Believe Centralized Relief Bill Will Be Defeated This Week
Charging that the Martin-Adamski centralized relief bill would place politically professional social workers in control of relief, the legislative committee of the State Association of County Officers appeared before the legislature Wednesday. H. D. Kelsey of Barrington is the chairman of the committee.

Local Brevities
According to news reports from Springfield, the heavy opposition of the county officers may have sufficient influence to kill the bill. With dozens of major proposals, including all of the appropriations and most of the administration program, still to be acted upon, the belief grew that it would be increasingly difficult for measures such as the new relief program to be advanced.

Local officials speaking at the relief hearing included Judge William G. Knob of Naperville, H. D. Kelsey of Lake county, James R. Cannell of Rockford, William Propper of Harvey and S. Waterfall of DuPage county.

The fire was centered on the plan to have a county commission head the local welfare department, which would have relief authority over the supervisor-overseer of the poor when state or federal money is involved.
