Postmaster Requests Patrons to Discard Shabby Mail Boxes

Unsightly rural mail boxes distract from the natural scenic beauty along highways and are not a credit to the owners of attractive homes entered through the lanes, according to L. B. Paddock, local postmaster. Rural mail boxes which are not properly erected or which are in such a dilapidated condition retard the delivery of mail and expose it to damage from the elements, he says.

"It is the desire of the post office department to improve the appearance of the rural delivery service to protect the property suitable mail receptacles and to erect them in such a manner that they will be accessible to the carrier and will present a neat appearance," Mr. Paddock continued. "It is especially desirable that the boxes be maintained in such condition that they will properly protect mail placed therein. Attractive rural mail boxes may be inscribed on the sides of boxes the name of the owner as he approaches them, and that the boxes and their supports be kept painted.

"Patrons who have not been approved of top opening or other type are not encouraged to discard them, provided they have been in use for a reasonable length and are maintained in good, serviceable condition. However, any boxes which are not of approved type and are not in such condition that they will protect mail from damage by the elements should be replaced with boxes of approved type," it was pointed out.

In connection these objectives the post office department has designed the well-known Shopping Paper 16, as Rural Mail Box Week.

Horses Don't sell your old faithful horses when they will be worth more to us—we pay $10 to $50 per head, shipped and loaded. Animals picked up day or night. We pay the most because we use them and guarantee humane death.

At the conclusion of this week rural carriers are instructed to report to their postmasters the extent to which patrons endeavored to meet the wish of the department and their mail-box equipment be improved," the local postmaster concluded.

Notify S.S. Board of Name Changes, Asks Waukegan Manager

To eliminate confusion in the mail service of newly married couples regarding the necessary steps to be taken by persons who may change their names, in order to correct their old-age insurance records, Albert S. Lewis, manager of the Social Security Board's field office in Waukegan, issued the following announcement.

"There are still many who fail to remember that when an employee changes her name, it is necessary for her to give that information to the social security board so that the new name may be properly recorded with the board's operation division at Baltimore. Our office will supply persons in this area with the form upon which the change should be indicated."

"Changing one's name does not in anyway change the social security account number originally issued to the employee," Mr. Lewis said. "That number is used by the worker so long as the remains in employment covered under the Social Security act."
