WEDDING.

Edward H. Sadt and Miss Laura May Church were united in Marriage, Oct. 10th.

Wednesday, evening, Oct. 10 1894, Miss Laura May Church and Edward H. Sadt were united in marriage by Rev. Robert Bailey, at the home of the brides, at Barrington Center.

The wedding march (played by Miss Carrie E. Kingsley) began at 8 o'clock and the bridal party entered the rooms, which were nicely decorated with autumn boughs, etc. After the marriage ceremony was performed and the congratulations given the guests were ushered into the dining-room to partake of the dainties that were awaiting them.

The brides' maid was the brides' sister Miss Addie, and the best man was the grooms' brother Frank. The bride was dressed in cream Henrietta, and carried a bouquet of white roses.

The gifts were numerous and useful, and will be appreciated by the recipient's.

The young couple left Barrington Thursday noon for Milwaukee, Wis., to visit relatives of the groom, Mr. Loewe and family.

The NEWS extends its best wishes to the happy couple.

Hits Them Hard.

The Federal grand jury now in session at Madison, Wis., has indicted sixty persons, a number of whom are said to have national reputations, for connection with fraudulent land entries and swindles at Ashland, by which millions of dollars worth of pine lands were stolen from the government. It is high time that Uncle Sam was protecting his interest in the timber lands. The reckless deforesting of the country should be summarily stopped.

THE TWINS.

The man and his apple tree
Are verging close on eighty-three.
'Twas planted there when he was two,
And almost side by side they grew.
How straight and strong they were at eight,
One leafy, one with curly pate;
How fine at twenty, how alive
And prosperous at twenty-five.
"What health and grace in every limb,"
Was said of it—was said of him.

Then when he blushed a marriage groom
The tree out-vied the bride in bloom:
And in the after years there played
Within its ample sweep of shade,
A little child with cheeks as red
As had the apples overhead.
Her father called the tree his twin,
And surely it was next of kin.

The best of life came to the twin,
The beauty of the stars, the rain,
Soft-stepping, and the liquid notes
That overflow from feathered throats.
Unto the soul that selfish strives
Was borne the fragrance of their lives,
And anxious folk with brow down bent
Bathed in their dewy-cool content.
They held their heads up in the storm,
And glided when the wind was warm;
Their shadows lay but at their feet,
And all of life above was sweet.

And now that they are eighty-three,
They're almost as they used to be!
The blossoms are as pink and white,
The old man's heart as pure and light.
The apples—fragrant balls of flame—
Are looking, tasting, just the same.
And just the same his uttered thoughts,
Of mirth and wisdom quaintly wrought.
Through all the years they've kept their truth,
Their strength, and that sweet look of youth.

POKER JOE'S BLUFF.

He Won It, But the Sheriff Had Him on a Show-Down.

The howling wind had sung its dismal song through the shorn limbs of the quaking asp trees on the mountains during the entire day, spent its force and died with the gathering of the dark clouds that ushered in the dreary night. With the hushing of the wind a heavy fall of snow came on, threatening to blockade the roads and shut in the little mining camp from the outside world. The awful stillness of the night was depressing, but afforded relief from the terrors of the day.

The well-dressed gamblers and roughly-clad miners gathered in the barroom of the Lake City hotel, spoke in low tones over their cards and liquor, choosing their language in deference to the presence of the ladies of the house, who had fled in fear of the storm to seek that association with men, which, to the female mind in distress, is equivalent to protection. The ticking of the dirty-faced clock over the back bar, the rattle of chips in the nervous fingers of the players, and the frequent clatter of the barkeeper's shoe heels on the uncovered floor as he served his patrons at the gambling table, were the only sounds that disturbed the quiet of the place.

Maj. Downey, editor of the Lake City Register, and Clare Smith, high sheriff of the county, entertained the ladies with a discussion of the mysterious murder of Mrs. Mary Josephus, committed in Denver on Sunday night, discovered by the police on Tuesday night, and detailed in the daily papers of Wednesday morning, which were being read on Thursday night in several of the mining camps of the San Juan district. The interest in the crime, so far as the mining camps were concerned, was centered in the opinion expressed by the Denver papers that the murderer was the husband of the victim—a migratory gambler, whose residence might be in any of the dozen camps or towns of that district. The police, with expressions of contempt for the opinions of the reporters, maintained a contrary view and indulged in theories without submitting any possible clue to a solution of the mystery.

Sheriff Smith opened the discussion with the sweeping assertion that the Denver reporters possessed a keener perception of the motives and a clearer comprehension of the methods of criminals than the combined Denver police and detective departments, with all their boasted reputation, were capable of. It was a matter of surprise to the ladies that the major, being a newspaper man, should take issue with the sheriff on this proposition; but the major was no more a partisan of the city press than was the sheriff a believer in the infallibility of the police.

Sheriff Smith expressed the opinion that organized police departments depend too largely on an assumed knowledge of the habits of criminals, while reporters grasp the original possibilities of crime. He was convinced from his own limited experience, through extended observation in the detection of criminals, that murderers, unlike suicides, are originators, not imitators. And this conviction, applied to the case under discussion, led him to the conclusion that the press opinions of the motive and method of the murderer contained the elements of probability, while the theories advanced by the police were beyond the bounds of reason.

"Then you agree with the reporters," said the major, with a rising inflection of doubt, "that the incidents of the crime are strongly suggestive of the probability that it was committed by the woman's husband, who deserted her several years ago?"

"I certainly do," replied the sheriff, "and am convinced that the motive contemplated both revenge and robbery, while the method employed was the result of long and patient deliberation, which involved a knowledge of the woman's habits and possessions that could not have been acquired by any other than her husband, who, since deserting his wife and two children—one of whom was absent at the time of the murder—has no doubt been living within the state. That he is a resident of this section of the state is by no means improbable. For instance, how many men are there in this room whose real name and past history are known to you?"

The major admitted that there was only one of whom he could speak with any degree of assurance, and that one he was proud to say was himself. He further admitted the possibility, if not the probability, that the murderer of Mrs. Mary Josephus might then be enjoying the shelter of the Lake City hotel or sweltering under the broiling sun of an Arizona desert, according to his preference for climate.

One of the ladies ventured to ask the sheriff if he really entertained the suspicion that the murderer was at that moment present in the room. She was somewhat relieved of a vague horror that crept over her when Sheriff Smith replied that he had not yet "spotted" anyone of whom he could entertain such a suspicion.

The major, having failed of even the opportunity to impress the ladies with his proposed defense of the police theories—and inwardly agreeing with the sheriff—retired to the faro-table and placed a two-bit piece on the high card, repeating the play until it had produced enough of its kind to enable him to purchase a stack of white chips at the regular price of two dollars. Then the major sat down to the game, which he never indulged in with any other motive than whiling away the dreary winter nights. Sheriff Smith, having recently become possessed of an exceedingly large official fee, felt justified in indulging in the more expensive game of draw-poker. One of the younger ladies, having tired of the revolting details of the murder story, relinquished her paper to another, and, being less timid than her companions, ventured near the faro-table. She became so deeply interested in studying the game that her sentiment against gambling was considerably softened by the time that period of the play designated as "calling the turn" was reached. In her enthusiasm she leaned over one end of the "lay-out" and placed a dollar on the king, drawing it toward the queen. She thus indicated, as she saw other players do, the order in which she was willing to wager her money the bottom cards in the deal-box would come out. The other ladies, being duly shocked by the boldness of the novice, shrugged their timid shoulders and, hitching their chairs nearer to the big box-stove, fastened their eyes more intently on their newspapers. Several of the players, who had entertained an opposite opinion of the position of the cards, suddenly shifted their bets to follow the venturesome young woman, whom they accepted as their mascot. The turn was made during an almost breathless silence. The barkeeper paused in the center of the room with a tray full of refreshments. The rattle of chips ceased. The clock for once seemed to hold the monopoly of disturbance.

The king-queen had won. A shout of approbation of the girl's judgment broke upon the stillness of the room, affording Mr. Brick Geary, the genial red-haired dealer, an opportunity to remark to the man in the look-out chair—without being overheard by others—that women faro-players were always a "hoodoo" to his game.

This burst of enthusiasm on the part of the faro players failed to produce a ripple of concern upon the sober countenances of the men who occupied chairs at the short-card table. Their sphynx-like attitude and strict attention to the business in hand furnished incontrovertible proof of the assertion that nothing short of the presence of death or the necessity for the indulgence in deadly combat could disturb a frontier poker game.

The young woman who, by her bold play, had created a sensation among the faro players and shocked her female companions, regretted her performance, and, feeling a hot flush creeping across her temples, hastily arose and moved to the door. Through the glass of the upper half of the door she could see the soft snow falling gently to the earth. She pressed her burning forehead against the cool glass, and, seeking to shut out of hearing any further murmurs of approval from the men or chance words of disapproval from her friends, placed the palms of her hands to her ears. In doing this she cast a shadow on the glass, thus aiding her exterior view. The men at the faro bank had resumed their play. The rattle of chips and the ticking of the clock echoed through the room; the barkeeper clattered about; the routine of the place was resumed.

The unhappy young woman stood like a statue of penance, the curved lines of her handsome figure marked in strong, dark outline against the door. She was of artistic mold—tall, lithe and graceful, erect and silent—a model for a sculptor. Instantly a score of eyes were turned upon her as if by some common instinct; each person so attracted had felt the inspiration of her presence and discovered the artistic beauty of her pose.

Almost simultaneously the company was startled by a scream, half of pity, half of terror. The woman shrank back and, without turning her face from the door or uttering another sound, pointed with the straightened forefinger of her left hand toward the glass, while her right hand covered her eyes, as if she would shut out some unwelcome sight. She stood there speechless while the men opened the door and lifted the half-frozen and unconscious form of a girl, some seventeen years of age, into the room. The quiet barroom was instantly the scene of most pathetic excitement. Rough hands guided by tender hearts placed the wayfarer on an improvised bed of coats and shawls that was arranged hastily on a pool-table, while the ladies, with a keen sense of the requirements, bent their energies to restoring the girl to consciousness and physical comfort. They were soon rewarded by a sensible expression of appreciation of their kind offices.

Interest in the stranger, who was still too weak to account for her presence there and had fallen into a deep sleep, had taken such firm hold on the men that the faro bank was deserted and the poker game was twice interrupted. This interruption was due to the apparently careless playing of Sheriff Smith, whose official eye had been distracted from the game by the appearance of a peculiar pallor on the face of Poker Joe since the features of the strange girl had been exposed to the view of the persons present. The sheriff was evidently permitting his mind an indulgence in something quite foreign to the game of poker. The fact that, while Poker Joe's face had assumed such an unnatural hue, his hand was as steady as a clock, gave the sheriff still more uneasiness. Mr. Brick Geary, finding his occupation at dealing faro gone, had turned over his deal-box, transferred the bank roll to his pocket, and, after satisfying himself by careful scrutiny of the sleeping girl's face that she was not on his list of acquaintances, walked over to the poker table, and, in accordance with the ethics of that game, asked the privilege of "sitting in." Poker Joe, with an effort at such vulgar sarcasm as is indulged in by men of his class, suggested that, as there were already five "parties" in the game, Mr. Geary might perhaps be contented with playing Sheriff Smith's hand until that gentleman should have time to recover from a fit of nervousness that had overtaken him.

"Clare seems more interested in that maverick girl than in this game of draw," he added with a sneer, as the sheriff, acting upon the gambler's suggestion, arose to relinquish his seat to the faro dealer.

This last remark gave the sheriff a desired opportunity to test his suspicions.

"You have my permission," he said, coolly, "to keep your mouth shut now until I call on you to say something."

Poker Joe pushed back his chair angrily, turned his cards down with his left hand, and dropped his right to the waistband of his trousers, from which protruded the handle of a six-shooter, and spat his cigar to the floor. With that bullying air for which he was noted, he said:

"I don't know whether that calls to be official or unofficial; but I'll bet you three to one you don't win it—either way. You hear me!"

The sheriff stood facing him, and without expressing on his face the shadow of his thoughts, replied calmly: "I'm inclined to the opinion, Joe, that it'll be an official call when I make it, but there's no rush. Keep your seat for the present, and don't get nervous—and don't try to run any bluffs."

The gambler arose, white with rage, and shaking the long, slender index finger of his left hand under the nose of the sheriff, while his right hand rested firmly on the handle of his six-shooter, said angrily:

"I demand that whatever accusation you choose to make against me shall be made directly. I'll have none of your insinuations!"

It would have been very embarrassing for the sheriff to have been obliged to explain his suspicions at that minute. He had by some power of intuition connected Poker Joe with the strange girl, and immediately upon forming this suspicion his impressionable mind reverted to the Denver tragedy. It would have taxed the skill of an intellectual acrobat to reason, upon the mere suspicion of Poker Joe's relation to the girl, that he was in any manner connected with the murder. But Sheriff Smith was not reasoning; he was merely acting upon the impression that there was something unusual affecting the gambler. And this suspicion of an unusual affection of Poker Joe's mind impressed the sheriff with the notion that the gambler was guilty of some crime or misdemeanor.

He was about to express this opinion, but he was happily prevented, not by the belligerent attitude of Poker Joe, but through the more exciting incident of the arrival at that moment of Miles, the pony mail and expressman, from Silverton. Badly frozen and exhausted almost beyond the power of speech, he dropped into the most convenient chair and feebly demanded a drink of whisky. After drinking the liquor, he roused a little and stared vacantly about the room, until his eyes rested upon the poor waif lying on the pool-table.

"Praise God!" he exclaimed, and relapsed into a mental condition so annoying to those who stood about eager for some knowledge of the girl, which they felt he possessed, that the barkeeper suggested another drink, which Miles accepted without the slightest acknowledgment of the courtesy.

By and by he was sufficiently aroused to be able to swallow a third dram of whisky and relate a thrilling tale of his trip from Silverton with the girl. He told how he had lost the poor child within a mile of Lake City, and afterward found her horse, and then pushed on through the storm to get aid in searching for her. After submitting to a round of abuse by the company for undertaking to conduct the girl across the mountains in the face of the storm, which, they declared, must have been more severe at the Silverton end of the road, Miles begged permission to explain. It was reluctantly granted.

"The gal got a telegram from Denver to come home right away," he said, "'nd 's th' Silverton branch o' th' Rio Grande is blockaded at Durango, her aunt, what th' gal was visitin' at Silverton, begged me so hard to fetch her over here 'nd send her out by stage to th' station on th' main line 'at I couldn't refuse, nohow. Yo see," he faltered, glancing pityingly at the sleeping girl, "yo see, the gal's mother's dead—murdered Sunday night!"

A murmur of sympathy was expressed by the listeners. The sheriff turned his eager eyes upon the face of Poker Joe, who had returned to his seat at the poker-table. He had been apparently deaf to the story told by Miles, and though his face still bore a death-like hue, he proceeded with his card playing as coolly as if nothing unusual had occurred.

Sheriff Smith was puzzled. He would have staked his life on the accuracy of his suspicion, but there was not the shadow of real evidence upon which to base a reason for placing the man under arrest. There were incriminating circumstances, however, which, since the identity of the girl was made known, had imbedded the suspicion deeper and deeper into the mind of the sheriff; Poker Joe's arrival in town that evening, his display of large amounts of money occasioned by his heavy loss at cards, his agitation caused by the presence of the girl, and his excitement and anger at the words of the sheriff. But there was one thing absolutely requisite to the welding of these links of circumstance into a chain of evidence. It would be a disastrous venture for the sheriff if he should fail. He turned toward the pool table just as the barkeeper, who was industriously engaged behind the bar rubbing the glasses, looked up, and, for the first time, realized the significance of the sheriff's recent remarks to Poker Joe. The shock he received from this gleam of intelligence caused him to drop a thin glass to the floor. The ringing of the broken glass startled the entire company from the reverie into which they had fallen. The sleeping girl awoke, sprang to a sitting posture on the pool table, and with a frightened look, as if she had awakened from some terrible dream, turned suddenly toward Poker Joe. She uttered a shriek of recognition and fell back on the table, hiding her face.

The gambler arose instantly. He clutched at his belt nervously, and staggering to the door passed out.

Maj. Downey, who by this time had fully realized and comprehended the sheriff's suspicions, approached him and whispered:

"Quick, Clare, or he will escape!" "Wait," said the sheriff, calmly, laying a hand on the major's arm. "It may not be strictly legal, but it will be better for the girl. Wait." Then bending an ear toward the open door as if in anticipation, he motioned the excited persons surrounding him to maintain silence.

The snow had ceased falling. The outer atmosphere was cold and still. The moon ventured out from behind a shifting cloud and cast its glimmering light upon the shroud of snow.

The clear, keen ring of a pistol shot broke the mental tension of the listeners, who nodded significantly to each other. The girl on the cot started nervously and drew the covering more closely about her head and face.

And to this the college seal of Harvard is attached.

WIT AND WISDOM.

—Look within. Within is the fountain of good, and it will ever bubble up if thou wilt ever dig.—Marcus Aurelius Antonius.

—Safe Courage.—"Windmore is a great man in a fight, isn't he?" "Yes; he invariably distances all competitors."—Detroit Free Press.

—Yabsley—You fellows came home from your fishing trip empty-handed, didn't you? Mudge—Yes, our hands were empty.—Indianapolis Journal.

—Mr. Oldstyle—I don't think that a college education amounts to much. Mr. Sparcerod—Don't you? Well, you ought to foot my boy's bills and see.—N. Y. World.

—She (at the shore)—Do you know, I can always tell whether a man is married or not? He (on flirting bent)—Yes; but for heaven's sake, don't.—Boston Transcript.

—He (slightly rude)—I called because I thought you were out. She (sweetly)—Well, do you know. I thought I was out, too. The maid must have thought you were some one else.—Answers.

—Enough to Support.—She—I am afraid there is no hope. He—Eh! What did your father say when you told him that I wanted to marry you? She—He said he couldn't afford it.—N. Y. Weekly.

—Who is a true man? He who does the truth, and never holds a principle on which he is not prepared in any hour to act, and in any hour to risk the consequences of holding it.—Thomas Carlyle.

—Mrs. Younglove—I purchased some very tender beef to-day, dear; how do you prefer it? Mr. Younglove—Really, I don't know, love; but where I boarded that sort of beef was always rare.—Syracuse Post.

—She (meditatively)—I wonder how the expression "facing the music" ever came to be used as indicating courage? He—The man who originated it had probably sat through a Wagner concert.—Buffalo Courier.

—"Now," said the physician who is noted for his heavy charges, "I must take your temperature." "All right," responded the patient in a tone of utter resignation. "You've got about everything else I own.—Washington Star.

—Johnny Asker—Say, Paw; what's the difference between a visit and a visitation? His Pa—A visit, my son, is when we go to see your grandmother on your mother's side. "Yes, sir." "A visitation is when she comes to see us."—Buffalo Courier.

Do You hear the old Bay State? No changes in the Republican line this year. No parleying over commanders. Greenhalge and Wolcott, and by acclamation Senator Hoar drew the platform—American to the last nail.

AN American journalist who visited Bismarck recently says that the ex-Chancellor has aged very much in the last few months. He eats with difficulty, can hardly hold himself erect, and speaks only in a tone so low that it is hard to understand him.

WITH re-enforcements already ordered to the Asiatic station we, within a few weeks, have the stars and stripes floating over as many as eight war ships in Chinese waters. This force should protect our commercial interests and nerve our missionaries to tackle the heathen with renewed confidence.

MECCA was visited last year by between 250,000 and 300,000 pilgrims, a much larger number than usual, as the principal day of the pilgrimage happened to fall on Friday; 90,000 came by sea, of whom nearly 10,000 died of cholera, while of those who went by land, most of them from British India, 15,000 perished. The mortality was 10 per cent of all the pilgrims.

PEOPLE who imagine that Republicans in the campaign of 1894 would not attempt to hold the Democratic nose squarely on the protection grindstone were mistaken in their diagnosis. It is right there, and there will not be much nose left by the 6th of November.

The Assimilative Japs.

The Japanese have proved themselves to be as quick in preception of the modern ethics of war as in adoption of scientific methods. By paying for all supplies derived from Corea and by repression of plundering they have gained more of the sympathy of the people whose country is made a theater of war than is tendered to the Chinese, and they also have won the approval of all civilized nations. It is remarkable that a nation so lately regarded as semibarbarous and still held to be pagan should in the first great war that it has undertaken since being brought into close contact with western civilization, have adopted its morale, as well as its manners, of battle.

It is far too soon to predict the issue of the fierce strife between China and Japan. Inferior to Japan in enterprise and in readiness to assume the habits and to adopt the implements of scientific warfare, China is vastly the superior in numbers, in area, and in wealth. Nor is it to be forgotten that the Chinese are a stubborn race. Besides which the possible intervention of foreign powers is to be kept in mind. Yet it is certain that the sympathies of the World are with Japan, and that greater benefits to the human race are likely to follow her triumph than can be expected from the event of Chinese supremacy in Corea.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or a scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A pain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in which insures a cure in one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious, a lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the chest or side relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by A. L. Waller.

Co-operative business and manufacturing enterprises have a record of many failures in this country, but in England they appear to have been more uniformly successful. In twenty years ending with 1891 the number of co-operative societies in Great Britain increased from 746 to 1,656, their capital from $12,607,000 to $86,111,170, the annual sales from $47,318,000 to $244,608,485, and the annual profit from $3,331,000 to $523,571,490.

The Samoan islands are the natural habitat of the most diminutive species or variety of the genus bos now known to the naturalist. The average weight of the male of these liliputian cattle seldom exceeds 200 pounds, the average being no greater than 150 pounds. The females average about 100 pounds larger, are very "stocky" built, seldom being taller than a merino sheep. These dwarf cattle are nearly all the same color—reddish mouse color—marked with white.—Ex.

"Name some of the qualifications for a United States Senator," said a professor to a young man who was being examined for admission to college.

"He must be 30 years of age, be above sixteen Dutch standard, and be able to stand the polariscope test." replied the applicant.

He got marked 100.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Madge—Are you sure Dolly has accepted Fred?

Florence—Well, yes; Fred told me that she said she wouldn't marry the best man in the world.

Lady (sampling soup)—I don't like the odor of this. Have you no other?

Clerk—Oh, yes. Here is the "Sweet-By-and-By." It's a new one lately out.

Lady—Well, it may be sweet by and by, but it is simply frightful now.—Judge.

—Robbie—I'm going to be a pirat, likd Captain Kidd, when I grow up.

Charlie—I'm going to be a train robber, like Jesse James.

Johnnie—Well, I ain't. I'm going to keep a summer hotel, like Uncle Jake.—Truth.

Miss Wheeler—Lend you a quarter? Why, certainly.

Fan de Bicycle—Thanks, awfully. It was dreadfully stupid of me, but I came away this morning and left all my small change in my other bloomers.—Washington Star.

Mr. Oldbeau—Now, please dont give me that old chestnut about being a sister.—

Miss Vera Young—You mistake me sir; I was merely about to remark that I am willing to be a widow to you.—Truth.

She—Did you see Fanny at the hotel?

He—Of course.

She—What did she wear.

He—She wore me out trying to get a chance to propose to her.—Detroit Free Press.

Oldskidds—Do you believe that the sins of the father are visited upon the son?

Youngscadds—Certainly. Didn't the governor say he couldnt let me have that fifty this morning because he lost it on poker last night?—Buffalo Courier.

Shoopkeeper—I should like to do more for you, but business is not what it used to be. [Gives a dollar to the parish collector, who then retires.]

Friend—And is trade so very bad.

Shopkeeper—I didn't say so. On the contrary, its just booming. I said it was not what it used to be—see? But that's no reason I should give the church five dollars when I can stand them off with o. e.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symtom of croup is hoarsness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. Employees Have a Legal Right to Quit Work.

The Famous Northern Pacific Injunction Issued by Judge Jenkins Is in Part Overruled by Justice Harlan.

GIST OF THE OPINION.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Judge Jenkins' famous strike injunction has been overruled by the United States circuit court of appeals and the cause was remanded with directions to strike out from the restraining order of the court the clause which aroused the country when the order was issued and which resulted in the Boatner investigating committee of congress.

Their Legal Right.

The intervenors, representing the leading labor organizations of the country, asked that two sections of the injunction be eliminated. The court of appeals decided that no court could compel a man or a body of men from quitting individually or in a body the service of an employer. The court said that Judge Jenkins had exceeded his powers when he enjoined the employees of the receivers of the Northern Pacific Railroad company "from quitting the service of said receivers, with or without notice, so as to cripple the property or prevent or hinder the operation of said railroad."

Jenkins in Part Upheld.

It, however, held that the section should stand in which the men were prohibited "from combining and conspiring to quit, with or without notice,

DISSOLUTION THREATENED.

Invading Foes and Rebellious Subjects Bode Ill for China.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—China is threatened from within and without. The walled empire, with its 400,000,000 people and its history of thousands of years, seems in the throes of dissolution. The empire is threatened within by intrigues against the present Tartar dynasty, by plots to depose the emperor and place Prince Kang's son on the throne and by rebellions in the provinces. From without comes invading Japan, with an army of 30,000 in the province of Manchuria advancing on the capital; Moukden, and another army of 40,000 being conveyed across the gulf of Pechili to form a junction at Moukden with the other branch, and move on Pekin, the capital of the Chinese empire. Japan is bent on conquest and partition and Great Britain and Russia are seeking an international council to decide the fate of China.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch received here from Berlin says that it has been learned on high authority that the meeting of the British cabinet was called to discuss a proposal for combined action on the part of the powers to interfere and prevent the overthrow of the Chinese dynasty, which, it is claimed, would result in anarchy in the empire and the massacre of Europeans. One power, it is said, favored a compulsory settlement of the Chinese-Japanese dispute. The dispatch adds that Sir William Vernon Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer, supported this view of the action to be taken, but Prime Minister Rosebery and a majority of the cabinet believed that active interference would be more Death at Boston of Oliver Wendell Holmes, the Poet, Philosopher and Humorist—Sketch of His Career.

DR. HOLMES IS DEAD.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—Oliver Wendell Holmes, the famous poet, essayist, novelist, philosopher and scientist, died at his residence, 296 Beacon street, shortly before 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He passed peacefully away after an illness of short duration, the immediate cause of death being heart failure, the result of extreme old age. His son, Judge Oliver W. Holmes, Jr., the judge's wife and Dr. Charles P. Putnam, the family physician, were at the bedside. Dr. Holmes' death was not unlooked for, as he had been ailing for about ten days, or since he returned from Beverly, where his summer residence is located. The funeral will probably take place Wednesday from King's chapel. It will be private.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in Cambridge, Mass., August 29, 1809. His father was the celebrated Yale tutor, Rev. Abiel Holmes. He first enjoyed the common school advantages of New England boys, having as his companions in Cambridge Mass., Fuller, Richard Henry Dana, Jr., and others who attained eminence in letters. Entering Phillips academy, Andover, he prepared himself to enter Harvard college, distinguishing himself for his metrical rendition of the first book of the Æneid. In college he was associated with William H. Chandler, James Freeman Clarke and others who afterward became famous; he was graduated in 1832. During his collegiate career he was known for his literary abilities, contributed liberally to the college publications and wrote poems for college events. In 1830, when it was proposed to destroy the old frigate Constitution, Holmes wrote his poem beginning: "Aye, tear her tattered ensign down," which immediately gave him great reputation as a poet.

He studied law in Cambridge and produced a number of humorous poems, which contributed to his celebrity. Being attached to his profession of medicine, he spent several years in Paris, and in 1836 received his degree. In 1839 he was chosen for professor of anatomy and physiology at Dartmouth college and the next year married Amelia Lee, daughter of Justice Charles Jackson, of the supreme court of Massachusetts. Relinquishing his professorship at Dartmouth he began the practice of medicine in Boston. In 1847 he succeeded Dr. John C. Warren in the Harvard medical school and became a lyceum lecturer.

His first book of poems was published in Boston in 1836. It contained forty-five pieces, including some of those which established his fame as a humorist and reinforced his reputation as a popular poet. Soon after his accession to the Harvard professorship he published a volume of medical essays, including three which had won for him the Boylston prizes, and his position as a scientific writer was assured. Between 1838 and 1883 he successively added valuable essays and monographs to his scientific productions, and many of them have taken their places as classics in medical literature. The establishment of the Atlantic Monthly in 1837 afforded a medium for the work upon which the literary fame of Dr. Holmes was securely founded—"The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," conversational papers, including some of the noblest poems and finest wisdom and humor of the author. "The Professor of the Breakfast Table" next appeared, followed in course by "The Poet at the Breakfast Table." In 1861 "Elsie Venner," the first of Dr. Holmes' ventures into the realm of fiction, appeared, and in 1868 "The Guardian Angel."

His works of a biographical nature were the memoirs of John Lothrop Motley and of Ralph Waldo Emerson, published in 1870 and in 1884. Of his poems "The Chambered Nautilus" was his own favorite, and by general consent one of the consummate lyrics of the language. Of his satirical poems "The Moral Bully" and of the humorous pieces "The Wonderful One-Hoss Shay" are classics. His fame as a "poet of occasions" is world-wide, and almost every poem produced for a special function has taken rank with his more studied works. In 1898 Dr. Holmes went to Europe to be received with the utmost enthusiasm and hospitality everywhere. His son, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., became a professor in the Harvard law school, a judge on the supreme bench of Massachusetts and a writer on jurisprudence famed on both sides of the Atlantic ocean.

Dr. Holmes' lecture career from 1852 to 1858 was phenomenally successful from an artistic view point. The vast sphere of his personal influence is indicated by the fact that when he resigned in 1882 he had continuously for thirty-five years held his Harvard professorship, and exerted his best energies to the training of the young men whom he met in his lecture-room. Dr. Holmes' performance of the difficult duties of his post are matters of history; he was a model teacher, communicating to the students his own zeal for knowledge, and imparting an amount of information as well as a mental discipline which were of the highest value.

FATAL WRECK.

One Killed and Several Injured in a Street Car Smash-Up.

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 3.—A shocking street-car accident occurred about midnight Saturday in which George C. Chandler, general agent of the Northern Pacific in this city, was killed and several other passengers injured. The car was returning from the interstate fair grounds and was crowded with passengers. Chandler and other gentlemen were standing on the front platform behind the motorman. As the wheels struck the crossing of North Second street the axle on the front truck broke near the right wheel. The car left the track, plunged along at an acute angle to the right of the rails for a rod and then fell on its left side. Mr. Chandler, who was then on the steps, fell underneath the car. The heavy wood and iron work struck his face, killing him instantly and crushing his head to a shapeless mass. James F. O'Brien, another passenger, was forced down by the struggling mass of passengers. The iron roof of the car fell upon his right leg, pinning him to the ground. The others were injured either by falling from the platform or by being thrown violently against the breaking glass of the windows.

HILL ACCEPTS.

The New York Senator Decided to Make the Race for Governor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Charles F. Brown, of Newburg, was on Saturday nominated for judge of the court of appeals by the democratic state committee in place of William J. Gaynor, who declined to accept. Following the nomination Senator Hill and Representative Lockwood were formally notified of their nominations at the headquarters. All the members of the nominating committee of the state committees and many distinguished democrats were present. Maj. Hinkley, chairman of the state committee, introduced Bourke Cockran, who made an appropriate speech to the two candidates. The most telling point in Senator Hill's reply was that, while the nomination came to him unsought and undesired, he could not, at this time, refuse his acceptance of it from the party which had always honored him in the days of his sunshine and prosperity. He said:

"I shall confidently appeal to the plain people of the state, who have always sustained me in the past when I have espoused their cause. I shall present to them the issue of democracy versus plutocracy, the issue of no public taxation except for public purposes; the issue of opposition to the centralization of all powers in the general government; the issue of personal liberty as against religious intolerance; the issue of good government, liberal and just executive laws, economy in public expenditures, the promotion of the dignity of labor and protection for its rights, municipal home rule and the uprooting of corruption and the correction of abuses everywhere whether in republican or democratic localities."

Mr. Lockwood also accepted the nomination for lieutenant governor, and intimated that the administration would not withhold its support of the ticket.

ANDREW J. CURTIN.

The Career of Pennsylvania's Famous War Governor Ends.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Oct. 3.—Ex-Gov. Curtin's illness was terminated by death at 5 o'clock Sunday morning. His death had been expected for several days. This removes another of the famous war governors of 1861-5.

Andrew Gregg Curtin was born in Bellefonte, Centre county, Pa., April 22, 1815. He studied law in Dickinson college law school and was admitted to the bar in 1839. He early entered politics as a whig, laboring for Harrison's election in 1840, and making a successful canvass of the state for Clay in 1844. He was a presidential elector in 1848 and a candidate for elector on the whig ticket in 1852. In 1854 Gov. Pollock appointed him secretary of the commonwealth and ex-officio superintendent of the common schools. In 1860 he was the republican candidate for governor and was elected by a majority of 32,000. In his inaugural address he advocated the forcible suppression of secession, and throughout the contest that followed he was one of the "war governors" who were most earnest in their support of the national government. Gov. Curtin's health began to fail in 1863, and he signified his intention of accepting a foreign mission that had been offered him as soon as his term should expire, but in the meantime he had been renominated and reelected by 15,000 majority. In November, 1865, he went to Cuba for his health, and in that year declined another offer of a foreign mission. In 1869 Gen. Grant appointed him minister to Russia and in 1868 and 1872 he was prominently mentioned as a candidate for vice president. He returned home in August, 1872, supported Horace Greeley for the presidency, and subsequently joined the democratic party, by which he was elected to congress for three successive terms, serving from 1881 till 1887.

A TRAIN BURNED.

Several Persons Injured in a Disaster in Tennessee.

BRISTOL, Tenn., Oct. 3.—A few minutes after 1 o'clock p. m. Sunday train No. 5 from New York on the Southern railway jumped the track about 3 miles south of this place. The engine fell across the track and the express and mail cars jumped over it, and, falling on their sides, were soon a prey to the flames which consumed all of the train—eight coaches—with the exception of the last Pullman, which was cut loose and backed from the train. A train with physicians from Bristol arrived within an hour after the wreck and immediately set to work to relieve the injured, who are:

Samuel Smith, engineer, leg broken, scalded, buried under the wrecked train, taken out with difficulty, will probably die; Will Holmes, fireman, head cut badly and scalded; W. W. Rogers, express messenger, arm broken and head injured; A. J. Tucker, postal clerk, ankle broken, cut in the head and back; C. N. Markwood, of Bristol, postal clerk, badly hurt in the arms, legs, back and head; W. H. Simpson, of Mossy Creek, baggage-master, arm broken and internal injuries; Thomas McDermott, Michael Coleman and John Coleman, emigrants from Ireland, received severe injuries on the head, thighs, chest, legs and arms; foreigner, name unknown, badly hurt in chest and legs, very serious; R. J. McKee, Sol Gantz, R. L. McNeer and J. F. Strahler, were slightly injured.

Everybody was badly shaken up, and it is a miracle that many deaths did not result. Capt. Bell, the conductor, escaped with slight bruises. The accident happened in a cut between two high embankments, and was the result of a bolt having been placed on the rail by some unknown person.

Funeral of Prof. Swing.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Funeral services over the remains of Prof. David Swing were held at Central Music hall Sunday afternoon. The hall, which for so many years was the scene of the celebrated divine's labors, was crowded with friends of the dead man and members of his church. Admission was by card and many hundreds were turned away. Rev. H. W. Thomas and Rev. T. C. Hall conducted the introductory services. Dr. John H. Barrows, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, preached the funeral sermon, which was a pronounced eulogy on the dead man's life and work. The interment was at Roseland.

FALLS FROM THE CLOUDS.

Miss Vandecssden Loses Her Hold on a Balloon 1,600 Feet from Earth.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Miss Vandecssden was killed here Saturday in making a balloon ascension. In preparing to descend she lost her balance and fell to the ground. Great interest was taken in the ascension because Miss Vandecssden was a native of the town. In recent years, however, her home had been in Frankfort, Ky. She had been a professional aeronaut for three years, and in that time had made twenty ascensions. She had just passed her 17th birthday and was pretty and vivacious. The ascension was arranged for Friday, but on account of the rain was put over until Saturday. When the hour arrived the wind was blowing rather strong, and Miss Vandecssden was advised not to make the ascension. Her father and mother, who were present, tried to dissuade her, but she declared she would not disappoint her hundreds of old friends and the balloon was released from its moorings. It went up all right, somewhat more rapidly than usual. At a height of about 1,600 feet the crowd below observed that Miss Vandecssden was preparing to make her parachute jump. She appeared at the side of the basket trying to unfasten the parachute, which was attached to the balloon. In some way she lost her hold and came whirling to the ground. The body struck within the fair grounds and was imbedded nearly a foot in the ground. The girl was dead when the people reached her, and all her bones were broken. Her father and mother were among the first to reach the body, and their demonstrations of grief were terrible. Miss Vandecssden was to have been married next week, and she had agreed with her betrothed, who was present, that this would be her last ascension. She had never met with a mishap before. The accident broke up the fair.

KILLED IN A RACE FIGHT.

Seven Negroes Reported Dead as the Result of a Kentucky Affray.

HAWESVILLE, Ky., Oct. 3.—As the excursion train from the Owensboro fair arrived at Powers station, a few miles west of this city, at 6 o'clock Sunday night a terrible race fight occurred between thirty drunken negroes and a few white men, as a result of which seven negroes are said to have been killed. It seems the negroes became angered because they were forced to ride in the colored apartment and as they neared their home station they made a rush to get into the coach for white people. This frightened the women and timid men, who ran through the train. At this Deputy United States Marshal Moses Bullington, who had his family on the train, met the negroes and attempted to quiet them. The negroes then began shooting as they got off the train. Deputy Bullington and Squire Aldridge, both of this city, and Marshal Jones and Col. John Patterson, of Lewisport, and half a dozen men named Atkins from this county then began firing into the negroes. As the train pulled out the negroes shot all the windows out of one coach and the white men emptied all their guns into the negroes who were bunched on the platform. No one on the train was hurt, but it is thought that at least seven negroes are dead and as many more injured. One white man on the train used his knife, which was covered with blood when he came in. These statements are from the lips of United States Marshal Bullington.

OVER A TRESTLE.

Accident to a Train in Georgia—A Number of Passengers Hurt.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 3.—Passenger train No. 35 of the Atlanta & West Point road, which left Atlanta at 5:25 o'clock Sunday morning, tumbled from the high trestle over Osanappa creek, a few miles beyond West Point, and seven persons were badly injured. A special train with surgeons was sent from here to the scene of the wreck. The track was not cleared until late at night. None of the persons were killed outright, but one or two may die. The injured are:

R. J. Vaughn, conductor on a construction train, who was a passenger on No. 35, badly cut and bruised; W. B. Kennan, Charlotte, N. C., traveling man, cut over left eye and leg hurt; D. Cunningham, New Orleans, hip hurt and right hand injured; unknown white man, who cannot tell who he is, fatally injured.

Several others were more or less hurt. It was reported that Hull Ware, of East Point, who is well known in Atlanta, was dangerously hurt in the wreck. This could not be verified.

JAPS ADVANCE.

Cautious Approach of the Mikado's Army to Moukden.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to the Times from Tien Tsin dated Saturday says that the Japanese are advancing cautiously toward Moukden and avoiding any dashing enterprises. Their cruisers are closely watching the Chinese fleet in the gulf of Pe Chi Li. The Japanese government has instructed Field Marshal Yamaga to inform the diplomats at Seoul that he will not allow the Japanese army to plunder Pekin in case that city is taken. This assurance will probably induce the diplomats to stay in Pekin even should the emperor leave the capital. They will, at any rate, attempt to negotiate a peace by asking Japan to moderate in her demands. The emperor's palace in Pekin is now guarded by Manchua troops only.

REV. WILLIAM G. CLARKE, THE SCOURGE OF CHICAGO GAMBLERS.

On Mr. Clarke, as chairman of the committee on gambling of the Civic Federation, has fallen the brunt of the battle being waged against gambling in Chicago. Mr. Clarke was born at Adrian, Mich., in 1861. His parents removed soon afterward to the City of New York, and then westward, finally settling in Chicago. They were Presbyterians, and when William G. was a boy of 14 he united with the congregation of Rev. Albert Kittredge, D. D., now of New York. He finished his college and seminary studies in 1883, and after holding the pastorate of a Waukegan and afterward of a Riverside Presbyterian church, he, in 1888, received a call from the Campbell Park (Chicago) Presbyterian church, of which congregation he is still the pastor. Perhaps, says a Chicago paper, no better equipped man could be found as a leader in this new crusade against the vice of gambling.

the service of said receivers, with the object and intent of crippling the property in their custody, or embarrassing the operation of said railroad."

An Important Decision.

The decision was considered by the lawyers who packed the courtroom as one of the most important opinions delivered in the United States in a decade. It defines the status before the law of labor organizations in their conduct of strikes, and affirms the powers of courts of equity to interfere by injunction when there is reason to believe that the law will be violated. It holds that the men may withdraw in a body from the service of an employer, using, however, neither force, threats, persecution nor intimidation toward employes who do not join them, nor must they use any "device" to molest, hinder, alarm, or interfere with others who desire to take their places.

Summer Hotel Burned.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Oct. 3.—The Mirror Lake house at Lake Placid was totally destroyed by fire Sunday night. A strong wind was blowing and all efforts to save anything proved unavailing. The house had closed its doors a few days ago, after the most successful season in its history. The loss is upward of $150,000 and is only partly covered by insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Dr. Botta, the Author, Dead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Dr. Vincenzo Botta, author and scholar, who fell from the third-story window of his home, Tuesday morning, died as the result of injuries and shock from the fall. He was once president of the Union League club.

Victim of Heart Disease.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—A coroner's jury found the death of Miss Belle White, who expired in a complexion specialist's office, was caused by heart disease.

dangerous than non-intervention, and it was decided that Great Britain should not interfere.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Secretary Herbert has been forehanded in taking steps for the protection of the lives and property of American residents in China, believed now to be endangered by rebellions and unrestrained troops. Three weeks ago the secretary suggested to Admiral Carpenter to confer with the commanders of the foreign ships in Chinese waters and arrange to cooperate with them, if possible, in a plan to have one or two ships at each of the treaty ports and other coast towns where foreigners reside, to give protection to the citizens or subjects of the nation's party to the agreement. In this way the eight United States vessels assigned to the station would be equivalent to many more for protection purposes. The Charleston has arrived at Yokohama. There are now five United States warships in the east—the Charleston, Baltimore, Monocacy, Concord and Petrel—and this force will be increased to eight vessels by the addition of the Detroit, Machias and Yorktown as soon as they can be made ready.

Burglars Rob an Iowa Bank.

BROOKLYN, Ia., Oct. 3.—The First national bank was robbed Thursday night. Tools were taken from a neighboring blacksmith shop and left behind. Vault doors were drilled and blown open, but the time-lock safe, containing $8,000 or $10,000, baffled the efforts of the burglars to open. Two strangers who have been about town for several days are supposed to be the guilty parties, and are thought to be the thieves who operated at Victor last Monday night.

Cholera at Constantinople.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The department of state has received a brief cablegram from Consul General Luther Short at Constantinople announcing the appearance of cholera at that place.

HOW STOUT GOT STOUT.

The Remarkable Experience of a Rheumatic Sufferer.

All But Paralyzed—Lost His Flesh and Expected to Die—How He Got Well and Strong.

[From the Mt. Sterling (Ill.) Republican.]

Few men are held in higher esteem by their fellow-townpeople than James W. Stout, of Riply, Ill., and it is due, no doubt, partly to his popularity that the record of the case has created such widespread interest. While his experience is not without an equal, yet it has been sufficiently remarkable to demand the attention of thousands of people in Illinois, among whom are numbered some of the most eminent physicians.

In January, 1893, Mr. Stout was stricken with what was then believed to be sciatic rheumatism, and in a short time was barely able to hobble around on crutches, and it seemed to his friends that his days were numbered. To-day he is a strong, hearty-looking man for 160 pounds.

How this wonderful change was brought about is most interesting as told to a representative of the Republican by Mr. Stout himself:

"I was afflicted with sciatic rheumatism and lumbago in January, 1893. The sciatic nerve on the right side became affected in the hip, running down to the ankle and across the small of the back to the left side, and soon my whole system became afflicted, causing me the most excruciating pain. In a very short time I became totally unable to attend to any business whatever, and the disease rapidly growing worse I had to take to my bed, where I lay suffering almost continuously for months the most agonizing torture, scarcely being able to move or be moved. At one time I lay for six weeks flat on my back, the slightest movement causing me such pain as almost to throw me into convulsions. I cannot begin to express to you the intense pain I suffered. I was drawn, by the severance of the malady, over to the left side; lost my appetite, had no desire for food, and what little I did eat I could not digest, the digestive organs failing to perform their duty, adding greatly to my already precarious condition. For weeks at a time I was unable to eat or sleep, suffering all the time most intensely and at times fearing I would lose my reason, and would have welcomed death to relieve me of my sufferings.

"I consulted with local physicians and some of the most eminent specialists of the larger cities throughout the country, some treating me for one thing and some for another, but without effect, and I received no relief whatever. One physician told me I had double curvature of the spine and would eventually become paralyzed. I spent hundreds of dollars in the short time I was afflicted without receiving the least benefit. My friends all thought that there was no hope for me whatever and said that I must die, and I, myself, had almost given up in despair, when, in September, 1893, about eight months after I was first afflicted, my attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Without much hope, I at once sent to C. F. Rickey & Co., Druggists, Mt. Sterling, Ill., and procured some of the pills and immediately began taking them. Before long I became aware of a great change for the better in my almost hopeless condition. My appetite came back and my digestive organs performed their usual functions properly. I took some more and grew rapidly better—could sit up in a chair and my body began to straighten out; continued the treatment and in a short time was able to be about on crutches. My recovery from that time on was very rapid and assured. My right leg, which before I commenced this treatment, was numb and dead, now experienced a pricking, tingling sensation. I was enabled to throw away my crutches and walk upright once more among my fellows, a better man physically than ever before. When first taken by the disease I weighed 160 pounds, more than I ever weighed at any time in my life! Yes, sir, I lay my recovery entirely to Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of a gripe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post-paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—(they are never sold in bulk or by the 100,) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady N. Y.

To Make Unfermented Wine.

Take perfectly ripe native grapes, pick from stems, discard all imperfect berries. Mash slightly (not mash seed), press out the juice by any of the known methods and separate the juice from the pulps by straining through coarse cloths, or otherwise. Then add 1½ pounds white sugar to each gallon of must or juice. Boil in a copper or brass kettle for 40 minutes, then remove from fire and filter again so as to remove all sediment. Filtering paper kept by druggists is best to filter through. The filtering is slow but perfect. After filtering and when juice is cool, put in strong bottles, cork and wire similar to pop soda. A cool cellar where the temperature is regular and does not freeze in winter is the best place to keep wines.—Farm and Home.

Wanted to Be Like Mamma.

"We are going to have Mabel very highly educated," said a clever matron recently. "I don't want to be highly educated," came in the unexpected voice of Mabel, a little tot of five, from another room. "I want to be just like you."—Tit-Bits.

One Compensation.

"Those poor Arctic explorers have had some dreadful experiences," said the sympathetic woman. "I know it," replied young Mrs. Yorkins. "But they have had their pictures taken in some perfectly lovely furs."—Washington Star.

Tax Lady of the House—"Why don't you go to work! Don't you know that a rolling stone gathers no moss?" Browning, the Tramp—"Madam, not to evade your question at all, but merely to obtain information, may I ask of what practical utility moss is to a man in my condition?"—Tit-Bits.

IS NO MORE.

Death Comes to Prof. Swing, Chicago's Eloquent Divine.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Prof. David Swing, the eminent theologian and preacher, passed away Wednesday afternoon at 5:05 o'clock. His death was painless, and those who stood at his bedside watching and waiting hardly knew whether it was sleep or death until the physician looked up with the story in his face.

Prof. Swing was taken sick at 9 o'clock a week ago last Saturday. While walking out during the morning he suffered with a sudden chill, which was quickly succeeded by perspiration. A few hours later jaundice made its appearance, but owing to the fact that Prof. Swing was subject to similar attacks little attention was paid to it. On Monday afternoon, however, he was taken with another chill and grew suddenly worse. Dr. Davis was immediately called. After being treated the patient seemed to grow much better, but on Monday there was a relapse, and Dr. Isham and Dr. Fenger were called in to hold a consultation. In spite of all they could do, however, Prof. Swing grew steadily worse until Wednesday night. He was unconscious most of the time during the last three days of his illness, and his death was without pain.

What the future of the Central church will be is unknown, but some of its members do not hesitate to say it will probably be disbanded. It has always been founded entirely on Prof. Swing's personality. It had no motive but to keep him in the pulpit and to preserve his preaching and influence to the city and to the world while he lived. With his removal, it is thought by some members of the congregation, there will be no object in continuing such an independent movement.

MOONSHINERS CAPTURED.

Government Officers Break Up Illicit Traffic in Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 4.—United States Marshal Greer, aided by a score of deputies, has arrived here in charge of a band of moonshiners captured in the Big Sandy valley. The present work of extermination of stills and the illicit traffic of the upper Big Sandy valley began about six months ago, but the arrests began three months later. The intervening time was spent by Greer and his detectives in the location of the stills and the identification of their operators.

In the past six months Greer and his deputies have destroyed thirty-seven separate stills and thousands of gallons of their product, commonly designated "moonshine." They have arrested about 125 offenders and spotted numerous others who will be taken as soon as the opportunity offers. In the capture of the various gangs some thrilling work has been done and some narrow escapes experienced. Seven of Greer's officers are now laid up for repairs at different towns in Floyd and Johnson counties, while about twenty of the moonshiners are also regaining their strength in various up-Sandy jails. These latter will follow their more fortunate fellows to Louisville and to the penitentiary as soon as their condition will admit of the change of quarters.

In the gang brought here were 106 offenders. Their ages ranged from 15 to 50, and in the degree of their crime there was an equal variance. Some of the men had grown old and gray in the business, some had followed it but a short while, others had retailed the spirits for the makers, and others had boldly labeled it sorghum and brought it out by the barrel in push boats. The boys were usually the sons of the old operators, who were forced into the work from childhood and literally knew nothing else. Several women were also among the lot.

STOLE A BIG SUM.

Safe Blowers Rife O. W. Shryer's Bank at Bloomfield, Ind.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 6.—Professional safe blowers robbed O. W. Shryer's bank at Bloomfield, Ind., of $5,500 Wednesday night. The local police department was notified of the job and given a description of the burglars.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 6.—A bloody fight took place Thursday evening in Greene county between a posse of 100 armed men and a trio of bank robbers who robbed the safe of the Bloomfield bank Wednesday night, blowing the vault to smithereens with a heavy charge of dynamite and wrecking the bank office. The men secured $5,500 in cash and fled to the hill country west of Bloomfield, where they were overtaken Thursday evening by Sheriff Johnson's posse, guided by bloodhounds. A desperate fight was kept up, with the robbers retreating. One of the trio was so badly wounded he fell behind and attempted to hide in the brush. The bloodhounds nosed him out and his capture was easily effected.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food.

The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Dr. Haines, of Rush Medical College, Consulting Chemist of the Chicago Board of Health, says: "Royal is not only the purest, but the strongest baking powder with which I am acquainted."

A MATTER OF DOUBT.—"Maria," he said thoughtfully, "I want to ask you something. 'What is it?' 'Do you think that you'll ever have a vote?' 'I do, assuredly.' 'If you get one, and I run for office, will you cast it for me?' She was thoughtful for some time; then she said: 'Hiram, I can't say yet. Not till our debating society has passed on the question whether a woman's first duty is to her fireside or to her country.'—Washington Star.

BUDS, Society buds, young women just entering the doors of society or womanhood, require the wisest care. To be beautiful and charming they must have perfect health, with all it implies—a clear skin, rosy cheeks, bright eyes and good spirits. At this period the young woman is especially sensitive, and many nervous troubles, which continue through life, have their origin at this time. If there be pain, headache, backache, and nervous disturbances, or the general health not good, the judicious use of medicine should be employed. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best restorative tonic and nerve at this time. The best bodily condition results from its use. It's a remedy specially indicated for those delicate weaknesses and derangements that afflict woman-kind at one period or another. You'll find that the woman who has faithfully used the "Prescription" is the picture of health, she looks well and she feels well.

In catarrhal inflammation, in chronic displacements common to women, where there are symptoms of backache, dizziness or fainting, bearing down sensations, disordered stomach, moodiness, fatigue, etc., the trouble is surely dispelled and the sufferer brought back to health and good spirits.

"WOMAN'S ILLS."
Mrs. W. R. BATES, of Dimech, Tumbull Co.,
Ohio, writes:
"A few years ago I took Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which has been a great benefit to me. I am in excellent health now.
I hope that every woman, who is troubled with 'women's ills,' will try the 'Prescription' and be benefited
as I have been."
