

Taylor and Beery in New Production at Catlow Theater

Appear With New Feminist
Star in "Stand Up and Fight" March 19-20

"Off the Record," a fast-moving, middle western story which is the most feature attraction at the Catlow Theater, is the latest production of the professional company of Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell, appearing in "Stand Up and Fight" in Barrington. The production is a re-statement of the "Stand Up and Fight" which two reporters who fall in love with the record." It is removed from the usual run of newspaper pictures because its interest is not limited to the professional plots of its central character. It has an unusual theme derived from the warmy human side of the newspaper staff and critical news items portrayed by Miss Blondell. It is a successful effort to make the "Stand Up and Fight" a "Dead End" setting. The story is told in its own words in a brand new locale in "Stand Up and Fight," with Wallace Beery and Joan Blondell. The production is the first time as protagonists of a new type of outdoor action drama which falls to set a precedent in film circles.

This season to the Catlow then on March 19 and 20 presents to Barrington viewers, Maryland in the 1840's, with the bitter struggle between the railroad and stage coach lines forming the theme of a stirring story with an authentic historical background.

A new leading role for Taylor-Florence Rice, herself a most charming and able actress to her best opportunity to date. The story of Helen Broderick and Wilkey of Charles Bickford and Martin MacLane add notable bits. With such stars as Charles Grapewin, John Qualin and Robert Taylor, the production is supported. W. S. Van Dyke's direction is insistent.
