Find Chicken With Two Normal Hearts

Nature is gradually adapting itself to the demands of human endeavor according to the discovery made by Joseph Drury, proprietor of a Waukegan meat market, while dressing a chicken sold to a customer last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Seymour of Waukegan had purchased a chicken for their Sunday dinner and it was being dressed when it was found that the bird had two hearts. Both organs were aids by side and connected to the rest of the anatomy in a proper manner.

Mr. Drury now has an extended list of names furnished by prominent Waukeganites who have requested to be notified when chickens with additional drumsticks and no necks are found.
