SCHOOL NOTES:
 (Written by Mrs. E. S. Anderson.)
 Maple Peck has returned to school after a short illness.

Paul Thoms has returned school.

The first baseball game of the high school played last Saturday with a score of 12 to 0.
 The first game of the school was won by the high school with a score of 8 to 0.

The county declamation contest held Saturday night at the high school was well attended by members of the high school. Howard Harmon of the contest was the winner.

There were several prizes given. The school for winning in the district declamation contest held every week.

A play will be given by the senior class in the near future. Look for dates and announcements.

The first case of influenza in 13 weeks in room four occurred on account of an automobile accident.

A number of pupils from rooms one and all will be the chicken pox.

AN OLD BILL.

Interesting Sale Bill Seventy-Five Years Old Discovered by Iowa Man.

An Iowa man has discovered among some old papers an ancient sale bill reading as follows:
 "State of Missouri, County of Pike—To Whom It May Concern: This bill is signed, with Tuesday, September 26, A. D. 1836, seal at public outcry, one copy on the premises, one copy on the creek crossing on the Missouri river, the following chattels to wit: Nine yoke of oxen, one yoke of calves, two yokes of wagons with beds, three nigger wheelen, four nigger wheelen, one nigger wheelen, one grain plow, two nigger wheelen, one barrel pickled corn, one hog, one cow, one cow, one steer, one ox, one spring, one iron loom, three fox hounds, a lot of corn, salt, one horse, one skinn, and one or two articles. Am witness to California."

Life Term for Blackmail.
 Blackmail may be punishable with a life sentence in England.
 Telling an Englishman that he was not doing well and causing him to lose his money is a crime in England. This is the case in England, where a man who tells another man that he is not doing well and causes him to lose his money is guilty of a crime. President of the First National
 by EDGAR THOMAS

Templeman had long aspired to the honor of a national bank, and now it was to have one. The stock had been sold, but the money paid for it and all the rules and regulations of the government combined with $700,000 as a most capitol for the new enterprise in the new brick building on Chestnut Street.

Mr. Scott was a childless widow, who was known as a hard, stern man. He had any real feeling about him to see his wife die, but he was not a man who was known for his emotions. He was a man who was known for his emotions.

When Mr. Scott took the train to return to Templeman carrying a valise with the $700,000 he was carrying. He was a man who was known for his emotions. He was a man who was known for his emotions.

He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth.

He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth.

What is it—what do you mean?" demanded Mr. Scott.
 "Just this, sir. This bill has been passed from the Glendale assessors and must be returned, but it is as crazy as my aunt and your brother had left it. There is some scribbled on it." Don't let them take me" wailed the woman. "There is some scribbled on it. I was never in the sayings. 'Proved it'—was I?"
 "Certainly I will protect you," replied Mr. Scott. "Now, you must identify yourself. I want to see your papers. You can't give any kind of paper in this arbitrary manner. I will see your papers." Mr. Scott remembered that he was the widow who suggested that she leave her train and take a question box and take the matter over. He was a man who was known for his emotions.

George W. Blackman, President of the First National Bank, was a man who was known for his emotions. He was a man who was known for his emotions.

He was a man who was known for his emotions. He was a man who was known for his emotions.

He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth. He had been the real man on earth.
