FATHER OR BROTHER.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S INSTRUC-TIONS TO HIS TROOPS.

He Tells Them They Must Shoo Their Socialist Relatives-Other News from Over the Sea.

Berlin, June 9 .-- Emperor William has made another of those characteristic speeches of his which will attract unusual attention and provoke comment. It was not intended for the publicear and every effort was made under stringent orders to keep it from publication, but it has leaked out and is now published for the first time. It was delivered on the occasion of an address to a body of spring recruits for the army.

In the course of it the Emperor said: "I warn you, who are mostly young countrymen, against the Social Democrats. Always remember the oath you have taken binding you to me. The Bible says the girl who marries leaves father and mother and follows her husband. I say to you, having taken the oath of a soldier, follow me implicitly, shooting even father or brother without question or hesitation when

The language startled even the young men to whom it was addressed, but was received with a loval outburst of cheers. It spread like wildfire through the army and was talked about in all the barracks. Such an utterance could not long be kept secret, and it is now being sent over the wires to all parts of the world, but nowhere will it cause more astonishment than in Germany.

TO OVERTHROW BARILLAS.

Stole Her Husband.

St. Paul, Minn., June 9.- A great sensation was created here yesterday when a woman walked into the school of embroidery of Miss Margaret R. Gibson and began firing at Miss Gibson. at the same time hissing, "You won't steal any other woman's husband as you have mine."

She proved to be Mrs. George L resson. Miss Gibson was not injured. Mrs. Cresson charges her husband, leorge L. Cresson, assistant engineer of the Omaha railway, with being too fond of the society of Miss Gibson, and sought to murder the latter on that account. The social prominence of all the parties to the shooting causes the incident to be the talk of the town.

An Italian Jury-Briber Convicted. New Orleans, La., June 10. Bernard Glandi, accused of offering a $500 bribe to Henry B. Atwood, a tales juror in the Hennessey case, was brought to trial before Jude Moir to-day. It was the first of the bribery cases to go to trial. Atwood testified to a conversation in which he said he did not wish to serve, as it did not pay him to lose so much time. Glandi told him he could get $500 to go on the jury and do the right thing. Glandi's defense was that Atwood had been dunned by him for a bill and testified through spite. The jury remained out three hours and brought in a verdict of guilty as charged.

Callehan had been riding around with a loose woman named Josie Hill, alias Jessie Courvay, alias Boston Bessie, and she was with him at the time he was shot at. The woman is suspected by

EASY WITH THE ITATA.

It is Not Likely to be Punished Much.

Washington, June 8.—The only dispatch received at the navy department to-day from Admiral McCann at Iququie was correcting the statement as to the location of the Itata when the arms were transferred to it from the schooner Robert and Minnie. This transfer, the dispatch says, took place off San Clemente islands a few miles from the coast, instead off San Diego harbor. The location of transfer may be of importance in determining the question of jurisdiction of the United states courts.

Secretary Tracy says the next step vill be to send the ship back to the nited States to stand trial. There is no expectation that the officers and erew of the Itata will jeopardize their liberty by returning with the vessel to San Diego. As it was reported from Mexico that the commander of the insurgent warship Esmeralda, acted as captain of the Itata as far as Acapulco there are at least good reasons why he must not return to the Unsted States. It may be necessary for McCann to detail some of his men to act as the crew.

In official circles it is believed that the Itata is not likely to suffer heavily as the result of her escapade. Credence is given to the statement telegraphed from Chili that the vessel took the contraband arms and ammunition from the Robert and Minnie on the high seas outside of United States jurisdiction.

If this should be true her offence against the neutrality laws is minimized and it is very doubtful if a case could be made out against her in the present state of uncertain construction

There is little doubt that she can be held on other charges, such as contempt of court in sailing away while under injunction, kidnaping the marshal and sailing away without clearance papers, but these are minor offenses, whose punishment is likely to take the shape of fines and not go to the length of forfeiture of the vessel. Attorney-General Miller said that the department of justice would take no action in the case of the Itata until that vessel had been turned over to the law officers of the government at San Diego, Cal., when the course usually in such cases would be followed-that is to say, she would be libeled and held subject to the findings of the proper legal tribunal.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW. Hesitation in Money Circles Has Not Ceased Entirely.

NEW YORK, June 8 .- R. G. Dun's weekly review says: While the hesitation in business has not ceased and decided activity is hardly expected now antil the close of the fiscal year, it continues to be a matter of surprise and congratulation that the money markets and trade have been so well sustained in spite of heavy exports of gold. The New York money market has been easy, rates on call dropping from 31/2 to 3 per cent, with heavy receipts from the interior. Trade is not very active, but almost everywhere hopeful. Failures at Boston have made shoe manufacturers cautious. Hides are easy. dry goods quiet and wool sales moderate. In the Northwest continuous rains have made the prospect unsurpassed. Chicago reports larger receipts than a year ago of flour, wheat, cheese, hides and three times as much wool; smaller receipts of oats, rye, barley, lard, and but one-third as much crude meats, with full trade in dry goods and bright prospects generally. The business failures throughout the country during the last seven days numbers 224 as compared with a total of 254 of last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 205.

Sale of the Twin City Street Roads. St. PAUL, Minn., June 8.-From hints thrown out by officials of the Twin City street-railway system it is learned that the articles of incorporations filled at Elizabeth, N. SHOT HIS BROTHERS.

PART L TOLD BY PHILIP BRAND, M. D., LONDON.

I wish I had the courage to begin this tale by turning to my professional visiting books, and, taking at random any month out of the last twenty years, give its record as a fair sample of my ordinary work. The dismal extract would tell you what a doctor's-I suppose I may say a successful doctor's-lot is. when his practice lies in a poor and denselypopulated district of London. Dreary as such a beginning might be, it would perhaps allay some of the incredulity which this tale may probably provoke, as it would plainly show how little room there is for things imaginative or romantic in work so hard as mine, or among such grim realities of poverty, pain, and grief as those by which I have been surrounded. It would certainly make it appear extremely unlikely that I should have found time to imagine, much less to write, a romance or melodrama.

The truth is that when a man has toiled from nine o'clock in the morning until nine o'clock at night, such leisure as he can enjoy is precious to him, especially when even that short respite is liable to be broken in upon at any moment.

Still, in spite of the doleful picture I have drawn of what may be called "the daily grind," I begin this tale with the account of a holiday.

In the autumn of 1864 I turned my back with right good-will upon London streets, hospitals, and patients, and took my seat in the North Express. The first revolution of the wheels sent a thrill of delight through my jaded frame. A joyful sense of freedom came over me. I had really got away at last! Moreover, I had left no address behind me, so for three blessed weeks might roam an undisputed lord of myself. Three weeks were not very many to take out of the fifty-two, but they were all I could venture to give myself; for even at that time my practice, if not so lucrative as I could wish, was a large and increasing one. Having done a twelvemonth's hard work, I felt that no one in the kingdom could take his holiday with a conscience clearer that mine, so I lay back in a peculiarly contented frame of mind, and discounted the coming pleasures of my brief respite from labor.

There are many ways of passing a holiday -many places at which it may be spent; but, after all, if you wish to enjoy it thoroughly there is but one royal rule to be followed. That is, simply to please yourself-go where you like, and mount the innocent holiday hobby which is dearest to your heart, let its name be botany, geology, entomology, conchology, venery, piscation, or what not. Then you will be happy, and return well braced up for the battle of life. I knew a city cierk with literary tastes, who invariably spent his annual fortnight among the mustiest tomes of the British Museum, and averred that his health was more benefited by so doing than if he had passed the time inhaling the freshest sea-breezes. I daresay he was right in his assertion.

Sketching has always been my favorite holiday pursuit. Poor as my drawings may be, nevertheless, as I turn them over in my portfollo, they bring, to me at least, vivid remembrances of many sweet and picturesque spots, happy days, and congenial compan-It is not for me to say anything of their actual merits, but they are dear to me for their associations.

This particular year I went to North Wales. and made Bettws-y-Coed my headquarters. I stayed at the Royal Oak, that well-known little inn dear to many an artist's heart, and teeming with reminiscences of famous men who have sojourned there times without number. It was here I made the acquaintance of the man with whose life the curious events here told are connected.

On the first day after my arrival at Bettws my appreciation of my liberty was so thorough, my appetite for the enjoyment of the beauties of Nature so keen and insatiable, that I went so far and saw so much, that when I returned to the Royal Oak night had fallen and the hour of dinner had long passed by. I was, when my own meal was placed on the table, the only occupant of the coffeeroom. Just then a young man entered, and ordered something to eat. The waiter knowing, no doubt, something of the frank comaraderie which exists, or should exist, between the followers of the painter's craft, laid his cover at my table. The new-comer seated himself, gave me a pleasant smile and a nod, and in five minutes we were in full swing of conversation.

The moment my eyes fell upon the young man I had noticed how singularly handsome he was. Charles Carriston—for this I found afterward to be his name-was about twentytwo years of age. He was tall, but slightly built; his whole bearing and figure being remarkably elegant and graceful. He looked even more than gentlemanly, he looked distinguished. His face was pale, its features well-cut, straight, and regular. His forehead spoke of high intellectual qualities, and there was somewhat of that development over the eyebrows which phrenologists, I believe, consider as evidence of the possession of imagination. The general expression of his face was one of sadness, and its refined beauty was heightened by a pair of soft, dark, dreamy-looking eyes.

tire, I judged him to be an artist-a professional artist—to the backbone. In the course of conversation Ltold him how I had classified him. He smiled.

It only remains to add that, from his at-

"I am only an amateur," he said; "an idle man, nothing more—and you." "Alas! I am a doctor."

"Then we shall not have to answer to each other for our sins in painting."

We talked on pleasantly until our bodily wants were satisfied. Then came that pleasant craving for tobacco, which after a good meal, is natural to a well-regulated digestion, "Shall we go and smoke outside?" said Car-riston. "The night is delicious." We went out and sat on one of the wooden benches. As my new friend said, the night was delicious. There was scarcely a breath of air moving. The stars and the moon shone brightly, and the rush of the not far distant stream came to us with a soothing murmur. Near us were three or four jovial young artists. They were in merry mood; one of them had that day sold a picture to a tourist. We listened to their banter until, most likely growing thirsty, they re-entered Carriston had said little since we had been out of doors. He smoked his eigar placidly and gazed up at the skies. With the white moonlight falling on his strikingly-beautiful face—the graceful pose into which he fellhe seemed to me the embodiment of poetry. He paid no heed to the merry talk of the artists, which so much amused me-indeed, I doubted if he heard their voices. Yet he must have done so, for as soon as they had left us he came out of his reverie. "It must be very nice," he said, "to have to make one's living by Art."

"Nice for those who can make livings by tt." I answered.

day of neglected genius is gone by. Muller was the last sufferer, 1 think—and he died "If you are so sanguine, why not try your own luck at it?"

"I would; but unfortunately I am a rich I laughed at this misplaced regret. Then Carriston, in the most simple way, told me a good deal about himself. He was an orphan, an only child. He had already ample means; but Fortune had still favors in store for him. At the death of his uncle, now an aged man, he must succeed to a large estate and a baronetcy. The natural, unaffected way in which he made these confidences, moreover made them not, I knew, from any wish to increase his importance in my eyes, greatly impressed me. By the time we parted for the night I had grown much interested in my new acquaintance—an interest not untinged by envy. Young, handsome, rich, free to come or go, work or play, as he listed! Happy Carriston!

II.

I am disposed to think that never before did a sincere friendship, one which was fated to last unbroken for years, ripen so quickly as that between Carriston and myself. As I now look back I find it hard to associate him with any, even a brief, period of time subsequent to our meeting, during which he was not my bosom friend. I forget whether our meeting at the same picturesque spot on the morning which followed our self-introduction was the result of accident or arrangement. Anyway, we spent the day together. and that day was the precursor of many passed in each other's society. Morning after morning we sallied forth to do our best to transfer the same bits of scenery to our sketching-blocks. Evening after evening we returned to dine side by side, and afterwards to talk and smoke together, indoors or outdoors as the temperature advised or our wishes inclined.

Great friends we soon became—inseparable as long as my short holiday lasted. It was, perhaps, pleasant for each to work in company with an amateur like himself. Each could ask the other's opinion of the merits of the work done, and feel happy at the approval duly given. An artist's standard of excellence is too high for a non-professional. When he praises your work he praises it but as the work of an outsider. You feel that such commendation condemns it and disheartens you.

However, had Carriston cared to do so, I think he might have fearlessly submitted his productions to any conscientious critic. His drawings were immeasurably more artistic and powerful than mine. He had undoubtedly great talent, and I was much surprised to find that good as he was at landscape, he was even better at the figure. He could, with a firm, bold hand, draw rapidly the most marvelous likenesses. So spirited and true were some of the studies he showed me, that I could without flattery advise him, provided he could finish as he began, to keep entirely to the higher branch of the art. I have now before me a series of outline faces drawn by him-many of them from memory; and as I look at them the original of each comes at once before my eyes.

From the first I had been much interested in the young man, and as day by day went by, and the peculiarities of his character were revealed to me, my interest grew deeper and deeper. I flatter myself that I am a keen observer and skillful analyst of personal character, and until now fancied that to write a description of its component parts was an easy matter. Yet when I am put to the proof I find it no simple task to convey in words a ganization.

I soon discovered that he was, I may say, afflicted by a peculiarly sensitive nature. Although strong, and apparently in good health, the very changes of the weather seemed to affect him almost to the same extent as they affect a flower. Sweet as his disposition always was, the tone of his mind, his spirits, his conversation, varied, as it were, with the atmosphere. He was full of imagination, always rich, was at times weird, even grotesquely weird. Not for one moment did he seem to doubt the stability of the wild theories he started, or the possibility of the poetical dreams he dreamed being realized. He had his faults, of course; he was hasty and impulsive; indeed to me one of the greatest charms about the boy was that, right or wrong, each word he spoke came straight

So far as I could judge, the whole organization of his mind was too highly strung, too finely wrought for every-day use. A note of joy, of sorrow, even of pity vibrated through it too strongly for his comfort of well-being. As yet it had not been called upon to bear the test of love, and fortunately-I use the word advisedly-fortunately he was not, according to the usual significance of the word, a religiousm an, or I should have thought it not unlikely that some day he would fall a victim to that religious mania so well known to my professional brethren, and have developed hysteria or melancholia. He might even have fancied himself a messenger sent from heaven for the regeneration of mankind. From natures like Carriston's are prophets

In short, I may say that my exhaustive study of my new friend's character resulted in a certain amount of uneasiness as to his future-an uneasiness not entirely free from

Although the smile came readily and frequently to his lips, the general bent of his disposition was sad, even despondent and morbid. And yet few young men's lives promised to be so pleasant as Charles Carris-

I was rallying him one day on his future rank and its responsibilities. "You will, of course, be disgustingly rich?"

I said. Carriston sighed, "Yes, if I live long enough; but I don't suppose I shall."

"Why in the world shouldn't you? You look pale and thin, but are in capital health. Twelve long miles we have walked to-dayyou never turned a hair." Carriston made no reply. He seemed in deep thought, "Your friends ought to look after you and get you a wife," I said. "I have no friends," he said sadly. "No nearer relation than a cousin a good deal older than I am, who looks upon me as one who was born to rob him of what should be

"But by the law of primogeniture, so sacred to the upper ten thousand, he must know you are entitled to it."

"Yes; but for years and years I was always going to die. My life was not thought worth six months' purshase. All of a sudden 1 got well. Ever since then I have seemed, even to myself, a kind of interloper."

"It must be unpleasant to have a man longing for one's death. All the more reason you should marry, and put other lives between him and the title."

"I fancy I shall never marry," said Carriston, looking at me with his soft dark eyes. "You see, a boy who has waited for years expecting to die, doesn't grow up with exactly the same feelings as other people. I don't think I shall ever meet a woman I can care for enough to make my wife. No, I expect my cousin will be Sir Ralph yet."

I tried to laugh him out of his morbid idea Those who live will see," I said. "Only promise to ask me to your wedding, and better still, if you live in town, appoint me your family doctor. It may prove the nucleus of that West End practice which it is the dream of every doctor to establish."

I have already alluded to the strange beauty of Carriston's dark eyes. As soon as companionship commenced between us those eyes became to me. from scientific reasons, objects of curiosity on account of the mysterious expression which at times I detected in them. Often and often they wore a look the like to which, I imagine, is found only in the eyes of a somnambulist—a look which one feels certain is intently fixed upon something, yet upon something beyond the range of one's own vision. During the first two or three days of our new-born intimacy, I found this eccentricity of Carriston's positively startling. When now and then I turned to him, and found him staring with all his might at nothing. my eyes were compelled to follow the direction in which his own were bent. It was at first impossible to divest oneself of the belief that something should be there to justify so fixed a gaze. However, as the rapid growth of our friendly intercours soon showed me that he was a boy of most ardent poetic temperament—perhaps even more a poet than an artist—I laid at the door of the Muse these absent looks and recurring flights into vacancy.

We were at the Fairy Glen one morning, sketching, to the best of our ability, the swirling stream, the gray rocks, and the overhanging trees, the last just growing brilliant with autumnal tints. So beautiful was everything around that for a long time I worked, idled, or dreamed in contented silence. Carriston had set up his easel at some little distance from mine. At last I turned to see how his sketch was progressing. He had evidently fallen into one of his brown studies, and, apparently, a harder one than usual. His brush had fallen from his fingers, his features were immovable, and his strange dark eyes were absolutely riveted upon a large rock in front of him, at which he gazed as intently as if his hope of heaven depended upon seeing through it. He seemed for the while oblivious to things mundane. A party of laughing, chattering, terrible tourist girls scrambled down the rugged steps, and one by one passed in front of him. Neither their presence nor the inquisitive glances they cast on his statuesque face roused him from his fit of abstraction. For a moment I wondered if the boy took opium or some other narcotic on the sly. Full of the thought I rose, crossed over to him, and laid my hand upon his shoulder. As he felt my touch he came to himself, and looked up at me in a dazed, inquiring way.

"Really, Carriston," I said, laughingly, 'you must reserve your dreaming fits until we are in places where tourists do not congregate, or you will be thought a madman, or at least a poet."

He made no reply. He turned away from me impatiently, even rudely; then, picking up his brush, went on with his sketch. After a while he seemed to recover from his pettishness, and we spent the remainder of the day as pleasantly as usual.

As we trudged home in the twilight, he said to me in an apologetic, almost penitent "I hope I was not rude to you just now."

"When do you mean?" I asked, having almost forgotten the trivial incident. "When you woke me from what you called my dreaming." "Oh dear, no. You were not at all rude. If you had been, it was but the penalty due to my presumption. The flights of genius should be respected, not checked by a material hand."

How the Prince Died.

I have recently had a very interesting interview with an English gentleman who was present in Zululand at the time of the death of the prince imperial, and who knew the young gentleman well, besides being personally acquainted with all the details of the catastrophe, says a writer in the Philadelphia Telegram. He was not much impressed by the character and manners of the ill-fated prince himself. describing him to me as a very fullfledged specimen of the most obnoxious type of a fast young Parisian society man. Besides which, he was impressed with an overwhelming idea of his own importance, and insisted always on taking the command of every expedition in which he was included. The fatal fray in which the unfortunate youth lost his, life owed its whole success for the Zulus to the fact of the prince's party being taken by surprise. Everybody ran away on the sudden attack of the savages, and it was owing to a broken girth that the prince failed to make his escape with the others. There were only five Zulus concerned in the attack, and they all belonged to one family-a father, his three sons and a son-in-law. They stripped the body of their victim, leaving nothing behind but a gold locket suspended around his neck, and which the Zulus thought contained a charm. My informant told me that, for him. the most trying part of the whole business was the interview which the Empress Eugenie insisted upon having with him after he returned to England. She asked the most minute questions about the prince's death, being especially anxious to know if the fatal wounds were not dealt him in front. But, unfortunately, they were all in his back. Then she wanted to be told that he had died lighting for England, and the Englishman was compelled to assure her that such was not the case. But at least, Mr. X., you can say it was," was the unhappy mother's suggestion It did not occur to her, poor lady, that an English gentleman has a natural objection to telling lies on any subject whatever.

Trade in Cast Off Teeth.

A medical statistician estimates that the citizens of the United States are carrying gold to the value of £100,000 in the recesses of what ought to be their teeth. There are no people on the face of the globe who have such bad teeth and who spend so much money upon them as the Americans. No doubt the habit of hurried feeding and the wholesale consumption of sweet dishes have assisted much toward this end. But is it not a mistake to suppose, as says the medical statistician that false teeth set in gold are buried when their owner shuffles off this mortal coil? If this is so in old teeth are not bought to use again, as some nervous people fancy, but simply for the sake of the gold .-Popular Provider.

BURDEN BEARER. THE TEXT OF DR. TALMAGE'S SER-MON LAST SUNDAY.

The World Would Be Much Improved If People Lived Up to the Bible-An Rioquent Discourse by the Eminent Brooklyn Divine.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee.

David was here taking his own medicine. If anybody had on him heavy weights, David had them, and yet out of his own experience he advises you and me as to the best way of getting rid of burdens. This is a world of burden-bearing. Coming into the house of prayer there might be no sign of sadness or sorrow, but where is the man who has not a conflict? Where is the soul that has not a struggle? And there is not a day of all the year when my text is not gloriously appropriate. and there is never an audience assembled on the planet where the text does not fit the occasion: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord. and he shall sustain There are a great many men who have business burdens. When we see a man harried and perplexed and annoyed in business life, we are apt to say; "He ought not to have attempted to carry so much." Ah! that man may not be to blame at all. When a man plants a business he does not know what will be its outgrowths, what will be its roots, what will be its branches. There is many a man with keen foresight and large business faculty who has been flung into the dust by unforeseen circumstances springing upon him from ambush. When to buy, when to sell, when to trust, and to what amount of credit, what will be the effect of this new invention of machinery, what will be the effect of that loss of crop, and a thousand other questions perplex business men, until the nair is silvered and deep wrinkles are plowed in the cheek; and the stocks go up by the mountains and go down by the valleys, and they are at their wits' ends. and stagger like drunken men.

There never has been a time when there have been such rivalries in business as now. It is hardware against hardware, books against books, chandlery against chandlery, imported article against imported article. A thousand stores in combat with another thousand stores. Never such advantage of light, never such variety of assortment, never so much splendor of show-window, never so much adroitness of salesmen, never so much acuteness of advertising, and amid all these severities of rivalry in business, how many men break down! Oh, the burden on the shoulder! Oh, the burden on the heart! You hear that it is avarice which drives these men of business through the street, and that is the commonly accepted idea. I do not believe a word of it. The vast multitude of these business men are toiling on for others. To educate their children, to put the wing of protection thing left so that when they pass out of this life their wives and children will not have to go the poorhouse—that is the way I translate this energy in the street and store—the vast majority of that energy. Grip, Gouge & Co., do not do all the business. Some of us remember when the Central America was coming home from California, it was wrecked. President Arthur's father-in-law was the heroic captain of that ship, and went down with most of the passengers. Some of them got off into life-boats, but there was a young man returning from California who had a bag of gold in his hand; and as the last boat sailed off from the ship that was to go down, that man shouted to a comrade in the boat, "Here, John, catch this gold; there are three thousand dollars; take it home to my old mother, it will make her comfortable in her last days." Grip, Gouge & Co. do not do all the business of the world. Ah! my friend, do you say that God does erre anything about your worldly business? I tell you God knows more about it than you do. He knows all your perplexities; He knows what mortgagee is about to foreclose: He knows what note you can not pay; He knows what unsalable goods you have on your shelves; He knows all your trials, from the day you took hold of the first yard-stick down to the sale of the last yard of ribbon. He will help you to discharge all your duties. He is going to see you through. When loss comes, and you find your property going, just take this Book and put it down by your ledger, and read of the eternal possessions that will come to you through our Lord Jesus Christ. And when your business partner betrays you, and your friends turn against you, just take the insulting letter, put it down on the table, put your Bible

City got his accounts entangled. He knew he was honest, and yet he could not make his accounts come out right, and he toiled at them day and night until he was nearly frenzied. It seemed by those books that something had been misappropriated, and he knew before God he was honest. The last day came. He knew if he could not that day make his accounts come out right, he would go into disgrace and go into banishment from the business establishment. He went over there very early, before there was any body in the place, and he knelt down at the desk and said: "Oh, Lord, thou knowest I have tried to be honest, but I cannot make these things come out right! Help me to-day-help me this morning!" The young man arose, and hardly knowing why he did so, opened a book which lay on the desk, and there was a leaf containing a line of figures which explained everything. In other words, he cast his burden upon the Lord, and the Lord sustained him. Young man, do you hear that? Oh, yes, God has a sympathy with anybody that is in any kind of toil! He knows how heavy is America, it is not so in England, or the hod of bricks that the workman carwhy the numerous advertisements ries up the ladder of the wall; he hears offering to buy old artificial teeth? than all the din and roar of the city comes the voice of a sympathetic God: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee."

There are a great many who have a weight of persecution and abuse upon them. Sometimes society gets a grudge against a man. All his motives are misinterpreted and his good deeds are depreciated. With more virtue than some of the honored and applauded. he runs only against raillery and sharp criticism. When a man begins to go down he has not only the force of natural gravitation, but a hundred hands to help him in the fall. Men are persocuted for their virtues and their successes. Germanicus said he had just as adornments. The character some times is so lustrous that the weak eyes of envy and jealousy cannot bear to look at it. It was their integrity that put Joseph in the pit, and Daniel in the den. and Sharach in the fire, and sent John the Evangelist to desolate Patmos, and Calvin to the castle of persecution, and John Huss to the stake, and Korah after Moses, and Saul after David, and Herod after Christ. Be sure if you have anything to do for church or state, and you attempt it with all your scul, the lightning will strike you. The world always has had a cross between two thieves for the one who comes to save it. High and holy enterprise has always been f llowed by abuse. The most sublime tragedy of self-sacrifice has come to burlesque. The graceful gait of virtue is always followed by grimace and travesty. The sweetest strain of poetry ever written has come to ridiculous parody, and as long as there are virtue and righteousness in the world, there win be something for iniquity to grin at. All long the line of the ages, and in all linds, the cry has been: "Not this man, out Barabbas. Now Barabbas was robber." And what makes he persecutions of life worse. the they come from people whon you have helped, from those to whom you have loaned money or have started in business, or whom you rescued in some great crisis. I think it has been the history of all our lives—the most acrimonious assault has come from those whom we have benefited, whom we have helped, and that makes it all the harder to bear. A man is in danger of becoming cyn-

A prominent merchant of New York said to a member of my family: "My mother wants her case mentioned to Mr. Talmage." This was the case. He said; "My mother had a dreadful abscess, from which she had suffered untold agonies, and all surgery had been exhausted upon her, and worse and worse she grew until we called in a few Christian friends and proceeded to pray about it. We commended her case to God and the abscess began immediately to be cured. She is entirely well now, and without knife and without any surgery." So that case has come to me. and there are a score of other cases coming to our ears from all parts of the earth. Oh, ye who are sick, go to Christ! Oh, ye who are worn out with agonies of body, "cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee!" Another burden some have to carry is the burden of bereavement. Ah! these are the troubles that wear us out. If we lose our property, by additional industry, perhaps, we may bring back the estranged fortune; if we lose our good name, perhaps by reformation of morals we may achieve again reputation for integrity; but who will bring back the dear departed? Alas! me for these empty cradles and these trunks of childish toys that will never be used again! Alas! me for the empty chair and the silence in the halls that will never echo again to those familiar footsteps. Alas! for the cry of widowhood and orphanage. What bitter Marahs in the wilderness, what cities of the dead, what long black shadow from the wing of death, what eyes sunken with grief, what hands tremulous with bereavement. what instruments of music shut now because there are no fingers to play on them! Is there no relief for such souls? Then there are many who carry the burden of sin. Ah, we all carry it until in the appointed way that burden is lifted. We need no Bible to prove that the whole race is ruined. Sin, grim and dire, has put its clutch upon the immortal soul, and that clutch will never relax unless it be under the heel of him who came to destroy the works of the devil. Oh, to have a mountain of sin on the soul! Is there no way to have the burden me ved? O, yes. "Cast thy burden upon the Lord." The sinless One came to take the consequences of our sin! And I know he is in earnest. How do I know it? By the streaming temples and the streaming hands as he says, Come unto me all ye who are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest." ILLINOIS NEWS.

William Apfel committed suicide at

ousy of his wife was the cause. Natural gas was discovered about ten miles northwest of Danville by men who were boring an artesian well. The annual commencement of the Pana High School was held at Hayward Opera House last week.

Charles A. Dement's extensive livery stable on Hennipin avenue, Dixon, was totally destroyed by fire. Loss $5,000. An in ect known as the "flee bug" is doing serious damage to growing corn in Crittenden township, near Cham-Stockholders of the Millers' Mutual meeting at Alton. The old officers were re-elected. Mrs. Henry Marfield, a pioneer resident of Galena and widow of a former association of Illinois held their annual mayor of that city, died Saturday night, aged seventy-six years. The lumberyard of Martin Simmons & Co., at Fairfield burned. The loss will be over $3,000; insurance, $2,000. The fire was evidently incendiary, An electric storm passed over Morris, accompanied by hail in many places, that did great damage to growing crops and small fruits. Senator Fuller on behalf of the Senate pages presented President Ray with a handsome gold-headed cane just before the senate adjourned. Harry V. Becker, the North State street, Chicago, druggist who failed last week, has settled with his creditors for 100 cents on the dollar. Insolvency proceedings in the County court were discontinued. Harry P. Smith, agent of the Jacksonville Southeastern railroad company at Springfield, Ill., has been arrested on the charge of embezzlement. He is reported to be short in his accounts some $300 or $400.

The Woman's Missionary association of the United Brethren church, in session at Decatur, has decided to build a church at Portland, Oregon, and pledges itself to maintain the minister for five years.

At Milford Chas. Wincott, an Eastern Illinois engineer, made a misstep in getting off his engine and was dragged under the wheels and killed. The Brotherhood of Lecomotive Engineers conducted his funeral in Chicago

John Jolly, a prominent farmer and stock buyer residing near Franklin. died from an overdose of chloral, but whether taken with suicidal intent or through a blunder is not known. He was very well known and wealthy.

Judge Hawes refused to set aside an order dismissing the libel suit of Marion Leonard against the Chicago Times. It was disposed of Sept. 24, 1890, when Marion was in the detention hospital for the insane. The court said it was now too late to move to reinstate.

Widow Collins was defeated in her suit claiming a squatter's right to the ten acres of property at Thirty-first street and Ashland avenue, Chicago. The case was tried before Judge Grestam and a jury, who rendered a decision in favor of E. H. Davis, the holder of the deeds.

John Whiteside, aged 18, and Nellie, the daughter of H. P. Briggs, a wealthy farmer of Bond county, eluded the vigilance of the girl's parent and were married. The groom's face had been seriously damaged by his father-inlaw's fist. The couple purchased tickets for Texas.

The handseine Catholic church of Mattoon, which was partially destroyed by fire last December was rededicated with imposing ceremonies Sunday. Bishops Spaulding of Peoria, and Ryan, of Alton, assisted the rector, Father Crowe, and local priests in the services, and a large class was confirmed as com-

John Faulds, an old citizen of Danville, was run over and killed by the ears near Hoopeston. He was formarly a large mine owner and operator, then became insane in consequence of a pistol-shot received in a quarrel and lost all his property while in the asylum. Lately he escaped and was leclared sane by a jury in Springfield.

A severe wind and rain storm passed over the southern portion of Fayette county and the northern part of Marion county. Buildings were leveled, fruit trees damaged, and wheat blown. A farmer named George Hackduffer, residing in Brown county, and his 2-yearold son who was sitting on his knee were killed by lightning.

Lena Leu and Annie Miller, who arrived in Chicago from Sharp county, Ark., in search of the latter's sister, Mary, and who sought shelter at the Harrison street police station Saturday night, found their sister Monday. Up to noon the supply of Mary Millers at the station was greater than the demand, as nearly every girl bearing that name called to see if she were the one mentioned in the item published in the daily papers. About 2 o'clock the right one came, however, and there was no need of identifying herself.

It is now settled that the encampment of the Illinois National Guards this year will be by brigades instead of by regiment. The First brigade encampment will occur July 18-25, and the second brigade Aug. 4-11. The adjutant-general has confirmed the election of John C. Cabanis, captain; Stephen Crosby, first lieutenant, Theodore J. Bell, second lieutenant, of company E, Fifth regiment, stationed at Petersburg. An election for captain of company A, Fifth infantry, at Springfield, was ordered to take place June 16. Rev. F. G. Parish, late pastor of the Methodist church, Hanover, has withdrawn from the ministry in consequence of alleged attention to a young lady school teacher while his wife was ill at a Chicago hospital. Rev. Mr. Parish appeared before the elder and the church board and declared that while he might have acted with indiscretion he was guilty of nothing more serious. He desired to resign, but some of the church members objected, and then he asked for and was granted the privilege of withdrawing from the ministry. Mr. Parish is about twenty-five years old. He has done good work in this section and his friends assert that le is the victim of persecution. Major Ecno, of the Northwestern University, will have charge of the Hanover congregation until the coming session of the conference.

SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1891.

Gov. Fifer sent the names of the iustices recently selected by the Cook County judges, with two exceptions, to the senate the 10th of June. The exceptions were J. Henry Kraft and George A. Meech. Mr. Kraft lives in the West Town of Chicago, whereas he was named for the Town of Jefferson. Meech lives in the Morgan Park portion of Calumet and not in the part of Calumet annexed to Chicago. He is therefore inelegible. The new men are assigned to the extra places provided in the avenue. Emergency bill.

West Chicago—Charles G. Dixon, to succeed Jarvis Blume; James M. Doyle, Max Eberhardt, Michael A. La Buy, Daniel Scully, Charles W. Woodman, and Charles J. White, to succeed themselves; Olof F. Siverson and James C. Dooley.

Jefferson-F. W. Rogers, Oscar F. Gear, Richard M. Burke, Isaac W. Huester.

THE National Editorial Association meets in St. Paul, Minnesota, on July 14th-17th, 1891. The capital of the North Star State is a delightful place for, a summer meeting, and the fraternity has the promise of being handsomely cared for. St. Paul and its neighbor, Minneapolis, are worderful outgrowths of the marvelous develop- vited to be present at 10:30 Sunday ment of the northwest. There are morning. many pretty resorts around these twin giants. The most attractive, perhaps, Great Northern Railway, with four tracks between the two cities, crossing tion, held at Boston next week. the Mississippi at Minneapolis on a and the largest flouring mills of the world, and thence through beautiful suburban places to Minnetonka Beach and Hotel Lafayette, the largest and finest summer resort hostelry in the northwest. The hotel building is over a fifth of a mile in length, and contains nearly five acres of floor surface. Boyle will tend to the post office and depot. Every window faces the lake. All to good living and modern life are provided. It is under the management, for the ninth year, of Eugene Mehl, of the Ryan, of St. Paul.

OBITUARY.

Grace Congregational Church sustains very heavy loss in the death of S-ymour Osbornson, their late Sup't of Sabbath school. A young man who never had a high ideal of his own audity, he nevertheless was willing to do his best in any position he was called to fill.

He spent his early childhood in the central part of Wisconsin, where at the age of 7 years he was left motherless. His older sister took care of him and the other children, giving them, so far as was in her power, the motherly care and christian instruction needed.

In 1:80 he began a tending the o'd Northwest Chapei Sabbath school and when the new church building was erected and the organization, under the name of Grace Congregational church, was completed he joined with them, to push for ward the work.

He has ever been a quiet, earnest, faithful worker for the advance of true religion in the hearts of fellows.

His work among the young people and children has been very great. One of the founders of the Young People's Union of Grace church, which has become since the young people's society of Christian Endeavor, he ever labored with prayer, to see the spirit of endeavor, "for Christ and the church," go abroad among the young peo-

When called to the Superintendency of the Sabbath school, he went to that work with fear and trembling, but did his best to make it a success. We realize now how w Il he succeeded.

He was one of those quiet workers whom we do not realize the true value of until they are gone. On looking back we find that there has been among us one who tried to do what he believed was right. His humility and evident desire to do better next time, when he did make mistakes. made all who knew him feel that he was a true christian man. On the morning of June 4th, he passed away, being only 26 years, 6 months and 15 days of age,

A very pleasant birthday party was given Mr. Alfred Dahl, on Tuesday evening, May 26th. Among those present were, Wm. Olin, Oscar Olin, Alfred Dahl. Charlie and Harry Boos, Henry Lydian, Eugean Richter, Asa Bradley, Gilbert Paulsberg, John Nettenstrom, John Bend, Corneal Gunderson, Wm. Langford Geo. Powell, Marshal Drake. Misses Josie Olin. HER TELEGRAM.

The shall not have him!" said Jane Bell, stamping her foot upon the floor; "she shall not have have him! I know the arts of these bits of simplicity. It's been a dead set ever since she came, and I say she shan't have him!"

It was Clarence Barton of whom Harland whom she meant as "she." It was on the eve of a projected picnic party. Just five minutes ago Ruth had exhibited her new dress to her rival, quite ignorant of the fact that Jane was a rival at all.

"I'm so glad Mrs. Spencer sent it home to-night, said Ruth, "for I

And Jane Bell who had been hoping all day that the dress-maker would fail to fulfill her promise, had replied. sweetly: "I'm so glad, dear!"

But now that she was alone and thought of Clarence Barton, who was such a "catch," and whose heart she intended to win, and as she recalled how Ruth had come between them, and fully understood what an opportunity to-morrow's picnic would be for likes him so much, and we shall be der their arms and deliver themselves her, she grew furious.

"She shall not go, if I can prevent her," she said to herself. "I must have my opportunity at the picnic. Clarence Barton liked me before Ruth came, and she shall not flourish him before everyone's eyes as her prize already. I hate her, and I only wish I dared to insult her and send her home; but mamma would never suffer anything to be done to hurt the feelings of dear cousin Jane's child,' I suppose, so I must manage some other way.

She glanced at the dress lying on the chair, and wondered whether she dared in any way distigure it? but her conscience was not equal to the deed. Horribly becoming as the dress was, it must remain uninjured.

"I'd like to tear it into shreds," said Jane; "but I must achieve my purpose in some other way. If I could only send her home!" Then a thought flashed into her mind. "I can send her home," she said: "and when once there she will be obliged to stay. I know she can't afford the expense of a journey back to us this summer; and if she can be banished I shall be Mrs. Barton yet."

And the girl laughed spitefully as she glanced out of the window. It was nine o'clock. The streets were quiet and dark. Jane had seldom been out alone so late; but she intended to go now. She took her waterproof cloak from its peg, and sought, in her wardrobe, for her plainest hat; over this she tied a blue veil, and locking her room, door, and slipping the key into her pocket, she crept slowly down the stairs, into the basement.

"Sit up for me, Ann," she whispered to the servant girl, "and I'll give you b present to-morrow; but you need not tell mamma I'm out."

Away Jane hurried into the main road, where she took a tramcar, which was traveling city-wards; and on reaching the terminus she alighted, and in much trepidation and consciousness that she was awakening a good deal of unpleasant observation, she sought the district telegraph-office.

"After all," Jane said to herself, "no one can see my face; and what is a little confusion to the loss of a rich husband?"

The thought encouraged her as she advanced to the counter, and handed in her slip of paper.

"How much, please?" to the clerk. who smiled in an unpleasant manner, as he answered her.

Then it was over. She hurried away, caught the return train, and reached home unmolested. But she was pale and trembling as she slipped into the kitchen, where she was welcomed by sleepy Ann.

"The missus don't know you're out; but she tried to wake you awhile ago. There's a telegram for your cousin, and she's fretting over it." 'Let her fret, it will do her good," said Jane, viciously to herself, as she stole off to bed. She slept quietly, and dreamed dreams of triumph, while in the next room little Ruth packed her trunk, and kept tearful vigil. "Some one must be ill or dead," she sobbed, for they would never have telegraphed to me to return home. How can I bear this long journey, in such suspense, and what shall I find when I reach the end of it?" When Jane went down to breakfast the next morning, she found Ruth ready for her journey; and was told how a telegram had come the night before, signed 'T. Smith," summoning her home. "And Ruth knows no one of that name." said Jane's mother; "so I tell her to hope for the best; it may be nothing very serious." "Depend upon it, it is not," said Jane, with some pity in her heart, Ruth was so pale. They are only anxlous to have you with them. Don't.

But Buth was not to be cheered, and she left many sighs. "And you will lose the picnic, too;

what a pity!" said Jane hypocritically. "Yes." answered Ruth with a sob.

nic, and also guessed why she was so sorry, she no longer pitied Ler.

Jane went to the picaic herself, and she looked her best; but some chance occurrence kept Clarence Barton away. and, so far as she was concerned, the day was a failure. Neither did she see him again that week, and someone told her he had left home on business. Still, that was better than what might have been, and Jane waited hopefully.

At the end of the week, came a letter from Ruth.

"Dear Jane (it ran). "You'll be so glad to know that nothing was the matter at home. They did not telegraph for me at all. It was some mistake, I suppose. I should have come back for the picnic, only I had used all my pocket money, and couldn't. And now I have such a very strange thing to tell you-so strange, I hardly have words for it. When your father put me into the train, and went away. I felt so lonely and so sad, that I think I was crying a little, when someone touched me on the arm, and said: 'Miss Ruth.' It was Mr. Jane Bell spoke as "him," and Ruth | Barton. I met Mr. Bell just now, and he told me of your journey, and the cause of it. I'm sorry, he said.

"Then he sat beside me, and said kind things, as all the rest did; but I could not persuade myself that nothing had happened, and I know he saw how alarmed I was and then suddenly, he learned towards me, and said-Oh, couldn't have gone to-morrow if it had Jane! I can't tell you what, exactly; but something about my grief being his, and asking me to let him help me to bear it—and it was so sudden and so strange. But I knew by the way his words strengthened me, that I liked him better than I was aware of.

"And, Jane, dear, we understand each other; and he went with me to the end of my journey, and there, as I told you, I found all was well. Oh. Oh, Jane, I am so happy, and mother married very soon. It seems like a dream, even while I write it. You knew I never thought he would fall in love with a plain little country girl like myself.

"Tell all to your mother. She will be so pleased. And write soon to your affectionate cousin. "Ruth."

Jane tore the letter into bits, and danced on them. But that did no good. Clarence Barton was lost, and her telegram had only helped to lose him!

Funny Names.

"Talk about funny nomenclature," said a Cincinnati man to a Times reporter, "I've a list of names that I copied from signs in London as I rode down Oxford street, the Old City road and Islington that I don't believe can be duplicated anywhere in the world. For example, I saw over one door, A. Horsely Bossy, veterinary surgeon. Over one door I saw the name of a tailor firm, Thunder & Co. Directly opposite was another firm engaged in ness of the brigands and gradually the same business with the other closing them in the toils. handle to the by-word. It was J. B. Blazes. Two bakers carry on a business under the name of Cakebread & Flowerdew. A prominent stationer bears the name of Longman Strongitharm, and I never knew whether he had a good deal of muscle or not. Licquerish & Laro are Islington undertakers, while Goozee & Co. carry on a livery business. Huggins & Gush is the name perched over a millinery establishment, and T. Over was running a little advertising sheet. Buzzard & Son run a famous restaurant. Among a lot of other names I copied were C. Heavens, Courage & Co., Edward Truelove, Miss Chick, dressmaker; J. White Hawles, Success Bros., Pearce & Plenty, Marriage & Co., Holyland, Floor & Heale. Widowson & Veale, Bumpus & Co., Baldwillie Treer, Giddy & Giddy."

Care of the Hair.

The hair, like every other portion of the human frame, if uncared for will go to waste and eventually drop out. This is due to a splitting of the ends of the hair, so that the interior oil duct which nourishes the hair, is exposed, and the natural nourishment of the hair runs to waste, overflows upon the head, forming dandruff, which impedes the growth of the hair just as much as the tares among wheat.

The best means to prevent this is a strengthening of the hair, and this can easily be accomplished by frequent cutting and the use of salt and water and vaseline. Have you ever noticed what bushy hair sea-faring men have? Did you ever see a bald sailor? It is because their head is in constant contact with the invigorating salt air, and is often wet with salt water. A good tonic of salt water should contain a teaspoonful of salt to a tumbler of water, and should be applied to the hair two or three times a week. The effect at the end of a month will be surprising.

Bad Temper. Many people consider that bad temper" is entirely voluntary on the part of the person who displays it. As a matter of fact, it is often to a very great extent involuntary, and no one is more angry at it than the bad tempered person himself. Of course. every one, whether he was born with a bad temper or has acquired one from habit, or has been visited with one as a result of disease or injury, should at least try to control it. But his friends should also bear in mind that bad temper may be, and often is, an affliction to be sympathized with, not an offense to be punished.

Not Such Rare Birds.

"I see," said the jester, looking up from his newspaper, 'that the red crows are almost extinct."

"Red crows!" exclaimed the ornithologist. "I never heard of such things before, and I flatter myself that I know something about birds."

"I don't mean birds," said the jester, And when Jane saw in Ruth's eyes as he started for the door. "I mean that she was so sorry to lose the pic- Crow Indians."-Pittsburg Dispatch.

Fancy an American lady of wealth and refinement to be traveling in Asia Minor, on the way, perhaps, to the ruins of Ephesus. It is toward evening, and the inclosing mountains cast cool shadows over the road. The scene is, indeed, romantic. Tranquility reigns over the landscape; no sound is heard but the tinkle of the sheep-bells, the twittering of birds, or the hoot of hermit owls, and sometimes the click of a horse's hoof as the travelers slowly wend up the mountain toward the heart of a ravine. Turning in the saddle one may see in the distance the faint blue expanse of the Egean sea flecked with white sails.

Suddenly, without warning, a voice issues with startling sharpness from the ticket, crying: "Halt, on your lives!" The gentlemen of the party instantly draw their revolver, peering into the bushes to find something to shoot. But the muleteers urged them in the most frantic tones on no account to draw trigger or they will be massacred on the spot, as they are covered by the rifles of a band of brigands. The voice from the thicket is again heard summoning the party to surrenup and no harm will come to them. At the same momeut a tall fellow issues from the ambush, dressed in a manner sufficiently gorgeous and picturesque to please the fancy of the most romantic graduate of Vassar. He carries a mus-ket and is followed by a band of a dozen brigands scarely less picturesque that he. They surround the party, seize the bridles of the horses, and receive the firearms of the travelers, who yield them with visible reluc-

A certain foreign consul did not get off so easily. His chiffick or farm was on the outskirts of the village. Accompanied by his two children he was standing at the rear gate with a fowling-piece. As if springing from the earth four bold, handsome, but unmasked brigands gathered him in, as it were, and after giving directions to his mails. Excepting on one or two minaboy as to how to reach them made off to their mountain den at a smart run. The tidings struck the town like lightning out of a clear sky. In the meantime, the victim of this high-handed proceeding was not so badly treated. His suffering was chiefly on account of his family; he was too well aware how keen their anxiety must be. Some of these brigands or klefts, as they are called, are men of prodigious strength, small in waist, but lithe. wiry, and muscular to a degree. I heard of one kleft, a chieftain, who when seated on the ground by the camp-fire would stretch out his arm and order one of his men to step on the open palm. Thus he would hold him a few seconds at arms-length, and then gradually lift and toss him forward like an orange. The klefts are almost invariably Greeks: occasionally a Maltese or an Italian is found among them. But they are all Christians, and good Christians at that. They fast with the utmost strictness in Lent and on fast days. A drop of human blood from a victim spurting on their lips on a fast day would give them severe twinges of the conscience. From time to time they go carefully disguised to church and confess with the solemnity of crusaders engaged in fighting for the holy sepulcher. Toward Mohammedans they exhibit especial horror. They do not even condescend to take paramours from the hated followers of the prophet.

But while we are discussing the virtues and habits of the Levantine brigand our captive in the mountains has been smoking innumerable cigarettes of Stamboulee tobacco in order to soothe his growing impatience. As the time approached when the messenger with the ransom was expected great restlessness and intense watchfulness was exhibited by the troops. The chief detailed two brawny fellows guard the prisoner, knife hand, with orders to stab him to the heart at the first sign of an attempt at rescue. At various preconcerted points other brigands were distributed to guide the messenger with

AMONG THE BRIGANDS. he arrived with his well-laden donkey at the first point he made a signal as directed; this was answered by a return signal from behind a rock and and an der to proceed in a certain direction until he heard a sheep bleat three times. On hearing that signal the messenger stopped, made a prearranged reply, and was directed to go on until he should hear the cawing of a crow, thrice repeated; he would then receive further directions. In this mysterious manner the messenger finally arrived in the presence of the robber chieftain himself, who was holding a cocked re-volver in his hand, alertness in his mien, and a quick, fierce, yet anxious, look in his eye, as if suspicious of treachery. The messenger was at once conducted into the cave; on his stating that he had brought the full amount of the ransom demanded he was handed a flask, or rather a gourd, containing spirits. After saying, "with your permission," the messenger took a somewhat copious draught of strong waters, and then the money was carefully counted; the amount being found correct the chief turned to his prisoner > and respectfully said: "Sir, you are at liberty to go when you please. Two of my palikaris will attend you to the foot of the mountain, after you have solemnly pledged your word as a gentleman that you will never give any one a single clew to the whereabouts of our cave. A day's delay would have cost you an ear. On the fifth day we should have been

But one of the most romantic phase of the brigand's venturesom career in Turkey, and also, although more rarely, in Persia, is the capture of the ture railways in Turkey, the postal service in the interior of these countries is still largely dependent on postcarriers, who dash across the lonely roads on horseback. The men employed in this arduous service must be ing them in a cordon around the fast- hardy, intelligent, and brave.

A BUDDHIST REVIVAL Over 500,000,000 Believers on the Face of the Earth.

The Buddhist congress soon to be held in Paris, says a letter from Paris to the New York World, attracts attention to this remarkable religion. The congress is to have the importance of the great ecumenical council convoked by Pius IX. twenty years ago. Buddhist delegates are to come from all parts of the world, and intense is the interest manifested in Paris. Five hundred million people on this globe are Buddhists, and, although Buddhism in Europe is confined to great minds, in France alone there are about 30,000 Buddhists. It is not generally known that Richard Wagner was a fervent Buddhist. But the European thinkers do not practice the doctrine of Buddhism. That is why the young Viennese student Udo Halsmeyer has caused such consternation in the church. He is ascetic, fasts, or eats only fruits and vegetables, envelops himself in a hempen bag, and already treats with indifference physical suffering. Continuing in this manner he would soon be the incarnation of Buddha, and the authorities talk of expulsion from the university for fear of his influence on the other students. The practice of Buddhism cultivates a sixth sense that in non-believers is latent. By this sense is foretold good or bad fortune and the meditation that calls out this sense is always physical, phseyological, and physiological. Physically the body must obey the mind, psychologically all human organic forces must be concentrated on this sixth sense intuition, and physiologically respiration must be regulated to control the expenditure of vital force. As soon as this sixth sense is acquired the Buddhiists are capable of knowing nature's secrets and of producing phenomena that seem supernatural, but are in reality the manifestation of forces very natural but not yet understood. Buddhism respects everything that has life, and Buddhists believe in reincarnation, not in metempsychosis.

The Buddhist believe that if a rich man sin after death he enjoys a certain repose to repay him for the sufferings in this life, but obliged to return on this or another planet, where his spirit enters the body of some miserable person, and the more guilty he has been in the previous existence the less chance he has in this. In the same way a person who has led a righteous life in a previous existence is in this reincarnated in the body of a rich person.

Morally and intellectually Buddha surpassed all men, and his name means illuminated, or perfect wisdom. Who can tell? Perhaps Parisians, enervated by the struggle of modern existence, will lock with longing toward the fascinating delights of Nirvana and adopt a religion taught by the sage of Kapilawastu many, many centuries before the Christian era.

A Thrilling Spectacle.

G. A. R., Deming, N. M.

The Decoration day sensation in Georgia is the speech of Major J. F. Hanson, an ex-Confederate soldier at Andersonville. The spectacle of a man who wore the gray making an oration over the graves of dead Union soldiers is one to be remembered. Major Hanson's address was an elabin full sympathy with the soldiers who fought to preserve the Union or could take part in exercises of this nature. But he said: · I and my brethren of the South have learned much since Appomattox. We no longer regard men who fought to preserve the Union which we sought to destroy or to destroy the Confederacy which we sought to esfriends, our benefactors and our brethren. In the course of his remarks Maj.

Hanson said of the negro: kept pure. The great majority of Southern white men want honest elections, but they fear negro domination. Through this fear they have become politically enslaved. The negro will never dominate the Anglo-Saxon in the South or anywhere else. He may be elected from a few counties to the Legislatures of the Southern States and from a few districts to Congress; better this than the rule of fraud through which intolerant, ignorant and corrupt white politicians enslave white men. It is best for the negro that white men should rule, but white men must rule by law in the interest of justice. When this is done both races will divide and the South will take its place in the Union by the side of other sections.

Vetoed the Bill.

The Governor of Michigan has vetced the bill appropriating $30,000 aid to the city of Detroit in entertaining the National Encampment in that city next August. At first $50,000 was asked for, and finding this impossible to get, the sum named in the bill was made $30,000, but after some weeks of haggling this was refused, the Copperheads and stay-at-homes proving too strong for the veterans. This is very discreditable to the great soldier State of Michigan, which sent into the army one fighting man for every eight people in her borders, and there was not a bad nor even a poor regiment in the 50 which she contributed to the defense of the Nation. Every regiment was a good representative of the splendid citizenship of the State. After the magnificent hospitality of the States of Colorado, Minnesota, Maine, California, Missouri, Ohio, Wisconsin and Massachusetts, to the Grand Army of the Republic, when it assembled within their borders, the conduct of the Michigan Legislature is exceedingly shabby. The editors of the Detroit Journal write the Nationa Tribune:

The action of our State Legislature is shameful, but the city and citizens of Detroit will not allow the local committee to lack for funds.

We readily accept this. The people of Detroit are among the most enarticle passed safely through three en- terprising and public spirited in the counters, and the sub-editor took the Nation. They have built up on the New York Commandery of the Loyal Legion.

The annual election of officers of the New York Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion took place on Wehnesday evening, May 6. The following were the officers elected: Commander, Maj-Gen Wager Swayne; S. V. C., Capt. Lester A. Beardslee, of the navy; J. V. C., Gen Thomas H. Hubbard; Recorder, Paymaster George de F. Barton, of the navy; Register, Maj Thomas B. Odell; Treasurer, Paymaster Allen S. Apgar, of the navy; Chancellor, Lieut-Col Charles A. Swift; Chaplain, Thomas Drumm; Council, Majs J. George Woolsey, Co. B, 179th N. Y., West Terry, Pa., corrects Comrade Coggswell, 11th N. H., who "corrected" the mistake of Adam Herringer, 39th N. J., in stating that his regiment belonged to the Second Brigade, Second Division, Ninth Corps. Comrade Coggswell is mistaken when he says that the 178th and 86th N. Y. were taken in that brigade. for it was the 179th and 186th N. Y. that belonged to the Second Brigade, Second Division, Ninth Corps.

Basil McMasters, Co. H. 4th Ind. Streator, Ill., desires to freshen the memory of Comrade Wm. Robertson, of Caney, Kas. The 2d Ind. Cav. belonged to the 2d Brigade of McCook's Division. The brigade was composed of the 4th and 2d Ind. Cav., 4th and 7th Ky. Cav., and 1st Wis. Cav. commanded by Colonel O. S. Lagrange and as the 2d Ind. Cav. did not belong to the First Brigade on the Wilson raid, Captain Walden could hardly speak of the regiment, he being with the lost brigade. The 2d Ind. Cav. did good work on the Wilson raid, charging the fort at West Point, Ga. They also did good fighting in other places under their gallant commander, Captain R. Hill, who lost a leg in the fight at West Point, and who is now a distinguished citizen of Indiana. He would like to ask if any of the comrades know of a man by the name of Elias McMasters, last heard from at Pao a, Kan., in 1867. He is about 70 years of age, and is the writer's father.

THE FARM AND HOME.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE DRAFT OF FARM WAGONS.

It Will Be a Good Thing for Every Farmer to Bear These Points in Mind-Various Notes-Household Hints for the Day.

Draft of Wagons. Prof. Sanborn, of the Utah agricultural experiment station, has made some interesting tests by means of the dynamometer, from which the following conclusions have been reached regarding the draft of wagons: 1. When the load was placed over the hind wheels it drew 10 per cent easier than when it was placed over the front wheels. 2. The hind wheels drew 23.3 per cent over an obstacle three inches lukewarm water. Melt the grease and higher than the front wheels. This let it get lukewarm; then turn the diswas when attachment of the force was directly applied to each set of wheels. 3. The hind wheels when drawn over an obstacle with the usual hitch drew only 1.2 per cent easier than the fore wheels. 4. When the ends of the wagon were reversed and the draft was applied directly to the hind wheels it drew nearly 5 per cent easier. 5. The incline of the reach towards the front wheels, as now put in, causes the throw a heavy piece of carpet over it. wagon to draw harder than it should. Let it stand four days, when you can 6. Lowering the reach or the point of application of force on the kind wheels materially decreases the draft; therefore the reach should run horithe rear of the front wheels. 7. Higher front wheels will reduce draft. 8. The change of the angle of draft as applied from the end of the pole varied the draft very markedly, and the relation of the draft of the front to the rear wheels. 9. A long hitch er such a hitch as occurs when lead horses are used, increases draft on account of the angle of the hitch. 10. Loose burrs with one-half or more inches play lessen the draft of the load by 4.5 per cent. 11. Little difference was found beneath the draft of three wagons. 12. Draft varied with the varieties of grease used from nothing to 17 per cent, lard proving the best or practically the same as a manufactured axle grease and but a little better than cylinder oil. 13. The draft of varying roads and condition of roads varied very markedly, being between the best and the poorest classes of local roads nearly 300 per cent in difference. In this trial neither the best nor the poorest roads were available, or only such as are found in country towns. 14. There is a decided opportunity for improvement in our wagons.

Microbes in Agriculture.

The somewhat recent discovery and demonstration that the fertility of the soil is due to the presence in it of living germs or creatures, and that they are active only when there are due proportions of certain vegetable and mineral substances, goes far toward the solution of problems in agricultural practice for which there has been heretofore no sufficient one. Why old gardens should be manure-sick after years of cultivation; why land should become clover-sick, dandelion-sick, plaintain-sick, bull-thistle-sick, and sick of everything too long grown upon it, has never been so nearly clearly understood as now. It appears as if the work of preparing food for each separate plant was committed to one form of these microscopic creatures, and that for success in this work there must be certain essential mineral and vegetable elements; and, just as certain microbes which produce scarlet fever, whooping cough, and other germ diseases require a special medium to develop and work in, and after that the medium becomes to them sterilized, so the soil is sterile for a time after years of clover, plantain, dandelion, bull thistle, etc., etc., but subsequently recovers. As for manuresick, it is simply the excess of vegetable matter and perhaps nitrogen, with a deficiency of the proper mineral substances that prevents the successful efforts of the little creatures to prepare the choice food for delicate vegetable organization. That is, the manure-sick gardens often produce the hardier and coaser vegetables, but fail with the others. But if lands may become sterile from an excess of manure, they may as well from an excess of any of the essential mineral substances, and for a good illustration of the latter, I quote the fact that some cotton lands of the South have been rendered almost wholly barren by too liberal and too long-continued application of guano and other potash and phosphate fertilizers.-Country Gen-

Acorn Hogs.

There seems to be a general misunderstanding among hog producers as to the quality of an acorn hog, and many a shipper has thought himself robbed when shipping acorn hogs that had been put on grain for a month or two on finding that he was paid the price of soft hogs when he thought he ought to get the market price of hard.

The facts of the case are simply these: you cannot make hard pork out of a hog that has been fed on acorns without you allow him to get poor before you feed grain. The reason of this is that any fat that is put on by acorns will be always soft, and the grain fat will be underneath it and entirely separate. The soft fat of the acerns will class the hogs as soft. There is no money in feeding acorns to hogs, as soft hogs are always hard to sell and bring a very low price.

Growing Locust Fence Posts.

planting locust trees on them, to be cut every few years when large enough for fence posts. After once setting, a locust grove renews itself, sprouting good for fuel, and a locust plot of less than an acre thus in fuel and fence material gives as good profit for the labor required as do any farm crops. It is at least a variation of farm practice that many farmers might try with advantage.

Making Soap.

A valuable recipe that I gave some years ago for making soap is asked for by an old subscriber, and as so many new ones have come to us. I know they will like to try it also.

Take one can of concentrated potash to four pounds of good, clear grease. I bought beef tallow for the purpose, as I had no accumulation of fat, as some do who use a great deal of pork. If you have that kind of grease, it must carefully be tried out and strained. Dissolve the potash in two gallons of solved potash into the grease, being careful not to lean over it, as very strong fumes arise from it, and remember the potash must be poured into the grease. No boiling is necessary. Stir thoroughly for fifteen minutes, away from the stove.

Line a shallow, wooden box with old muslin, and pour the mixture into it; set in a warm place and cover tight; cut it into cakes and set away to dry. If a perfume is desired, an ounce of any favorite odor will make it quite nice enough for toilet use. We used zontally or on an upward incline from it to the exclusion of any other soap for a long time, both for toilet and kitchen use.

It is rarely profitable for the farmer to attempt to keep too many varieties of poultry. Leghorns are small, but they are one of the very best breeds for eggs.

Hints to Housekeepers.

Cow tails bleached and made into tassels are now used on the loopings of heavy portieres.

The skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy for a boil. Carefully peel it, wet, and apply to the boil; it draws out the matter and relieves soreness. Large perforated and small, plain wooden spoons are needed in dessert making. On no account should butter be creamed, fruit juices measured, or ream beaten with an iron spoon. Bathing the nose with water in high there has been put a few drops of camphor is said to whiten it. But as redness of the nose usually results from stomach trouble, it would be wise to search for the cause and get rid of before you apply external remedies.

The strained juice of a basket of berries added to a quart of whipped cream makes a delicious syllabub or sauce for an iced rice or any other delicate cold pudding. Then there are strawberry mousses, sponges and a variety of dishes that require only a basket of berries.

Neuralgia in the face has been cured by applying a mustard plaster to the elbow. For neuralgia in the head, apply the plaster to the back of the neck. The reason for this is that mustard is said to touch the nerves the moment it begins to draw or burn, and to be of most use must be applied to the nerve centres, or directly over the place where it will touch the affected nerve most quickly.

An excellent and simple wash to keep the hands white and smooth after the occasional dish-washing which comes to almost all housekeepers is equal parts of vinegar and water. It is a good plan to keep a bottle of it prepared and standing in the kitchen closet. Wash the handa first thoroughly in warm water, wipe them dry. and rinse thoroughly in the mixture. The same preparation is good to remove stains from the hands. The only way to keep furs absolutely safe is to shake them out nicely just as soon es it is warm enough to dispense with them and inclose in perfectly clean, tight bags. There are hopes of introducing the magic lantern as a means of signaling at sea. When so used the lantern will be called the "Lucigraph." It will have slides in the shape of stencil plates, each with a letter or figure cut in it. The screen is a flag stretched in a conspicuous part of the ship, on which the letter of the slide is projected. By the help of glasses the distant ship reads the letters.

Which will you have, sickness, suffering and despair, or health, strength, and spirit? You can take your choice. All chronic diseases and derangements peculiar to women are permanently cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It restores the female functions to healthy action. It removes the obstructions and suppressions which cause trouble and misery. For periodical pains, internal inflammation, ulceration and kindred ailments, it is a positive remedy. The system is invigorated, the blood enriched, digestion improved, melancholy and nervousness dispelled. It's a legitimate medicine, the only one that's guaranteed to give satisfaction in the cure of all "female complaints."

The pictures of Washington in his old age seem to caricature the lower part of his face. Even that magnificent portrait of Stuart's, which hangs in the East Room of the White House, pictures the mouth and chin as if, when the great General sat for the artist, he had just put in each cheek a fresh supply of that comfort which is con-traband to habits of cleanliness and good taste. The truth about this expression in these likenesses of Washington is, that at a lare period in life he was obliged to use false teeth, and in those carly days the science of dentistry was yet in its incipiency and the deatist who accommodated Washington, did as best he could. The result was a complete mal-adaption of the artificial denture, as well as an abnormal conformation of a once noble face. If, as the saying goes that "the face is the mirror of the soul," why not, kind reader, if you are obliged to wear artificial teeth, do you not request that the preservation of your natural features be retained? When you call at Dr. Cigrand's Dental Office, at corner North and Milwaukee avenues. for artificial teeth, please bring with you a photograph of yourself showing how you appeared before you lost the pearls of your month. The doctor makes a specialty of difficult operations, and we kindly ask our readers to give him a call and hear his reasonable terms for first class dental work
