

"Mountain Music" Coming to Catlow Sunday, Monday

"The Prince and the Pauper"
Showing; "Kid Galahad"
Billed Wednesday

"The Prince and the Pauper," playing at the Catlow tonight, Thursday, and closing Friday, is based on Mark Twain's immortal story of the same name. The March twins, Billy and Bobby, are cast in the title roles.

Theatre goers will not only see a new Robert Montgomery in "Night Must Fall," but they will observe unique lighting technique employed to photograph the star in his villainous characterization. The picture comes to the Catlow Saturday.

Highlights and deep shadows give the picture an eerie effect. Minor key lighting has been used in many screen plays, but it is declared that no other lighting has gone to the extreme that is evident in "Night Must Fall," co-starring Montgomery and Rosalind Russell.

Just about a year ago two people were placed on the Paramount payroll for the first time. They were Bob Burns and Martha Raye.

Today, the hilarious fun-makers have reached stardom in a picture of their own. It's "Mountain Music," the hillbilly comedy which opens Sunday.

The picture itself is a satire in which mountain feuds are kidded. In the picture Bob is a girl-chap who can't resist a desire to work. His father inveigles him in to a position whereby Bob is scheduled to marry the daughter of another clan, thus settling a feud. The idea was great — but Bob leaves her standing at the figurative altar.

The brave days of old, when Uncle Sam was throwing open free homesteads lands to pioneers willing to race for them and develop them, live again in "The Cherokee Strip," starring Dick Foran, which comes to the Catlow Tuesday.

Double featured with "The Cherokee Strip," on Tuesday, is "The Great Hospital Mystery," with Jane Darwell, Sig Rumann, Sally Blane, Thomas Beck and Joan Davis.

Bette Davis was winner of the 1935 academy gold statue for the best feminine film performance of the year. Edward G. Robinson's every picture has been great since "Little Caesar," back in 1930. Humphrey Bogart was the main figure in the recent "Black Legion" thriller, and the menacing bandit in "Petrified Forest."

Each an individual star—but now all working together in "Kid Galahad," an exciting story of the prize ring and those who surround it! The picture has been booked into the Catlow theatre and is scheduled to show Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

"Kid Galahad" written by Francis Wallace, was a great literary success when it first appeared as a serial in a national weekly magazine. Then it became a best-seller as a novel.
