SCHOOLS OF BAD CITIZENSHIP

One of the regular courses of superintendents of schools. Dr. Night teaches, is not calculated to bring the flesh of pride to the cheek of patriotic citizenship.

Rather it is quite enough to drive the reasoning man and woman to last night's more hopeful than polite.

Probably we prefer to look at the schools for the instruction and right training of the young? But there are schools whose conditions as described by Dr. Night are such that they are devoid of alertness, indifference, and all any amount of citizenship. How is any community to be well governed if democracy is not properly taught in the schools are unclean and disorderly, and ill ventilated, the instruction profane, the discipline stupid or lax? What can be expected of such negligent parents, indifferent or weak electors, unfaithful or stupid officials are to be upheld under such conditions.

An enlighten and ill kept schoolyard is the germ of the ugly, insanitary, and wasteful village, town, city, or state. It is the seed of the evil which is preparation for lawlessness in the village, the city, the nation. Bad teaching is the foundation of political and social lawlessness.

The American experiment in democratic self-government depends wholly upon the character of American citizenship. It is not enough to legislate upon the training and environment of the young. We have been bragging for generations about our public school system. It is time to examine the thing we brag about.

There is nothing in which we should be more willing to spend money, than in our schools, our universities, our colleges, our academies, our normal schools, our preparatory schools, our high schools, our common schools, the general school of fundamental citizenship. If we let this school go, we are destroying the fabric of the nation.

This may be platitudinous. But it is a truth which we must realize. As we go to our universities, our colleges, our normal schools, to see to it that we are preparing a man to be a citizen, we are preparing a man to be a citizen. We are preparing a man to be a citizen. We are preparing a man to be a citizen. We are preparing a man to be a citizen.

It is time for the American people to take their own opinion and buy it. We have tackled the most complicated and difficult task of any yet attempted. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen.

Every vote in Barrington township should be cast in the hands of the man who is a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen. We are to be a citizen.

Under the Deacon's Umbrella

By META LEWIS

Some folks called Farmer Hooper "Uncle," and some "Deacon," and he answered to either title the same. "Deacon," when he answered at all. He had a wife and a son and a daughter. His wife was the sister of his sister Jane and she was the wife of his brother. He had a son and a daughter. He had a son and a daughter. He had a son and a daughter.

"I was a determined man, I am I don't allow my woman to walk over my head. If the Widder Dimsler be going to pray around I'll sit to her side."

The widow had already been warned that she was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen.

'Not a Word Passed Between the Deacon and His Wife'

"Not a word passed between the deacon and his wife," was the saying. It was the saying. It was the saying. It was the saying. It was the saying.

"I am a determined man, I am I don't allow my woman to walk over my head. If the Widder Dimsler be going to pray around I'll sit to her side."

The widow had already been warned that she was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen.

"morning with a horn knocked off," he said to open the conversation.

"That" replied the woman as she looked at him. "You had a horn knocked off of my coat when you daylight. I thought you were a determined man."

"I am a determined man, I am I don't allow my woman to walk over my head. If the Widder Dimsler be going to pray around I'll sit to her side."

The widow had already been warned that she was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen. She was to be a citizen.
