But it is the duty, indeed, it is the obligation of the congress to act in the public interests and not to be swayed by pressure groups of either employers or employes. Unquestionably some changes are needed and he who argues that the breastic groups or tembers. On tembers.

Introductionably some changes are needed and he who argues that the law is perfect and needs no revision at all is merely piling up resentments for the day when the foos of collective bargaining will be backed up by a majority sentiment and then the whole structure of the law will be sabotaged.

It is the better part of wisdom for the friends of the

Wagner law to examine sincerely every suggestion for change and to fight vehemently any amendment which seeks to weak-en collective bargaining. The mere claim, however, that a proposed change will weaken the law is not substantial proof.
