Gain in Revenue of Cook County Taxes Seen by Assessor

Assessor John S. Clark Tuesday saw the fruits of victory in his two year fight for access to federal income tax returns of Cook county.

Millions of dollars invested in stocks, bonds, mortgage, and other intangible securities were today opened for inspection to the assessor through the Illinois State Tax commission, of which Protessor Stinson Leland is chairman, and through Carter H. Harrison, collector of internal revenue.

Assessor Clark stated, "This does not mean more taxes for the city and county to spend—it will result in lower taxes for real estate, business concerns, and manufacturing establishments who are now paying the other fellow's share, in addition to their own." "These returns" he continued, "contain the information for the first time in Cook county as to whom the other fellow is."

The assessor said there was nothing unfair about the taxation of this heretofore hidden wealth, because it has paid no local taxes whatsoever, Illinois being one of the states which have no income tax law.

He further stated that the taxes to be levied would not be too burdensome for the reason that 20 per cent of its reported value, which would result in a tax comparable to income taxes of other states.
