

WASHINGTON LETTER

Believed First President Found a Librarian.

WAS OPPOSED TO BRIMMING.

Manuscript Written in 1786 Telling How He Desired to Live in a Cottage on the Tiber.

Dr. James H. Canfield, librarian of Columbia university, who examined some manuscripts recently, discovering one of great interest and value, has published the text of a libretto letter to George Washington.

Washington's characteristic bias, the manuscript is in a remarkably good state of preservation, there being few instances of neglect or discoloration. After examining upon the use of a compass by a British officer, Washington complies Hamilton upon his political papers which had appeared over the signature of Putnam, and in response to an inquiry of Hamilton, probably in regard to the acceptance of a re-nomination for the presidency.

He expressed his desire to give the post of his life in retirement. The letter follows:

Mont Vernon, Aug. 28, 1786. Dear Sir: I have had the pleasure to receive your letter directed to me by one addressed to General Mifflin, and I am glad to hear that you are so much interested in the private life of the first American president, and that you are so anxious to know the truth concerning it.

I thought I could scarcely imagine how the public mind would be gratified by the disclosure of the private life of the first American president, and that you are so anxious to know the truth concerning it.

I have had the pleasure to receive your letter directed to me by one addressed to General Mifflin, and I am glad to hear that you are so much interested in the private life of the first American president, and that you are so anxious to know the truth concerning it.
