's shock of surprise pride assumed control, and placed each other on the guard.

They longed to break the ice, but neither wanted to make the advance.

After the feasting was over the happy group assembled in the great parlor to talk over pleasant reminiscences or indulge in a quiet tete-a-tete.

Then someone, may his tribe increase, said:

"I brought my violin. I will play and call off; let us have a dance to-night."

The suggestion was greeted with a hearty shout, and the young fellows rushed to find their partners.

Right quickly they all took their places on the floor, when they found that they wanted just one couple more.

"Come, come, Soldier Jack, secure a partner," cried the voluntary musician.

Moved by some uncontrollable impulse, Jack arose and went to where Queenie Graham sat, and, bending low, whispered:

"Will you come and dance 'Haste to the Wedding' with me?"

She assented, and all were at their places.

Then someone on the piano accompanied the violin in that sweet old melody, "Haste to the Wedding."

There is always an opportunity in a quadrille for a word now and then between partners.

"All join hands and circle to the right."

"I want to ask you something," she whispered, when they were at their places again.

"What is it?"

"First four forward and back again." And away they went.

When next they had an opportunity she thrust into his hand an item clipped from a newspaper.

It was of a young soldier carried bleeding and dying from San Juan hill, murmuring:

"Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one, shall I never see you more?"

"Was that you?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered.

Then he took her hand. It trembled, and her azure eyes grew dim.

"Balance all."

It was several minutes before either could speak.

The sweet-tuned violin, accompanied by the piano, poured forth such soul-stirring music as can be found only in that precious old air, "Haste to the Wedding."

He was about to speak when the musician "calling off" shouted:

"Gents to places—all promenade."

It gave him an opportunity to recover himself, and when next they glided across the room he whispered:

"Say, Queenie, will you keep that old promise you made long ago?"

She looked up at him, smiling through her tears.

Ten years of misery and suffering had passed since he held that hand.

Oh, it was reward for all that suffering!

"Queenie, I have it yet," he whispered, taking from his vest pocket the betrothal ring which he had carried all these years.

"It has never left me, for I always had hoped that a time might come when I could restore it to the finger where it belonged. It was with me on that dark, gloomy day at San Juan hill, where I saw so many noble men die."

"I carried it over my heart and prayed that if I fell some Spanish bullet might pass through the band of love to reach a heart that beat for you. Oh, Queenie, did you know that you have never—"

"Swing partners to place."

What an abomination was that old fiddler and the dance to Jack.

When he next got an opportunity he whispered:

would pass within the golden circle of his youthful love, and that he might die with her name on his lips.

But fate destined Jack to live. He was once more home, among friends who had crowded about to hear him tell of the wild charge and the storm of death.

Would he go to grandmother's next day to the Thanksgiving dinner? Yes, he would.

The mother was happy.

The old carriage was loaded with jolly young folks and middle-aged people, and among them the veteran of San Juan.

Grandma's table groaned with plenty; goose and turkey, pies and candies, cider, nuts and apples in abundance.

But what was far more precious to the ex-rough rider was a radiant face he had loved so long before.

He thought she had suffered as well as he. They were too much surprised at meeting that neither would tell what emotions were being stirred in the other's heart.

Queenie's beauty was matured and seemed more heightened by time. She was far more lovely than before. After the first moment's shock of surprise pride assumed control, and placed each other on the guard.

COLORADO MOB BURNS NEGRO

Torture to Death Murderer of Little Girl.

BODY REDUCED TO ASHES.

Victim of the Furious Men Who Usurped the Authority of the Law—Prays to His Captors for Mercy but Receives None.

A lynching more awful in its details than any ever known in the south took place in Colorado Friday when Preston Porter, a negro, was burned to death for the murder of 13-year-old Louise Frost. Never was vengeance meted out by a lawless mob in more deliberate a manner nor the pain so carefully arranged.

Chained to a railroad rail set firmly into the ground in the outskirts of Limon, on the exact spot where his crime was committed, Preston Porter, Jr., or, as he was familiarly known, John Porter, suffered the penalty for his deed. It was 6:23 p. m. when the father of the murdered girl touched the torch to the fuel which had been piled around the negro, and twenty minutes later a last convulsive shudder told that life was extinct. What agony the man suffered while the flames shrouded his flesh could only be guessed from the contortions of his face and the cries he gave from time to time. The executioners, who numbered about 300 citizens of Lincoln County, had not the least semblance of the ordinary mob. Their every act was deliberate and during all the preparations as well as throughout the sufferings of the negro hardly an unnecessary word was spoken. Preston Porter did not seem to realize the awful punishment that he was destined to undergo. As he had exhibited indifference to the enormity of his crime, so he seemed to lack all understanding of its terrible consequence. Some of the men wanted him stripped to nakedness before the match was applied. The majority voted against this, and it was not done. While he was standing in the crowd the negro was surrounded by men from all parts of the state. They asked him for pages from his Bible. He gave them, and was generous in the extreme. Leaf by leaf the Bible was torn apart and the sheets crammed into the pockets of the relic seekers. Before the fire was started the rope which held the negro by the neck was almost entirely cut up. The man holding it was generous, too, and he allowed all who wished to cut small pieces from it. These were all the souvenirs to be obtained, as naught but ashes was left of the murderer's body. Kerosene oil was applied to the wood, and after a brief pause Robert D. Frost, the father of little Louise Frost, whose cruelly mutilated body was found a week ago on that same spot, applied a match. For a moment but a little flickering flame arose. Then the oil blazed up, sparks flew into the air, and the wood began to crackle. Almost instantly the negro's trousers caught fire. Even though the flesh must have been scorched, he did not utter a sound. The flames crept slowly upward on his clothing, the sparks flew up in a cloud of pale smoke. Porter turned his head, and a frightful expression changed his face. With a sudden convulsive tugging he stretched his head as far from the rapidly increasing flames as possible and uttered a cry of pain. "O, my God, let me go, men. I've got something more to tell you. Please let me go. O, my God, my God!" The mob was pitiless. The remains were burned to ashes.

Comedian Is Badly Hurt.

Bud Weston of the team of comedians and military burlesquers, Belmont and Weston, was run down by a street car at Toledo, O., his head terribly gashed and several fingers cut from his left hand. He was to have opened in a six weeks' engagement at Proctor's theater, New York, next week. It is feared he is also injured internally.

Think Operator Was Slain.

W. J. Quigley, telegraph operator at Reno on the Duluth and Iron Range road, sixty miles north of Duluth, is supposed to have been robbed and murdered. The telegraph office was burned last night and the charred remains of Quigley were found in the ruins. An investigation has been instituted.

Crowd Welcomes Irish.

At Chicago ten thousand enthusiastic sons and daughters of Erin gave a rousing welcome to twenty members of the Chicago Boer ambulance corps, who reached that city Sunday by the Lake Shore train, fresh from five months' brisk fighting in the Transvaal.

Express Robbers Got $5,000.

Five thousand dollars in one package shipped by the bank of Sheldon, Iowa, to the Security National bank of Sioux City, disappeared from the safe of the American Express company in the branch office of the company at the Northwestern depot, in Sioux City.

Death Near Kaiser.

While the Kaiser was driving through the Gartenstrasse, Breslau, at noon Friday a well-clad woman threw an ax at the royal carriage. The weapon struck the back of the vehicle and the Kaiser escaped untouched. The woman was arrested. A provisional medical examination of the woman was made, and she was pronounced insane. The woman has been known locally as a crank, but hitherto she has not been regarded as mad enough to be placed in an asylum. The physicians have decided that she is suffering under the delusion that she is being persecuted. The idea that her act was in any way connected with anarchism has been finally abandoned.

Report of Cuban Customs.

The division of customs and insular affairs of the war department makes public a statement of transactions at the Havana custom-house during the month of October, 1900. The total amount of duties liquidated at the port during the month was $1,061,045. A total of 5,272 passengers landed at Havana from points outside of the island, 4,047 of whom were from Spain.

Six Killed in a Collision.

Six persons, four of them trainmen and two passengers, were killed in a head-end collision between a Pennsylvania extra freight train and the regular Lake Shore passenger train, two miles west of Polk. Both engines were demolished, all the passenger coaches left the tracks, and forty oil and coal cars of the freight were derailed. Many persons were injured.

Green Uniforms for Lobbyists.

Republican State Chairman Heryn of Indiana, in outlining the Republican policy in the coming legislative session, suggested it would be a good thing for the Legislature to pass a bill adopting a uniform for professional lobbyists to wear—a big green coat with red buttons—so that the legislators would know with whom they were dealing.

Many Shot at a Diet Session.

At Agram, in the Croatian diet, says a dispatch from Vienna to the London Express, "two opposing parties engaged in a free fight Saturday and wrecked the furniture and windows. One member of the diet emptied a six-chamber revolver at the opposition benches and his colleagues nearly lynched him. Many deputies were wounded."

Seeks Death by Two Means.

W. F. Feagle of Fort Smith, Ark., an expert in cotton and former member of the Arkansas legislature, was found dead in his room at the South End hotel, in East St. Louis. A box of morphine pills and an empty laudanum bottle seemed to indicate that he had committed suicide.

Filipino Junta Question.

United States Ambassador Choate has made representations to the British foreign office on the subject of the Filipino junta at Hongkong. The foreign office is investigating the matter and will reply as soon as the reports of the authorities at Hongkong are received.

"QUEENIE, OH, MY LONG-LOST LOVE."

from her finger, and thrusting it into his hand said:

"Here is your ring; you can marry Miss Sue."

With a heavy heart the angry Jack Long donned his topcoat and winding his muffler about his neck to keep the chill November air from his throat, went out into the night never to look upon the face of that adored being again.

He heard from Queenie occasionally,

and at last that she had gone east to live. How far east or what part of the east, he did not know, and was too proud to ask.

"WILL YOU DANCE WITH ME?"

was heard to exclaim with his last breath: "Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one!" No doubt this piteous appeal wrung from a noble heart was to some faithless sweetheart who had deserted him years before.

This simple little paragraph had been copied and recopied, and discussed, and made the theme for countless stories and ballads.

But Jack, who uttered it, didn't die. He lived to return to America, was honorably discharged, and resolved to pass another Thanksgiving in the old neighborhood where his young days had been spent. So he returned, after an absence of nearly ten years, and was at the house of his father on this evening, gazing sadly into the fire which seemed to reflect his own aching heart.

What was life to him now?

That chief charm, that only light to his soul, had gone out, leaving all gloom and darkness.

He was like an old man.

His hair, once dark as the raven's wing, showed traces of silver in it, and his face, so handsome, clear and fresh, now had the lines of care upon it.

Though he sometimes smiled and assumed an appearance of gaiety, his mother knew that his heart was sad.

But that mother had a hope that happiness would yet dawn on her son. She had a piece of intelligence she had not broken to him. Queenie Graham, after an absence of ten years, had returned to visit an aunt.

There was to be a great Thanksgiving party at Jack's grandmother's, the oldest lady in the neighborhood, at which she was to invite all the young folks, for "Grandma Goodwin" took great pleasure in young people.

Queenie would no doubt be there, and she determined that Jack should meet her. The mother knew that her son's pride would keep him away if he knew Queenie was to be there, so she kept that surprise a secret from him.

She little knew how love had humbled Jack's pride.

In the vest pocket of the veteran, he carried the self same ring which Queenie had thrust back on him ten years before. It was next his heart when he stormed San Juan hill, and he hoped if he was slain the bullet would pass within the golden circle of his youthful love, and that he might die with her name on his lips.

But fate destined Jack to live. He was once more home, among friends who had crowded about to hear him tell of the wild charge and the storm of death.

Would he go to grandmother's next day to the Thanksgiving dinner? Yes, he would.

The mother was happy.

The old carriage was loaded with jolly young folks and middle-aged people, and among them the veteran of San Juan.

Grandma's table groaned with plenty; goose and turkey, pies and candies, cider, nuts and apples in abundance.

The Instinct of Liberty.

Nature imprints upon whatever we see, That has a heart and life in it, "Be free!"

The Barrington Review

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

M. T. LAMEY, Ed. and Pub.

Entered at the postoffice at Barrington, Ill., as second-class matter.

Saturday, November 24, 1900.

Illinois is now the third state in point of population in the Union. It now has a population of 4,821,550 as against 3,826,350 in 1890, an increase of 995,200, or 26 per cent.

Since election prominent politicians have been in daily conference in Chicago. It is now announced that Governor-elect Yates will make a clean sweep of Tanner appointees. There is much distress manifested by the expectant holders.

Eggs have climbed up into the class with porter house and sirloin steaks in the produce market. Strictly fresh hen fruit is now selling at 25 cents and city dealers find it difficult to meet the demand. The scarcity is not due to a hen trust, but, to the activity of the dealers who wish to corner the market for storage purposes to realize fancy prices later in the season when the hens take their winter vacation. We may look for a still further increase as the holiday season advances.

The Democracy of Lake county has at last conquered that of McHenry county and there is much rejoicing in consequence. In the vote polled at the recent election Lake shows 2,235; McHenry 2,063 and Boone 703. Thus Lake county gains two additional representatives in coming conventions of the party, over McHenry. It is said, by those inside the charmed circle, that Little Boone will break its alliance with McHenry and associate with Lake county thereby assisting Lake to dictate in the future as McHenry has in the past.

It is not beyond the range of possibilities that the city of Chicago will constitute a county by itself. The townships outside the incorporated municipality will not consolidate and form a Greater Chicago. They are wise in standing out against any plan so far offered by the Civic Federation. THE REVIEW has kept its readers informed of the progress of conferences held by the Country Town Federation and representatives of the city, and in another column in this issue will be found additional matter on the subject.

The Libertyville Independent contains the following: "Speculation is rife even at this early day as to the election two years hence. After their last meeting the board of supervisors talked a little politics, or some of them did, and ventured a guess or two. Of course, it is impossible to learn their predictions. However, men who are near to some of the members will tell you it is their belief that Supervisor Swayer of the board will be a candidate for county clerk. Mr. Hendee, the present incumbent covets Representative Lyon's toga and "will go after it." It would seem this speculation is premature, but you hear it and frequently at that." Opinions and guesses are always in order but are often found to be very much at variance with the result. Many are the changes which are likely to occur in the next two years and it is certainly early to pick the ticket for 1902.

The cause represented by the Interstate Good Roads association, which has been in session in Chicago the past week, is one worthy of encouragement and support. The plan for appointing committees to labor with the thirty-eight State Legislatures and to carry the good roads question directly to Congress is a practical one. The majority of property owners have not yet come to the point where they realize that it is cheaper to pay for solid roads than to flounder through bad ones. There are weeks at a stretch in the spring and autumn when the farmers and country merchants of the west find the highways in an impassable condition. In this section the roads are in very good shape for traffic but there is still room for improvement. There is a large loss of trade and farm products every year because of poor roads. Smaller loads must be hauled and more horses kept owing to this cause. Give us good gravel roads and wide-tire vehicles.

Heard on the Street.

The wind strikes raw upon our cheek;
Erewhile smiling skies are gray and drear;
The leafless, shivering trees stand gaunt and bleak;
The frost is on the vine—and fall is here!
The iceman wears a dark and troubled frown.
While smiles upon the coalman's face appear:
The summer maiden sheds her flimsy gown
And worketh hard for furs—for fall is here.
The juicy oyster reigneth all supreme.
Buckwheat pancake time is drawing near;
Upon our sight the flaming lobsters gleam;
The pumpkin pie appears—for fall is here!
The pink shirtwaist upon the shelf is laid:
The straw hat disappears until next year;
The summer girl forgets the vows she made;
White duck pants are gone—for fall is here!
Now get from hock ye overcoat forthwith,
Now doth the flut'ring snowflake appear:
Wintry winds will wail, and that's no myth;
So get the flannels out—for fall is here!
—Purloined from Chicago Chronicle.

The fattened turkey now roosteth high for his days are numbered and the executioner is abroad. The proud bird of the barn yard, must be sacrificed that man may properly render thanks for blessings bestowed.

It was only a letter but the contents changed the life of the recipient. A good fellow among his associates he was; generous to a fault. His life had not been without its trials and disappointments. His admiration for one of the best little women on this globe had strengthened his ambition to press forward in the mad race for preferment. He believed that some day would come a time when he might rest content in the sunshine of agreeable companionship. But how frail are the foundations upon which some hopes are builded. The future of this Barringtonian will be dark and desolate because she has written "we can be friends, nothing more."

A citizen was groping his way on Main street Wednesday night singing "Come up Silver Moon, Guide the Taxpayer on His Way." The chorus was interspersed with some words hardly in rhyme with moon but fitted in with slammed. Not a 40 candle power incandescent shed a ray of brightness through the murky pall of night. Why the glim failed to glimmer no man but the manipulator of the artificial lighting knoweth.

The teacher in a school not far from the center of population of this village, placed the following part of a psalm on the blackboard, "As the heart panteth after the waterbrooks," and asked the meaning. None of the class seemed to know anything about the word panteth. She finally asked "What does pants mean?" One bright youngster quickly answered "them things what a man has to wear or stay in the house." Good definition.

"He ought to be hung by the toes until dead!" was the terrible punishment a farmer of Barrington township wishes meted out to a milk dealer of Chicago. He was patiently awaiting a check for $128 for lacteal fluid furnished an oily-tongued purchaser in the city. If some of our people would look up the financial rating of the parties to whom they ship their products they would have more money and less experience.

Does Barrington desire a manufacturing plant located in its midst? If the expressions of opinion are to be believed the people are favorable to any project of benefit to the village. But it requires more than talk to secure factories. Get together, pull with a will, bring to the light of day the idle capital hidden away in bureau drawers, old stockings, etc., and invest it. The almighty dollar counts.

True love never runs smooth. The following portion of a letter found its way to the Reporter About Town: "At last I have found out the reason why you do not answer my letters and if you let those childish ways of yours get ahead of you, you will find trouble right now with this chicken. When did I ever turn my nose up at you as you have told? You thought you would spite me by not—" There is no balm to heal such a wound as the fair one to whom this epistle was addressed has suffered. A love sick lass will overlook most anything but when the object of her dreams elevates his olfactory organ at her that settles it. Answer his letter? Never!

Of Service to Our Readers.

[From the Camden, S. C., Messenger.]
We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we haven't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. This testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their homes as a safeguard against croup. O, beauty! what a powerful weapon thou art. The bravest men fall at thy feet. No wonder women take Rocky Mountain Tea to prolong that joyous spell. Ask your druggist.

A Thanksgiving dance will be held at Lake Zurich next Thursday evening, November 29, under the auspices of the Lakeside orchestra. Good music and a pleasant time is assured. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The second monthly teachers' meeting was held at the school house Saturday, Superintendent Marvin conducting the session. The forenoon subject was "Foreign Powers" and the afternoon "Language Arts." A good attendance and a very interesting meeting is reported.

The Wauconda flour and feed mill is now having a big run. Last Saturday over 900 bushels of feed and 100 bushels of wheat were ground. Mr. Spencer is receiving praise for the good quality of flour he is turning out and is drawing patrons from over a distance of twenty miles. This speaks well for the Wauconda mill.

Lawrence Kinsala, who has been confined in the village calaboose since last Wednesday evening on a charge of forgery, was given a hearing at one o'clock Tuesday afternoon. State's Attorney C. T. Heydecker of Waukegan was here to prosecute the case, while Hon. H. B. Burritt conducted the case for the defendant. Judge Torrance presided. The defendant waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $200.00. Patrick Kinsala, the defendant's father, signed the bonds and Lawrence was released.

The Wauconda Junior club turned out in full force Monday evening and assembled at the home of Mrs. Ladd, where the evening was most pleasantly spent at crokinole and carroms. At 10 o'clock refreshments were served, consisting of fruit, cookies, popcorn and coffee, after which all went home, well pleased with the evening spent. Those present were: Norman Ladd, Jasper Davis, Earl Golding, Leo Mailman, Elmer Duers, George Harris, Clyde Harris, Fred Griswold, Chester Golding, Frank Reilly and Homer Sensor.

The Mystic Workers had a very pleasant social gathering at the M. W. A. hall Friday evening of last week. The evening, as has invariably been the case, turned out stormy and disagreeable, but despite the weather an assemblage of fifty or sixty persons were in attendance and passed the evening very pleasantly at cards, carroms and crokinole, intercepted with short program. At 10:30 o'clock refreshments were served, after which the floor was cleared and dancing was indulged in until the midnight hour. C. A. Hapke kindly furnished music for the occasion and a most pleasant time is the verdict of all.

ACROSS THE BROAD PACIFIC.

More About Beautiful Honolulu and Hawaiian Islands.

ON BOARD U. S. TRANSPORT THOMAS, BETWEEN HONOLULU, H. I., AND NAGASKI, JAPAN, October 6, 1900.

Editor Review:—

In my last letter I told you about our trip to Pali. After passing the Royal Mausoleum, we sighted, about three miles from the city, the electric light plant and a mile further passed two huge reservoirs connected with the water system of Honolulu. Near there is a great stone wall and palace, long since abandoned, once the home of King Kamehameha III. Unfortunately we were not permitted to view the interior. Continuing up this road the scenery proved grand, the vegetation tangled and dense, the drive invigorating. The distance from Honolulu to the Pali is about six and one-half miles, and the road has many turns before the summit is reached. The mountains on either side rise to the height of 4,000 feet and are clad in the most beautiful tropical verdure, calling forth exclamations of delight from the visitor. The Pali affords a magnificent view, unequalled for its beauty of rich coloring. Just before you reach there the road takes an abrupt turn and plunges down to the face of the cliff winding for a mile before it reaches the plain below. We reach the objective point and all exclaim "Is not this grand!" It is a panorama which cannot be described in words—you must see it, and wonder in astonishment. The cliff falls abruptly 500 feet; the wind blows continuously at the rate of 40 miles an hour. Five or six of our party were fortunate and bold enough to make the ascent of at least 4,000 feet and reach the summit of the surrounding mountains, but I only reached one-fourth the distance. The view from these mountains is simply immense. A number of the party had kodaks with them and many choice pictures were secured. I will endeavor to send you a collection which, no doubt will interest you.

There is an old story told of the Pali which runs like this. In 1783, or about that time, Kamehameha I., the conqueror or Napoleon of Hawaii, determined to put the islands under one government. Seven of the group were conquered and the enemy had taken refuge at Honolulu which lies on the island of Oahu, this being the last to be besieged. The King made his last attack there and the enemy fled up this valley, and just where the road turns to the summit a desperate battle was fought. Kamehameha and warriors literally cut the enemy to pieces, hundreds of them were thrown from this frightful precipice which falls 500 feet in sheer descent, and up to not many years ago their bones were to be seen whitening in the sun. The view from this point beggars description. The eye can look over a magnificent distance and the island of Oahu lies like a panorama of beauty before the vision. That much for Pali.

After admiring the scenery about for sometime we started on the return to the city. After partaking of refreshments we ventured out again, Punch Bowl Hill being the objective point. This is an extinct crater and situated back of Honolulu, and is reached in a walk of half an hour. The road winds around the hill affording a view of the beautiful scenery about Honolulu and a portion of the Nuuanu valley. The summit is about 500 feet above sea level. Here can be secured a bird's-eye view of the city. After we had taken in the sights from the top of this mountain we returned to the city where was pointed out to us many of the beautiful streets and handsome residences which beautify Honolulu. Nuuanu Avenue and King street are the two finest thoroughfares and are in reality grand boulevards, lined by elegant mansions, lovely gardens, choicest palm trees, tropical flowers, which render them magnificent. We had the pleasure of visiting Claus Spreckels' mansion (the sugar king) and it is certainly a palatial pile. I was informed that the interior cost $1,000,000, but with all its luxury it has been vacant the past seven or eight years. A number of us wished Mr. Spreckels was our uncle.

At six o'clock our sight seeing trip ended, it had cost us $1.00 each—cheap for the sights witnessed.

After supper aboard the transport our party visited the Hawaiian Hotel where one of the bands from the Thomas rendered a concert. Ex-queen Liliuokalani was present.

I noticed some amusing incidents in the harbor. The Kanake boys were continually swarming around the ship in the water and would dive under the water for nickles tossed overboard invariably securing the nickel before it reached the bottom. September 27, we decided to make Waikiki Beach a visit. It compares with Long Branch, Far Rockaway or Coney Island for surf bathing. We boarded a tram car drawn by a pair of mules; paid a ten cent fare, and after a ride of forty minutes arrived at Waikiki Inn. Most of our party took advantage of a bath, and surely it was rare sport. We had what they call surf-boards, which resembles an American ironing board, and is used for surf riding. This consists in waiting for a wave, then throw yourself length wise on the board and the wave will carry you with great rapidity toward shore. A number of us made a failure of this—especially myself. I invariably went head down instead of head up. After a season of this amusement we strolled along the beach gathering shells and coral which is found in abundance.

I attended a concert at the Hawaiian Hotel by a native Hawaiian band and Hawaiian lady vocalists. The entertainment was excellent.

Allow me to give a brief description of Honolulu. It is a thriving seaport with a population of 36,000. There are 8,000 to 10,000 Chinese, mainly engaged in the different lines of trade; Japanese, Portuguese, Germans and a majority of natives, and since the annexation, a large number of Americans. Little can be seen of the city upon entering the harbor owing to the dense growth of trees which line along the sea shore from Diamond Head to Kamehameha Shoals, a distance of six miles. The features of the city are its fine buildings, excellent streets, and metropolitan appearance. One thing that astonishes the stranger is that you are everywhere addressed in English, for the opinion would naturally prevail that a foreign language is spoken there. American and Hawaiian flags float side by side on shore and in the harbor. Even the police are elegantly uniformed and attentive and polite. If you ask for information they will not only tell you but accompany you and willingly show you. There are eight English papers published in the city, some daily and some weekly, several monthly; four Hawaiian papers, two Chinese, two Japanese and two Portuguese.

The price of beverages, such as beer, wines, whiskies, etc., is said to be very high; nothing in that line being served less than 25 cents a drink. An old toper from the States would require a fortune out there. Board at the first-class hotels such as the Hawaiian and Arlington—they are palaces—I was informed, was from $75.00 to $90.00 a month.

The system of education is in charge of a board of six, consisting of four males and two females. These six persons have entire charge of the public schools, disposal of the school fund, etc. They select and appoint teachers, in fact they control everything pertaining to educational matters. There are about 100 schools in the city; education is compulsory and is established by law; all children between the age of six and fifteen years must attend. There is also a law prohibiting children being on the street later than nine o'clock at night. The city is well governed.

Yours truly,
Dr. M. F. CLAUSIUS,
Adj. Asst. Surgeon U. S. Army.

A Sacrifice To Conscience

by
H. B. Welsh

"That is what I cannot tell you, Miss Lennox," said Paul. His heart had sunk like lead at her words, and still more at the change in her voice and expression. "But one thing I can tell you," he said, after a minute's pause—"I have doubts about the validity of the charges made against the accused, and I could not conscientiously take up the side of the prosecution when I am more than doubtful of the criminal's guilt."

Cecil burst into a laugh. Paul felt a chill come over him as he heard that laugh, clear and silvery as it was.

"Oh, just young judge!—a Daniel come to judgment!" she cried, in a tone of mockery, which hit Paul hard in her voice. "Why, it is the first time I knew of a barrister being troubled with a conscience where a brief was concerned! My dear Mr. Enderby, you are going to let all chances slip past you like this? If so, do your friends need to look forward to the time when you will be a successful Queen's Counsel or aspiring to the Woolpack?"

"If success depends on my putting wealth and ambition before honor and justice as an end, Miss Lennox," Paul answered gravely, "I certainly shall not attain it. But you do not mean what you say?" he added, a tone of keen pain in his voice.

He turned to her suddenly, and looking into the beautiful, fascinating face, a sudden wave of hot, young passion swept over him and he seized her hands.

"Cecil," he said, a little hoarsely, "for pity's sake say you do not mean that! I would willingly win fame and wealth that I might win you; but even for so precious a prize I cannot sacrifice my sense of right. Tell me, is there any hope for me, even if I do not attain such success as you dream of?"

For a moment there was silence—a silence during which Enderby's heart beat with almost sickening speed. He dared not look into her beautiful face. If he had done so, he would have seen an expression that would have chilled the warm passion in his voice.

At last she said, almost in a whisper, though they were in a deserted corner of the room, with no one near:

"Paul, I have always looked forward to your success, because—because I wished it to be also mine. Shall we make a compact 'twixt us twain, as Scotch people say? If you undertake this case with my father, and the case is won, we shall take future successes as granted, and you will win that prize you speak of."

Enderby's face paled, and his throat swelled, his pulses beat with the wild, strong pulsations of victory. He had just dared to hope for this great prize, and now, lo, it was almost within his hands! Almost! For nothing stood between him and it but this wretched man, who might be dying, or might be insane, for anything he knew, and his daughter. Nothing but a half-formed belief in the innocence of a criminal whose case he had not investigated. And all his future happiness was at stake.

Suddenly, as Paul Enderby hesitated, there came to his memory the words he had heard chanted in the gray old abbey last night:

"He that hath not taken reward against the innocent... though it were to his own hindrance."

He turned towards Cecil, the flush gone out of his face, his lips suddenly grave and set.

"You do not ask me to do this thing, Cecil—to sell my soul for your love?"

Her ripe red lips curved themselves as if into a laugh, then became steady, and, bending a little nearer to him, she whispered:

"Would you not give up anything on earth for my love, Paul?"

Somehow, the whisper, meant to tempt him beyond resistance, was the means of strengthening the manhood and uprightness of Paul Enderby. For one moment—only one—that strange revulsion of feeling which sometimes comes to a man in his love for a woman, came over him. He felt as if the beautiful girl he had loved so passionately had undergone some such change as that which the lovely Geraldine underwent when

"The lady's eyes they shrank in her head—

Each shrank up to a serpent's eye," and he saw her as a temptress, not as the woman he loved. He looked at her in the face.

"Anything but manhood and honor, Cecil. I should be worthy of scorn and contempt if I sold them for my happiness, or for the fulfilment of my dearest earthly hope."

For a moment Cecil Lennox's fair face grew dark and evil. She was accustomed to flattery and love. They were the very life of her soul, the breath of her life. She herself felt for Paul Enderby such love as such a woman is capable of; but in this moment it was changed to angry hatred.

"Very well," she said, all the softness gone out of her caressing tones, and a harsh ring in them which Enderby had never heard before, "that settles the question for us, Mr. Enderby. I have no doubt your decision is a wise one—for me. And now, will you excuse me if I speak to someone else? I see some of my friends are growing impatient."

Enderby bowed and left her, feeling as if a page in his life had closed forever.

CHAPTER VII.

It was the next day before Enderby was able to call upon Dr. Bunthorne.

"You are interested in these people, Enderby?" said the doctor, looking at the young man sharply.

Dr. Bunthorne was a clever man of middle age, whom Paul had known for many years.

"Were you aware the sick man had a doctor of his own attending him—Dr. Lyndon, whom I know by name and report?"

"I was aware of that, Dr. Bunthorne, though I did not mention it to you for fear professional etiquette, of which you doctors make a divinity, should prevent your going. The truth is, I'm afraid, Dr. Bunthorne, what I am going to say will be held as confidential?"

"Certainly! At the same time, you know, my dear Enderby, medical men make it a rule never to hear anything to each other's disadvantage?"

"More of your etiquette!" cried Enderby. "Well, I'm not going to say anything against your brother-professional; I'm simply going to ask your advice."

Very briefly he told how he had first met Jasmine Lloyd, and then repeated the incident of his last visit, and Jasmine's statement about the strange attacks to which her father had twice succumbed.

Dr. Bunthorne listened in silence, and when Paul ceased, he asked:

"Do you happen to have this bottle of medicine with you?"

Enderby produced it from an inner pocket, and laid it on Dr. Bunthorne's table. It was a largeish bottle, with the label on which "Hypophosphates" was printed still upon it.

The doctor lifted it and looked at it critically. There was a very small quantity of light-colored fluid at the bottom. The doctor uncorked it, and applied his nose to the mouth.

"Seems all right," he said critically. "However, you leave it with me, and I shall have it analyzed by my own analytical chemist. I don't half like the business, mind you; still, as you have applied to me, I feel bound to satisfy you so far. But, you know, thing is absurd. Dr. —, the man we speak of, has the highest reputation?"

"What should you say Mr. Lloyd suffering from?" Enderby interrupted.

"Well—ahem!—one hardly cares to say from a first examination. It looks rather like an epileptic attack from your description. He seemed all right when I saw him, only his mind was wandering a bit; he evidently did not know who or what I was."

"And yet when I spoke to him a few days ago he was perfectly sensible, and as sane as you or I," said Enderby. "Do attacks of this kind you speak of not affect the mind permanently?"

"Usually," answered the doctor dryly. "But, of course, there are cases of periodical insanity. I should say this is one."

As Paul Enderby walked slowly away from the doctor's West End house, he asked himself if perhaps he had been too hasty in forming his conclusions? Had his instinctive dislike of Dr. Lyndon misled him? If David Lloyd and the man Gerard were one and the same person—as he felt sure they were—was it not very likely that Sir Henry Lennox's account was the correct one, and that the crime of five years ago had been committed in a fit of temporary mental aberration?

He was very busy after that for a day or two. A brief had been put into his hands, and he had to be a good deal with his solicitor.

He was glad to be occupied just then. It kept him from thinking of Cecil Lennox, as he imagined he should do had he much leisure. He had been in love with her—of that he had no doubt, and he had lost her forever. It was natural he should feel such a blow deeply.

And yet, when leisure did come, the singular thing was that it was not Cecil Lennox's face which came up in Enderby's mind and haunted him so persistently. It was the soft, delicate face, half-child's, half-woman's, of Jasmine Lloyd.

Towards the end of the week he made up his mind to go and see them. He was turning round the corner which led to Burdon Mansions when a closed carriage drove rapidly past him.

Something in the turn-out seemed familiar to Enderby. He glanced at it, and as it rolled past him he caught a glimpse of the inmate—Sir Henry Lennox, leaning back on his cushions, his hands idly crossed on his knees, his eyes upon them, his face ghastly pale!

Could he have been seeing David Lloyd? The thought flashed through Enderby's mind, only to be dismissed instantly. But he hurried on towards the block of dull gray buildings, and in a few minutes found himself before the Lloyds' door.

But just as he was about to knock there was a sound of hurried steps inside, the door flew open, and Jasmine, pale and breathless, almost fell into Enderby's arms.

"Oh, Mr. Enderby! Oh, thank God! My father—my dear father! I think he is dying!"

"No, no, my child; not that—not so bad as that," said Enderby soothingly. He took her hand—it was trembling, and she herself was shaking from head to foot—and drawing her gently within the house, closed the door.

Jasmine was not crying, but her breath was coming in short, pitiful gasps, and there was a look of such terrible fear and grief in her dark eyes as touched Enderby strangely, feeling of pitying tenderness took possession of him.

"May I go to see him?" he asked, still holding her hand.

"Yes—oh, yes! But I am afraid no one can do much for him—not even a doctor. And his mind—oh, that is the worst of it—that is the worst of it!" cried the girl passionately, yet with strange control over her voice, so that it never rose above a whisper.

"He doesn't seem to know me—and he says such terrible things!"

They were at the door of the bedroom, which stood ajar. Jasmine went in, and Enderby followed her; and as he did so he heard the low, weak murmur of a voice that went on talking without cessation or alteration of tone. Jasmine grasped his arm, uttering a little cry under her breath.

"Look! look! Oh, he is looking at you!"

"The sick man had suddenly risen in bed. His ghastly face, hollow-cheeked and sunken-eyed, was turned to the door; in the dim eyes there was a strange flash of fire. He raised a thin, shaking finger, and pointed it at Enderby.

"Yes, it was for her sake I did it. Hal—and for yours! Oh, God, to think what I have suffered all these years for your sakes! And now I am come back, this is how you treat me! Hal, Hal! old friend, mate of other days, whom I loved and was proud of because you were getting on so well, and I—I knew I had helped you—yet how did you repay me? And my child—my little Jasmine, my little one—will you bring this shame on her head? Oh, God, most merciful, in His name, Hal, you will do it—you will!"

He fell back on his pillows with a moan, and his eyes closed. Jasmine, a sob bursting from her lips, sprang forward; but Enderby was before her. He bent over the sick man.

"No, no; thank God, he lives yet! Have you anything to give him to strengthen him? A little wine or brandy?"

"I have Doctor Lyndon's medicines, but I dare not give him any," whispered the girl, in an agonized tone. "He took the medicine—Doctor Lyndon gave it to him when I was out—and I am sure that has hurt him. Tell me what I shall do."

"Stay with him, and I shall run out myself for something," said Enderby hurriedly, and he was just about to do so when the sick man suddenly opened his eyes, and fixed them on Enderby's face. Then, with a great effort, he raised himself once more on his pillow, and spoke in a changed voice, slow and deliberate, yet with a certain determination in it. His eyes were fixed on Enderby's face, and the latter felt a strange thrill, so like did it seem as though the words were actually spoken to him.

"Then there is only one thing for me to do, and I will do it, Hal, for my child's sake. I must tell the whole truth, and I can do so. I have the proof—the proof!"

Once more he fell back in bed, his eyes closed. Enderby felt his pulse. It beat pretty regularly, though feebly and slowly.

A Noted Knight Templar Owes His Health to Peruna

Colonel T. P. Moody, a prominent Knight Templar, is well known in every city in the United States west of Buffalo, N. Y., as a Jeweler's Auctioneer. In the city of Chicago as a prominent lodge man, being a member of the K. T.'s and also of the Masons. The cut shows Colonel Moody in the costume of the Oriental Consistory Masons, 32d degree.

In a recent letter from 5900 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly."

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but the relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago I started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years."

"The soreness has left my stomach entirely and I am free from indigestion and dyspepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere."

"My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with a bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left her lungs and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly, T. P. Moody."

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to catarrh in different locations and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the surprise caused by the first publication of it to all people, both professional and non-professional, was amusing. And yet we have never enumerated all of the diseases which are classed as catarrh. It must be confessed, however, to see even this partial list drawn up in battle array is rather appalling. If the reader desires to see this list, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

LADY LETTER CARRIER.

Daughter of a West Virginia Farmer Enjoys That Distinction.

Uncle Sam has formally received into his service, as a United States mail carrier, the 18-year-old daughter of a West Virginia farmer. Miss Dora Wolfe had served a little apprenticeship to the duties with which she is now officially invested, by carrying the mail between Ripley and Sandyville, W. Va., during the illness of the former postman, and when the latter resigned she made successful application for the vacant position. The trip which she must make daily—one journey each way—between the above-named points is through a somewhat lonely region. Miss Wolfe makes it upon horseback. As her father, besides being a farmer, conducts a livery stable, she has good mounts at her disposal, and carries also two bags of mail. People have not yet quite accu- s- ied themselves to the sight of the young letter carrier as she passes daily by their fields and farm houses from her home at Ripley and back again. No one would doubt the chivalry of the West Virginian mountaineers, especially when a handsome girl is concerned, but Miss Dora Wolfe always goes armed when she transports the United States mails in her charge, if merely as a measure of ordinary precaution.

NEARLY A BREAK DOWN.

Mrs. Olberg, a Prominent Minnesota Lady, Tells a Remarkable Story.

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 19.—(Special)—There are few men and women in this state or indeed in the whole northwest, who have not heard, or do not know personally Mrs. Henriette C. Olberg of this city.

Mrs. Olberg was Judge of Linen and Linen Fabrics at the World's Fair, at Chicago, and Superintendent of Flax Exhibit at the International Exposition at Omaha, Nebraska, in 1898. Mrs. Olberg is Secretary of the National Flax, Hemp and Ramie Association, and Assistant Editor of the "Distaff."

Her official duties are naturally very onerous, and involve a great deal of traveling and living away from home. She says:

"During the World's Fair in Chicago, my official duties so taxed my strength, that I thought I would have to give them up. Through the continual change of food and irregular meal hours, and a poor quality of water, I lost my appetite, and became wakeful and nervous in the extreme. My kidneys refused to perform their usual duties. One of my assistants advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and sent for a box. I am pleased to say that I derived immediate and permanent benefit. I used three boxes, and feel ten years younger.

"I have great confidence in the efficacy of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and am always glad to speak a good word in their favor.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are weak women's best friend."

Pay for Keeping the Insane.

County Judge Gower, at Kankakee, decided a case involving the legality of a county's charging for the maintenance of insane patients at poor-houses when the patients are not of the pauper class. Luc Dandurand, 70 years old, has been insane since 1883. Seven years ago he was transferred from the Eastern Illinois hospital for the insane to the Kankakee poorhouse in accordance with a statute providing for the return to the various counties of all patients in excess of a certain quota. The county began suit to collect pay for his maintenance at the rate of $2 a week. Dandurand's conservator resisted payment on the ground that the patient was still insane and to all practical purposes an inmate of the state hospital. Judge Gower gave the county a judgment for $520, the full amount of the claim, less that barred by the statute of limitations.

Argue Teachers' Petition.

One day in the Sangamon Circuit court was engaged in listening to arguments by counsel on the demurrer of the state board of equalization to the Chicago teachers' petition for mandamus to compel the board to tax franchises of 19 corporations in Cook county. John S. Miller of Chicago made the opening argument in support of the demurrer. He contended that the court has no jurisdiction, and that if it had, there is no cause for action. The board, according to the petition, will act, though it is charged contrary to the desires of the petitioners. No proof is produced to show that the board will violate the law. State's Attorney Smith and I. T. Greenacre of Chicago followed Mr. Miller. Atty.-Gen. Akin closed the arguments supporting the points made by Mr. Miller.

Manager Durborow Resigns.

Allan C. Durborow, the Illinois manager of the Maryland Casualty company, has resigned, to take effect Dec. 15, and has made a new connection, which will be announced in a short time. Mr. Durborow says that his relations with the company are entirely amicable, but it is known that he was averse to the Maryland's going into the plate-glass compact. He placed the company in the West, retaining Illinois as his own territory. His general agency for the Pacific Surety company is not affected by the change. President Stone of the Maryland says that the new manager, when appointed, will become a member of the compact.

Mrs. Anna Mitchell secured an injunction from Judge Chetlain at Chicago which forbids her husband, as she requests, from stopping or addressing her on the street or standing around near her place of abode. Her husband, Don Carlos S. Mitchell, is a police operator. She alleges in her bill that since a separation, which occurred in April, he has annoyed her by stopping her on the street and holding her hands. He is also said to have held her by the arms so that she could not move and then pinched and choked her.

To Attach C. M. Reed's Land.

The Morton Trust company has brought suit in attachment in the Circuit Court at Chicago for $60,710 damages against Charles M. Reed of Erie, Pa. This amount is alleged to be due to the Trust company on a note signed in April, 1890, by Mr. Reed. Mr. Reed is a millionaire. The note was given in settlement of a business transaction. The attachment was issued in Chicago that a lien might be secured on property here.

FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the obligations of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected, that severe mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA for the Blood and Nerves

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

Mrs. MARY FRANCES LITTLE, of 3 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura—blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

Mrs. WILLIAM BARTELS, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to see that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

Of Interest to Women.

A woman is a great deal better than her neighbor and, what is more, she knows it.

Nothing makes a woman laugh more than a new set of teeth with gold filling in them.

When a man doesn't know enough to make a living his wife says he is too honest to succeed.

The Chicago Tribune says that a woman in that city is about to build a twenty story building. There is no lofty height to which woman may not aspire.

When a widow buys crepe and complexion powder at the same time it is hard to tell whether she is in mourning for her deceased husband or the one she wants to get.

Already the alert hostess have made plans to introduce the extended sock the coming summer. This will be 19 inches long, and its ribbed top, exactly like that of the man's short sock, will, in cases more or less numerous, obviate the necessity of wearing garters. Many women last summer who were not sufficiently courageous to adopt the sock outright looped the long stocking in folds and gartered it just below the knee. While this gave a measure of coolness it was not considered dressy, and is doomed to give way to the new extended sock.

The following little hint may not be out of place at this time when there are fashions that are not to be commended—the kangaroo walk, the tinselled jacket and the pancake hat. The beauty seeker should remember that the most charming picture may be spoiled by its frame, and she should, therefore, use good taste in the choice of her garments. She should keep in mind that her character shines through her face, and is betrayed by act and gesture. There are no lotions for bad manners; no balms for unlovely dispositions. Moral defects cannot be cured in a day, and the beauty seeker must bear in mind the importance of watching the soul as well as the body.
