"Horseplay" in Cab of Truck Results in Youth Cutting Veins

Indulging in "horseplay" in the cab of a picnic truck brought about severed veins and ligaments in the left arm of John Ewald, 1524 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, near Lake Zurich Sunday evening. The youth, who declined to reveal the names of his associates, told medical authorities at the Sherman hospital in Elgin the accident occurred when he and several companions were scuffling in the cab of the truck as they returned from a Sunday outing in the meads, his left arm went through a window and the wrist was cut by the glass.

REVIEWPOINTS

The Editor, The Barrington Review, Barrington, Illinois

Dear Sir: May I use your columns to express on behalf of all working for Camp Algonquin, our deep appreciation for the generous interest shown by the entire community in our recent drive. The results were more than gratifying, as the returns exceeded those of former years.

Our present balance is $782, and we expect to finish with over $800. This sum will be enormously useful in maintaining and improving the camp during the summer.

To all those who gave, and to all those who helped us in our campaign, our heartfelt thanks. Yours truly,

Margaret E. Hecht
