Bronchos Defeat Warren; Benton by Ela Quintets

Bronchos and Ponies Take Warren in Last Half of Games

Both BHS cage teams were the victims of the fast Ela quintets in the last conference games of the season Friday evening on the local court. The Bronchos fell to a score of 21 to 27. The Ponies were defeated 23 to 17.

The bucket seemed to be tilted in favor of the local teams Tuesday evening when they took both games of a twin bill from Warren at Gurnee. The Bronchos won by a 30 to 13 score. The Ponies dumped their opponents 25 to 14.

Ela Behind at Half

The Bronchos-Ela tilt ran fairly even for the first half bringing up a score of 11 to 9 in favor of the Bronks. Ela played the last period fast, scoring heavily. The lead gained in the last period was largely due to the contributions of Leutheser. Grabenkort was high scorer for the Bronchos.

H. Gleason, one of Ela's regular guards, was taken out of the game in the last quarter because of an injured nose. Barrington and Ela each had a man fouled out of the game. They were Ed Gaare and Schroeder.

Pony's Game

The Ponies also maintained a narrow lead over their opponents during the first half of the tilt, leading at the end of the second quarter 12 to 11. Ela rallied in the next two periods to gain a lead by a wide margin. The Ponies scored only five points in the last half. Collins lead the scoring for the Ponies chalking up six points. Knigge led Ela with five field goals.

Warren Games

Both teams seemed to be clicking much better when they met the Warren cage teams on the Gurnee court Tuesday night.

Last Conference Games

These games were the last on the conference slate this season. The next competition will be the regional tournament at Crystal Lake where the locals will meet Dundee March 4. The Bronchos have come through the season in the conference with seven victories and four defeats. The Ponies won six and lost five.

St. Paul Defeats St. Anne; Salem Defeats Methodist

Methodist Trail for Three Periods; Near Victory in Last Quarter

St. Paul emerged champions of the church league, losing one game during the entire season, with the finals played Monday night. Salem was the team that handed them this loss winning by a 22 to 11 score. The Methodist and Salem quints were tied for second place losing three games each.

St. Paul won its last game defeating St. Anne 23 to 17 Monday night. Salem handed the Methodist another defeat winning by a close 23 to 22 score in the second game Monday night.

St. Paul had little trouble in defeating the game one team leading by a safe margin the entire game. Mollenkamp lead the scoring for the St. Paul five. Dave Capulli, Harold Roth, and LaPointe tied for the scoring honors on the St. Anne team.

Salem also kept a safe lead on the Methodists for the first three quarters of their tilt, but as the time grew short the Methodists threatened the opponents who had an early 11 point lead, and were within two points of winning the game at the final gun.

Most Unlawful Pardon

One of the most unlawful pardons in Brittany, France, is that of St. Anne, mother of the Virgin Mary, which is celebrated every summer at Auray. According to an old belief of the Bretons, St. Anne, a native of their country, fled to the Holy Land because her husband was cruel to her. After his death she returned to Brittany, and Jesus, the legend says, sometimes came to visit her.

Lake Forest Takes Conference Title; Defeats Wauconda

Johnny Hopkins Sets New League Record Scoring 131 Points

The windup of its second year in the Northwest conference put the Lake Forest high school cage team in the top position to take the conference honors. Lake Forest went through the entire season losing only one game. Leyden was the one team that topped the Gold Coasters.

Lake Forest's victories, three of which saw them chalk up a score of 35 points or better, were over Barrington, Palatine, Ela, Bensenville, Arlington, Antioch, Libertyville, Warren, Grant and Wauconda.

Sets New Record

Johnny Hopkins, one of Lake Forest's forwards, set a new individual league record in scoring, tallying 131 points for the season.

White West Highland Is Affinity of Cairn Breed

The White West Highland is a close relative of the Cairn terrier and is not a White Scottish terrier as they are often miscalled, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

Used to hunt vermin in the same fashion as other terrier breeds, they were raised in Scotland for generations but never attracted much attention until this century. When first exhibited in Edinburgh, Scotland, they were called Poltalloch terriers in honor of the estate from which they came. Col. R. D. Malcom of Poltalloch is the first known breeder on record and it is thought that he perfected the breed from severa' strains of the Scottish terrier breeds or impure specimen.

Gradually they have spread and their popularity increased. The original name was rather limited and so the name of White Scottish terrier was adopted. This brought the ire of the Scottish terrier breeders until finally the name of the White West Highland was agreed upon and allowed as the official breed name. Much too long for everyday use the nickname of "Westie" is the pet term of those who love and raise them.

Merry and gay in disposition, these sturdy terriers differ greatly from their cousin, the Cairn, in color and size. The Cairn should never be lighter than a cream, and your Westie should be nearly but a pure white. In size they run from two to four pounds heavier, the weight standard being from 15 to 20 pounds. Dogs will tip the scales from fifteen to nineteen pounds; females from thirteen to seventeen.

Screw Propellers Rated Impossible Century Ago

The screw propeller, almost universally used for the propulsion of ships, was invented a century ago, John Ericsson, the Swedish engineer, took out a patent in England on a screw propeller on July 13, 1836. Six weeks before an Englishman, F. P. Smith, had obtained a patent on a propeller of an entirely different design. Ericsson thought it would be necessary to use the propeller in double form, using two drums, each with the blades pitched in opposite directions, the drums to be rotated in tandem in opposite directions in order to overcome the rotary effects which the operation of one propeller would give to the water.

In the following year Ericsson demonstrated his propeller, which was installed on a ship and used on the River Thames. He towed a navy barge on the river, behind his screw propeller ship, but the Admiralty showed little interest in his successful demonstration, according to Nature in its "Science News a Century Ago." He afterward learned that Sir William Symonds, surveyor of the navy, reported that "even if the propeller had the power of propelling a vessel it would be found altogether useless in practice because the power being applied to the stern, it would be impossible to make the vessel steer."

Heidelberg

Heidelberg, the university town of Baden in southwestern Germany, is the seat of the University which was founded in 1385. The town has an ancient castle which contains in its cellar a cask with a capacity of 46,722 gallons. Near Heidelberg, in 1907, the lower jawbone of a prehistoric man was found, and this city has given the name to a fossil type which is believed to have existed many hundreds of thousands of years ago.

Used Postal Money for Gifts to King's Friends

Thomas Witherings, "postmaster of England and foreign parts," received his appointment from King Charles I, and in the two years, 1635-37, carried out such sweeping innovations that he left a postal system that was extremely profitable, because of its speed and low cost of communication. The handling of mail was a source of revenue to the crown. The receipts of the postal system provided a great sum of money from which the king could reward his friends. From 1653 to 1707, the inland posts of the country were auctioned off to the highest bidder and the winner ran the post office as a private and commercial enterprise.

In 1660 the king granted large annuities to his favorites. Every year following saw more names on the royal pension list, until the moneys diverted for patronage amounted to one-third of the total receipts of the postoffice.

The Bodleian library for a century and a half, according to a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer, and it was not until 1756 that the last pensioner was bought off. At that time the Duke of Grafton gave a quit-claim to his grant forever for the last sum of $1,000 pounds sterling ($455,000).
