THE "BACK DOOR NRA"

Congress, it is understood, is about to be asked to enact a new law on and later on NRA. It should be pertinent, therefore, to take a brief glance at experience under the Walsh-Healey act, which the New York Times calls a "back door, sporadic NRA," so as to make sure that the mistakes of that act will not be repeated.

The last day of the last session of congress, the senate passed the Walsh-Healey act, without a record vote. It provided that any contractor bidding for a government contract of $10,000 or more must agree to pay prevailing wages, must employ no more than 40 hours a week without paying overtime rates, and must perform the contract without child labor and under sanitary and safe working conditions.

The sanitary and safe working conditions stipulations, and the child labor stipulation, were not difficult. But other phases did. The steel industry, for example, generally is geared to a 48-hour week. It is doing more business than it has in years. Its wage scales are the highest ever.

The steel industry is doing more business than it has in years. Its wage scales are the highest ever. It is doing more business than it has in years. Its wage scales are the highest ever.

As the New York Times pertinently remarks: "government contracts form a very small percentage of the total business done by the country. This back door, sporadic NRA cannot mean any general increase in wages or improvement in working conditions. If it raises for short periods the wages of small groups of workers here and there, it does so at a high price in delay, red tape, government control and espionage."

CRITICS

It has long been the fashion for certain writers and speakers to criticize the American people for their commercialism and desire for material things, such as automobiles. While it is true that the mere making of money is not a very high ambition, it must be remembered that it is through our genius for business that we have been able to provide the means for almost infinitesimal wealth, such as are not enjoyed by any other nation in the world.

Great sums donated to educational, religious, charitable and artistic purposes have been made possible through our business pursuits. Scientific research, the advancement of health measures, better homes and the comforts and refinements of civilization generally have been due to the efforts of our people to acquire money and to their willingness to spend it for these things.

Many of the highest critics of business obtained their education at colleges and universities endowed and made possible by business men. Business and money making are not the end of our ambition, but they are the means by which civilization may be promoted and preserved.—The Logansport (Ind.) Interstate Press.

PUBLIC MONY

"In the regulations which congress may prescribe respecting the custody of the public moneys, it is desirable that as little discretion as may be deemed consistent with their safe keeping should be given to executive agents. No one can be more deeply impressed than I am with the soundness of the restrictions which have been suggested by specific provisions, executive discretion, as far as it can be maintained with the preservation of its constitutional character. In respect to the control over the public monies this doctrine is particularly applicable."—Andrew Jackson.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON (Courtesy The United States News)

The issue of the sit-down strike is now officially before the congress of the United States, both in the house and the senate. The house will be asked this week to take up the sit-down strike in their annual session.

In the senate, the vocal question is the sit-down strike. The unexpected proposal for the sit-down strike was introduced by Senator Joseph (C-O) Coolidge. Senator Joseph (C-O) Coolidge proposed that a clause be inserted into the National Labor Relations Act so as to alter its interpretation so as to include sit-down strikes.

But Attorney General Cummings has the reversal the pressure of political power on the just side of the coin. The bill of opinion to amend the constitution.

The exercise of congressional power to amend the constitution rather than asking the people to amend the constitution was the rate that it is unconstitutional.

WASHINGTON DC JUNE 30 - JULY 9

This happy group portrayed on Norman Rockwell's painting for the "Jamboree Jamboree" department of the Church News, which was published in the issue of June 30, 1937. It is the scene of the greatest demonstration of scouting ever held in the world. The national grand officers, Albert B. Taylor of St. James' Episcopal Church, held the first meeting of the Episcopate in connection with the affiliation with other churches.

Many boys scout groups are participating in the jamboree. The jamboree is a week of fun and games for the boys of the country. The jamboree is a week of fun and games for the boys of the country.
