The farmers of this vicinity have been quite enraged the past week, owing to the failure of some to obtain their pay for last month's shipment of milk to Chicago. It seems that some of the Chicago dealers are after the Shippers' union and want to break it up. They are the ones who have not received their pay. The farmers are bound to bring the dealers to time and they will endeavor to strenghten the union, as they claim it is the only way to guard against unscrupulous dealers. If the farmers will stick together they can make the dealers come to time. No matter if a few sliip to those who do not recognize the union, but they will find the time will come when they will be left with a big milk bill unpaid.

Personal Tax Absurdities.

W. O. Cadwaller, a member of 'the state board of equalization, has prepared a comparative statement going to show that Cook county personal property is assessed relatively too low and that if it were assessed like such property in other parts of the state Chicago and Cook county would get revenue enough without assessing corporations excessively, says the Chicago Chronicle. The comparison is made between the seven congressional districts of Cook and Lake counties and the next seven congressional districts in their numerical order from the 8th to the 14th inclusive. The showing is certainly suspicious. Leaving out animals and the like, which we would expect to find in greater numbers in rural districts, let us take some other

He is sexton for a white church in a Fayette county town, and one afternoon as he was in front sweeping the pavement a strong wind arose, tearing a piece of the cornice off and taking a few bricks out of the wall. London dispatch: The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail says he understands dispatches have been received in Paris announcing Admiral Caillard's division of the French Mediterranean squadron had arrived at Smyrna and had seized the customs.

Paris in Feverish Expectation. Paris dispatch: Paris is in feverish expectation as the arrival of Admiral Caillard's fleet at some Turkish port is momentarily expected. Crowds are gathered in front of all the newspaper offices and the cheering at the theaters and public halls at the mention of France's navy amounts to an ovation for that arm of the service. While no clash is expected, the Parisian who would not cheer at such an outcome is rare. France is ready for war, believing that Russia is thoroughly in harmony with the views of M. Delcasse France congratulates it-self on the cordial fashion in which all other governments have declared their neutrality, a fact due, say the friends of the foreign minister, to the action of M. Delcasse in notifying the powers some time before the departure of Admiral Caillard's division of the step he intended to take.

Russia to Co-Operate. The Bussian squadron opposite Smyrna is expected to co-operate with the rrench ships, at least to the extent of furnishing moral support to Admiral Caillard, while British, Greek and Italian divisions are hurrying toward different points in the neighborhood. According to Comte de Mouy, former minister to Turkey, the sultan's only hope is to revive the specter of the "eastern question" in the face of the united fleets, thus endeavoring to lead France further than it desires to go. "However," said Count de Mouy, "the nation has every confidence in M. Delcasse's foresight, all Frenchmen believing that the time has come not only to right France's money grievances against Turkey but the long series of infringements by the porte on French rights in the orient."

Decries Constans' Action. In the chamber in the afternoon Marcel Sembat, socialist, urged on M. Delcasse the necessity of submitting to parliament at once the questions relating to the Turkish crisis, the latest phase of which he said, may lead to the most serious complications of an international character. M. Sembat expressed regret that France's minister to Turkey, M. Constans, should have acted for the private financial interests of Lorando and Tubini, whose French nationality is of recent date, to the extent of being compromised by his actions, instead of espousing France's more general interests which have been so long violated. M. Delcasse said in reply that the government considered the moment inopportune to mention the destination of Admiral Caillard's division. He dwelt at length on the details of the troubles which the French company that built the quays at Constantinople had experienced and reitcrated the statement that the sultan had shown bad faith. The French government, he said, was firmly resolved to exact solid guaranties that France's comorient would be respected. France as godfather.

gat no material advantages, but would not consider the incident closed until it was possessed of a certainty that France's interests were freed once for all from the sultan's malevolence and tyranny. Long-con-tinued cheers followed this speech.

TUESDAY'S ELECTIONS

Tammany Overthrown and Shepard Is Defeated.

W. T. JEROME IS VICTORIOUS

The Entire Fusion Ticket Goes in with Low-Ohio, Iows, Nebraska, Connecticut and Pennsylvania - Kentucky Democratic-Other States.

Seth Low, former president of Co-umbia university and four years ago the Citizens' Union candidate for the first mayor of Greater New York, was elected the second mayor of Greater New York by a plurality of about 28,000 to 40,000, defeating Edward M. Shepard of Brooklyn, the Democratic nominee. The campaign was an exciting one, and the vote, though somewhat less than at the presidential saries sent by American Diplomatic election a year ago, was the largest Agent. Dickinson from Sofia to treat ever polled in a municipal contest in this country. In addition to the canvass for mayor public interest largely centered in the nomination by the fusionists of William Travers Jerome for district attorney, and Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck, by the Democrats for justice of the supreme court in the territory contained in New York county. States, regarding the whereabouts and Jerome was elected by a plurality of feated, running behind his ticket from 15,000 to 20,000. Returns also indicated complete triumph of the Greater New York fusion ticket, Charles Vincent Fornes, the nominee of the Citizens' Union and the Republicans for president of the board of aldermen, defeating George M. Van Hoesen, the Democratic nominee. E. M. Grout, for the last four years Democratic president of the borough of Brooklyn, now the fusionist nominee for comptroller, has also defeated W. W. Ladd, Jr., Democrat.

KEEP YOUR SECRETS.

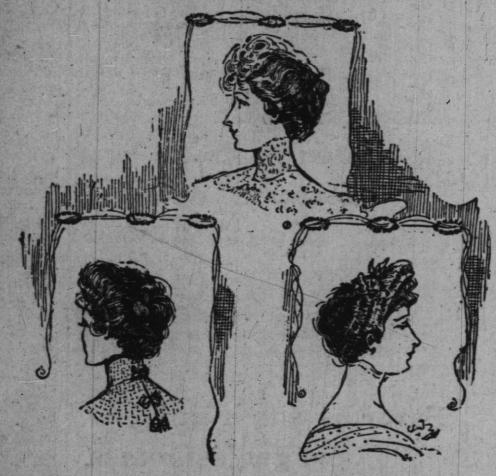

When in a "state of nerves" it is best not to seek human sympathy. Likely as not our friends have troubles of their own and it's altogether too bad to risk breaking the possible weak link of the chain of friendship. And this is just what lots of us do. When everything is using us awry we go to see Sue or Kit. If shown the palegreen silk Sue has just bought for a waist we remind her how ghastly Louise looked in that shade of pale green and furthermore acridly admit it's a color we'd never choose for ourselves. On the other hand, if we favor(?) Kit with our society we probably give her to understand that we think her children ought to be turned out during the visit, or, if she has no children, we perhaps suggest that there ought to be a law compelling people to make their maids wear feltsoled shoes. Or perhaps it's the dog or the sunshine. And then no doubt we go home and waste time wondering why friends aren't what they used to be. So take that famous piece of advice and "don't." When the blue devils get you just fly away to the park, unless you can get to the country or the seashore. There you may tell your trials to the trees, with no fear of upsetting them. Their nerves are warranted. They'll murmur any amount of consolation and go right along with their work, caring not one whit whether or not you think their still "roll by," none the worse for from the bottom.

Should none of these be within your reach there's still one solace left. You can surely recall some person much worse off than yourself. In conning over his or her woes you will at least find comparative comfort. At any rate, save your friends. You may need them some day.

pointed out in a recent letter to a daily contemporary on an entirely difshort, and excessive feeling disturbs ferent subject that women's incomes the brain, weakens the heart and are generally controlled by the more "generous" sex. Women's allowances are more often than not cut down to the slenderest proportions; and it is astonishing what they are expected to do with their money. Men, on the other hand, control their own purses; they have no account to give of the way they spend, and if they kept an account of the money they so "generously" give way, they would find that they spend sums which they would account appalling were they on the debit side of wives and sisters. It is a favorite formula of man that woman is reckless and extravagant; but if one comes to go into details, instead of looking at totals, it will generally be found that the tables can be easily turned, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. In nine cases out of ten, nay, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred could the truth be known, a man tips, and tips generously to save himself trouble, and in order to keep up appearances. A woman, as a rule, has little margin from which to give extras, but when she does, she is not actuated by the same motives. In money matters man is rarely just to woman, and it is for this reason, perhaps, that she has shown symptoms of a revolt.

Hanna Presents Government's Side of Schley Case.

END OF TRIAL NOW IN SIGHT.

Lawyer Contends That Schley Should Have Taken Imitative in Ascertaining Presence or Absonce of Insurgents Without Signals from Any One.

Washington dispatch: The closing cenes in the Schley case are now being enacted.

Immediately after luncheon the argument in the case was begun, E. P. Hanna, assistant to Judge Advocate Lemly, opening for the government. Mr. Hanna told of the arrival of the flying squadron at Key West and read a number of prelimidary orders to Com-modore Schley. Speaking of the run of the flying squaeron from Key West to Cienfuegos Mr. Hanna claimed that the trip was not made as expeditiously as possible.

Should Have Investigated. Mr. Hanna called attention to Admiral Schley's statement as made in his letter to the senate that he did not know of the presence of the insurgents arrival of Captain McCalla May 24, but he called attention to the fact that It was admitted that the McCalla memoranda giving the information had been received on the 23d. He contended that Admiral Schley should himsen have taken the initiative in ascertaining the presence or absence of insurgents without waiting for signals from anyone. Following the operations of the flying squadron he quoted a number of Admiral Schley's dispatches. He said that at the time of leaving Cicnfuegos he was under order No. 8, telling him if he was "satisfied that the Spanish fleet was not at Cienfuegos to proceed with all dispatch, but cautiously, to Santiago." "How it was possible," said the speaker, "in view of this order, to report to the secretary of the navy, as Admiral Schley did, that he would not move until the next day, is inexplicable." He then stated that while Admiral Schley had reported that he would not leave until the 25th, he did actually start on the evening of the 24th. Mr. Hanna had not completed his argument when the court adjourned for the

THE CORONATION CHAIR.

Protest Against an Attempt to Make It

The coronation chair is one of the most interesting pieces of historic furniture that exists; as a venerable witness in the long history of this country its value cannot be overestimated, and not only so, but as a work of art, made by order of King Edward I to inclose the stone from Scone, its importance is equally great. What was the fate that befell this chair under the sympathetic charge of the officials? Mature reflection convinced these gen-tlemen that it did not look sufficiently "smart," and, no doubt, had it been laced, gray with age and history, on the "bath red" spotted carpet, surrounded as it was with the gimcrack brass railings from St. James' palace it would have stood a silent and yet eloquent witness against modern official taste. The chair was placed in the hands of the upholsterers. It was smeared with brown stain and varnish, and otherwise tinkered by Messrs. Banting's man. Dragged along by sundry workmen over the unprotected mosaic pavement of Abbot Ware, I myself saw the chair brought round from the recesses where it had been "doctored." The flat surface of the chair, back, and arms, still retain in places the ancient gesso ornamentation. Into these surfaces Mr. Wright, in the vicinity of Cienfuegos until the the clerk of works of the Abbey, found men driving "tacks" to hold some of their upholsteries, and very properly protested.-Nineteenth Century.

The decision of the supreme court of Illinois granting the application of the Teachers' federation of Chicago for an order compelling the state board of equalization to assess for taxation the stocks, bonds and franchises of twenty-three corporations is one of the most sweeping opinions ever handed down by an American court. Its local and immediate effect is to add to the taxable properties of the state of Illinois $235,000,000, but the principle which it establishes is what gives it its great importance. It is of general interest in view of its possible bearing upon the question of corporate taxation in

By the law of the state taxation of the intangible property of corporations was permissible, though such taxation had never been attempted. The constitutionality of the law had never been tested. The teachers of Chicago had succeeded in inducing the city government to grant them an increase in salaries, but no funds could be found with which to meet this increase. The Teachers' federation instituted an investigation, which resulted in the suit to force the corporations to pay taxes on the hundreds of millions of properby which had hitherto been exempt.

The matter was taken into the courts. The teachers secured a mandamus from the Sangamon county cirruit court. The corporations appealed from that court's decision. Again the teachers were victorious. As no federal point is involved it is asserted by competent attorneys that no appeal to the United States courts can be taken, and the corporations seem to have no alternative but to pay the taxes or move out. It is predicted that many of them will take the latter course and go to other states where the laws favor their exemption from taxation. Such corporations as street railway, gas and water companies, however, owe their existence to municipal franchises, and whatever action the manufacturing interests may take they will have to return to the public treasuries a good percentage of their earnings for the privileges which they enjoy.

The court's order is addressed to the present board of equalization, which the increase in the state and city revenues which the teachers have brought about becomes available immediately.

Cook county alone has 4,000 corporations and against them similar suits will be brought and will undoubtedly be successful, as the conditions are the same as in the case just decided. Whether the railways which traverse the state can be made to pay taxes under the present law is a matter which is now engrossing the attention of the Chicago lawyers.

The announcement that Yale will refuse to play football with Columbia next season is encouragingly suggestive that the practice of mayhem is likely to become unpopular in football circles. Yale bases its refusal on the ground that during the game played recently one of the Columbia players seized a Yale man by the foot and tried to sprain his ankle. Immediately afterward another Columbia man bit a Yale player's finger nearly off in spite of the fact that the Yale man courteously said to him, "I beg your pardon, but that's my finger you're biting." The action taken by the Yale authorities implies that certain incidental features of the game are being discred-

M. Milleraud, the French minister of commerce, announces that the delicate question of the precise determination of the kilogram is settled. What the problem of the kilogram may be is a further question to those who understand that one cubic centimeter of distilled water makes a gram and a thousand grams make a kilogram. But possibly the real problem was the precise determination of the cubic centimeter.

Success of Rural Free Delivery. In no department of the federal servce has there been such phenomenal growth or such prompt manifestation of popular appreciation as in that branch of the postoffice department devoted to free rural mail delivery. It s recalled that the first appropriation to inaugurate this experiment, which was only $10,000, was made five years ago, the route running from Charleston, W. Va. The appropriation for the service during the present year is $3,-500,000, and the postmaster general will ask congress to allow $6,250,000 for next year.

There are now 6,000 routes in operation, one carrier to each route and each carrier serving an average of 600 perions. If the present policy of the government in the matter of free rural delivery extensions is maintained, it is only a question of time when it will cover a million square miles of territory and will serve not less than 30,-000,000 persons. The postoffice department should insist on a high standard of postroads as a condition precedent to the extension of the free rural delivery, thus stimulating the construction and maintenance of good highways, which is an incidental public benefit of Whether free rural mail delivery can be made to pay the cost of its maintenance or not its success as a practical extension of the postal service has been demonstrated beyond controversy. Nor is there any question as to its talue to rural communities or its acceptance by them as a welcome institution for bringing them in closer touch with the centers of industrial and educational interest.

Candidate For Statehood. The people of Oklahoma and Indian Territory are discussing with much earnestness the question of statehood and are knocking at the door for admission to the national family of commonwealths. The proposition is that Oklahoma and the Indian Territory shall unite and ask congress to merge them and admit the united territory as a state. Oklahoma has about 39,000 square miles and the Indian Territory about 31,000 square miles, so that in area the new division would be about 70,000 square miles, or nearly twice the size of Indiana and just about the size of Missouri. The census of 1900 gave the two territories a population of nearly 700,000, an increase of almost 200 per cent in the decade. Sixteen states of the Union have a smaller population than this, the smallest being Nevada, which has only 45,000.

is held to be a continuing body, so that | The only controversy in the two territories is concerning the adjustment of present indebtedness and the respective shares of the new honors in case statehood is declared. These points, however, will no doubt be satisfactorily settled at a convention of the representative interests of the two territories soon to be held. There seems to be no good reason why this progressive and prosperous section should not be admitted to the Union as a state. The people have the American spirit and are apparently as capable of governing themselves without federal guardianship as any other commonwealth.

> The report that Henry C. Frick is engaged in the organization of a rival to the United States Steel corporation which is to be capitalized at $2,000,000,-000 attracts public interest, though it is evident that if the scheme is ever effected the principal ingredient of the enormous capitalization will be water. Perhaps this is why it is proposed to locate the concern on the banks of one of the great lakes.

Touching the question of the legal definition of intoxication, a Connecticut judge holds that women are not competent to say when men are intoxicated. It appears to be pretty well settled that we got our money's worth out of An Expensive Entertainment.

It is a matter of general regret that the Pan-American exposition has proved a serious financial failure. It deserved a better fate. From the money point of view most enterprises of this character have been failures in greater or less degree. But the Buffalo enterprise seems to have fared worse in this respect than any of its predecessors. Estimates of the losses suffered by the corporation which conducted the great fair have been made, ranging as high as a total of $4,000,000 for all interests. The stockholders, it is stated, will receive back no portion of the $2,500,000 which they paid in to insure the exposition, while the contractors who built the structures will lose $1,000,000, and the issue of $560,000 second mortgage bonds will be defaulted, in addition to about 20 per cent of the first mortgage

Some portion of the loss may be attributed to the tragedy which occurred at the exposition costing the life of the president of the United States. The exposition was Mosed for two or three days in consequence, and the subsequent attendance was seriously affected. This came at a time when the largest attendance was expected, and the result was particularly serious, as it was at this time hoped to recoup for-

There is no doubt, however, of the artistic success of the exposition. The electric illumination display was unique and unequaled. The grouping and color scheme of the buildings were effective. the exhibits were attractive and instructive and fully representative of American industry and enterprise.

While the projectors of the exposition probably had no idea of making money out of the enterprise, they were not prepared for so disastrous a margin between receipts and expenditures. Though it may be poor consolation to the investors and contractors, it is but fair to say that the city of Buffalo is entitled to the highest credit for her enterprise and civic spirit.

Cities and towns which have river frontage will be especially interested in the inquiry of a writer in a Memphis paper who wants to know why the river fronts of the American cities are permitted to be a mass of ugliness, "a forlorn back yard litter of business houses." It is perhaps just as well that the proposed canon on the subject of divorce and remarriage was defeated in the Episcopal convention in view of the fact that several distinguished Episcopal clergymen have since declared that they would not have paid any attention to it if it had been adopted. A General Theory of Machines. In the Comptes Rendus of the Paris Academy of Sciences M. Koenigs has printed a sketch of a general theory of mechanisms Every machine consists of a number of material bodies, re-sistances, joined together reciprocally, upon which natural forces act to produce a desired effect, and the effect may be either a state of rest or one of motion. The resisting bodies and their connections are the mechanism. Its effect is not known until we define the acting forces. The same machine will produce different effects according as different forces play upon it. Machines are subject to three effects-static when the forces produce equilibrium; kinetic when the result is metion, and finally, dissociative when the connections of the machine are changed. The latter effect is usually not considered, but it is essential to take it into eccount. A machine could not be built in the first place, unless it was capate of dissociation. In some machines—lecks, for instance—the partare dissociated every time the apparatus operates. It is desirable to design most machines, however, so that the dissociative effects do not come into play during their operation.

Beware of the Cold Bath. The cold bath in the morning is not so popular as it was formerly. There is much energy expended in the re-action and just at the time of day when this energy is at its lowest ebb. Then, too, cold water has very little cleansing effect. Very hot water stimulates the nerves, which is the effect that we are seeking from the cold water, while it does not demand the energy of reaction of the latter. The duration of the morning bath should be as short as possible—hardly longer than the mere application of the water to the skin, followed by a brisk rubbing. However, many prefer a cool sponge bath in the morning, and if Mr. and Mrs. A. Abbott of South this is followed by a warm glow and a feeling of well being it certainly is beneficial. Many people are not strong enough to react well. A hot bath at night is most cleansing and restful. General bathing must be regulated by individual peculiarities. - Emma E. Walker, M. CHAPTER XXI.

A Rough Voyage. An exclamation of alarm burst from Jacinta when the sudden plunge of the flatboat gave indubitable evidence that the rope had broken. "We are affoat! "We are affoat!"

"And rushing it,' said Medworth. "Are you all right, Jack?" For so large was the boat, and so dark the night, that Arthur did not doubt that his friend was somewhere on board. But as no answer came to him out of the "Tempest is lost!" he exclaimed. "My heavens! What shall we do "What can we do, senor?" tearfully asked Dona Maria. "It is enough to drive one's senses from one. Is it not terrific! Nothing can save us in this awful storm."

And, in truth, there was foundation enough for her terror.

In the blackness of the night and in the rush and swirl of the water the great, clumsy flatboat turned and twisted, groaned and creaked, now lunging forward as if going over a cataract, now swinging viciously against a bit of high bank or a tree standing deep in the water, but always bounding off again to continue its fearful way. At times it would not progress, but would whirl round and round in the grasp of a furious eddy; then, like a wild beast released from its cage, it would plunge on. It was never two minutes the same, never for a moment under the control of aught save that overwhelming mass of water and the Omnipotent hand that controls even the torrents and the floods.

At the tremendous rate at which they were being carried along they swept past mile after mile of flooded Hapos, and their troubled minds did not know or could not guess were they must go to pieces. When the long, dreadful hours of the night had passed and the scarcely less dark morning had come, the valley of the Orinoco was undergoing the fourth day of that terrible storm. So hard was the downpour that it was impossible for them to see or even to hazard a guess where they were.

But the torrent knew its business, and carried them on and on out through the broadening mouth of the Coroni unto the turbulent bosom of the great Orinoco itself. Here the boat was beset by stronger and more vengeful waves, and was tossed and tumbled as if it had been a plaything, and the three passengers, now weary and disheartened, thought that every moment would be the last.

Hour after hour these unfortunates endured this horror, hoping almost against hope, and so great was their misery that though they still hoped, they almost prayed for death rather than a continuance of it.

Hunger now added itself to their discomforts, and truly it seemed as if death could be but a sweet relief. All around them now there was nothing but boiling, raging water. Far, far out on the Orinoco the tumultuous current had carried them and they were two miles out from either bank. And as they journeyed swiftly down with the turbulent waters toward the waiting and devouring Atlantic, the wind that was coming from the south kept sending them nearer and nearer the north shore, so that for every mile they came nearer to the delta they drew at least one-twentieth of a mile toward the northern forest-cov-

Had it not been for this friendly wind, they must assuredly have been swept out to sea.

But the hand of God was clearly in the storm, and the fate that awaited them was not the lingering death from starvation in the solitudes of the mighty ocean. When the night of the fourth day of the storm had come, they had traveled not only two hundred miles down the Orinoco, but they had crossed the great river from south to north, and it was Jacinta's quick eyes that saw looming the shadow of a mountain. "Look!" she cried. "The Island of the Clouds! We are saved!"

"Saved!" echoed Medworth. "By an island? I hope so, but I doubt it. We may touch the land, but in this torrent the boat can never pause long enough for us to leave it."

"Do you know where you are?" screamed Jacinta. "We have left the Coroni hundreds of miles behind. This is the Island of the Clouds. I know it well, for no other land in the whole valley is so high. And we cannot fail to stop, for at its base is the great Devil's Whirlpool, that catches everything that floats within its grasp and hurls it upon the side of the mountain. The Island of the C'ouds is a thousand you hear another voice?"

Medworth listened intently. A loud Laring came to his ears, seemingly from the very base of the darkly outlined mountain before them. "I hear it," he said.

"It is the whirlpool,' said Jacinta. "We will land on the Island of the Clouds, alive or dead, as the spirit of the whirlpool wills.

"Safe!" murmured Dona Maria. Thank God, we are safe!"

That night the wind died down, the rain ceased and the angry waters of the Orinoco, the Coroni, the Apure, the Caura and the Arauca, . that had darkness, his heart stood still with brought desolation to the land, began to grow calm and then to subside; and when, after a sleepless night, morning came to our castaways, it was with bright skies and balmy winds; but the Orinoco was a hundred feet above its highest level, and running with a terrible swiftness past the island upon which they had been thrown.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Island of the Clouds. "The first thing to be done," said Medworth, when the bright skies of the morning brought revived hopes and sustaining courage to the hearts of himself and his two companions, "is to examine this mountain and see just what the dangers are, and what our chances are of keeping life in our bodies, for there is no doubt we are destined to remain here many days."

"You are a brave young American." replied the wife of Salvarez, "and we will do whatever you think is best. It was by your courage and shrewdness that we escaped from drowning in the caverns, and also from the royalists. We are willing to leave everything to

"Yes, everything," added Jacinta, looking unutterable things at him.

"What do you know of this island?" asked Medworth, speaking calmly and avoiding Jacinta's eyes.

"Very little," replied Dona Maria. "The Island of the Clouds is very little understood by the people. We have heard many strange things concerning it, horrible stories of mystery and death; but I never knew of any person who has been here, so I do not know the truth. That it is a strange place, you have already learned by our experience in the whirlpool. Last night, when my soul was sick with horror, and all things looked black for us, I remembered all the evil tales I had heard about the island, and shuddered at the thought of landing on it; but we have passed the night safely, and the bright sunlight of this morning has driven away most of my fears. And what is there in the forests or mountains of Venezuela that a true daughter of the Republic should fear? With your strong arm to defend us, and your cool head to guide, I feel safe indeed, and when the flood subsides we can, no doubt, manage to reach the mainland and get to a village. Indeed. I only wish I were as sure of the general's safety as I am of my own."

Medworth, who knew nothing of the forests of Venezuela except what he had read, the reports of travelers in the Orinoco valley, a small proportion of which could be looked upon as true. hoped that Dona Maria's confidence was not misplaced; yet he could not help feeling a shade of doubt, for he had read of panthers and boa constrictors, either of which would prove a formidable enemy.

"Before we do much exploring," he said. "we need something to eat. am nearly famished, and you, ladies, must be greatly exhausted by your long fast."

"But there should be other things to eat here than animal flesh," said Jaeinta. "Cannot we find bananas, plantains, or other vegetables or fruits?" "Good!" said Medworth. "I never thought of that. I will look." He left them and started off to look for something to eat, agreeing not to get beyond easy call. "I never knew that bananas grew on mountains," he said to himself. But then he reflected that the mountain, being surrounded by the warm warm a climate near the water level as the valleys inland, and without paying much attention to the general topography of the island, he trudged on,

looking for bananas.

Fortunately, before he had wandered far from his companions, he found three banana trees, one twenty, one fifteen and another small one, ten feet up in the gathering blackness of night in height. The two larger and older trees were laden with the delicions yellow fruit. Arthur took his knife from his pocket, and with some little difficulty cut a stock containing about forty large and luscious bananas.

With these he hurried back to his

"I have been fortunate indeed," he said. "See, here are some bananas and enough more where they came from to keep us a year if we are compelled to remain here that long."

When they had finished their welcome morning repast, Medworth said: "It is now necessary for me to make an exploration of the island. The slope we are on now is rather steep, but where the banana trees grow seems to be the beginning of a plateau, and I befeet high, and there we shall be safe lieve we shall find a more agreeable from the rising flood. "No, no!" exclaimed Jacinta. "We at least know that nothing threatens us now, while you are going where you may need this to save your life."

"Nevertheless, you must keep it," he said. "I will also leave the water-proof pouch of cartridges with you. I shall be gone some time. My wet clothes are beginning to feel uncomfortable. and I am going to dry them. If you are wise, you will do the same."

MILES NOT ALL THE SAME.

They Differ in Length in Various Countries and by Land and Sea. English-speaking countries have four different miles the ordinary mile of ailments. It is caused by the blasting 5,280 feet and the geographical or nautical mile of 6,085, making a difference of about one-seventn between the two: then there is the Scotch mile of 5,928 feet, and the Irish mile of 6,720 feet: four various miles, every one of which is still in use. Then almost every country has its own standard mile. The Romans have their mil passnum, 1,000 paces, which must have been about 3,000 feet in length, unless we ascribe to Caesar's legionaries great stepping capacity. The German mile of today is 24,318 feet in length, more than four and a half times as long as our mile. The Dutch, the Danes and the Prussians enjoy a mile that is 18 .-440 feet long, three and one-half times the length of ours; and the Swiss get more exercise in walking their mile than we get in walking five miles, for their mile is 9,183 yards long, while our is only 1,760 yards. The Italian mile is only a few feet longer than ours, the Roman mile is shorter, while the Tuscan and the Turkish miles are 150 yards longer. The Swedish mile is 7,341 yards long, and the Vienna postmile is 8,796 yards in length. So here is a list of twelve different miles, and besides this there are other measures of distance, not counting the French kilometer, which is rather less than two-thirds of a mile. The Brazialans have a milia that is one and one-fourth times as long as our mile; the Neapolitan miglio is about the same length; the Japanese ri, or mile, is two and one-half times ours; the Russian verst is five-eighths as long as our mile, while the Persian standard is a fesakh, four and a half miles long, which is said to be equal to the paransang, so familiar to the readers of Xenophon's Anabasis. The distance indicated by waters of the Orinoco, had probably as the league also varies in different countries.-Ledger Monthly.

Always Ready. The Ameer of Afghanistan is said to have made the following statement: 'I am always ready as a soldier on the march to a battle, in such a manner that I could start without any delay in case of emergency. The pockets of my coats and trousers are always filled with loaded revolvers and one or two loaves of bread for one day's food; this bread is changed every day. Several guns and swords are always lying by the side of my bed or the chair on which I am seated within reach of my hand, and saddled horses are always kept ready in front of my office, not only to myself, but for all my courtiers and personal attendants. at the door of my durbar room. I have also ordered that a considerable number of gold coins should be sewn into the saddles of my horses when required for a sourney, and on both sides of the saddles are two revolvers. I think it is necessary in such a war-like country that the sovereign, and especially a sovereign who is a soldier himself, should always be as pre-pared for emergencies as a soldier on the field of battle. > Call Ailment Tunnel Knee. "Tunnel knee" is the latest Harlem (N. Y.) disease in certain sections, and it seems likely to take rank with the "bicycle face" and other like in the rapid transit subway work. Pedestrians on Lenox avenue were the first to get "tunnel knee," and it appears coincident with the setting off of a blast. As this is done at intervals from 6 o'clock in the morning until midnight, few escape. The symptoms are an irresistible desire on the part of one's knees to wabble and slip from under, allowing the pedestrian to sit down suddenly in the middle of the street.

SATCHEL FULL OF BANK NOTES

"Mrs. Rose" Admits Forging the Signatures to $50,000 Worth of Helena National Bank Notes-The Robbery Occurred July 3 Near Wagner.

St. Louis telegram: The police here have just made another important arrest in connection with the Great Northern express robbery of July 3, near Wagner, Mont., and took a valise containing between $30,000 and $50,000 in notes of the National Bank of Helena, which are supposed to be a part of the proceeds of that haul. A woman who registered at the Laclede Hotel as "Mrs. Rose" was taken into custody by city detectives and escorted to Chief Desmond's office, where she confessed that she had forged the signatures of officers of the bank to the notes. Beyond that statement the woman would not say a word other than to deny any knowledge of the man named Arnold, whom the police arrested last night in connection with the robbery.

The arrest was made just as "Mrs. Rose" was leaving the hotel. She carried a bag in which was a bunch of $20 bills. This, with her trunk, which was being loaded into an express wagon, is at police headquarters, and the contents are being examined. "Mrs. Rose" did not know how much money the valise contained. When she counted it last she said there was on hand between $30,000 and $50,000. She had spent much money since her arrival in

A Pathetic Message.

A pathetic message was received by Dr. Gould of Rockland, recently from that lonely place called Matinicus. Dr. Gould has a system of pigeons which convey messages from there to the mainland, and there came a pigeon to the homing loft at Tenant's Harbor conveying news of the serious illness of Mrs. E. A. Young. The silent messenger that flew across twenty miles of seas to Tenant's Harbor was found to have seven No. 1 shots imbedded in her body and wings. With this in-jury, by a thoughtless sportsman, the bird had flown across with her message, and, true to instinct, the bird had delivered her message. Shortly after the homecoming the bird died.-Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

WAS A RARE TREAT

Evening by Eminent Ladies.

Years have passed since the people of Barrington were allowed the privilege of attending an entertainment given by local talent (or imported) which afforded so much genuine fun as the Spinsters' Convention or Old Maids' Transformation given by Americus Garrison, Eminent Ladies, at the village ball, last Friday evening. There was not a dull moment from the time the presiding officer called the annual gathering to order until the "transformer" went to pieces. The house was packed, not an inch of standing room could be purchased or stolen and many were turned away. The delegates were a sight to becoursing down the spinal column of a pounds. But he were wery wexed 20th century modiste. How to Keep Butter.

Good butter will keep sweet for many weeks when it is placed in a crock after being made into rolls wrapped in strong cheesecloth or old muslin and then covered with a brine strong enough to bear up an egg. Saltpeter and sugar may be added to advantage while the brine is still hot in the proportion of a teaspoonful of the former and a tablespoonful of the latter to every four quarts. The brine must, however, not be poured upon the butter until it is entirely cold.

An expert on opal mining has recently explained how the opal is judged as to quality and desirability. First, he says, color is of the greatest importance. Red fire, or red in combination and the green opal is not of great value unless the color is very vivid and the pattern very good. The color must be true—that is to say, it must not run in treaks or patches, alternating with a colorless or inferior quality.

Pattern is described as being an im ortant factor, the several varieties beown as "pin fire" when the grain is very small, "harlequin" when the color is all in small squares, the more regular the better, and the "flash fire" or "flash opal" when the color shows as a single flash or in very large pattern. Harlequin is the most co beautiful. When the squares of color are regular and show as distinct, minute checks of red, yellow, blue and green, it is consi ered magni me stones show better on edge than

An Object Lesson to Grant This story is told of the first fim Grant ever had charge of a large body of men sent out to give battle. He was colonel in the early part of 1862, detailed to go to the relief of an Illinoi regiment, supposed to be surrounded by Confederates at Palmyra, Mo., but when he arrived the regiment had relieved itself by retiring. Grant then strictly confidential. R. W. Coon. went out to Florida, in the same state, and as the regiment toiled over the hill beyond which the enemy was supposed to be in waiting Grant says he would have "given anything to be back again

At the top of the hill, instead of troops drawn up in battle array, Grant saw a deserted camp. "It occurred to me at once that Harris had been as much afraid of me as I had been of him," said Grant. "From that event to the close of the war I never experienced trepidation upon confronting an enemy, though I always felt more or less anxiety. I never forgot that he had as much reason to fear my forces as I it is ascertained that a woman's body is warmer than that of a man by shout is warmer than that of a man by about three-fourths of a degree and sometimes as high as one degree, while in no instance has the warmth of a man's body been found to be greater than ascertained that children are decidedly warmer than adults, the difference being about 1 degree F., the younger the child the greater the diversity. A difference in the heat of the sides of the body is discovered to be an invariable law. The left side of the head and extending downward to the base of the neck is much hotter than the right side.
