

EIGHTEEN YEAR DEATH IN CAVE

Guide's Coolness Saves Lives of Party of Commission Merchants.

HAVE HAIR-BREADTH ESCAPE

Given a Bath in Eight Feet of Ice-Cold Water as Victims Menace to Reach Ship's Deck of Echo River.

Louisville, Ky., special: Eighteen delegates to the convention of the National Association of Commission Merchants, including seven from Chicago, barely escaped drowning by the sinking of their boat in the treacherous Echo River in Mammoth cave.

They were saved by the coolness of their guide, John Nelson, and the heroic work of Charles A. Minton, barber of Pittsburg, Pa., and Frank E. Wagner, J. L. Owens, and A. W. Smith of Chicago, all members of the party.

The water flows into Boat. The roof of the cave over Echo river is arched, and the space in the center, owing to an unaccountable rise in the river, was only two and a half feet deep. The boat, in which were the men and women in the boat were close to the roof.

On one place the boat swayed to one side, raising the heads of the party in the boat next to the bank. Those leaning forward by the sinking of their boat, to this low edge, were one end of the boat, and the water began to flow in rapidly.

Guides save. The guides saw the danger and called Mr. Minton to jump into the water. This he did, and caught on a snag bank, which offered him a foothold. This he did, and his face, he held to the chain and pulled the boat up. The water was only eight feet deep. The boat, however, there was no one else in the boat but the guides.

The lanterns except one had no fuel. Those nearest the landing started to carry a foothold in the slippery cave. The boat, however, there was no one else in the boat but the guides.

When the last of the party had passed the narrow place, the boat started to sink. The boat started to sink. The boat started to sink.
