Plan Fireproof Club House for Barrington Hills

Barrington Hills country club, after six months of sojourn in emergency quarters, can now look forward to having its new clubhouse before the summer is over.

Contracts have been let for a new building to replace the club house that was destroyed by fire last September, the general contract being awarded to the Edward L. Loneragan Construction Co. of Chicago. Work is to begin under the contracts as soon as weather conditions will permit.

The plans and specifications call for a club house that will be no less attractive and even more commanding than the building that was burned. In type and general design it will be much the same as the old structure, but there will be many improvements and some additions which will add materially to the convenience and enjoyment of the members and their guests.

Brick Facing White
Mindful of the loss and inconvenience occasioned by the fire last year, the committee in charge of planning and building a new club house has provided that it shall be of fire-proof construction throughout. As for the exterior, it will be a brick building, and it is hoped that the new clubhouse will be better equipped and ready for occupancy in the latter part of August, or early in September.

Meanwhile, during the spring and summer months, the club will continue to occupy its present temporary quarters in the old club house which an-

During the coming year the club will be operated under the direction of Mrs. M. C. Chambers, who was brought into the club's employ last year as stewardess.

Wilcott & Work are the architects for the new building, and direct supervision of the plans and construction of the club house has been in the hands of the building committee, consisting of Edwin A. Seipp, chairman, J. H. Carlwood, and L. G. Hall.

"Grumpy" First of Series at School

"Grumpy," a four act comedy play, was produced at the Burlington high school auditorium on Tuesday morning, the first of a series of spring entertainments, sponsored by the Interstate Bureau of Chicago. The title role in "Grumpy" was played by Bob Hanson, well known comedian whose portrayal of the famous bear highly amused the students and guests. The entertaining play was filled with mystery thrills and comedy.

There will be a program each Thursday morning until after the fourth program, April 8. All talent will be furnished by the Interstate Bureau. Descriptive leaflets which have been distributed recently at the high school reveal that the programs will be

Students are not compelled to attend the entertainments, but most of them are accepting the opportunity with a great deal of enthusiasm. The expense of obtaining the professional gymnasium course is defrayed by the nominal admission charge.

The second attraction, March 26, will be a lecture, "Strange Lands," by Fred L. Plute, undisputedly the best lecturer in the city. The third entertainment, March 27, will feature the Apollo Duo consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Art Wells, who will entertain with music, songs, and stories. Mr. and Mrs. Wells, who have been the head musicians at the famous Apollo Concert Co., are particularly noted for their clever musical sketches and their ensemble work with axophone.

The series will culminate April 3 with an hour of music by the nationally known colored vocalists, the Mason Jubilee Singers. Their songs consist of negro spirituals, plantation melodies, and many new rollicking tunes.

The programs are open to the public.

FOUND: By the Triggers —A Basement Billiard Room

When the Triggers installed gas heat, they found a lot of extra room in their basement. No coal bin any more, no ash cans—and the gas boiler modestly occupied an out-of-the-way corner. So Mr. Trigger got busy with a hammer, some wall board and paint and now they have a clubby billiard room.

It's every bit as clean as any other room in the house because there's no soot or grime from gas heat. These long winter evenings you'll find Mr. Trigger experimenting with reverse English instead of fussing with the furnace.

A thermostat upstairs operates the heating plant automatically all winter. Mrs. Trigger never has to worry about its being too hot or too cold. And Junior Trigger can play on the floor whenever he wants to.

You'll enjoy an all-play and no-work basement just as much as the Triggers. Why don't you find out how much it will cost you? Phone for one of our house-heating engineers to estimate your requirements. He'll also tell you about our special spring installation offer.

If you would like an attractive little booklet containing further adventures of the Trigger Family with gas heat, write your Public Service Store. We'll be glad to send it to you. Obligation? None at all.

Community Received Name From Barrington, Massachusetts

The town of Barrington and later the village of Barrington received its name from Great Barrington, Mass., from where many of the early Yankee settlers of this district had come. The organizing of the town of Barrington in 1850 was related in the first installment of the history of Barrington, published in The Review last week, as told by Garrett M. Landwer to his son, William M. Landwer.

A description of the organization of the town and a list of the early officers is included in the second installment which is published this week. The history of the village, organized in 1855, will follow in a later installment.

Installment II

In 1850 the town of Barrington was organized under the General law of February 12, 1849, in pursuance of a notice by the Sheriff of Cook county to the inhabitants of the town. Many of these inhabitants had come originally from Massachusetts from the vicinity and many from Great Barrington in that state, hence the selection of the name Barrington for their town.

The meeting to organize was held April 2, 1850 in the schoolhouse at the south end of Miller's Grove. On being called to order, William M. Landwer was chosen moderator and Jerome W. Kingsley clerk. Balloting proceeded and the following officers were elected: supervisor, Wm. Devol; clerk, Alvah Miller; assessor, Edward Hawley; commissioners of highways, Henry M. Campbell, C. I. Wildie and Philip N. Gould; justices of the peace, William Hitchcock and Aaron Hillings; collector, street ward and overseer of the poor, Hezekiah Kingsley. Four pounds were established, one in each quarter of the town. Rensselaer Nute was made pond master in the southeast quarter, John Giddings in the southwest quarter, A. W. Bingham in northwest quarter and Chas. Hawley in northeast quarter. At a special meeting held May 20, 1850 sixteen overseers of highways were appointed, one for each district and Shadrack Shattuck was elected assessor to fill a vacancy.

Ask Highway 59 Be Brought Here

to the south and would, to an extent, isolate the village from the new highway 59. The argument for bringing traffic through on Hough street is direct benefit to business.

"Must Work Together"

"For years we have been promised a concrete road connecting Barrington with the territory south of here," J. C. Cadwallader, president of the board, declared at the meeting. "Now that a north and south route is about to be added, we are in a position to lose it unless we get busy and exert all possible influence to have it come to Barrington."

Mr. Kelsey's counter proposal was that the routing of 59 be left as last planned, that is, three miles west of Barrington. If this is done, the Lake county supervisors will be ready to pave the extension of Hough street to the north as far as Wauconda. Mr. Kelsey's proposal also included the suggestion that the Cook county commissioners might be willing to take over as a county road the township road (Hough street extension) leading south from the village, and connect it with Higgins road.

West End Road

"If highway 59 passes north from the west border of Barrington, the board of supervisors will not see fit to pave the Hough street extension north of the village, inasmuch as that would make two parallel paved roads a half mile apart."

"Regarding the plan to bring the highway to Barrington at Hough street and then west around the village, I do not believe the highway commission will see fit to swing the route west and then east again, and will consider extending the highway through Barrington on Hough street or west of Barrington as recently proposed."

Bancroft is in Newspaper Story Picture at Catlow

"The Silent Enemy," the great drama of the Ojibway Indians in their wild native haunts in Northern Ontario, a gripping story of primitive man's battle for existence against the cruel adversity of nature, will be shown as a Boy Scout benefit picture tonight and Friday at The Catlow theatre.

The story of "The Silent Enemy" is the natural unfolding of a tribal story, told simply and replete with exciting wild animal encounters, the play of human emotions, love, jealousy, hatred and vengeance, all portrayed by a primal people, the Indians themselves.

Following the showing of "The Silent Enemy" will be screened the first chapter of "The Indians Are Coming." This is the first serial plan play ever shown by the Catlow theatre. It is a twelve episode, each of which will follow consecutively on Thursday and Friday nights during the twelve succeeding months.

Dinosaur canyon, situated in the deepest inaccessible region of the Hoag Indian reservation in Arizona and revealed for the first time to the white man in 1929, has been photographed for the background of important action scenes in "The Painted Desert" starring Bill Boyd.

"If it's news, print it, no matter whom it may hurt." That is the unethical code of George Bancroft, the ruthless, hard-fisted managing editor of the tabloid daily in "Scandal Sheet," his newest picture, which is scheduled for showing at The Catlow theatre Sunday and Monday night.

It is a story of hectic, bright-eyed lives, steeped in the rich, pulsating drama of modern life and throbbing with action.

Oliver Brooks, Regis Toomey, Lucien Littlefield and Gilbert Emery provide support for the star.

"The Great Meadow," which comes to The Catlow theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday nights, is a striking version of the much-discussed historical novel of the same title written by Elizabeth Madox Boster.

EXPECT RECOVERY OF AUTOMOBILE SALES WITH BALMY WEATHER

On March 21, the first day of spring, a fleet of Oakland "Eights" and Pontiac "Sixes" will be placed at the disposal of the local motorists, marking the commencement of a "business revival demonstration campaign" which is to continue through April 5.

The local campaign, according to A. F. Schauble of Schauble Bros. & Collins, is part of a national effort by the entire sales organization of the Oakland Motor Car company to hasten improvement in American business.

"Most authorities agree that business is on the up grade," said Mr. Schauble. "Tardy buyers are coming back into the market, probably attracted by the increased value being offered. This is especially true throughout the automobile business, toward which many people look for the leadership that will bring business in general back to normal."

"Our company and every other Oakland-Pontiac dealer will try during this business revival campaign to impress backward automobile buyers with the high values offered in the 1931 cars. The main reason why conditions are ripe for increased automobile buying is the fact that more than 2,000,000 cars on our highways have become more expensive to maintain and operate than to replace."

Good spring driving weather will make a lot of people realize that the time has come to get a new car. That is why we are conducting our business revival campaign early in the day of spring.

PROTECTING THE TAXPAYERS

The Chicago real estate board is an association of business men and institutions for the protection of business interests in the metropolis. It is non-partisan and non-sectarian. It has no purpose but the common good, and in such a capacity has served Cook county for nearly half a century. The board of directors of the Chicago real estate board has met the emergency with immediate action, originated the property owners' division, and has set forth nine great fundamental objectives for the benefit of property owners.

These objectives and outlined program of work are:

To unite the property owners to aggressively combat excessive and inequitable tax burdens on real estate, and to foster legislative measures providing relief.

To urge and support practical methods providing for the consolidation of tax-paying and tax-exempt bodies to the end that the cost of government may be reduced.

To maintain constant observation of the expenditure of public funds and to protest against their misuse or dissipation.

To study methods of levying special assessments with a view of eliminating by legislation unfair, antiquated and obsolete laws.

Through research to devise and recommend new methods of accomplishing public improvements to the end that the cost and necessity for same be analyzed and justified or means found whereby expense to real estate may be decreased.

To compile and present statistical facts and data to state, county, municipal and other representatives and officials, showing the effects of pending injurious measures and where possible, indicating more equitable methods of accomplishment.

By contact with civic and other agencies to conduct an educational program necessary to inform the public of vital facts.

To prepare and disseminate information for the press, trade journals and radio, giving taxpayers' views on all public issues affecting real estate.

To cooperate with existing community agencies and where necessary to organize community agencies for the purpose of securing support of property owners' programs for tax relief.

A PROBLEM OF THE AGES

Recently a pastor began his sermon with a statement which sounds quite familiar. He said:

"There is lawlessness everywhere. Children no longer obey their parents. It is evident that the end of things is at hand."

Then the preacher told his congregation that the words were not original with him, nor even an utterance of the present day, but that they had been translated from an inscription found among ruins in ancient Assyria, dating centuries before the time of the patriarch Abraham.

Throughout all recorded history such pessimism regarding the future of the race has been expressed from time to time. Now and then an era of comparative peace and quiet has been experienced, only to be followed by recurring outbreaks of violence and lawlessness.

While present day conditions are bad enough, it seems that on the whole they are better than those of the past. There is more thought given to the relief of suffering, to the betterment of industrial conditions, to the protection of the helpless and to other humanitarian enterprises than ever before.

Although the World War gave civilization a severe test, recovery has been rapid and the ground lost is being speedily recovered. It must be remembered that war has marked the history of every generation of mankind, and the same is true of lawlessness, oppression and every other manifestation of human imperfection.

JUSTICE HOLMES AT 90

One of the most remarkable living men is Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, 90 years old on March 8. In spite of his age, he is one of the most alert members of that tribunal, both mentally and physically, and has no thought of retiring.

Justice Holmes is the son of the late Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, famous poet and essayist, and was born in Boston. After being graduated from Harvard in 1861 he served in the 20th Massachusetts Volunteers during the Civil War, being wounded three times and rising to the rank of Lieutenant colonel.

After the war he finished his law studies and began practice in Boston. He was also instructor in constitutional law at Harvard, editor of the American Law Review, associate and chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, besides being active as lecturer and author.

He was appointed associate justice of the United States Supreme Court in 1902, since which time he has served continuously with high distinction. No other member of the court ever served so great an age, and the indications are that he has several more years of distinguished usefulness before him.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM

The financial problem now faced by the railroads of the country is becoming really serious, because of increasing competition by the automobile, the motor bus, the airplane, pipe lines and government large lines.

This is a matter which should be of concern, not only to railroad executives, but to the public as well, because anything which tends to cripple the efficiency of our present excellent railway system can not fail to adversely affect our national progress and prosperity.

In addition to being deprived of traffic so severely needed, as a result of the competition mentioned, the railroads are also handicapped by a heavy tax burden and government regulation to a degree which is often oppressive. They pay three hundred and seventy-five millions annually in taxes, yet hungry government departments and bureau clamor for more.

How long the roads can continue to operate efficiently under all these handicaps is a serious question. The prospect of a bankrupt national transportation system is not a pleasing one for either the railroad or the public. But the recent Seaboard receivership and the financial plight of several other roads indicate that such a situation is threatened if present conditions can not be relieved in some way.

THE BITTER TEA OF GENERAL YEN. This is a distinguished and fascinating novel of white people in China. It is charged with the play of personality. When General Yen finds himself the involuntary host and protector of Morgan Davis, every word has an edge. This swift glimpse of the violet clash of Orient and Occident is a novel extraordinary dramatic.

THE DARE STAR OF ITZA. This is a tale of mysterious prophecy of the glory and the destruction of Chichen, one of the lost cities of the jungle which Lindbergh helped to chart. It is also the romance of Princess Niste, daughter of the high priest and of her sacrifice as bride of the rain god.
Mrs. Malkus went to Yucatan with the Carnegie expedition and saw the actual work of excavation in the ruins of this ancient city. Lowell Houser, who illustrates the story was for three years the official artist of the Carnegie staff in Yucatan. The drawings are adapted from actual designs and decorations of ancient Mayan art.

HIS EXCELLENCY AND PETER. Peter was the son of Franz, the gold thief. He adored officials inherently and with great certainty. But the time came when he aided His Excellency, the governor, chief official of far-eastern Siberia, to finish building the Trans-Siberian Railway. Before the railroad was finished, Peter plunged into strange adventures. This is a thrilling story for anyone of high school age or older.

Senator Penrose once said that he was spending most of his time contending with perspiring patriots who were trying to put the tax on the other fellow. We have a few of the same kind with us today.

A LENTEN MEDITATION

JESUS: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

In the study of the life and teachings of Jesus we are led to believe that in Him all present day social, economic and religious problems find an adequate solution. The more we study the principles that enter into the development of these problems the more we are convinced that Jesus Christ is the only way out of the difficulties and perplexities in which the present day world finds itself.

It is encouraging to observe the new quest for the rediscovery of Jesus and His teachings, a new and earnest endeavor to find His message for our generation. Even discerning students of human affairs outside of the Christian church are saying that in the Spirit of Jesus Christ lies the hope of our civilization. We recall how Matthew Arnold and Ernest Rees, Shakespeare and Bernard Shaw, England's outstanding present day radical socialist, credited with a statement of far-reaching importance. He said, "I am no more a Christian than Pontius Pilate was, but this I will say, that the only way to settle the world's present day upheaval and restlessness is the way Jesus would suggest, were he to assume the role of a modern practical statesman." Also William Durant, who has done a great deal to popularize philosophy, says in his autobiography, "I thrill yet at the mention of the name of Jesus and hunger yet for the ideal life He wished mankind to live—if to love him and to hear him gladly is to be a Christian, than skeptic and pagan though I be, I am a Christian too and Christ is still my God."

These testimonies by men of renown, although not professing Christians, strengthen the followers of Jesus in their faith and convictions that after all the aspirations after God and the higher life are found in every human bosom and they become clearer and clearer as the storms of life subside and the greater realities of our existence become clarified. The old Hebrew poet and prophet expressed a truism that suits every honest soul, "As the hart panteth after the waterbrooks, so panteth my soul after thee O God." St. Augustine, a new dispensation prophet, in like manner describes the inner longing of the human soul, "Thou hast made us for Thyself, O God and our souls are restless until they rest in thee."

The next thing of incomparable value in the search for God and the satisfying life is the realization of the supremacy of the spiritual things. To the physical senses, the material naturally seems more real and permanent; but Paul states it correctly, "The things which are seen are temporal, the things which are unseen are eternal."

It was in the face of an unbelieving pagan world that Paul proclaimed his faith in the supremacy of the spiritual. Hear him as he summarizes one of his great sermons on this great subject, "And now abideth faith, hope, love; these three and the greatest of these is love."

To attain the joys of the satisfying life we must not only learn to discern with clearer vision the supremacy of Jesus over all but we must give him entrance into and enthronement in our lives. If that be done soon the effects will be seen in the home and in the community. Society will be affected and the world will eventually become a better and happier world to live in.

The Lenten season more than any other of the year portrays Jesus in his humble obedience to his heavenly father, in his heroic sacrifice to fulfill his mission to which he had given himself to, and his devoted and consecrated service to mankind which he came to redeem. In the exercise of these blessed qualities, as we learn them from our Lord and savior, we will find to our joy the Satisfying Life.

PRAYER

Grant, O Lord, that we may have the eyes of our understanding purged to behold things invisible and spiritual, that we may in heart be inspired by thy obedience, thy willingness to suffer and sacrifice. Grant that we may be upheld by thy spirit and power, so that we may do all things in thy glory and to thy peace. O forgive us, and help us to live more nearly as we pray. Amen.

The FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER

SATURDAY, MARCH 21

The Hidden Road

(Read Luke 17:20-37. Text, Luke 17:20, 21.) The kingdom of God is not coming visibly—for the kingdom of God is within you. (Goodspeed.)

We are always demanding a sign, some outward and visible manifestation of the kingdom's coming. Perhaps we are sometimes cheered by illusions. Once Jesus compared the Kingdom to the yeast which a man hid in the meal, till the whole was leavened. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned, and deep. The operators of grace are internal, invisible and irresistible. They change the hearts of men, and only God can see the heart. So the kingdom makes its progress, stealing into the secret of life, making the world over from within.

Our discouragement comes from our mistaken expectation. We are looking for the kingdom to come down the highways of the world. Jesus warns us that it travels another road. Prayer: O God, to whom the kingdom belongs, our expectation is in thee. Suffer not our faith to falter or our hope to grow dim. Give us faithful watchmen to proclaim through the night that the morning cometh. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

SUNDAY, MARCH 22

Contrasted Prayers

(Read Luke 18:9-14. Text, Luke 18:14.) Everyone that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

The prayer of this Pharisee has a familiar sound. Are not we accustomed to thank God for our prosperity, contrasting it with the adversity of others? That is the key note of the American Thanksgiving Day. We seem to assume that we are a chosen people, a superior people, the objects of God's singular care and favor. It is really a form of boasting, disguised as worship. We glorify ourselves often, instead of God. That is the offense of the Pharisee's prayer; he is just flattering himself. But he did it privately—he "prayed thus with himself"—while we do it publicly. He was therefore more certainly sincere than we are. Probably he was right, too. He was a better man than the publican. He almost said with Paul, "By the grace of God I am what I am." Nevertheless, he was bragging about himself and to himself. It was an unlovely frame of mind. And he exalted himself at the expense of the other man. He would stand higher for having others under his feet. We Americans, Christians are much like him, and this parable has a lesson that comes home. By contrast with the Pharisee the publican was not a good man. He knew it, and confessed it. In the solemn act of worship he would not pretend to be other than he was. He also was sincere. His was no mock humility, which may also be a fault in some of our prayers.

The Pharisee was sincere in his pride; the publican was sincere in his humility. The one demanded approval; the other cried for mercy. The one had his thanksgiving mixed with unloving contempt for his inferiors; the other was unconscious of any such contrasts. And Jesus says that the man who humbled himself before the pure presence of God went down to his house justified rather than the one who boasted before God. The publican went out of the temple a shaven soul; the Pharisee went out as he had come in. On this day of worship let us learn a lesson.

Prayer: O God, who resistest the proud, and givest grace to the humble, grant to us that true humility, which of these only-begotten Son hath given in himself an example to the faithful. That by our foolish pride we may never provoke thine indignation, but receive the gift of thy grace in lowliness. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

MONDAY, MARCH 23
Persistence in Prayer
(Read Luke 18:1-8. Text, Luke 18:1.) That men ought always to pray, and not to faint.

The argument of the parable is that if an unrighteous judge will finally yield to importunity, much more will a righteous God. Our confidence is not misplaced. God's apparent delay have their reason, no doubt. Indulgently they let our faith. John Fiske quotes Job's saying, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him" as the sublime and triumphant expression of faith. The man who can say that has the world under his feet. So, when our prayers seem to be unanswered and unanswered, to go on praying. Continued on page 7

"Third" was the subject of an interesting talk to the high school pupils given March 12 by Earl Schwemm, a graduate of the Barrington school. He stressed the point of saving money for the coming generation.

The preceding generation built a schoolhouse for us—now it is our duty to save money enough to build a better schoolhouse for the next generation.

Mr. Schwemm said that out of 40 men between the ages of 60 and 80 only one was wealthy, four were doing only one sixth working, 38 dead, and five still working upon relatives' support. This is hard for young people to understand because their response to bills are still small, but we do realize that to be 60 or 80 and dependent is a poor excuse of living. He said:

Summing up the speech as a whole, it brings us to the conclusion that our banking system is a promoter of good habits. Let's be independent in the future and bring our banking average up to 100 per cent.

SCOUT NEWS, TROOP 10

The Board of Review for Troop 10 was held last Friday. Every thing went smoothly although there were many tests to be reviewed. The members of the Board of Review were: Rev. H. E. Koenig, Rev. C. A. Druse, John Bell, E. H. Collins, Les Smiley, Mr. Baird, district commissioner, and Mr. Watson, scoutmaster. We are proud of our record which is that by the time of the Court of Honor next Friday there will not be a Tenderfoot in the troop. There will also be awards for First Class Star, and Life, as well as many merit badges.

Mr. Bell gave out tickets for the Court of Honor next Friday and announced that there would be some sort of prize for the scout selling the most tickets. Everyone is working hard selling tickets to help our troop in order to win the prize. We are trying to have 100 per cent of the parents present at the Court of Honor.

Assistant Scribe, Howard Casti.

The Wise Mothers

(Read Luke 18:15-17. Text, Luke 18:15-17.)

And they brought unto him also infants that he would touch them.

These mothers would tell their children later that Jesus had touched them. That would be a sacred and suggestive memory, as when a child learns that it has been consecrated in baptism. These mothers were not foolish—the disciples were the foolish ones. Our adult world is always blundering.

When is a child old enough to be brought to Christ? This story gives the answer. Some one has said "The race moves forward on the feet of little children."

Jesus said that the kingdom of God comes in the hearts of little children. They are the first to have it. We talk about "the years of discretion," and about the proper age at which to receive children into the church. They are in it already, says Jesus. The problem is how to keep them there.

Prayer: Our Heavenly Father, who dost follow on—home by the gift of children, grant us to learn from their innocence and trust the ways of thy House of Love. Guard us against those errors which would cause one of these little ones to stumble. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Chains of Gold

(Read Luke 18:18-30. Text, Luke 18:18-30.)

He was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

"It goes by very," as Janey said in De Morgan's story. That happiness is inversely as one's wealth is a suggestion to ponder. We may not miss the fine character of this man. Mark says that Jesus loved him. He had noble aspirations. Wealth had not blinded him. The finer things than money would buy. But he was accustomed to comforts which he would not relinquish, to refinements without which life would seem bare. He had a position and a prestige which came with his wealth, and would go with it. He was not free; his wealth mastered him. As much as any slave he was bound, though with chains of gold. Either too much or too little may be made out of this story. Jesus did not go about telling rich men to give up their wealth. But he did say that very thing to this man. To the man who aspires greatly wealth is a bond.

Prayer: O God, who hast chosen the poor to be rich in faith, deliver us from the corruptions of wealth, and from all covetousness, which is idolatry. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Cry that Will not be Silenced

(Read Luke 18:31-43. Text, Luke 18:31-43.)

But he cried so much the more. Then son of David, have mercy on me.

A blind man thinks he has a chance at deliverance from his darkness. How futile to try to silence such a man—and how cruel! And yet here is a familiar note. People in their desperate need are so often rebuked, and means are taken to hush their cries. It is in vain, and it is wrong. They will cry out so much the more; and they ought to. Till justice is done, till mercy is shown, they will not, and they should not, hold their peace. The bitter wrongs of the world cannot be hid or smothered. Suppression breeds revolution. The sympathy and support of Christian people are due to the world's unfortunate who cry out for deliverance.

Prayer: O God, who dost hear the needy when he cries, create in us a desire for justice and grant unto us the spirit of compassion; that we shall make haste to relieve the distressed and to support the weak in their struggles. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Grade Children Have Interesting Variety of Work

The morning classes of the kindergarten have built a house for their dolls and furnished it with cardboard furniture. The garage is attached to the house and automobile, also of cardboard, is large enough for many dolls.

The children in Miss Covey's first grade have nearly completed the post-office project and are starting on community work. This will consist of houses, stores and other public buildings found in our community.

The second grade had a penny box. We chose a cashier and two committee. The class then went downtown and bought presents to surprise our sick girl and boy, Lucinda Grimmer and Robert Nachow.

The project in Miss Marquardt's room is the circus in which plans are well on the way for a parade. A star contest is being worked out in this room in which a star is given for each 100 percent grade received. So far Ida Mae Levine is in second grade and Elaine Faulkner high in third grade.

The pupils in Miss Miller's room are much interested in Holland. The tulip bulbs planted last fall in flower pots are in bud; these will be in bloom before the Holland project is completed.

The boys and girls of the fourth grades are making a Holland sand-table project. They have constructed windmills, houses, dog carts, animals and flowers of colored paper. Dikes and canals were built to show how the plow farmers protect themselves from the sea. They divided the plow land in three parts to show the three kinds of farming carried on there: dairy farming, market gardening and bulb growing. The fifth grade pupils are making booklets of the North Central States to review their study of that section.

In the fifth grade, Miss Leigh's room, the sand table is changing into a southern cotton field. Negroes are at work and bales of cotton are being loaded on to ships. This is in connection with the study of the southern states.

The sixth grade English classes are studying birds this week. Special attention is being given to the study of the couvades of the birds. Their migrations are also being discussed.

Spring has surely arrived as far as the 7-2's are concerned. Tulips and spring flowers are to be found all over the room. The social science classes have been studying with Robert Koenig's alphabet of France. Names of the pupils working it out correctly will be listed in next week's paper.

The eighth grade art classes, under the direction of Mr. Dobash and Mr. Benschman, are drawing and painting winter scenes which are to be entered in a contest sponsored by the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.

New Farm Board Head

James C. Stone of Kentucky, who succeeded Alexander Legge as Chairman of Federal Farm Board, Mr. Stone was formerly president of the Barley Tobacco Growers Association.

Some exceptionally fine work is being done, and interest in the contest is high.
