PALATINE HAPPENINGS.

Events Past, Present and Future of Village and Vicinity.

Gathered and Compiled by A. G. Smith, Local Editor.

James Baker was home over Sunday.

Charles Ost visited friends in Milwaukee over Sunday.

Louis Keyes of Roselle was in town the first of the week.

Clarence Harris of Chicago visited friends here over Sunday.

Miss Ruby Adams returned to her home in Chicago Monday.

Don't forget to watch for the date of the W. R. C. dish social.

C. H. Parks of Harvard has bought the saloon owned by M. E. Fox.

The Palatine Military band played at a picnic at Lake Zurich Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Lytle have been attending the Libertyville fair this week.

The Ladies' Concordia is making big preparations for a bazaar October 15 and 16.

Mr. and Mrs. Stetzler of Chicago visited here over Sunday at H. P. K. Bicknase's.

Misses Walker and Foote, former teachers, spent a few days with Mrs. M. Reynolds.

Harry Rea, of the Fox Typewriter of Grand Rapids, Mich., was in town a few hours Friday.

We understand that John Page has sold his farm to Charlie Meyer, renter on the Wilson farm.

Miss Emma Flury of Chicago was a guest of her sister, Mrs. H. Schoppe, the first of the week.

Charles Babcock started for Kansas City Wednesday to take charge of a big plumbing contract.

You will miss a grand entertainment if you fail to see the stereopticon entertainment tonight.

Mrs. E. F. Baker has been entertaining her sister, Miss W. M. Pinney, of Columbus, Ohio this week.

Misses Della Smith and Vashti Lambert resumed teaching at the Jefferson Park school on Tuesday.

BARN FOR SALE—6 stalls, a grainery, two rooms on second floor. Enquire at Palatine Review office.

Mrs. J. W. Smith and daughter Della have returned from a visit with relatives in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Ladies' Bachelor club reminded Miss Bertha Stroker Wednesday that she had reached another milestone.

Mrs. C. W. Ost and Mrs. Will Ost expect to start for St. Louis tomorrow, where they will visit relatives.

Will Lohse has moved from Blue Island back to Palatine and is running the milk can washing establishment.

John Bryan went to Dundee Thursday to meet with his regiment at the reunion. J. Thurston went with him.

Henry Schoppe delivered fourteen McCormick corn harvesters Monday. Mosser took a picture of ten machines that were delivered.

The country members of the republican central committee have an office in the top floor at 76 Fifth avenue, which is open at all times.

Miss Laura Winters, Harry Drummond of Evanston and Arthur Mason of Chicago visited Miss Elnora and Pliun Arps Saturday and Sunday.

FOR SALE—My home in Palatine, lot 156x254 feet, 10 rooms. Five minutes walk from depot. Price $2,500. DOLLIE B. WEST.

Harry Schoppe and wife left Tuesday for St. Paul, where they will stay a few days. They expect to go to Minneapolis and Winona before returning.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lytle returned from their Minnesota trip Saturday and had a pleasant time. The country they visited is booming in all lines.

Henry Harmening, wife and children went to Chicago Monday to attend a wedding. They expect to locate in Chicago soon, where Mr. Harmening has secured a position.

Henry Linneman lost a horse in a runaway accident Wednesday. His son was hauling manure to the field when the horses became frightened and ran towards the house. The boy was unable to control them and they ran into a tree. One horse stripped off its harness and ran, but the other one stood and was caught. While leading it to the barn it dropped dead, supposedly from internal injuries.

Miss Anna Salzer returned to her home in Cleveland Monday, after a short visit with friends here. Miss Salzer has a good position in one of the schools in Cleveland.

Mr. Gusewelle doesn't entertain free lunch editors. He believes every man should earn his own grub, and when a certain scribe called the other day and hinted for a free dinner, he got left.

Bert Pierce returned home from Atlanta, Ga., where he was employed by North-Western Ry. The office at that place has been abolished, owing to the company having only one gateway to the West-Chicago. Bert returned to his former position with the company in Chicago Monday morning.

The public school opened Monday with every prospect for a good year. The High school has over thirty pupils and more are expected to enroll. We have a splendid corps of teachers and our school is expected to hold its good reputation under the management.

The Woodmen picnic at Lake Zurich Saturday was not well attended. The farmers were too busy to take a day off. The base ball game was won by the Americans, over the Wauconda Juniors, by a score of 14 to 6. The dance in the evening was an enjoyable one and well attended. The Woodmen came out about even.

Emil Dahms and Miss Erna Bollenback were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents in Arlington Heights Wednesday evening. Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister performing the ceremony. The wedding was a quiet one, only close friends being present. They will reside in Chicago, where groom is employed by the Heinz Co. The groom is a Palatine young man and a graduate of our High school. A host of friends wish him and is bride a happy wedded life.

Board Proceedings.

The village board met in regular session Monday night and all members were present.

The street and drainage committee reported the Slade street sewer completed and the one on Benton street nearly completed.

The sidewalk committee reported many sidewalks out of repair and the matter was discussed at some length, and it was finally decided to notify parties whose walks were in bad shape that they would be held liable for any damage that might occur on account of such defects.

The fire and water committee reported the pumping station boiler insured for three years.

Upon motion President Olms appointed Trustees Putnam, Kuebler and Ost to confer with Mr. Glade in regard to the outlet to the sewer.

A special meeting was held Wednesday night to grant a dram shop license to Mr. Parks, who takes M. E. Fox's place on Slade street.

Happy Married Life.

"Married Life Can Be Made Supremely Happy" is the optimistic title of an article by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore in Success. In conclusion Mrs. Livermore says:

Before all forms of government, all types of civilization, all social institutions and all advance in education the relations of the husband and the wife make the everlasting foundation on which the social structure of the whole world rests. Just so fast and just so far as these relations become what they ought to be just so fast and just so far will society be uplifted, but no faster and no farther.

It is the family and the home that lay the foundations of country, and these depend on the relations of husband and wife. The greatness of a nation is made by its true men and women, who have been well born in good homes, where they have been carefully fashioned into a lofty type of manhood and womanhood. This is the large intent of marriage, which is not alone the cradle of the human race, but its crown as well, and should be the symbol of a marriage that shall be immortal.

NAME COUNTY TICKET.

Lake County Democrats Convene at Libertyville Thursday.

Nominate County Officers and Pledge Anew Support to P. McDermott for Representative.

There are a few democrats remaining in Lake county, one of the republican strongholds of Illinois—enough of them to hold a convention, select a list of nominees and erect a ticket to be buried out of sight in the storm of ballots which will fall on the 4th day of November. It is not because the gentlemen named for office are not eligible and would carry on the business of the county satisfactorily that they will suffer defeat, but because they will not be able to muster votes enough to elect them. Party organization must be kept alive, and for that reason and no other the democrats of Lake county place a ticket in the field.

The convention was called to order by Chairman D. A. Grady of Waukegan in the village hall at Libertyville Thursday at 11 o'clock. Secretary Frank Carr of Wauconda called the roll of towns and found that all were not represented. There was a quorum present and that is all the rules required.

Without excitement or enthusiasm the convention proceeded to build a ticket, and the following is the result of the work:

Judge—J. C. James, Antioch.
Clerk—Albert Sauer, Vernon.
Treasurer—H. Seip, Lake Zurich.
Sheriff—J. Shean, Highland Park.
Superintendent of schools—George T. Rogers, Waukegan.

That was not the most important work of the convention. The Eighth District Senatorial convention had been held first at Harvard and twice at Chicago, but accomplished nothing—being in deadlock after 458 ballots were cast. A new convention was called to meet at Chicago September 15, and the important work of the Lake county meeting was really to decide what candidate the county would support in that meeting.

That question was easily decided. The delegates had stood for Peter McDermott of Waukegan at Harvard and Chicago, and they resolved to continue to support him for representative first, last and all the time, and the same delegates who entered the battle royal at the sound of the first gun at Harvard, having suffered no wounds, and being still fit for active service, were ordered to the front once more to strike terror to the hosts from Boone and McHenry counties.

At such a show of brotherly love Peter McDermott was much affected, and said so. That pleased the delegates. After agreeing on how large the majority for the county ticket would be in November, etc., etc., etc., the convention adjourned to do missionary work on the grounds where the Lake County Fair Association and 2,000 other republicans were witnessing the races.

FOSS ON THE TARIFF.

Our Congressman Outlines the Properly Position of Republicans on This Important Issue.

George Edmund Foss, representative in congress from this, the Tenth, district, was interviewed the other day relative to his position on the tariff question, and also what the party he represents proposed to do with the issue in the coming congressional campaign. From the following it will be noticed that Mr. Foss has heard of "the change of sentiment" relative to that policy of protection which is responsible for the trusts and monopolies now oppressing the people of this country. Congressman Foss is a candidate for reelection and, has seen the handwriting on the wall. Illinois republicans, that is those of the agricultural districts and the laboring classes, demand a readjustment of the tariff, and they are going to have it or the defeat of the republican party in 1904 will follow.

Congressman Foss said: "I find that there is a growing sentiment among the people for tariff revision, or perhaps, more properly speaking, tariff readjustment, that is adjustment to new conditions. The conditions of 1902 are not the same as those of 1897, when the present law was passed, and some of the schedules undoubtedly need revision by friends of the tariff and not by its enemies. "The republican party in its platform of 1896 said it did not pledge itself to specific schedules, but it did to the principle of protection. It further recognized, in that platform, that schedules must be changed to meet new times and new conditions. The republican party will, in my judgment, win in the coming election and it ought then to make modifications and changes in the tariff system." Now comes, among other republican papers in the district, the Waukegan Gazette which pats Congressman Foss on the back and says "right you are." It is pleasing for the independent press of the district to note that the Gazette has come over to the side of the "common people." In 1896 the Gazette believed "trusts were a good thing," that they were "infant industries" and required protection. Now, note the "change in sentiment" of the Gazette, judged from the following editorial printed in that paper September 3:

"Failure to amend the tariff in 1892 brought defeat to the republican party. The Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts republicans with their enormous manufacturing interests and watered trust companies are as insistent as in 1892 that there shall be no tariff tinkering. They ruled and ruined the party and country in 1892 with their policy, but the great west is now demanding a tariff adjustment which must be the policy of the republican party if it is to preserve itself and a healthy condition of the agricultural and industrial interests of the United States. The people of the west have absolutely no use for or fear of the powerful trusts that are attempting to fool all the people all the time. * * * Illinois republicans admire courage and statesmanship at a time when too many senators and congressmen are weak and silent upon a great living issue that means so much to the happiness and prosperity of the small business man, farmer and mechanic." That is very well put and endorsed by every voter who does not believe that "trusts are good things."

LORIMER'S ADVICE.

The Cook County "Boss" Tells How to Smash a Machine.

The following is an editorial published in the Chicago Daily News of Tuesday evening. There is lots of truth in it:

William Lorimer told the republicans of Oak Park at his forty-ninth lawn fete Monday night how to smash objectionable political machines. If they would put an end to machine domination in their party, he said, they must come into the republican organization, where they will have a chance to carry out their purpose. He continued:

"You can't throw anybody out your house while you are outside the house yourself. The only way you can get the objectionable person out the house without coming inside yourself is to burn the house, which is a wasteful and useless method. It is just as foolish to try to get these objectionable machine men out of your party organization by staying outside yourself and trying to destroy your party. Go inside where you can get action."

It is to be regretted that, having given the republican citizens this argument, Mr. Lorimer did not explain how they can make sure that it is the machine and not themselves that will be smashed, once they are inside. With the machine leaders controlling the organization, holding star-chamber caucuses, registering the names of the dead or departed on the ward club lists, dominating party primaries and wielding the gavel at all the organization meetings, the voters who have gone inside and undertaken smashing operations in the past usually have found themselves powerless. The principal effect of their union with the machine element has been to lend color to the pretense of a small faction, comprising the professional politicians of that party, that it speaks for all the party. Lorimer's invitation to the voters to join ward clubs just in time to vote for his nominees, including himself, is a beautiful piece of farce-comedy.

When Lorimer is able to give the republicans a positive assurance that the gang politicians will permit an honest representation of party sentiment his machine-smashing plan will be worth considering.

NEGRO AND POLICE IN FIERCE BATTLE

Jerry Hunter Resents Intrusion of Strangers on Employer's Grounds.

WOUNDS UNWELCOME GUESTS

When Officer Arrives the Culprit Opens Fire on Him, is Driven to Shelter in His Cottage and Killed by a Sharpshooter.

Jerry Hunter, with his wife and daughter, for more than four hours terrorized the residents along Flushing Bay, L. L., mortally wounded one policeman, seriously injured a dozen others and had to be driven by fire from a house in which he had barricaded himself against his pursuers.

Hunter was finally captured as he was trying to escape from the house and is so badly shot to pieces that it is not believed he can recover.

Attempt Lynching. An attempt was made to lynch him, but he was hurried off to St. John's hospital before the mob could carry out its intentions.

His wife, who leaped from a window to escape roasting to death, was also shot and will die.

The only one to escape was Hunter's daughter, no trace of whom had been found.

The Victims. Following is a list of Hunter's victims: John McKenna, Mrs. Jerry Hunter, Matthew J. Ward, Arthur Briel, Matthew K. Klernan, Thomas Burgan, John O'Neill, William Thorp.

The two latter are severely hurt, but it is not expected their injuries will prove fatal. More than a dozen other policemen were severely injured, but none so seriously as those named.

As desperate as himself, Hunter's wife and daughter proved themselves able allies of the desperado during the four hours from 8 o'clock until midnight. All this time he held his pursuers at bay, adding victim after victim to his unerring aim.

Fire on Policemen. From the upper windows he and his daughter fired volley after volley into the ranks of the besieging policemen and the volunteers, while his wife kept them supplied with ammunition. She loaded the guns and passed them to Hunter and his daughter as they fired out into the darkness at those who stood in front of the house.

When the house was fired and the flames were enveloping it Mrs. Hunter leaped from the second story window and was shot in the head as she fell by Dr. A. C. Combes, lieutenant of the Seventeenth Separate company of Flushing, a well-known sharpshooter.

Where Hunter Lived. Hunter was employed as a caretaker of the beautiful estate of Benjamin W. Strong. Some time ago the family vacated the house, moving to New York, and since their departure had kept Hunter on the place to protect it from tramps and burglars. The house is an old-time mansion. It is located back from the road about twenty yards, and is partially hidden from the thoroughfare by trees and shrubbery. Not far from the mansion is a two-story lodging house designed for the caretaker and other servants in this house. Hunter lived with his wife and daughter there.

Fires on Intruders. O'Neill and Thorp, strangers from New York, were passing the place and stepped inside the grounds to look at it. Without warning they were suddenly confronted by Hunter, who stepped from behind a clump of shrubbery and fired at them. The visitors scrambled out of the yard and reported the matter to Policeman McKenna. They told him that they had quietly walked into the yard, that a negro had shot at them and that they had heard the shot whizzing about their ears.

Wounds the Officer. Policeman McKenna started at once for the place. As he entered the grounds he saw Hunter standing near a tree with a shotgun resting across his arm. He had no thought that the man would shoot him and walked deliberately forward. When within twenty-five feet Hunter raised his gun deliberately to his shoulder and fired.

McKenna fell to the ground seriously wounded. Hunter had fired both barrels of the gun point blank at the policeman. O'Neill and Thorp, who had been slightly wounded, had returned with the policeman, and when they saw him fall they assisted in dragging him from the grounds.

Crowd Assembles. As McKenna was taken away the sergeant and eight policemen attempted to surround Hunter where he stood, partly concealed behind a large tree. From all sides the neighbors had assembled, several hundreds of them, and began clamoring for Hunter's life.

When the assembled policemen and the crowd began to draw closer to Hunter he left his place behind the tree and made a dash for the small house in which he and his family lived.

Quickly the lower windows were darkened. Then suddenly from one of the upper windows came a shot. The crowd surged back. Then another shot, and Matthew Ward, one of the policemen, fell to the ground. A shout of rage went up from the crowd. Many sought shelter, while some, in their fury and rage, dashed toward the building, only to be checked in their advance by more shots from the window.

Daughter Assists. From a second window appeared the face of Hunter's daughter, and from this window soon came another shot. One after another the police fell or staggered back badly injured. In the crowd were several men who were armed with revolvers and they began firing at the house. The policemen kept up a constant fusillade, but their shots seemed to have no effect, as the firing continued from the windows of the house.

Finding shotguns and revolvers ineffectual to dislodge the negro, two sharpshooters were sent for. It was hoped that the sharpshooters could pick off the negro when he showed himself at the window to fire.

Shot by Sharpshooters. Several times the sharpshooters fired at the burly head, but the shots missed their mark. "Burn the house!" cried some one. The cry was taken up by the crowd and inflammable material was laid on two sides of the building and the torch applied.

As the flames illumined the scene Mrs. Hunter appeared at one of the upper windows and then jumped. As she leaped out of the window Dr. Combes' rifle cracked. The woman was shot in the head. Hunter was not seen to escape from the house, but as he skulked along through the shrubbery Patrick Lynch, another policeman, with his revolver brought him down as he ran. When they picked him up they found his body riddled with shot.

TRADE CONDITIONS ARE GOOD Business Revival Holds Sway Except at the Strike Center. "Gradual resumption of anthracite coal mining is encouraging, although the output is not yet sufficient to have any commercial value. Business conditions are unsatisfactory at the strike center, but reports from all other sections indicate unusually prompt revival after the summer vacation season, with exceptionally large operations among dealers in the agricultural regions.

"Notwithstanding some bad weather, large crops are now practically assured, although the most sanguine results may not be attained. tree. From all sides the neighbors had assembled, several hundreds of them, and began clamoring for Hunter's life.

When the assembled policemen and the crowd began to draw closer to Hunter he left his place behind the tree and made a dash for the small house in which he and his family lived.

Quickly the lower windows were darkened. Then suddenly from one of the upper windows came a shot. The crowd surged back. Then another shot, and Matthew Ward, one of the policemen, fell to the ground. A shout of rage went up from the crowd. Many sought shelter, while some, in their fury and rage, dashed toward the building, only to be checked in their advance by more shots from the window.

Daughter Assists. From a second window appeared the face of Hunter's daughter, and from this window soon came another shot. One after another the police fell or staggered back badly injured. In the crowd were several men who were armed with revolvers and they began firing at the house. The policemen kept up a constant fusillade, but their shots seemed to have no effect, as the firing continued from the windows of the house.

Finding shotguns and revolvers ineffectual to dislodge the negro, two sharpshooters were sent for. It was hoped that the sharpshooters could pick off the negro when he showed himself at the window to fire.

Shot by Sharpshooters. Several times the sharpshooters fired at the burly head, but the shots missed their mark. "Burn the house!" cried some one. The cry was taken up by the crowd and inflammable material was laid on two sides of the building and the torch applied.

As the flames illumined the scene Mrs. Hunter appeared at one of the upper windows and then jumped. As she leaped out of the window Dr. Combes' rifle cracked. The woman was shot in the head. Hunter was not seen to escape from the house, but as he skulked along through the shrubbery Patrick Lynch, another policeman, with his revolver brought him down as he ran. When they picked him up they found his body riddled with shot.

VERMONT VOTE SPLIT IN TWO

Legislature Is to Decide Who Shall Govern the Green Mountain State.

CLEMENT MAKES GREAT RUN

Boiling Republican Comes Within 3,000 of the Regular Party Nominee, Developing Strength in Unlooked-for Localities.

Vermont was turned upside down at the polls and the regular Republican candidate for governor who was slated for first prize got only the poor honor of leading the field.

Percival W. Clement, the boiling Republican, made a wonderful run and attracted enough support from the Republican and Democratic parties to prevent Gen. McCullough, the regular nominee, from getting a majority. The election, therefore, for governor and lieutenant governor is thrown into the legislature.

Regulars Win. The regular Republican candidates for secretary, auditor and treasurer, which were endorsed by the Clement faction, are elected by majorities estimated to be 35,000 or more.

D. J. Foster, in the first congressional district, and Kittridge Haskins on the second district, both Republicans, are re-elected by slightly increased majorities.

Partial returns indicate a total vote in round numbers of 67,000, which is almost exactly what it was two years ago. The indicated vote from partial returns in round returns is: McCullough, 31,000; Clement, 28,000; McGertrick, 6,000; Sherburn, 2,000.

This indicates a Republican loss of 35 per cent over two years ago, while the Democratic loss is 63 per cent.

Feather for Silent Voters. It was the silent voter that tied up the state election. It had been expected that Clement would make a good run in sections of the state, but the returns show that he made a surprisingly good showing throughout the whole state. Where he was well known he ran the best, of course, but hardly a hamlet failed to swell his column and he literally swept the cities and large towns. Politicians are dumfounded and no one dares predict whether Clement will be able to win in the legislature.

Will Elect McCullough. The house of representatives will consist of 116 Republicans, twenty-nine Democrats and twenty-five high-license and labor. The senate is overwhelmingly Republican. The Republican managers gave out an opinion that the Republican representatives elected will for the most part vote for Gen. McCullough, the regular Republican nominee, for governor, although they will vote for high license liquor law, with a referendum law attached. Gen. McCullough will have a majority of thirty-eight over all on joint ballot in the general ballot in the assembly, which assures his election.

TRAIN HELD UP; SAFE RIFLED L. & N. Passenger Train Robbed at Franklin, Tenn. Nashville, Tenn. dispatch: As the through north-bound passenger train on the Louisville & Nashville road, due here at 7:20 o'clock, was pulling out of Franklin, Tenn., eighteen miles south of here, the express car was boarded by two masked men. With a revolver at his head, Messenger Battle was forced to open the outside safe, which the robbers rifled. Keeping the messenger covered with their guns, the men rode with him into South Nashville yards here, where the train slowed down and they disappeared. It is not known how much booty was secured.

MICHIGAN MOB SLAYS PRINTER

Sought to Run Away With Another Man's Wife and Met His Death.

FALSE CRY OF "ASSAULTER"

Fearing Arrest by Policeman, He Attempted to Escape, Closely Followed by a Crowd and Finally Got a Bullet in His Heart.

Monroe, Mich. dispatch: Joseph La Barge was killed here by a mob that chased him through the streets and finally rounded him up in a cornfield, where he was given the wounds that caused his death. La Barge was running away from a policeman when some one raised the cry of "assaulter," and in a moment a crowd of men were in frenzied pursuit of the supposed criminal.

Had Agreed to Elope. La Barge, who was 24 years old, was a printer living at 319 Cherry street, Toledo, and was employed by Joseph Willetts. He came to this city in see Mrs. Walter Lemerand, whom he had known for five years and who lived in Toledo until last spring. After spending a couple of hours at the home of the woman the pair reached an agreement whereby they would elope to Toledo.

Quarrels With the Husband. Mrs. Lemerand quit work at Balz's laundry, where she was employed, and after the discussion at her home arranged to meet La Barge and to take an electric car for Toledo. Just before 12 o'clock Lemerand came home and immediately got into an altercation with his wife's admirer. The woman interfered, and La Barge got away. Shortly afterward the husband went in search of an officer.

Notifies Policeman. At the corner where the man and woman were to meet he ran across Officer Beaudrie and La Barge. To the policeman he said: "I found that man with my wife a few minutes ago, and I want you to arrest him."

The officer started for La Barge, but the latter ran. Beaudrie fired two shots over the fellow's head, but he kept on running. In a few minutes a crowd had joined in the chase of the supposed assaulter. The man was finally cornered by two men who had revolvers.

Shot Through the Heart. La Barge flashed a razor, and instead of heeding an order to drop it made another dash for liberty. Both men fired a number of shots at him, but he kept on running until he dropped on the front porch of Mrs. La Salle's house. La Barge had been shot in the left side near the heart and died just after reaching the office of Dr. Dowe.

It was learned that La Barge was out on parole from the Toledo reformatory.

LITTLE MISS MILLIONS

OR,

THE WITCH OF MONTE CARLO.

A ROMANCE OF THE RIVIERA.

Spider's Web," "Miss Caprice," etc., etc.

CHAPTER XV.

By Wire from Paris.

"You are positive, princess?" he asked hoarsely.

"There is no doubt, believe me."
"This is as serious as it is mysterious. The secret police of Paris rarely come to Monte Carlo, save to make an important arrest."

The man who had never quailed when facing the awful terrors of jungle and desert experienced a qualm of fear at thought of being convicted as a traitor to his country, for the fate of Dreyfus told how France would treat her sons who turned against her—there were other prisons as terrible as Devil Island.

"You fail to notice one important fact, monsieur," she said softly, yet eagerly.

"Then tell me."

"These four men moved like automatic figures, under the direction of one master mind."

He gave a quick cry as he grasped what she meant.

"Sacre! the American?"

"Yes, Monsieur Jones."

"He is not what he seems, merely a lucky traveler—I remember now, he speaks French fluently. A startling suspicion bursts upon me—yes, it must be true that he is leagued with the secret police of the government against us. Mon Dieu! It is a perilous moment."

Count Leon never spoke truer words in all his life than when he declared with so much spirit that the moment was fraught with great danger to himself and the royalist cause he represented.

The shock was all the more severe because he had just been congratulating himself, as men will sometimes do in their egotism, over the kind fate that had given him the power over these tremendous issues.

A dozen suspicions took shape in his mind on the spur of the moment.

Jones assumed a malign form comparable only with Satan himself, and his most simple act appeared to take on a meaning that was both diabolical and crushing.

It flashed athwart the mind of our African conqueror that this American must be his particular bete noir, a figure destined to drag him down from the proud heights to which he had ascended, and accomplish his utter ruin, so that, unable to longer show his face in France, he must perforce return again to equatorial Africa and unite with bold Captains Voulet and Chanoine in their designs of founding an empire there.

When circumstances, aided and abetted by the sharp eyes of the adventuress, had snatched the mask from Jones, the innocent Yankee tourist assumed a degree of importance in the mind of this arch plotter that no one else had ever filled.

Perhaps the consciousness of guilt had much to do with it, for it oftentimes makes cowards of the bravest.

He unconsciously turned his head and looked first to the right and then to the left.

There were many people passing hither and yon, for the crowd seemed loth to depart after the exciting episode of the evening, so that his eyes glanced from figure to figure, as though searching for some dreaded personality.

"Have they returned?" he asked.

"They are all here in the gardens. I made sure of that before I addressed you."

"And—that man?"

"Oh, Monsieur Jones is frowning at us even now, as he frowns at any man with whom he sees me conversing."

The count smiled grimly, being under the impression that perhaps for once the Oligavitch had overestimated the power of her charms and had deceived herself with reference to Jones.

"Well, this means a different scene from what I expected. I had thought to carry out my plans without much disturbance—now I shall be compelled to bring all my force to bear upon the matter. Yes, blood may even flow, and these beautiful gardens become a scene of battle."

The prospect might not seem alluring to most men, but then Count Leon had become a hybrid as it were, partaking somewhat of the nature of the hyena to be met with in the deserts, and at the mere mention of war's horrors his nostrils dilated and his eyes glowed with the fire of slaughter.

It had been some time, you see, since his last encounter with the black hosts, and perhaps his good right hand really itched to get to work again. No French explorer who came back from Africa was ever willing to remain quiescent at home.

"But—there is something more, M. le Count, something mysterious, something that may even stagger you in your plans," said the princess in her quiet yet convincing way.

The other looked at her in a troubled manner and allowed his lips to form the words:

"Le Diable!"

It fully expressed his state of mind, for he felt that with the passage of every second the game was slipping further from his hands.

"I am one who suspects, who never takes things for granted. To-day a letter came from a friend in Paris, a gentleman high in the councils of the government. One little item in it attracted my attention—it was that he had just been attending a state council at the home of the president, who was not well enough to drive out. I looked at the date—it was yesterday. Monsieur, I was surprised. Either my friend, the minister, had made a mistake or else we were blind, for at the hour he declared he talked with France's chief executive in his own Paris home, behold, you and I were watching the president here at Monte Carlo!"

The soldier staggered as though he had been actually struck—indeed, he received a blow that was far greater moment than a physical one would have been, since the foundation of his faith was knocked away.

He began to realize that perhaps the secret police were more capable of making discoveries than he had been willing to admit, and that the same style of tactics could not be employed against these shrewd adversaries that he had used so successfully when coping with swarms of ferocious blacks.

One gleam of hope flickered still, and caused a sickly smile to flash over his dark face.

"Perhaps—the minister was mistaken in the day. He may have intended to say Monday, when we know monsieur was still in Paris. Yes, that is the explanation of the problem."

The enchantress smiled, and when he saw the expression of her face he knew she was about to knock away even this feeble prop which he had seized upon so eagerly as a means of keeping up hope.

"I have just received a message."

"From Paris?"

"Yes."

She placed a printed form in his eager hand and his hungry eyes perused its brief message with an agility that speedily put him in possession of the facts.

The wording was very precise and to the point:

"The president is in Paris to-day, Wednesday. I have just conversed with his excellency."

No wonder, after reading this, that the count's hand dropped as though palsied to his side—no wonder his amazed eyes turned on the quarter where the man who played the role of president stood chatting and laughing with his aides—no wonder his breath came thick and fast from between his set teeth. For where victory had seemed ready to perch he now saw miserable defeat staring him in the face with all its terrible penalties attached.

"Do you believe, now?" demanded the modern Delloah, exulting in the thought that it was her finesse that had accomplished this thing, and not his proud master mind.

He bowed his head.

"What else can I say? We have been deceived. All the while they, those wolves of Paris, knew what we intended doing. They have sent a dummy to represent the president traveling incog. It is so very simple, so easy—why, sometimes men actually assist in deluding themselves, poor fools."

"Then the game is rung off, the curtain falls on a tableau with virtue triumphant and vice probably punished, as usual."

Her sneer went home, for it caused him to glance once more toward the young couple, so absorbed in one another they had no thought, no care outside the horizon of their happiness.

This recalled him to the consciousness that there were other branches embraced in the longitude and latitude of the chart he had drawn for his guidance.

If fame in a French empire were denied him, how about fortune and love?

Half a loaf would be better than no bread.

Besides, there was revenge—that word always has a sympathetic ring to the ear of a Frenchman.

Jones he hated like mad—Jones was hand in glove with Merrick—ergo, if he could kidnap the latter and throw him into the hands of the savage Bedouin tribes he knew along the Barbary coast, and at the same time steal his sweetheart, would it not be a glorious retaliation upon Monsieur Jones for spoiling the dream of an empire?

Rallying from his dazed condition, he cheered himself with the thought that all was not lost while a chance for Little Miss Millions as a bride remained; and with this as his spur Count Leon played into the game.

The count had a lieutenant who was capable of giving good advice in a matter of this sort.

Of course, this was the blonde giant from the North, the Cossack who came from the Don.

In a moment he had obeyed a signal and was at Villebois' side, eager to hear what was new, and ready to give his advice if sought.

Stromboloff had this long time been an abject slave of the fair enchantress, and fumed in secret when he saw her allowing the attentions of other men—still, he endured this frequent sight, knowing what the poor fools would receive in due time, since she had always been heartless.

Strangely enough he was even more bitterly set against Merrick than any of the others, for in his distorted vision it seemed a vile sacrilege that a common man without any illustrious pedigree or vast fortune, upon whom the princess deigned to smile, should treat her evident advances with contempt.

Accordingly Stromboloff was decidedly anxious to have the original plan go through.

He had a long head, this Russian, and declared it would be folly taking chances. The minister in Paris who was a slave to the siren's charms might be mistaken, or in the plot with their enemies, and, after all, this man, with whom they believed to be the president, might turn out to be no other.

At any rate, it was their duty to carry out the original plan up to this point, although the invasion of France by the Duke of Orleans could not take place until it was positively proven that it was the genuine president who had been abducted.

So the question was decided. Count Leon, having cast aside his doubts for the time being, became the energetic man of action.

One last look he cast around. The act was that of a soldier who combined caution with valor.

The lovers still stood by the terrace wall, looking out over the starlit harbor, where steamed the many riding lights of the congregated yachts at anchor.

They seemed oblivious of all around, wrapped up in the paradise that newly-confessed love opens to the human soul.

From this scene the count turned grimly, conscious of his magician's power to change it all by the wave of his hand.

Jones was next in his mind, for since the double nature of the man from over the sea had become apparent to the princess and himself the Yankee had grown to be a person of considerable importance, whose personality must be figured on, no matter how certain the game seemed to be.

But Jones was non est. While the three conferees were debating as to the best course for them to pursue under the changed circumstances he had sauntered away.

The count confessed to him that it would have pleased him better had Jones maintained his post; for when he had a desperate foe to deal with it had always been the policy of the great explorer to keep his eye on him unceasingly until such time as he could cut him down.

And somehow he was possessed with an idea that Jones had not moved away in an idle frame of mind, out with a motive back of his action.

When he had seen that the president had not moved, but was still chatting with his companions, Count Leon knew the chain was complete, and that there was really no need of this looking forward.

Villebois drew out a small silver whistle and raised it to his lips.

Strange that such an innocent sound should, as if by magic, transform a peaceful scene into one where violence ruled.

The music still continued under the dome and spires of the Casino, but mellowed by distance and obtruding walls, the sound but softly permeated the air of the garden.

Count Leon blew three shrill blasts. There was something so startling about them that unconsciously every one in the extensive gardens seemed to take it for granted they were intended to be a signal of some sort.

Immediately a great commotion began.

Men appeared from various points, all heading toward a central hub—men who moved with haste, and yet showing some signs of military instruction—men who were grimly in earnest, no matter what their mission.

Every one was on the jump—a general fluttering had taken place, as though that signal whistle aroused the electric waves in the atmosphere.

The princess had her eyes upon one man, and that was the lover of Constance.

FORTUNES MADE IN TIPS.

One Man Averaged $1,300 a Year for Twenty Years.

In some restaurants in New York the waiters put all their tips in a box and divide equally. That is a very general plan in Paris. As a rule, in this country, however, what each gets is his own. In one cafe, with three distinct sets of patrons the tipping is so constant that the waiters serving there pay handsomely for the privilege. There is, however, only one such place.

At another well patronized place some of the waiters have served many years. One of these the other day said he had kept account of his tips for twenty years. The lowest on record was $800, the highest $1,800, while the average was $1,300. This means that in tips this worthy man had taken in $3.50 a day during twenty years.

I was quite prepared, says John Gilmer Speed in Lippincott's, to have him tell me that he had educated one of his sons, putting him through college and the law school. This man was German. It probably never occurred to him that there was anything debasing in a tip. And for him there was nothing debasing in it. He lived and acted in harmony with the sphere of life into which he was born. That was all. But it would be an entirely different thing for this son, this beneficiary of tips, to receive one. He is an American and must take fees only. For his father's sake as well as his own I hope his fees will be large.

MANY ATTEND ONEIDA WEDDING

Miss Janet Greig is Married to Judge P. S. Post.

In the presence of 250 guests, representing college and professional circles, Judge P. S. Post, son of the late Congressman P. S. Post, and Miss Janet Greig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Greig, and until recently dean of women at Knox college, were married at the home of the bride's parents in Oneida. Dr. Thomas McClelland, president of Knox college, performed the ceremony. Albert Boyden of New York city was best man, and Miss Harriet Stone of Galesburg was maid of honor. Judge and Mrs. Post left on an extended trip East, and on their return will live at Galesburg.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO GEN. GRANT.

Maj. Wham Praises the Silent Commander and His Regiment.

Fully 5,000 persons attended the joint reunion of the Marion and Clay county veterans at Shirley's grove, near Xenia. The principal address was made by Maj. Wham W. Wham of Salem. In his address Maj. Wham paid a glowing tribute to the silent commander (Grant) and his 21st Illinois regiment, a company of which was formed at Xenia. Addresses were also delivered by Hon. Benson Wood of Effingham and Gen. J. S. Martin of Salem. A rousing campfire was held at night.

Municipal Ownership.

At an informal conference of the mayor and aldermen of Edwardsville the electric light situation was discussed and a committee appointed to ascertain the cost of building and maintaining a lighting plant, having in view municipal ownership. The sentiment of citizens generally is against the proposition, and it will no doubt be defeated when it comes to a vote, if it is carried that far.

New Plants at Mildred.

It is expected that the manufacturing plant at Mildred will be in operation within the next thirty days. The board of directors of the newly organized Sangamon manufacturing company held a meeting and arranged for the purchase of new machinery. The old plant has not been in operation for several years. Stoves will be the first product of the new company.

Wreck at Nashville.

A serious wreck occurred in the yards of the Illinois Southern at Nashville. An engine and four cars were derailed, and the former became so deeply imbedded in the soft ground that it will probably require several days to extract it. The cars were completely demolished and traffic in yards was delayed all day. The wreck was caused by spreading rails.

Strike at Salem.

The large fruit evaporator of Rogers & Schwartz at Salem was shut down on account of a strike inaugurated by those employed. A meeting of the American Federation of Labor was held and the strike was ordered. The men demand $1.25 per day for ten hours and 15 cents per hour for overtime. They have been receiving $1 per day.

Seek an Old Soldier.

Stephenson Post, G. A. R., has sent out a circular letter making inquiry for some trace of John W. Algood, an old soldier, who left Springfield Aug. 18 for the soldiers' home at Danville. Nothing has been heard of him since he left Decatur. His mind was affected, and it is supposed that he left the train and is now wandering through the country.

To Build Church.

The contract for the erection of the new Prentice M. E. church at Springfield has been awarded. The total cost will be about $12,000. The church will be located on the southwest corner of Governor street and Douglas avenue. It will be of brick and stone and modern in every particular. The work will be commenced at once.

Business Men Organize.

About thirty of the business men met in the parlors of the Litchfield hotel and effected a temporary organization of the Litchfield Business Men's association. Carl F. Bartling was elected temporary chairman and George C. Parish temporary secretary.

Soldiers in Reunion.

The thirteenth annual reunion of the Williamson county Soldiers' and Sailors' association was held at Johnson City. Gen. C. W. Peavey of Mount Vernon addressed the meeting.

Four-Score and Ten.

John Bretz, Sr., celebrated his 90th birthday at Springfield and a party was given in his honor at his home on North Fifth street. The affair was in the form of a dinner and was attended by Mr. Bretz's children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, numbering over eighty persons.

Woman Principal.

Miss Sue Wilson of Pana has been appointed to the principalship of the Lena (Ill.) public schools, and has left for that place to assume her duties.

PLENTY OF PRAIRIE CHICKENS

Some Rare Bags Anticipated by the Sportsmen of the State.

Sportsmen are getting ready for the open season for prairie chicken shooting, which continues through the month of September. This is the only period during which the birds may be killed under the Illinois law, and sportsmen are abandoning the river and preparing their shooting equipments for a few days in the marshes and stubblefields. Reports of game conditions generally in central Illinois are quite favorable. There were unfavorable conditions in the early summer in the breeding sections, many of the nests being washed out and thousands of young birds destroyed by the heavy June rains, but notwithstanding these losses, the reports received by the railroads from station agents indicate a large chicken crop.

FAMOUS WAR VETERANS MEET

Ninety-Fourth Illinois Regiment Holds Its Annual Reunion.

Survivors of the famous Ninety-fourth Illinois volunteer infantry met at Bloomington in their nineteenth annual reunion and recalled memories of Vicksburg, Yazoo City, Fayetteville and other engagements in which the regiment participated. The late Gen. John McNulta was commander. The gathering was held at Miller park. Elaborate preparations were made by the people of Bloomington to give the veterans a hospitable reception. Out of the 2,500 men that served in the regiment, either through the entire civil war or a portion of it, only a few hundred are left. Of this small company many reside in central Illinois, but others have scattered over the country. The Ninety-fourth was organized under the president's call for 600,000 men issued in the summer of 1862. William Orme, the colonel, was the leading lawyer of Bloomington. Rev. Robert Guthrie, a presiding elder, was chaplain and the regiment was officered by some of the most prominent men of central Illinois. The regiment saw active service with the "army of the frontier" in Missouri and participated in numerous engagements under Gen. Blunt. It was mustered out July 1, 1865. While in active service the command campaigned in six states, traveled 8,000 miles, participated in nine battles and was never defeated or repulsed.

Two of the well known survivors of the regiment are William J. Baldrige, treasurer of McLean county, and Joseph P. Martin. Both attended the reunion.

Queen Gets Diamond Ring.

Miss Gertrude Ingram has been declared the winner of the contest for queen of the carnival and street fair at Cairo under the auspices of the Modern Woodmen of America, and has acceptingly been presented with the handsome diamond ring offered by them as a prize. Miss Ingram received 3,359 votes.

Boy's Wrist Broken.

Guy, the 14-year-old son of T. F. Stevens of Murphysboro, had his left wrist broken while at the Anna fair. He was leading a horse through a gate and the animal became frightened and ran away, jerking the boy against a fence.

Pekin Fair.

The Pekin street fair association has decided to give a free street fair in Pekin on October 15, 16, 17 and 18. The features will be a floral parade and electrical fountains.

PLAN A BETTER CAMP LINCOLN

Legislature to Be Asked to Purchase Additional Land.

An appropriation for the extension and improvement of Camp Lincoln, adjoining Springfield, will be asked of the next legislature. It is here that the annual encampments of the Illinois National Guard are held, and the present area of 160 acres has been found inadequate for the maneuvers of troops in brigade formations. It is proposed, therefore, to add twenty-five acres to the parade grounds, and tenting quarters, in order that the troops may be cared for by brigades without cramping their quarters and their drill work. Adj. Gen. Smith will recommend that an appropriation be made for this purpose. If the appropriation is made the tract of land adjoining the camp on the west will be annexed. In addition to increasing the area of the camp, the legislature will be asked for an appropriation to build a high stone wall in the rear of the rifle butts for the protection of the farm residents immediately in the rear of the rifle range. For several years the state has been paying damages to the owners of adjacent farm lands, and it is the plan to save this money by the erection of a high wall.

TAXABLE PROPERTY IN JACKSON

Report of Board of Review Shows Slight Decrease.

The board of review of Jackson county, which was in session for nearly a month, has finished its work and adjourned. The report of the board shows the total value of taxable property in the county, not including that of railroads and corporations, to be $10,880,468, which is $14,680 less than the amount reported last year. The total assessed value of property is $2,098,229. According to the report, there are 6,636 horses, 11,837 cattle, 2,538 mules, 2,052 sheep and 14,032 hogs in the county. The horses are valued at $311,657; cattle, $199,403; mules, $134,643; sheep, $5,697; hogs, $41,567. Total value of live stock, $692,967.

Chrysanthemums.

A deed filed for record at the courthouse in Pinckneyville shows the transfer of 100 acres of land lying a short distance southeast of Tamaroa to W. H. Arendt by Zebedee Hambleman. The consideration was $3,000. Mr. Arendt's place of business is in St. Louis, but his wife is engaged in raising flowers on a twenty-acre tract of land adjoining the 100 acres mentioned. She has made quite a success in a small way and will now extend her lines, with the intention of growing chrysanthemums on a large scale. A Chicago firm already has a large chrysanthemum farm near Tamaroa.

"Mushrooms."

Elisha Rose of Springfield, his wife and two children ate what they supposed were mushrooms. Shortly after supper all were seized with severe pains, and the father and mother, who had eaten freely of the mushrooms, were so seriously ill the neighbors who had been summoned thought death was near and physicians were summoned. The physicians believe that the mushrooms were toadstools.

Marion County Fair.

Secretary H. T. Sweeney of the Marion county agricultural board has announced that the annual fair will be held September 16 to 19. The premium list will be issued within a few days and liberal awards will be made in the various classes of live stock and farm products. About $1,000 will be devoted to the speed ring. John M. Green of this city has been chosen general superintendent.

Killed for One Cent.

It develops that the killing at Spaulding recently was the result of a quarrel over a game of craps, and that the amount at stake was 1 cent. The murderer, Harry Riley, a negro, railroad laborer, was apprehended at Mount Pulaski.

Missionary Delegate.

B. C. Few of Alton has been appointed a delegate from the Alton district Methodist Episcopal conference to attend the world's missionary convention to be held at Cleveland, O., in October.

Congressional Convention.

Marion county will have sixteen delegates in the Republican congressional convention to be held at Effingham on Tuesday, Sept. 23.

W. C. T. U. Convention.

The district convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance union will be held in Danquoin September 17 and 18.

Killed by Train.

James W. Baker, brother of Joseph N. Baker of the Citizens' National bank, was killed by a railroad train near Gladstone. Deceased was formerly in the boot and shoe business in Decatur. He is survived by a wife and three children.

Elect Stanford Graduate.

Miss Grace Kanter, a graduate of the Leland Stanford university, has been elected to the vacancy in the Charleston high school faculty caused by Miss Mary Rood's resignation.

The Rockefeller Hair Restorer.

John D. Rockefeller is a great man. All doubts as to that fact are now dispelled. Beginning life at an early age, he soon showed his precocity by obtaining control of the world's oil supply. He has also amassed a fortune vaguely estimated at $200,000,000, but even this accomplishment pales before his latest exploit. It is a worthy climax of a truly notable career. Indeed the oil magnate has discovered a sure cure for baldness, and long suffering humanity arises to call him blessed. All that remains for him to do is to make public the nature of this wonderful lotion which coaxes those tender hirsute sprouts through stubborn craniums into the light of day.

The strenuous nature of Mr. Rockefeller's life had a depleting effect on his hair, and soon his head became like unto polished ivory in smoothness. Diligent quest, however, away from the eyes of the vulgar world has finally met its reward, and those familiar enough with the millionaire to pat his pate are unanimous in announcing to the anxious world that several dozen, and maybe more, bona fide hairs are holding their heads proudly aloft in the breezes that play around the unprotected skull. That they may increase and thrive with every application of the priceless lymph is the ardent wish of every man and woman that secured Standard Oil stock at par.

It will be interesting to know how many millions of dollars are paid out every year by men for hair restorers. Not much hair results, but money is kept in circulation. But if there were a sure cure for baldness the magic bottle would contain, as Dr. Johnson said of Mrs. Thrane's beer vats, "the potentiality of growing rich beyond the dreams of avarice." Its inventor could buy out the steel trust. And yet men insist that the sex which does not grow bald is the vainest one!

The report that a recently deceased New York woman left her husband by will to another woman moves Harper's Weekly to make this comment: "For the sake of establishing a precedent we should like to see the gentleman who was thus disposed of enter a demurrer to the carrying out of that particular provision of the will with which he is most concerned. It may be, of course, that he was thus devised to another of his own free will and with his consent. Still, the individual owes it to his sex to have the legality of the devise either established or denied by the properly constituted authority. It will never do for the husbands of this land to submit tamely and without a construction of the statutes by our judicial officers to an alleged and newly discovered principle of law which reduces them to the level of chattels and which gives them no more to say as to their future than that which we accord to a horse, a dog, a family portrait or a mahogany bedstead."

At last John Pierpont Morgan has demonstrated that he is a man of mighty acts. Of course he buys steamship lines now and then, and occasionally combines the interests of a half dozen or so of railroads, or perhaps floats a steel trust or two before breakfast, but he never really established a claim to serious consideration until recently, when he left a Berlin hotel without giving tips to the help. That was a demonstration of extreme daring, and none but a financial colossus would have had the temerity to act in such a manner. Perhaps if more American travelers followed Mr. Morgan's example tourists would have a chance to obtain a recognition of their rights without the disbursing of a small fortune in fees to well paid servants.

Korea now has a brass band. It was recently organized in the capital of the Hermit Nation and consists of forty pieces. Korea may now be said to be on the highroad to civilization. History holds no record of a great nation without a brass band and something in the line of "Die Wacht am Rhein," the "Marsellaise" or "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," nor any record of an uncivilized race that ever had either one or the other. The tom-tom is savage, the stringed instrument half civilized, the band of brass, with the drum major in front, is civilization rampant and strident.

Although a new Chinese minister to Washington has been appointed, it is good to know that the genial Wu Ting Fang is to remain awhile longer "in our midst" and is still available for banquet programmes and women's club orgies.

An able correspondent in describing a Tennessee election affray says the victim was "shot in the suburbs, the leg and the left arm." Such a complication of injury must necessarily be serious.

Why We Play at War.

To those who are disposed to look upon the big war game now in progress off the north Atlantic coast as merely an expensive spectacle for the entertainment of the seashore vacationists should be recalled the national state of mind in which we were just about four years ago. We were at war with Spain then. It was real war. Of course, as it all turned out, we were much more frightened than we should have been; but we were frightened. Somewhere on the high seas the terrible Cervera was supposed to be roaming about with his formidable squadron. Would he strike Boston first? The sacred codfish under the gilded stateroom dome shivered at the thought. Would he attack New York? The Gotham newspapers speculated on the terrible destruction which Cervera, lying outside of Sandy Hook, might cause in Harlem if he trained his big guns in that direction. Philadelphians were uneasy. At Old Point Comfort they talked of blowing up a big hotel so that the guns of Fort Monroe might have a free sweep of Hampton Roads. Yes, we were somewhat scared.

But now we are only playing at war. We are supposing that a fleet as formidable as Cervera's was thought to be trying to run the gauntlet of forts in Long Island sound and attempting to get into position to lay waste New York city. It is expected that our forts will be equal to the task of protecting the approaches to Gotham. If they are not, congress will be asked to strengthen them. So you see that the affair is something more than a spectacle.

But all this is merely preliminary to the naval evolutions to be held in the Caribbean sea next January. That is to be a gathering of the north and south Atlantic and the European squadrons mobilized under the admiral of the navy and five rear admirals. It will be a gathering which ought to prove not only of service to the navy, but impressive to other nations. For this mobilization more than $1,000,000 for extraordinary expenses above the mere maintenance of the service will be used. Of this vast amount the largest part will be expended in ammunition.

Such a series of mimic naval battles as will take place the world has never seen. The United States fleet will work on the idea that it is operating in the West Indies against a foe many times stronger than were Cervera and his squadron, and the maneuvers will assume the importance of a long and decisive campaign.

Primarily both sets of maneuvers will demonstrate to the world the ability of the United States to defend itself. The summer evolutions are intended to prove that ample protection has been furnished to the metropolises and that no concern need be felt by the nation over a naval attack by any European power. The winter mobilization off the West Indies will convince European countries that this government can assemble and maintain in those waters a force that a navy even with established bases in that region would not lightly dare to encounter.

In its recently issued blue book concerning the resettling of South Africa the British government suggests that "it is desirable that Boer farming, which is of the most primitive description, should be superseded at once by the most advanced and scientific cultivation that it is possible to procure." With this result in view Mr. Chamberlain is already arranging for the visit of Boer delegations to England, the United States and Canada to study the latest farming methods and appliances. Mr. Chamberlain might also add that when it comes to manufacturing agricultural implements Uncle Sam leads the world.

Having seen a production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and having spoken "pieces" in public, Miss Gertrude Epstein, a twelve-year-old Syracuse girl, has announced that she intends to succeed Sarah Bernhardt as the world's greatest actress. "Bernhardt must have once been a little girl like me," she says, "and at twelve she was not great. Then why may not I, if I work hard and as long and as earnestly, become great like her also?" Now there is a poser for you.

The limit of literary "booming" seems to have been reached in the recent announcement by a publishing firm that the author of the newest romantic novel wrote the book while in a jail. Now, Mr. Hall Caine, will you hide your diminished head?

Politicians in some of our large cities are attempting to curry favor by giving excursions to their constituents. The next excursion that some of them will take will undoubtedly be up Salt creek.

Young Cornelius Vanderbilt has tinkered up a locomotive that can pull a train as fast as an automobile can go. So, it seems, even millionaires can be useful.

Now that he has been obliged to move, Kipling may get revenge on those neighbors by putting them in his next book.

CATCHING A THIEF.

An Old Method Utilized by a German Officer in China.

Thirty dollars was stolen at the Officers' club in Tientsin, China, and the members of the club resolved, if possible, to catch the thief.

A German captain volunteered to manage the affair, and the first thing he did was to summon all the native servants of the club. He then said to them:

"Some money has been stolen here, and I am looking for the thief. I shall find him in an hour, not before, since I need that much time in order to get instructions from a celebrated magician in Germany."

An hour later all the servants were again summoned, but this time into a dark room, in the middle of which stood the table on which the money stolen had been laid.

"Each of you, now," said the officer, "must go up to that table and press on it first your right and then your left hand, and when that is done you must raise your two hands over your head and step into the next room."

The servants did so, and as the last one stepped into the adjoining room the officer followed him, and after looking for a few moments at the many uplifted hands he pointed to one man and said, "You are the thief." The Chinaman to whom he pointed nearly fell to the ground with fright and admitted his guilt and promised to make restitution.

Very simple was the method adopted by the officer for discovering the culprit. While the native servants supposed that his spirit was in Germany in communion with the celebrated magician he was carefully smearing the surface of the table in the dark room with fat and oil, which he then blackened by means of soot. The innocent servants naturally pressed their hands on the table, according to his instructions, but the culprit, though superstitious, did not do so.

As a result, while the uplifted hands of all the others were coal black, his were of a natural color, and thus his guilt was clearly proved.—Detroit Free Press.

KILLED THE SPIDER.

Deadly Influence of a Small Magnet on the Insect.

An experiment made by a scientist to test the influence which a magnet will have on a spider is of interest. The magnet employed was a small steel one of the U shape, the legs of which were about two and a half inches long by one-half inch wide and one-sixth of an inch thick, the distance between the poles being about one-quarter of an inch.

Having noticed a small spider actively running along his armchair, he brushed it off upon the carpet, where it began to run, but was somewhat impeded by the roughness of the fabric. He now slid the magnet along the carpet, following after the spider, till the ends of the poles were within a quarter of an inch of it. The animal, without being touched, almost instantly stopped, and on withdrawing the magnet the spider continued on his journey.

The experimenter then placed the magnet within half an inch in front of the spider, and, withdrawing it slowly, the latter followed it in every direction which the magnet took, both in straight and circuitous routes.

Gradually, however, the spider became so strongly magnetized as to be immovable for several minutes, the magnetic influence seeming to lose its further power. On withdrawing the magnet altogether the spider began to recover somewhat.

The scientist ultimately placed a tumbler over the spider and the magnet, covering them both completely, and at the expiration of several minutes the spider, after a struggle to escape from the strong influence which the magnet exercised over it, was dead.—Exchange.

The Word Flattery.

At first sight there would appear to be little connection between flattery and the wagging of a dog's tail, yet in nearly all the northern language the same word signifies both, and flattery is certainly derived from the word signifying to wag the tail. In the old Norman flagra signifies to flatter and also to wag the tail. In Danish logre is to wag the tail, and loger for een is to fawn on one. In Dutch vleydsteren is to flatter and vleydsteren is to wag the tail. In the old German wedeln is to wag the tail, and in English wheedle is to gain one's end in flattery.

Nothing Wasted.

A Scottish farmer when going to market, it was observed, always took a hen with him in his trap. The reason was never known until one day he took a friend with him on a drive. Every place the farmer stopped he put the nosebag on his horse, and then the hen was so trained that what dropped from the horse's bag the hen would pick up, so there was nothing wasted.—Pearson's Weekly.

Good Intentions.

"Don't trust too far to yoh good intentions," said Uncle Eben, "unless yoh has skill back of 'em. Good intentions satisfies de man what has 'em, but dey is de ruination of a heap of choir music."—Washington Star.

A Buttonless Coat.

"Is there any kind of coat that never has any buttons on it?" asked a mission teacher of a class of newsboys. "Yes, sir—a coat of paint," was the instantaneous reply.

Patriotism is not the mere holding of a great flag unfurled, but making it of the goodliest in the world.—W. J. Linton.

Wednesday the Juniors crossed bats with Libertyville at the Lake county fair grounds in one of the best games the Juniors have played this season. From start to finish it was a pitcher's game and the field work of both teams was first-class. This game decided which team is to play Friday with the Grayslake for the prize given by the fair association. The score was 8 to 4 in favor of Wauconda.

The ball game Sunday between the Juniors and married men was one of the most interesting games this season and resulted in a score of 12 to 0, in favor of the Juniors. Bruncheon and King was the battery for married men and the entire infield was well filled. The fielders got every ball that went their way, after it stopped rolling. It was certainly a great game and the next one will deserve advertising.

Our school opened Monday with an entire new set of instructors. The principal, Mr. Fuller, the new instructor selected by the board of directors comes highly recommended and will, no doubt, prove a very able instructor. Miss Estella Grace has charge of the intermediate room this year, having taught the primary for the past four years, and is a very capable instructor. Miss Ethel Duers conducts the primary room and, although this is her first term of teaching, we predict her the best of success, being a young lady with a kindly disposition toward the little ones and having fitted herself thoroughly at the Dixon normal school for the position of a teacher.

Senator Hill on Labor and Trusts.

Ex-senator David Bennett Hill, who is again the recognized leader of the New York state democracy, addressed an audience of 9,000 people the other day. He put his views into a single paragraph, which is regarded as indicating the line of the campaign:

"The Scriptures teach that a man should earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, and that he should do his labor on the six days of the week and not on Sunday, but I find nothing in the Scriptures which requires that he should labor continuously on week days or that regulates the specific number of hours that he should work. In this connection permit me to digress with the suggestion that neither do I find anything in Holy Writ which contemplates the accumulation of wealth through the instrumentality of corporate trusts, designed for the prevention of legitimate competition in trade in the creation of monopoly in business. The gigantic combinations of capital which have been erected in recent years, whereby the prices of living have been unduly enhanced; the multitude of schemes which have been devised to control the channels and avenues of trade; the unreasonable restrictions which have been imposed by statute upon our commercial freedom in the pecuniary interest of those who ostentatiously style themselves the captains of industry, are the modern creations of able and designing men intent upon amassing vast riches and are neither sanctioned by Scriptural injunctions nor can they be justified by an honest and unselfish public policy."

Ohio's Interesting Municipal Muddle

It is a most unique and interesting situation which has been revealed in Ohio by the necessity which has caused Governor Nash to call an extraordinary session of the legislature, to meet at Columbus on Aug. 25. The immediate cause of the governor's call for a special session of the lawmakers in midsummer is a recent decision of the state supreme court, which declares every municipal government in Ohio illegal and unconstitutional. The court has not yet issued its syllabus; hence there has been no such upheaval as there was not long ago in Pittsburg, when the municipal government of that Pennsylvania city was wiped out by the "Ripper" law. The legislature of Ohio will probably prevent so sensational a revolution as this by meeting the new condition defined by the supreme court's decision with legislation which will be adequate. In this event it is assumed that the court will withhold its decision, and thus give the people of the cities and towns of Ohio an opportunity to elect an entirely new set of officers in November.

The anomalous situation is due to the fact that for many years, or since the present state constitution was adopted before the civil war, the Ohio legislature has been passing laws so phrased as to have application only to the towns and cities seeking particular legislation. In other words, no general municipal legislation has been enacted at Columbus, broadly speaking, and this has led to a hodgepodge condition which is indescribable and inextricable. Now there has been brought to light a constitutional clause which distinctly prohibits legislation of this sort; hence the muddle.

COMMANDERS OF RIVAL FORCES IN MIMIC WAR NOW ON; MAP OF COAST SUBJECT TO ATTACK BY THE ENEMY.

THE ATTACKER
REAR ADMIRAL J. E. PILLSBURY
COMMANDER WHITE SQUADRON

THE DEFENDER
REAR ADMIRAL F. J. HIGGINSON
COMMANDER BLUE SQUADRON

The attempt of the "enemy," represented by Commander Pillsbury's white squadron, to effect a landing on the New England coast ended by the theoretical destruction of the fleet and its surrender to Rear Admiral Higginson, commanding the blue, or defending squadron.

At 5:40 a. m. Aug. 24 the signal "Surrender; demand unconditional," was made from Rear Admiral Higginson's flagship, and the reply, "Accept, surrender," came from the fore truck of the Prairie, Commander Pillsbury's flagship.

The battle between the blue or defending squadron, and the white, or attacking squadron, was thus quickly ended eight miles south of Thatcher's Island. The "enemy" had most signally failed to make a harbor having for its objective Salem. A preponderance of fighting strength, relatively sixty-four points, represented by the battleships Kearsarge, Alabama and Massachusetts, Scorpion and a torpedo boat, had overwhelmed the forty-five points represented by the auxiliary cruisers Prairie, Panther and Supply. To speak from a theoretic standpoint, the white squadron was entirely destroyed by the guns of the defending battleships. Thus on the fourth night the game of naval strategy was brought to an end, it having covered a period of unceasing toil, sleepless nights, of anxious and wearing vigil, and of grave uncertainty to its participants.

The maneuvers of the two United States fleets off the Massachusetts coast have been watched with much interest by both naval and military men. Commander Pillsbury heads the attacking fleet, and his object is to make a landing on the coast and hold and fortify a position, while Admiral Higginson is in charge of the defending fleet, to prevent such a move. A thick fog has aided the feat of the enemy.

At the beginning of the Spanish-American war the government established a lookout and maintained a crew of signal service men on the rocky islands, ten miles off the New Hampshire coast. That this judgment was good was demonstrated when, during a heavy mist, the jacksy who was on lookout at the top of the mast espied what proved to have been one of Commander Pillsbury's fleet.

As soon as the station on the Isle of Shoals notified the nearest mainland point by the use of torches and the secret code of the navy, Admiral Higginson's system of signals spread the news. In a moment the destroyer Deatur was rocketed from Portsmouth to pursue the mysterious comer, and in another moment the Deaur, with the smoke belching forth from four stacks, was plowing furiously through the heavy seas. The stranger turned and fled at full speed and was soon lost.

Again shortly before dark the man on watch discovered a number of war vessels several miles to the southeast of the islands. They were not discernible by the naked eye and were only seen from the lookout by the aid of a powerful glass. They remained practically in the same position until darkness shut them from view. From this fact they were believed to be some of Commander Pillsbury's squadron, and shortly after nightfall the fleet of torpedo boats of Admiral Higginson's squadron left to keep an eye on the movements of the attacking fleet.

It was early discovered that Commander Pillsbury had secretly landed some of his officers ashore to spy upon the movements of the blue squadron, and this served only to increase the perplexity of Admiral Higginson's position, and this reported shore system of spying was one of the things which led the admiral to establish the new signal station off Straits Mouth point, and also to remove his ships to a point just inside Thatcher's Island.

The battleship Kearsarge, Admiral Higginson's flagship, and the two other battleships, the Alabama and the Massachusetts, were off Thatcher's Island close to Rockport. The scouts of the blue squadron put out to sea to engage in the work of trying to locate the white squadron of the enemy. Two torpedo boats were with them.

The armored cruiser Brooklyn and the cruiser Olympia were somewhere to the north watching approaches to Portsmouth and Portland, and ready to respond to any news that the white squadron was trying to enter one of these places. The cruiser Montgomery and the smaller vessels, including all the other torpedo boats, were strung out along the coast.

Rain fell on the afternoon of the second day, and when it ceased the skies remained threatening. The moon, which was the white squadron's despair, could not be seen.

The torpedo boat Stockton left Officers Abele, Jackson, Wainwright and Cox, detailed from the Montgomery as shore signal men, to cover Race Point and Highland Light, Mass. The Stockton patrolled the coast in search of Capt. Pillsbury's fleet. From the Provincetown shore to that of Plymouth the distance is eighteen miles. The bay shore sweeps around in a circle, is invisible from shipping off Provincetown, and spying ships would necessarily be obliged to cover much water to guard all sections of the bay shore.

The defenders relied to some extent on news of the invading fleet being brought by fishermen.

Rear Admiral Higginson's three battleships at midnight of the second day were still at anchor off Thatcher's Island, and besides them were two torpedo boats, but a nasty sea was running and the lightning occasionally lighted up the bay. At midnight the flagship's launches found difficult work in making landings, and incoming craft reported a wild sea outside. On the battleships the men were wide awake, as every one expected to get word of the enemy before daylight.

The three battleships of Higginson's command, the only division of his squadron maintained as a unit capable of frustrating Pillsbury's purpose, lay close in to the great granite bowlders called Thatcher's and Strait-mouth's islands, situated barely pistol shot range from the headland that shelters the harbors of Rockport, Mass., from easterly gales. The battleships were cleared for action and officers and men had been warned to be ready to spring to quarters at the first alarm.

The torpedo boats Bagley and Bidle were scouting near by, occasionally communicating with the flagship. The knowing young war dogs of Rear Admiral Higginson's fleet were not as confident as formerly that Pillsbury, the Cervera of the mock war campaign, would fail to make a landing on the New England coast and establish a base of supplies and offensive operations there before the big ships under Higginson could stay him.

Of course, these exercises of the ships were all mere play in comparison with actual hostilities, but there was plenty of hard work in it. The officers and men of Rear Admiral Higginson's command did not mind the work, for they were mightily enthusiastic. There may have been a few who were inclined to scoff at the utility of the whole thing, but these caught the contagion of interest in the whereabouts of Pillsbury's division and the chances of his success or failure to establish a base.

It was no fun for the personnel of the vessels lying in wait for the white squadron. They are kept busy all day at subcaliber practice and other exercises, and at night had to bear the anxiety and fatigue of watching. No body was permitted to come ashore except the few engaged in maintaining communication between Rockport and Higginson's flagship and the signal stations along the coast from Portland to Cape Cod. Even these underwent the hardest kind of duty.

Rumors as to Pillsbury's whereabouts came to Rear Admiral Higginson by the score. Hostile squadrons were being discovered all along the coast. One report that got to Rockport was that Rear Admiral Higginson and some of his officers went ashore at the Isle of Shoals and took dinner at a hotel there. But this proved to be based on the joke of a man from Gloucester, who went there in a yacht and told everybody that one of his companions was the rear admiral.

The United States battleship Indiana, with a portion of the three upper classes of midshipmen aboard, left Annapolis to take part in the naval maneuvers off the Massachusetts coast. The cadets, who have been away on their summer cruise, will be given a vacation until the academic year begins next month.

Eggs Are Universal Food.

An English traveler who has visited every nation in the world is authority for the statement that one food is universal throughout all countries. "There is not a part of the world," he says, "where you cannot get an egg." While in western China, however, he at first had some difficulty in getting even eggs. The natives could not understand him and refused to recognize the pictures he drew as pictures of eggs. "The way I got out of the difficulty," he adds, "was that I squatted down on my haunches, flapped my wings and cock-a-doodle-doo'd until the entire nation grasped what I wanted, and I was simply provided with hundreds of eggs."

Railway Passengers Injured.

The French government has adopted a system of passenger insurance on state railways. The purchase of a penny ticket confers the right to $2,000 in case of death or permanent injury, from $500 to $1,000 for minor injuries and five francs a day while the injured person is unable to work as the result of an accident of any kind within the precincts of the railway. A passenger may purchase any number of tickets up to ten.

New Use for Injunctions.

A Chicago man has appealed to the courts to protect him from a woman who is bent on marrying him. This is a logical course to take, for it is a poor injunction nowadays that is not elastic enough to cover all sorts of speculation, including that governed by Dan Cupid.

Division of Land in Prussia.

Of the 34,864,865.8 hectares (86,151,083.3 acres) of land in Prussia, 8,270,133.5 hectares (20,435,199.8 acres), or 23.7 per cent, are occupied by forests and orchards.

ROMANCE OF THE SEASHORE.

Little Incident That Somehow Has Not the Right Ending.

It was in the surf. He had kissed her when that big wave went over both of them. It wouldn't have gone over them, either, if he hadn't told her to hold to the life-line. When the big wave came in it submerged the life-line and them, and then it was he kissed her. She couldn't scream, being under water, but she tried and swallowed a mouthful of brine. When the wave passed she hollered, but no one besides Fred knew why. She faced him furiously.

"Fred Stockington," she said, "you are no gentleman, and I hate you, and I shall never speak to you again!"

Then she let go of the life-line and started in. He started after her, not daring to touch her. The next wave boosted them roughly. She lost her footing and was pulled back at a pretty slide. He caught her.

"Release me!" she cried, "or I shall call the bathing master."

She got to her feet again, but was too dignified to hurry. The next wave curled over them. She cast her arms about him.

"Oh, save me! Save me!" she shrieked, as the cream and splutter of the breaker dashed them upon the beach.

"Do you forgive me?" he demanded, when their heads bobbed up, but he hung on.

"Oh, yes! Save me!" she answered, and down they went again.

The next time it was their heels bobbed up, but he dug his fists into the sand now skating from them. The cream and splutter receded, but her eyes were shut as he dragged her up the sand.

"Do you love me?" he shouted into her deafened ear.

"Poor girl! She thought herself still under water."

"Yes! Yes!" she gasped. "Save me!"

"You are saved!" he cried, "and I did it!"

And what do you suppose? That ungrateful girl got up, marched to her bathhouse, and hasn't spoken to him since!

WAS A REAL BOY, AFTER ALL.

Look Like a Cherub, and an Inspiration for an Artist.

He was the sort of child to inspire an artist. A sturdy little figure, clad in clean, cool garments. A round, chubby face, so tanned that the contrast made his big blue eyes seem lighter in color than they really were, though even then they matched the mass of yellow hair that ended in curls reaching below his neck. He wore no hat, and his feet and legs below the knee were bare, though one needed not to look at them to tell that he had been well fed, at least, during the five or six years he had been in the world.

Many an admiring glance was cast at him by men and women alike as he stood in the shadow of the elevated road, near the lower end of Greenwich street, and held aloft in one plump little hand a bunch of daisies some one had given to him. He called to other and larger boys across the street to see what he had received and they ran over and stole them from him.

The little fellow sobbed aloud, and a kindly faced old gentleman and a couple of young women stepped up to him and sought to assuage his grief.

"Don't cry, my little man," they said. "Be brave. Can we help you? You're too nice a boy to cry like that."

The little fists were drawn out of his eyes, and while the tears still glistened in them he turned on his sympathizers and with a ring of defiance in his voice said:

"Quit yer kiddin'. You'd squeal, too, wouldn't yer, if a bunch of guys like them 'd swiped yer bouquet?"—New York Mail and Express.

In Defense of Claret.

We learn that his majesty the king received the offer from various wine merchants and growers of the Bordeaux district of a thousand bottles of claret, or more if so desired. The bottles were not to bear the names of firms or owners of vineyards, and the gift was simply intended to commemorate the coronation. It is stated that Lord Pembroke, in his reply, regretted that claret was not used in the hospitals of the country, but all the same he thanked the wine growers who had made this generous offer. It may be true that claret is not used in British hospitals, but is there any reason why it should not be—any reason so cogent as to cause this excellent gift horse to be looked suspiciously in the face? Claret, by which we mean sound Bordeaux, such as this wine would have been, is an excellent and wholesome drink, and we think that it is a thousand pities, from every point of view, that the generous and kindly thought of the Bordeaux growers was not more appreciated.—Lancet.

To Render Happiness Perfect.

Two young women, patently of the "saleslady" persuasion, rode down Chestnut street in a crowded trolley car on a recent morning. They chatted animatedly about the merits of demerits of "Will" and "Gus" till they reached Broad street; from there to Twelfth they preserved a dreamy silence; then one broke out with:

"I say, Ag, what would you choose if you could have everything in the world you asked for?"

"Well," said Ag, slowly and musingly, "I think I'd choose enough shirt waists to last me for the next ten years. What 'd you take, Sade?"

"Me?" replied Sade. "It's the dream of me life, Ag, to have all the money I'd want, so I could go to me job in a cab every morning."—Philadelphia Times.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Cured by Pe-ru-na of Systemic Catarrh.

An Interesting Letter From Mrs. M. K. Bousch, of Richmond, and Her Little Daughter, Pearl.

Mrs. M. K. Bousch, Richmond, Va., writes:

"I had catarrh all through my system for two years and could get no relief. I was advised to try Peruna, and I have taken five bottles of it and am well and better now than I have been for years. I can advise any one who has catarrh of any part of the body to take Peruna. My little girl, who is eleven years old had catarrh, but was cured by Peruna. Before I began to take Peruna I was sick all the time, but now I am entirely cured and all praise is due Peruna.—Mrs. M. K. Bousch.

Miss Pearl Bousch writes: "When I was a baby I contracted catarrh, and was doctored by several good physicians, but none did me any good. My mother was taking Peruna at the time and gave some of it to me, and I soon began to improve, and am now well and fat as a little pig. I am twelve years old. The doctors told mother I had the consumption, but it was only catarrh."—Miss Pearl Bousch.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

Peruna is the acknowledged catarrh remedy of the age. Dr. Hartman, the compounder of Peruna, has written a book on the phases of catarrh peculiar to women, entitled, "Health and Beauty." It will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A BENEFIT TO FARMERS.

The benefits that will undoubtedly result to farmers from the recent incorporation of the International Harvester Company which took over the business of the five leading harvester manufacturers have probably not been considered by a large portion of the farming community.

The economical necessity of a consolidation of the interests of manufacturers and those of their farmer customers must be apparent to any one who understands the present situation.

The increased and increasing cost of material, manufacturing and selling—the latter in consequence of extreme and bitter competition between manufacturers and their several selling agents—has made the business unprofitable.

The two alternatives left for the manufacturers were either the increasing of the prices of machines or the reduction of the cost of manufacture and sales. The latter could only be accomplished by concentrating the business in one company.

As can readily be seen, the forming of the new company was not a stock jobbing operation but a centering of mutual interests. There is no watered stock; the capitalization is conservative and represented by actual and tangible assets. There is no stock offered to the public, it having all been subscribed and paid for by the manufacturers and their associates.

The management of the International Harvester Company is in the hands of well known, experienced men.

The officers are: President, Cyrus H. McCormick; Chairman Executive Committee, Charles Deering; Chairman Finance Committee, George W. Perkins; Vice-Presidents, Harold F. Jones and John J. Glessner; Secretary and Treasurer, Richard F. Howe. The members of the Board of Directors are as follows: Cyrus Bentley, William Deering, Charles Deering, James Deering, Eldridge M. Fowler, E. H. Gary, John J. Glessner, Richard F. Howe, Abram M. Hyatt, William H. Jones, Cyrus H. McCormick, Harold F. McCormick, George W. Perkins, Norman B. Ream, Leslie N. Ward, Paul D. Cravath.

The International Harvester Company owns five of the largest harvester plants in existence. The Champion, Deering, McCormick, Milwaukee and Plano—plants that have been producing nearly or quite 90 per cent of the harvesting machines of the world.

It also owns timber and coal lands, blast furnaces and a steel plant; it has a new factory in the process of construction in Canada.

It is believed that the cost of producing grain, grass and corn harvesting machines will be so reduced that the present low prices can be continued, and that consequently the results cannot be otherwise than beneficial to the farmer. To maintain the present prices of these machines means to continue and increase the development of the agriculture of the world, for no one cause has contributed or can contribute more to this development than the cheapness of machines for harvesting grains.

She Cornered Him.

The query editor was troubled, not to say angry.

"Hang it all!" he exclaimed as he read the letter addressed to his department, "my wife has been asking me this question for the last week, and I refused to be bothered." He looked at the letter again and jumped out of his chair. "Thunder and guns," he cried, "it's her handwriting, too. Now that she has learned the trick she'll make me settle every social, household, and historical question that comes up, and I'll be right on hand to take the blame if I make a mistake."

FLAYS MORGAN, KING OF TRUSTS

Wilkesbarre Public Alliance Asks if He Will Retain Menacing Power.

SAY THE PEOPLE SHOULD SPEAK

Members Appeal to President Roosevelt to Use His Influence to Aid Them in the Hour When They Are Being Crushed.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., dispatch: The Public alliance of this city, representing business men of the vicinity, has appealed to President Roosevelt for aid in obtaining a settlement of the strike. They have already appealed to Senators Quay and Penrose. The petition follows:

"Since the inception of the barbarous and senseless struggle in the anthracite coal region we, the non-combatants, who stand upon neutral ground, have suffered the inevitable fate of such unfortunates. The tide of battle ebbs and flows over and about us. We have endured patiently. We have petitioned humbly.

Meet Disappointment. "We had hoped for much upon J. Pierpont Morgan's return, but now, after a struggle of four months' duration, a period of suffering and progressive business paralysis, when it seemed to us that the time was propitious for a settlement of some kind, if not as a matter of concession to public opinion yet as a plain business proposition, Mr. Morgan has met with his henchmen and the edict has gone forth:

Is Government Supreme? "There will be no settlement, no arbitration, no conciliation, no mediation, no concessions. The fight must go on."

"Mr. Morgan has placed a ban upon us which means universal ruin, destitution, riot and bloodshed.

"Is J. Pierpont Morgan greater than the people? Is he mightier than the government? Will he be permitted to retain this menacing power?"

Appeal From the King. "It is time the people should speak. It is time that their voices should be heard.

"Representing the interests and sentiment of nine-tenths of our people, we appeal to you to use your influence to stay the juggernaut which crushes us. Encouraged by your recent utterances, relying upon your judgment and patriotism, confident of your great moral courage, we appeal from the king of the trusts to the president of the people.

"THE PUBLIC ALLIANCE. "T. F. Hart, Chairman."

No Settlement. There was a rumor that J. Pierpont Morgan had settled the strike, but President Mitchell said of it:

"There is no truth in it. Before the strike is settled the operators or Mr. Morgan will have to confer with me, and they have not done so."

BARELY MISSES BEING HANGED

Sentence is Commuted After Death Warrant is Read.

Michigan City, Ind., dispatch: Warden Real received a message from the governor commuting the sentence of Lewis Russell, a murderer, who was about to be hanged. All arrangements had been perfected for the hanging and the death warrant had been read to the prisoner. When the warden informed Russell of the communication from the governor the prisoner stared blankly. Presently his face brightened and he said quietly: "I thought I was gone sure."

WIT GOT HIM A MEAL.

Brooklyn Hobo Was Renowned for His Display of Native Humor.

The genius tramp is not always the sodden-minded wretch he is frequently depicted. Some are bright in wit and quick at repartee. A prominent citizen of Brooklyn, who, though charitably inclined has ideas that charity should not be thoughtlessly dispensed, was walking the other day in a street where repairs to the asphalt pavement were going forward on a rather large scale. He was accosted by a burly specimen of the "ould durt," who said: "Boss, can't you give me the price of a meal?"

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the citizen. "Work, is it?" exclaimed the burly specimen, casting a swift glance at the street, on which not a blade of green grass was to be seen. Then, with a twinkle in his bright eyes, he asked: "Do you want your asphalt mowed?" The citizen's sense of humor was stronger than his theories of charity. He pulled a quarter from his pocket, left it in the palm of the "burly" and went his way chuckling.

A Faithful Friend.

Lenox, Mo., Sept. 1st.—Mr. W. H. Brown of this place has reason to be thankful that he has at least one friend by whose good advice he has been spared much pain and trouble. He says:

"I have had backache for over twelve months. Sometimes I could hardly get up when I was down the pain in my back was so great. "I tried many things but could not get anything to help me or give me relief till a good friend of mine advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. "After I had used two boxes the pain in my back had all left me and I was as well as ever I was. "I am very thankful to Dodd's Kidney Pills for what they have done for me and I will never forget my friend for having suggested this remedy."

Headed the Wrong Way.

The fresh-air children have many novel experiences in the country. Here is one: The wife of a prominent citizen of Lacon, Ill., entertained a boy at her home for two weeks recently and one Sunday she dressed him in his best and took him to church. He behaved nicely during a part of the service, but finally got uneasy and set up a howl that proved that he was from Chicago. The lady tried to find out what was the matter but failed and was compelled to take him home. When she got him there she was taken back to find that in dressing him she had put his trousers on hindside before and he was crying because he couldn't get his hands in his pockets.

Was Sick Eight Years with Female Trouble and Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never in my life given a testimonial before, but you have done so much for me that I feel called upon to give you this unsolicited acknowledgement of MRS. JENNIE E. O'DONNELL, President of Oakland Woman's Riding Club, the wonderful curative value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For eight years I had female trouble, falling of the womb and other complications. During that time I was more or less of an invalid and not much good for anything, until one day I found a book in my hall telling of the cures you could perform. I became interested; I bought a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was helped; I continued its use and in seven months was cured, and since that time I have had perfect health. Thanks, dear Mrs. Pinkham again, for the health I now enjoy."

Tissot's Religious Bend.

It is a remarkable fact that before he began to paint religious pictures M. Tissot was chiefly known for portraits of pretty women and drawing-room subjects. One day, so the story goes, he was in a London church, when he felt an irresistible desire to depict religious subjects, and the pleasure which he derived from his first work of this character inspired him with the idea of producing his famous series of paintings. Tissot's water colors illustrating the life of Christ were exhibited in this city, and were ultimately sold to the Brooklyn Institute for $60,000, the money being raised largely by popular subscription. A French firm had previously paid a very large sum for the right of reproducing the pictures.—New York Times.

BARRINGTON LOCALS.

"My boy," said Uncle Hiram, once, while giving out advice, "The saw that doesn't wobble is the one that cuts the ice." When half-way through, temptation may beset it, like as not, To leave the place that seemeth hard and seek a thinner spot; But shifting saws will learn, at length when failure they invite; There's many a way o' doin' things, but only one way's right!

The Review office was the only institution in Barrington to observe Labor Day.

Keep in mind the Court of Honor picnic at Comstock's grove, Friday, September 12.

This, the Wisconsin division of the C. & N. W., is at present doing an enormous freight traffic.

The Festival of the Churches held here Sunday by the Lutheran Evangelical societies of Palatine, Cary, Lake Zurich, Plum Grove and Long Grove was largely attended and proved of great interest.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. R. Wellington, residing in the Zimmerman house on Franklin street, died of an attack of croup Monday. The remains were taken to Crystal Lake, Tuesday, for burial.

One hundred and thirty-three visitors to the resorts hereabout over Sunday, boarded the 6:05 p.m. train here Monday. It was a laughable sight to witness the scramble for seats. Every woman had a bundle, basket or a brace of kids and the crush was great.

The Court of Honor are perfecting arrangements for the grand picnic to be given next Friday. H. B. Stevenson of Capron will be the orator of the day. There will be a long list of amusements and general good time. Parade will form on Fountain Square at 10 o'clock and headed by the M.W.A. band proceed to Comstock's grove where the exercises will be held. See posters for particulars.

The state live stock commissioners have issued a bulletin on the subject of anthrax and blackleg, which is prevalent throughout the southern and central part of the state in many herds. Anthrax, the bulletin says, is an infectious disease and not contagious in the common acceptance of the term. Blackleg is caused by the entrance of a germ into the system of an animal through the skin, which rapidly produces fatal results. Vaccination is recommended as a preventative in both of these diseases.

That alfalfa can be grown profitably in Illinois, despite the experience of many farmers to the contrary, has been proved by the University of Illinois' agricultural experiment station after exhaustive research extending over a period of several years. The real secret has been found in the bacteria which live upon the roots of the alfalfa and draw nitrogen from the atmosphere, upon which the plant thrives. The lack of success in growing this valuable hay and pasture crop has long been a puzzle to farmers of Illinois. Other states where it was successfully raised were known to be far less fertile. However, all attempts in Illinois met with failure. The plants would start well, attain an average early growth, but after the first year would gradually sicken and die.

Barrington was largely represented at the Libertyville Fair yesterday and today.

A little son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. A. Grebe Sunday morning.

The Dorcas society give a Calendar Wheel social next Wednesday evening to which the public is invited. The Ladies' band will play.

Eman Opatrny, proprietor of Fox River Grove picnic grounds, was here on business Wednesday. Mr. Opatrny says that the present season has been a very unprofitable one at his popular resort. Although many picnics were held there the weather has been too cool for out of door amusements.

An ambitious newspaper reporter has been investigating the 400 of New York society and finds a number of receipted bills of the last century showing that a Stuyvesant sold handkerchiefs, a Depeyster beans, a Rhineland hats, a Brevoort pewter spoons a Beekman molasses and a Roosevelt lampblack. Why should their ancestors sling on so much agony?

Defective sidewalks are damage suit producers. Is the village of Barrington in a position financially to pay damages of that kind? Every foot of unsafe sidewalk and crosswalk inside the corporate limits of this village and name of property owner responsible for same, will be listed in the next issue of this paper, also a copy of the resolutions and ordinance relative to the repair of same. It will prove interesting reading.

Western Starr, democratic nominee for State senator in the Seventh Senatorial district, of which Barrington township is a part, spoke upon the political issues of the day at Stott's hall, Wednesday evening. Mr. Starr is hot on the trail of "Honest" John Humphrey of Allen law fame, who is again the republican candidate. As there is considerable opposition to Mr. Humphrey by members of his own party, and Mr. Starr is making an active campaign, the usual republican majority in that district is likely to be cut down.

Editor C. F. Hodge of the Assumption (Ill.) Independent is up against an injunction—one of the real kind. Some months ago Bro. Hodge began the publication of the Bible as a serial in his paper, producing a chapter more or less each issue. A Christian gentleman went into the federal court and swore out an injunction on the ground that portions of the Scripture was unfit for publication and under the postal laws could not be admitted for transmission through the mails. The injunction was granted and the case will be argued. It is a delicate point of law and the decision of the court will be awaited with interest. Bro. Hodge contends that if the Bible is the inspired word of God, and he has been brought up to believe it is, then not a line of it is unfit to be published in a newspaper and read in the home. He is correct in his view of the question and if deprived of the use of the mails the American Bible society, publishers, will have to suffer the same treatment.

Miss Clara Harrison returned Saturday from Canada where she enjoyed the summer vacation. Miss Harrison is one of the highly esteemed teachers in our public school and a legion of friends welcome her return.

I. B. Fox departed Tuesday for the rice fields of Louisiana, Kinder being the objective point. Mr. Fox is conducting a party of prospective land buyers who desire to view the advantages offered by the Calcasieu River Irrigation company of that state.

Mrs. Flora Lines and daughters have returned from a visit to Denver, Colo., and taken up their residence in Chicago, their future home. We regret the removal of Mrs. Lines and family from our midst and wish them happiness in their new home.

Miss Hettie Kenton of Chicago has been the guest of her friend Miss Mamie Morrison, during the past few days. Miss Hettie has won an enviable popularity as a child comedienne and singer. During the Pan-American exposition Miss Hettie was the star of the "Trip to the Moon" company. She is a bright little artist.

A Vacillatory Policy.

A subscriber asks "is there not something wrong with the members of the board of trustees of the village of Barrington? Will someone kindly explain why at each meeting trustees labor long over the passage of resolutions and ordinances which amount to nothing because they are not meant to be enforced. Why this boy's play? If they enact a law why don't they stick to it?"

The Review is not in position to answer the inquiry. Subscriber can interview the trustees and perhaps be given a satisfactory answer. Some time ago a representative of The Review approached a member of the board to learn why the policy of the board relative to certain public matters was of such a vacillatory nature, and was given to understand in language more forcible than polite, that "it was the business of the trustees and not of the people. We come pretty near knowing what we are doing."

Allow us to say that there is a vast amount of difference between "pretty near knowing" and knowing, as is illustrated by a glance at the records of the board for some years past. Perhaps it would be charitable to say that years ago the policy of passing "dummy" resolutions and ordinances was adopted and the present board followed the habit as a compliment to its predecessors.

Subscriber goes into detail and refers to the resolution passed three times, calling upon the Northwestern Railway company to erect safety gates at crossings in the village; to the iron clad ordinances for the repair and construction of sidewalks, and to the many amendments to the ordinance relating to operating dram shops. All this is "the public's business."

It may be, as an attorney says, "the ordinance relative to the repair and construction of sidewalks is no good and the trustees know it," but why not test it? Why continue sending out ten day notices and threaten? It may be true, as a member of the board says, "Why, it will cost the railroad company $1,500 to put in gates!" Has that anything to do with the resolutions repeatedly past and ordering them so to do? "Existing conditions" as is said, may require that the closing hour for dram shops be changed every 60 days, but why not, for the edification of a large number of people state what the "conditions" are?

The trustees are servants pure and simple. They are employed by the public to transact its business. There should be good, substantial reason for every resolution and ordinance passed and every such act should be enforced to the letter or at once repealed. A policy of the easy going kind should be abandoned.

It's up to the board of trustees to take the people who employ them into their confidence. Will some member of the board kindly reply to the questions asked by Subscriber.

Patronize Home Institutions.

There seems to be a tendency on the part of a number of our people to give support to institutions outside of Barrington. How they expect local industry to flourish under such treatment is a question not easily solved.

A large amount of trade which by right belongs to our local merchants goes to Chicago and Elgin, not because, taking everything into consideration, goods are of better quality and more reasonable in price, but because that class of purchasers have acquired the habit.

It is a fact that the people who make a practice of purchasing their goods of mail order houses and department stores in Chicago are the ones who depend upon the home dealer to carry them on his books. When they have well-filled pocket books they lie themselves to Chicago and deposit the contents into the coffers of those who never extended them a favor and who never will. They return home to ask favors from the local merchant.

An instance. A lady here contracted a store bill with a local dealer to the amount of $33.00. Not long ago the husband received his pay check. The wife put on her best toggery, visited the kind-hearted local merchant and asked if he could furnish her a Chicago ticket as she was "obliged" to visit the city. The kind and considerate merchant went forth, secured a 12-ride ticket and favored his customer.

The lady went to the Chicago stores, purchased groceries and dry goods until the $40 she had taken with her had vanished. Then she returned home and dispatched her little girl to the store of the kind-hearted merchant to inform him that "Mama had lost the ticket, and he should charge it to Pa's account." Another addition to the unpaid $33. That's the way to protect home trade.

Another instance. A gentleman desired a wagon for certain purposes. He visited a local wagon maker and was offered "just what he wanted" on 12 month's time. He went to Elgin, purchased what he didn't want, paid cash, and ten days following brought the wagon to the local dealer for repairs and had the same charged.

Another instance. Parties decided to purchase a gasoline engine for certain purposes. Here was a home institution endeavoring to build up a trade by placing upon the market a guaranteed engine. A 2 1/2 horse power engine was offered the parties for $10 less than they could purchase a 1 1/2 h.p. engine manufactured elsewhere. Did they favor home industry? No, the order was sent out of town.

You will never aid your town by any such course. Patronize Barrington merchants and Barrington industry.

Reunion of 52nd Illinois Infantry.

Wednesday, September 3rd, survivors of the 52nd Regt. Illinois Volunteer Infantry and a host of friends met at Dundee and held a most enjoyable reunion. They were accorded an elegant entertainment by the people of Dundee and served a banquet—one of the finest. There was speeches and music, and reminiscences of the days when war clouds hovered over the land. The occasion was one long to be remembered by all who participated.

The W. R. C. of Barrington took advantage of the date and went there to hold their annual picnic. They enjoyed the beautiful drive and the entertainment arranged by the veterans and hospitable people of Dundee.

Among those attending the reunion were the following Barringtonians: Messrs. and Mesdames Leroy Powers, C. P. Hawley, F. T. Wooding, W. M. Wilmer, Delos Church, George Jenks, E. E. Hawley, Chas. Senn, C. B. Otis, E. D. Prouty, John Schwemm, Geo. Foreman.

Mesdames Emma Wool, C. A. Hollister, E. M. Fletcher, C. J. Gray, Ida Bennett, Emily Gleason, Amelia Colby, Emma Lageschulte, H. Boehmer, F. J. Hawley, J. C. Myers. Misses Netta Lombard and Mary Albert.

Rev. W. H. Tuttle, Fred Wiseman, L. F. Elvidge, A. S. Henderson, Geo. H. Comstock, L. E. Runyan, J. W. Kingsley, H. T. Abbott.

Rev. Tuttle requested the use of the village hall for a series of entertainments to be given under the auspices of the Epworth League. Referred to the committee on grounds and buildings.

The petition of William Howarth, relative to a cross walk on Main street was referred.

Motion was made by Trustee Hatje, seconded by Trustee Peters, that the village attorney be instructed to draw an ordinance amending the Dram Shop ordinance allowing dram shops to keep open until 11 o'clock Saturday evening only.

The ayes and nays being called gave the motion unanimous support as follows: Aye—Plagge, Grunau, Donlea, Peters, Hatje. Nay—0.

As usual reference was made to the condition of the sidewalks and numerous street crossings about the village, Trustee Grunau was inclined to be a little sarcastic when the president of the board publicly expressed his private opinion by stating that the trustees didn't have nerve sufficient to enforce a single ordinance relative to sidewalk construction or repair.

Nellie Bangs Glynn.

Died, at Woodbury, New Mexico, where she had been taken by her husband in hope that her health might be restored, Mrs. Joseph Glynn, aged 46 years, 3 months and 2 days, passed to her rest on Friday morning, August 29, 1902. She was well-known to Barrington people.

Nellie Bangs Glynn was born in Wauconda May 27, 1856, and grew to womanhood there. She attended the academy and, later, became proficient in music, being a sweet vocalist as well.

At the age of 29 she was united in marriage to Joseph Glynn and a family of three girls and one boy is the result of their union. Lella, the oldest, is 15; Frank, 13; Hattie, 9, and Mildred 5 years. She was a member Royal Neighbor camp, No. 219, and the first beneficiary member to pass away.

For over a year the wife and mother battled against disease, everything being done that was thought for the good and as a last resort change of climate was tried, which for a time seemed beneficial, but a change for the worse occurred and death came to relieve the tired and weakened body. Her faithful husband, who had encouraged and comforted her during the long weeks of their stay in New Mexico was with her, as was also the eldest and youngest of the children.

The funeral was held at the Baptist church Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock, services conducted by Rev. C. D. Mayhew of Barrington, and a large gathering of sympathizing friends came to console the mourning ones and to pay the last tribute of respect to the one they loved in life, and whom they will long remember.

Besides the immediate family she leaves one sister, three brothers and her mother to lament her early departure. Her father, Andrew C. Bangs, died ten years ago. He was a prominent man in public affairs; his father, Justus Bangs, having been a pioneer, founding Wauconda and, we learn, that from him Bangs lake took its name. Mr. Glynn and the bereaved family have sympathy of all our people.

Mr. Glynn speaks in highest terms of the people who assisted him in Woodbury, where his wife died, and their kindness was the one ray of light mid the darkness of his sorrow.

NO MISTAKES AND NO FAILURES.

Your Symptoms told without asking questions—Your pains located—Diseases named by merely looking at you.

IF YOUR CASE IS INCURABLE

This is your opportunity to be told the Truth—Our Motto: Truth lasts longer and pays better than falsehood.

More of less enmity is generally engendered by the visits of the traveling physicians and many are ready to "quack" etc. But those who have been benefited by the doctor's treatment say he is a stern reality in the medical world. To those who have not tried his skill he says: "Try me and I'll prove I am what I say I am."

The doctor never published patients testimonials except by their special requests, as he holds his consultations and examinations as a strictly private matter. Below are published the names of a number of prominent people who have been cured by him, and who voluntarily gave testimony of his ability to relieve where others have failed, that those who have like afflictions may all know where to seek relief.

We publish the testimony of two most wonderful cures by Dr. Hopkins of residents of Kane county, Peter Hansen, drayman, and J. C. Wagner, boot and shoe dealer, of the town of Elburn. These gentlemen have suffered from chronic disease and found no relief until taking the Doctor's treatment, one being cured of rheumatism, the other of catarrh.
