BREEDING CRATE FOR SWINE

Excellent for Use Where It Is Desired To Mate Animals of Different Sexes.

In response to a query for information regarding a breeding crate for hogs the Walker Farmer makes the following reply:

The accompanying cut gives a general idea of the construction of a breeding crate. It is simply a crate, roughly but lightly made of two-by-fours or one-by-fours, about six feet in length, two feet four inches wide and three feet high. The crate should be closed in front but open behind. A bar may be pushed through the holes behind and adjusted according to the size of the sows. The object of a breeding crate is to mate animals of different size. For small, short-legged hogs it is best to arrange a platform in the front.

The time to begin breeding for spring pigs varies according to the climate, the weather, facilities, the time at which the pigs are generally marketed, and the number of litters which it desired to raise a year. Unless the farmer can furnish good sows for his farrowing sow, and is prepared to give the young pigs careful attention, he had best not breed for the pigs to come earlier than the first of April. South of the latitude of southern Kansas, of course, pigs might come with perfect safety a week or so earlier than this. A May, however, or it is in the business to make a success of it and is willing to give his pigs careful attention during the first 120 weeks of their lives, will generally find a most satisfactory average in the northern states, to breed early in March. Early March pigs, if they are given good pasture and pushed right along, will be ready for market by early winter, and the price is generally good. If it is now to produce two litters a year the first litter must necessarily come early in order to give the new time to feed up previous to producing her second litter in the fall. All pigs should come as early in the season as possible to give them a chance to make a good growth before winter set in.

CUT-OUT FOR STOCK USEFUL

Bunch of Animals May Be Sorted into Different Lots Without Worries.

Every farm yard or hog lot should have a short lane equipped with a cut-out as shown in the illustration.

the Homestead. A bunch of animals may be driven through the alley A and easily sorted into two different lots by releasing the gate B between the points C and D without any worrying or frightening them.

Why Sell Them?

A good many sheep and lambs are coming to market which are not fed and have to go at low prices. It looks like good business to hold these until in better shape whenever possible to do so. At the price these sheep and lambs fetch now they look like a good thing to buy or to keep and feed up for market. The average stock is selling quite low, because feeders are not making much out of market to finish as they do Western stock. If farmers will either keep it or fatten a market for it the country, it will make money for someone.

Sheep for Mutton.

Mutton sheep should never be of mixed breeds on one farm. Get one good position breed, stick to it and develop it to the highest price possible. A lot of mutton lambs never reach the highest price on the market, it is those of one breed, uniform in size, shape and condition that are the big money.

Blaze Not Good for Hogs.

Blazes is not a feed that can be recommended for hogs, although a little of it may be fed to them.

Shepher for Cattle.

Cattle require more warmth or shelter than work horses or brood sows.

AT THE CHICAGO THEATRES

MAJESTIC.

Three acts of sensational interest will be presented at the Majestic theatre, Chicago for the week of January 27, but that this is the most important program each week is one of attraction proportionate. The first of the leading artists will be Maxine Bernick, the famous comedienne, who will appear for the first time in Chicago at the Majestic. She is an intense and absorbing play performer, and this concern by Mrs. Pike.

In collaboration with the distinguished sensationalist, will be the performance of Olive Thorne Miller, whose stage exhibitions are absolutely first class. However, it is in a massive task with a great, wonderful aquatic act from water, that will present the most sensational feature. Among the notable acts of the week are the performance of Sam Mann and the play, in a sketch called "The New Leader," in which Mrs. Pike's character of a Greatly musician which has been favorably commented, with that of David Harland in "The Music Master." Among the other acts on this remarkable program will be Merrill & Otto in their dainty singing and dancing sketch called "After the Showers," School of Diction, appear in one of those piano and singing acts which seem to be all right now, and the Princess Four, the best of the singing quartets, in the program. Life in the Theatre, the most sensational impersonator of high ability, and G. G. DeLia, the most sensational impersonator of low ability, are also featured. The program is so well planned that it is really very entertaining but highly artistic, well conceived and well executed, which is always good for ten minutes of life.

CORT THEATRE.

The biggest success of the season is "Shirley McBain" by the Cort Theatre. The program of the intangible comedienne are packing the house. "William Winter" once referred to "Shirley McBain" as the "most sensational" of the season. It is a play of high news to hear, but a role superbly impersonated. "Shirley" is a singer, who in every way is doing it. She has been cracking young folks who has been population to train rich men into socialists and health. It is a play of modern ideas and modern impersonations all combined in collisions which Moore users with that success, they draw that open heart is never forgotten. Owen Davis has made the play one of a long series of stories by Sewall Ford. The prices had been raised by a long series of stories by Sewall Ford. CHESHAM HUNT IN INDIA

Sport Was One Very Popular With English Residents—Not British.

The chesham hunt which the Veterinary witnessed recently at Hyderabad, reminds one that sports are not so common as they were in England with an extremely popular sport, although the initiation of European sports in India had done much in those times to the benefit of the country.

It was practiced both by Hindus and Mohammedans, but owing to the greater part of India, for the chesham hunt was not a new sport, and a century or so ago must continue, although.

It was not only in India that it was enjoyed and practiced by Europeans as well in the days when they were content to abide in India for three years at a stretch and then return to their native land. It is now to modern times. More than one of the Company's nabobs kept up their own chesham, which were the readily procurable from friendly countries. It may really be imagined that the chesham hunting was very good sport and a game which was highly appreciated by them in England and which, in the chesham hunt, was maintained for the amusement of the British.

Better Than All Others

U-S COMBINATION PHONOGRAPHER

The automatic change reproducer carriage permits the enjoyment of two-minute and four-minute records by the simple turn of a shifter key to the right or left.

The Mandrel pulley balance wheel insures correct musical pitch by evenly maintaining the speed of the mandrel.

The flexible tone arm amplifies the sound waves to correct musical tones.

The sapphire reproducing points are microscopically-ground jewels which never replating and last forever, and obviating the changing of needles at every production.

The motor—a new type of unusual form—is positively adapted for the purpose; gives evenly balanced revolutions to mandrel; and may be wound while playing without interference.

Result—All of the music without mechanical wearing and grating.
