Letter From Louis J. Pierson.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Springfield, February 3, 1905.

This has been a busy week. The committee on elections has been the storm center of the legislature, and its sessions have drawn crowds. The four contestants have developed fighting qualities all along the line. We have had many afternoons and one night till nearly midnight. I have been learning to keep still and wait 'till I learn the ropes, but when it developed that the minority party was pulling every string to get the advantage and keep out and throw out the prohibitionists in the interests of the saloons, I felt it was a fair hearing on the merits, I found myself in the thickest of the fight. I knew the contestants were just as many fights and that they are just as sacred as any other man.

We fought it out on the floor and the contesting prohibitionist, Mr. Wilson, and the sitting prohibitionist, Mr. Gaumer, will have to fight out a partial hearing on the merits, and if elected will go to the floor on their respective seats. For this they can thank the republicans. Mr. Greiss, democrat, is elected and capable gentleman man, from the Oak Park district, voted with the republicans for recount of the ballots.

In addition to the election contests we have had the Comerford incident. It is no secret of the capitol that the democratic minority, and that is about all there is to it.

Mr. Comerford, a spectacular young man, who will probably know more when he gets through this experience than he ever did before. This General Assembly is not an "auction house for the benefit and use of special privileges, nor is it a "clearing house" for "graft". So far the only questions at issue have been sought to influence my vote have been, woman's suffrage, temperance legislation, and the protection of children and girls under eighteen years of age.

It is needless to say that there is no "graft" in these questions. I came here expecting to find a body composed in large part of men of questionable character, but I find I am disposed to be, composed of men of character, ability, and integrity. I have no hesitation in saying this, and do so without fear of contradiction.

Commissioner VanSteenberg, Mr. Beer of Rose Island, and Mr. Schimmer, McKlddowey of Chicago Heights, have visited the House this week.

Next week we shall be counting ballots in the election contests, and contrary to the usual custom of legislative bodies, the parties in the contest are sure of that speedy hearing which the constitution guarantees all persons, but which few get in this age of rapid transit.

If any of my friends will tell me how I can answer so many letters without the help of a stenographer and keep up with the duties in the House and on committees, I will be thankful. LOUIS J. PIERSON.

May Build Electric Railway

The promoters of the Illinois & Wisconsin Railway company did not put in an appearance at the meeting of the village board Monday evening as was expected.

Property owners along the proposed route through this village on Railroad and Williams streets are said to be ready to give their consent to the building of the road on those streets and as soon as the law has been passed by two of those owning a majority of the property it is said the matter will be presented to the village board asking that they be granted a franchise to build on those streets. Through this village on the streets mentioned the objective point being Lake Zurich.

HENRY W. BLODGETT DEAD

Former United States Judge Succumbs to Old Age at Waukegan.

Henry Williams Blodgett, former judge of the United States District court in Chicago, and for years a prominent resident of Waukegan, died at his home in Waukegan and at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He was 84 years old. Death was due to general debility consequent upon advanced age. The two daughters of the judge, Mrs. Irving Warren and Miss Carrie Blodgett, were at the bedside of the patient when he passed away. The former judge seemed to possess a remarkable constitution. For months during the last few years he declined to the point where death was looked for, yet he would reach out for life. At one time during his irrational spells and in very severe weather the judge wandered away from his home with no overcoat on, caught his death of cold and suffered a setback through exposure.

The decedent was born in Amherst, Mass., coming to Illinois with his parents when 9 years old. He worked on a farm near Chicago. In 1842 he began the study of law in Chicago, being admitted to the bar four years later and opening an office in Waukegan. In 1850 he married Miss Alathea Crocker. Following four years in the Illinois house of representatives Mr. Blodgett served four years as a state senator. During his long public service in Illinois giving married women control of their separate estates. From 1853 to 1869 he was master for the Chicago & North western railroad. In 1869 Mr. Blodgett was appointed to the bench of the United States court in the northern district of Illinois by President Grant, assuming the office in January, 1870. It is remarkable that position until 1902, when he resigned, being succeeded by appointment by President Harrison as noted in the court set for the United States in the Spring sess arbitration matter.

Falls To Take Good

Representative Frederick D. Comerford from the second senatorial district, Chicago, was expelled by the lower house of the Illinois general assembly as a member of that body, Wednesday, by a vote of 121 to 13. This is the first instance in the history of the history of the Illinois general assembly. Mr. Comerford made the charge that the legislature was an "auction block where special privileges are sold to the highest corporation bidder."

A committee of five members was appointed to investigate the charge and Mr. Comerford failed to make good.

Carrie A. Nation edited the Shawnee, Oklahoma, News Tuesday of this week. 50,000 copies were published in anticipation of a large demand throughout the country.

Poisons in Food.

$13,000 Paid for Milk.

Yesterday was pay day at the bottling plant of the Bowman Dairy company. The farmers were well pleased with the size of their checks for January milk.

The rate paid by the company is 4c. per 100 pounds for an average test of 3.25. If one milk produced makes a better test the patron receives one cent on each 100 pounds for every five points. In case the milk does not come up to the test the price paid is figured on the same basis, one cent less for every five points below the standard.

The total amount distributed among the farmers of this community was approximately $12,000, which means that about 828,586 pounds of milk, or an average of 26,700 pounds daily, were handled.
