Wm. Howarth holds the championship for raising the largest radish this season. The radish weighs 6 1/2 pounds and is a foot long, but very flat.

Last Sunday the M. E. Sunday school appointed their committee consisting of about fifteen to make arrangements for their Christmas exercises. Everybody is enthusiastic, especially since the birthday box containing the Christmas fund has been growing heavier and heavier since last January.

One of the largest selections of stoves ever brought to Barrington can be seen at the hardware store of H. D. A. Grebe. They are in all sizes and of the best makes. The prices have never been so low as this season. Call on him and inspect his stock.

Mrs. E. Shipman, assisted by her sister, Miss Rogers of Chicago, entertained the ladies of the Thursday club at tea on Thursday afternoon. Beautiful chrysanthemums in club colors were the floral decorations. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental music, reading, recitations, and a paper by Mrs. C. Meyer, with illustrations of the various objects of interest acquired by travel. Covers were laid for nineteen.

The out-of-town guests of the Henning-Beinhoff wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. H. Munkhenke, sr., Mrs. Amanda Munkhenke and Misses Mollie and Emma Flury of Palatine; Mr. and Mrs. Waller and Miss Augusta Munkhenke of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Renich, Miss Charlotte Renich and Fred Renich of Woodstock, and Misses Lillian and Emma Boxberger of Dundee.

Henry Rethmeler, living about six miles west of Barrington, who has been suffering from blood poisoning, is slowly improving.

"The Mission of Our Church in India," is the subject of Rev. Julius Kircher's lecture at the St. Paul's church next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Kircher is an able platform speaker, and will deliver an entertaining lecture, which will be illustrated with stereopticon views. The lecture is given under the auspices of the St. Paul Yugendverein, and an admission of 10 cents will be charged.

Next Sunday evening at 7:30 at the Salem church there will be held the annual meeting of the Cook County Bible society under the direction of Rev. Mr. Mack, agent for the county. All the churches will unite in this annual meeting. Each of the pastors of the different churches will make a short address. The principal address will be made by Mr. Mack. All are invited to attend this meeting and help the BIBLE CAUSE along.

August Grauman met with a terrible accident Monday afternoon, which came near costing him his life. While he and Rudolph Staak were repairing the well on Dr. Clausius's premises, a trip to the bottom by one of them was necessary. As near as can be learned Staak wanted to go down but Grauman insisted on himself going to the bottom. He got into the bucket to be let down, when the handle of the windlass broke and he was let fall a distance of thirty feet to the bottom of the well, striking on some tile at the bottom. Staak immediately ran for help, and then the unfortunate man was assisted out of the well. Dr. Clausius just arrived from a trip to Lake Zurich as Grauman was pulled out, and had him removed into his residence. The doctor rendered all the aid possible and in the evening the injured man was removed to his own home, a mile and a half south of Barrington. Grauman's injuries were as follows: shoulder dislocated, spine injured and several ribs fractured. Dr. Clausius reported the patient yesterday afternoon as resting easily, with a good chance to recover.

Miss Martha Hennings was united in holy wedlock to Mr. Charles K. Beinhoff at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Beinhoff, on Wednesday, Nov. 11th, at high noon. Rev. Theodore Suhr of the Salem church performed the ceremony that made these two young people happy. The service was performed in the parlor of the comfortable residence, and was witnessed by the immediate relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bride was dressed in blue brocaded satin with chiffon, lace and pearl trimmings and carried chrysanthemums. After the marriage ceremony the guests were bidden to the wedding feast, which was served in the large dining room. It was indeed a feast, and was heartily appreciated by the happy assemblage. Everything that money and labor could furnish, was provided for the comfort and pleasure of the guests. At 5 o'clock the bride and bridegroom left for a visit to Milwaukee, amid a heavy shower of rice and good wishes. Mr. Beinhoff is a young man possessing the highest moral standard, and is held in high esteem by the citizens of this vicinity. He holds a responsible position in a large printing establishment in Chicago. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hennings. She is one of the most popular young ladies of the town. THE REVIEW extends congratulations.

The musical and literary entertainment given by the Women's Foreign Missionary society at the M. E. church Friday evening was a treat that was enjoyed by an audience that comfortably filled the church. The music as furnished by the mandolin orchestra composed of Frank Robertson and Henry Drewes was splendid, and well deserved the hearty applause. Miss Nellie Lines played the organ accompaniment in an excellent manner. "Aunt Doleful's Visit," "The New Lochinvar," "Little Mamma," and "The New Woman," as rendered by Miss Augusta Frederick Schellbach, and the rendition of "The Pilot's Story," "How the Old Horse Won the Bet," "As You Like It" and "Harve Reil" by Miss Florence Louise Howard were excellent. The ladies delivered these elegant selections in a manner which won for them the hearts of their audience. They possess elocutionary talent of a high character, and the ladies of the W. F. M. S. are to be congratulated on securing the services of such artists. The solos by Dr. Kendall were good. The Doctor's singing has captured the hearts of the music-loving populace of the town. Miss Carrie Kingsley sang "Pretty Pond Lilies" and was given a rousing encore to which she failed to respond. She has a sweet and powerful voice, and one that it is a pleasure to listen to. The cornet solo by Henry Drewes was also well received. C. A. Alberding has established an enviable reputation as an organist. The audience never seems to tire listening to this artist.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

THE NEWS OF SEVEN DAYS UP TO DATE.

Political, Religious, Social and Criminal Doings of the Whole World Carefully Condensed for Our Readers—The Accident Record

Rev. E. L. Benedict is in custody at Lanabee, Ia., for fatally shooting Harry Mewhrter, a druggist. The startling affair is the outcome of a warrant to search for liquors in Mewhrter's shop, which was procured by the preacher.

Word was received in Butte, from Troy, Mont., that Rev. Alexis Berk, formerly of Butte, has been lost in the mountains of the Flathead country during a snow storm last Friday, and searching parties have not yet been able to find trace of him.

Joe Zimmerman, dealer in dry goods, clothing, etc., at Jackson, Tenn., has assigned. Liabilities about $13,000.

John E. Wilkes, one of the oldest dry goods dealers at Grand Rapids, Mich., has filed mortgages to the amount of $30,000 to secure creditors. N. W. Northrup is the heaviest creditor, for $12,291.

The general merchandise house of Munzshelmer & Daube at Ardmore, I. T., has assigned. The liabilities will exceed $100,000. The assets are considerably in excess of the liabilities, but cannot be definitely stated now.

T. G. Steinecke, receiver of the Cass County bank at Atlantic, Ia., has declared a 10 per cent. dividend, to be paid to holders of the $70,000 of preferred claims against the bank. The holders of ordinary claims against the bank will never get a penny.

H. P. Heath, proprietor of a saddlery and harness store at Greeley, Colo., has assigned to the Colorado National Bank. No statement of assets and liabilities has been given. The failure was caused, it is said, by the pressure brought to bear against the firm since the election by the J. B. Shoot Saddlery Company of Quincy, Ill., one of the creditors.

Captain-General Weyler has taken the field in person against the insurgents under Antonio Maceo in the Province of Pinar del Rio, and reliable news received from the front indicates that the Spanish columns are approaching close to the enemy.

Ex-Chief Justice W. E. Miller died at Des Moines, Ia., aged 73 years. He was a member of the Supreme Court from 1870 to 1876, and afterwards wrote and published a code of Iowa, which became the standard work.

The cotton crop of 1896 in Texas is at an end. A killing frost has fallen and the fields are as black as soot. There is not a particle of life left in the plant. A few more bales can be picked out, but fully 90 per cent. has been marketed.

The president has pardoned W. H. Clune, Isaac Ross and Philip Stanwood of California, sentenced Dec. 6, 1894, to pay a fine of $1 and to be confined in Los Angeles county jail eighteen months for conspiracy, the offense being committed in the railway riots at that time general throughout the country.

Allison Z. Mason, president of the defunct Globe Investment Company, was arrested at Boston on an indictment charging him with the embezzlement of $10,000. Treasurer J. Lowell Moore of the company is now serving a three years' sentence on a similar charge.

Napoleon Sarony, the artist and photographer, was found dead in bed at New York by his wife, who had gone to awaken him. He was 75 years old. Death was due to paralysis.

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston the famous libel suit, Helen M. Gougar versus Elijah A. Morse, was dismissed for want of prosecution.

A committee authorized by the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Indiana held a meeting and resolved to proceed with the construction of a new temple in Indianapolis, to occupy the site of the present structure. The new building will be nine stories high; the estimated cost is $200,000.

S. E. Nicholson, who has just been re-elected to the Indiana legislature by the republicans, announced that he is a candidate for speaker of the house. He is the author of the Nicholson temperance law and president of the State Good Citizens' League, an organization formed to enforce the saloon law of Indiana.

Ex-Congressman John D. Stiles died at his home in Allentown, Pa., from the effects of a paralytic stroke. He was 75 years of age.

At Greensburg, Ind., Frank Hearthey in rejoicing over McKinley's victory, called Don Camden an anarchist. The latter struck him with a beer bottle and Hearthey died.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The live stock men of Omaha and Kansas City and of the west generally have inaugurated a campaign to secure for Samuel W. Allerton of Chicago the position of secretary of agriculture in President-elect McKinley's cabinet.

Anticipating the early evacuation of Cuba by Spain, the Cuban leaders of New York are taking steps to form a constitution for the republic. A preliminary organization, with his work in hand, has already been formed, and in a few days the organization will be made permanent.

The highlanders of San Francisco have prepared a memorial to the Emperor of China asking for the removal of the consul-general. They declare he has been bribed by the rich Sam Yip Society to destroy their business.

At the general headquarters of the Christian Endeavor Society at Boston it was announced that from information received by the offices it is evident Christian Endeavorers throughout the country will observe November 8 to 14 as a special week of prayer for Armenia.

The coming Minnesota Legislature will provide for the calling of a constitutional convention. It will consist of as many members as are in the House of Representatives, and will be chosen in the same manner. They will meet within three months after their election.

Superintendent Phil Carlin of the Sioux City waterworks department is making trouble for the street railway companies, because, as he asserts, the diffusion of current from their lines is ruining the piping of the wells on which the city depends for its water supply.

The Lloyd Booth Company, at Youngstown, Ohio, has been awarded the contract for machinery at an immense cost for the $1,000,000 steel plant to be built at Sharon by Frank H. Buhl and others.

The President has appointed Charles A. Keys postmaster at Springfield, Ill., vice Redick M. Ridgeley, removed. Mr. Ridgeley was removed for "pernicious activity in politics."

RISKY HOARDING.

Old-Fashioned Methods of Hiding Valuables in the House.

The stocking bank of grandmothers is not yet obsolete in the country districts, and the daily papers give frequent accounts of its insecurity. Safes are not burglar-proof, either, and the occasional bank robberies, and the failures, too, keep alive the fondness of women for searching for queer hiding places for their savings. Some of the old-time "banks" showed considerable ingenuity in their construction or covering. An old lady living in a New Hampshire town had a set of large stationary drawers topped by cupboards built into one of her huge closets. The lower drawer, instead of resting directly on the floor, ran on grooves perhaps two inches above it. She would pull out this lower drawer, place her jewel cases in the space left below, and then push in the drawer, which she kept filled with linen. Equally shrewd was an Ohio woman, who, whenever she went out, put her money and jewelry in the coal scuttle, covering them up carefully with several layers of coal. This might have proved a rather risky experiment in the winter months when the fire had to be fed, but their owner felt that no burglar would ever think of looking there. A favorite hiding place for money, especially for bills of large denominations, has always been the big family Bible and the unbridged dictionary. This is still common in rural places. So is the practice of sticking money under a corner of a carpet, particularly under some large piece of furniture. This is a method that has much to commend it. Tea caddies and sugar bowls made excellent temporary safes. Another hiding place is the old-fashioned country clock, which is almost historic as a spot for tucking away little bundles of valuables. It is safe to say that the number of women who put away jewelry in pocket books under a mattress for safe keeping afterward carefully smoothing the bed down, can be numbered by the thousands. The pocket of an old dress that hangs in an unopened way in a closet is regarded by many women as one of the safest places imaginable for spare rings, brooches and bracelets, and even for a pocket-book. Old shoes standing in their proper place beside new ones, are likewise much esteemed, for a great deal can be put down in their toes without giving the slightest evidence of the value therein.—Boston Traveler.

Death at Venice.

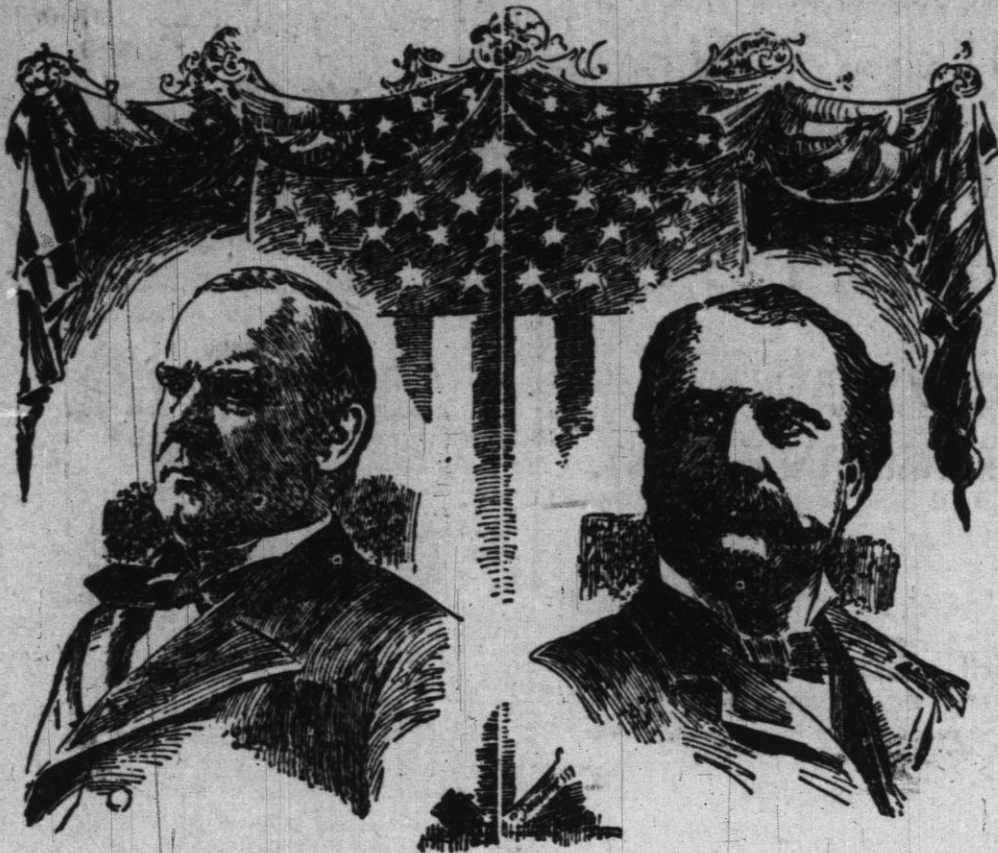

At Venice when any one dies it is the custom to fix a placard on the front of the dead person's house, as well as in the neighboring streets, as a sort of public notice, stating his name, age, place of birth, and the illness from which he died—affirming also that he received the holy sacraments and died a good Christian, and requesting the prayers of the faithful.

A Good Guess.

"Tommy, who was Joan of Arc?" asked the teacher. "Noah's wife," said Tommy, who is considered great at guessing.—Philadelphia American.

The Count Completed.

President-elect McKinley Will Have 278 Votes in the Electoral College.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY, President Elect.

GARRETT A. HOBART, Vice-President Elect.

The final returns from Kentucky give that state to McKinley by about 400 plurality, bringing the president-elects vote in the electoral college up to 278. A recount in any of the close states might change the figures. In the Dakotas, Oregon, Wyoming and California the vote was very close. In Wyoming the Republicans get one of the electors, a woman, by the way, who probably received a few complimentary votes at the hands of generously inclined silverites. Although the popular vote of the country is greatly on the republican side it is conceded that the contest was close in the pivotal states of Indiana, Kentucky, California, Michigan, Oregon and Delaware. Had those states gone the other way, Bryan would have been the choice of the electoral college.

Jones Issues an Address. Late last night Senator Jones issued the following address to the public:

The result of the presidential election is apparently no longer in doubt. It has been one of the closest contests that the people have been called on to determine in recent years. We have claimed the election of our advices from states that were admittedly in doubt, in which we knew there had been many frauds, and from which there were evidences of tampering with the returns. It seems now to be apparent that, while Mr. Bryan, after making the most brilliant campaign in the history of our country and has carried most of the states claimed to be doubtful, has not carried enough to assure his success in the electoral college. Bryan electors have been chosen from all of the states south of the Potomac and Ohio except West Virginia and all those west of the Missouri except California and Oregon. He has 190 electoral votes, and this number may be increased by final returns from states yet in question. He has not obtained enough votes to carry the electoral college. Thus this remarkable campaign closes with the election of William McKinley. The result was brought about by every kind of coercion and intimidation on the part of the money power, including threats of lockouts and dismissals and impending starvation; by the employment of by far the largest campaign fund ever used in this country, and by the subordination of a large portion of the American press. The president-elect and his party are under pledge to the American people to continue the gold standard, and by its operation to restore prosperity to this country. As chief executive, Mr. McKinley will have the cordial support of millions of patriotic Americans who have cast their votes for William Jennings Bryan. They bow to the majesty of the office and abide by the result with none of the mutterings that would have come from the money power had it been unsuccessful. They are confident the gold standard cannot give the promised prosperity, but will gladly welcome it if it comes. They will continue the great struggle for the uplifting of humanity and in the maintenance of the dignity of our country in the establishment of an American money system. And the democratic party, aided by its present allies, will still uplift the bimetallic standard and bear it on to victory.

JAMES K. JONES, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

President-Elect McKinley Speaks. President-elect McKinley has sent the following dispatch to Mark Hanna at New York:

"Canton, Ohio, Nov. 5.—To Hon. M. A. Hanna, Waldorf Hotel, New York: Your telegraphic message announcing the result of the election has been received. I beg you to accept my hearty thanks for your great services in the cause of sound money and protection throughout the campaign now closed and gloriously won. They were most generous and effective, and will receive the warm approbation of your countrymen everywhere. I will be pleased to have you convey to your associates of the national committee my high appreciation of their efficient services. The people in their majesty, ignoring party lines, have declared their detestation of repudiation and dishonor, in whatever specious guise they may be presented. They have with the same mighty power affirmed their devotion to law and order and their unswerving respect for justice and the courts. They have maintained their

ty dissensions should no longer divide or rack the public mind; nor the zeal or temper of either side deter any citizen from patriotic devotion to the good of all."

Bryan Congratulates McKinley. Bryan acknowledged his defeat Thursday evening.

He waited patiently for the word from Senator Jones that the battle of the silverites had been lost.

Then he sent his telegram of congratulations to McKinley.

Mr. Bryan surrendered at 8:20 o'clock. The signal from Senator Jones informed him that he did not consider it wise to longer withhold the concession of McKinley's election. This message was received by Mr. Bryan a few minutes after he had returned with his wife from an evening stroll, and in the presence of a dozen or so of callers who were gathered in the parlor and reading-room of their unpretentious residence. The receipt of the telegram created no scene whatever and one unacquainted with the facts would never have suspected from the surface indications the importance of the occasion or that the chief actor in the drama had more than a passing interest in it. He handed the telegram to Mrs. Bryan, who was standing near him, and without a word except to explain the purport of the message sat down at his desk and penned the following telegram:

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 5.—Hon. William McKinley, Jr., Canton, Ohio: Senator Jones has just informed me that the returns indicate your election, and I hasten to extend my congratulations. We have submitted the issue to the American people and their will is law. W. J. BRYAN.

Bitter Toward Gold Democrat.

Mr. Bryan's attitude toward the gold standard democrats is one of undying hostility. While he is guarded in his personal comment, he is a very good hater. One view which he takes of the election is that President Cleveland, Secretary Carlisle and other members of the administration, along with leading democrats all over the country, have put themselves entirely outside the party organization by their failure to support the Chicago ticket. The fact that the gold standard democrats, for the most part, supported McKinley, will be used by Mr. Bryan as justification for his charge that the Palmer and handsome majorities, as was anticipated by the republican campaign managers. The defections in the republican congressional districts will defeat four if not five out of the six republican candidates for congress, Mercer being the only man on that ticket who reads his title clear. Mercer's majority is over 1,700. Strode, republican, in the first district, may pull through. From the returns thus far received it is manifest that the fusionists will control both houses of the state legislature. As near as can be ascertained, the republicans will have eleven senators and forty-one members of the house, while the fusionists will muster twenty-one senators and fifty-nine representatives, or nearly a two-thirds majority in each branch of the legislature.

of the user of property were paramount to those of the owner. The power of every corporation in the state was turned against Doster.

The latest returns, which are incomplete, indicate that the republicans have elected only two congressmen, Broderick and Curtis, and that the free silver forces have chosen the other six. Jerry Simpson has surely beaten Long, and the result in the second district is extremely close, but with the chances in favor of Peters, Pop.

Break in the Solid South.

Even the solid south has been invaded, and it is solid no longer. Kentucky has been carried for McKinley by the aid of the gold money democrats, who voted almost solidly for the republican national ticket. The chairman of the Bryan committee in Kentucky has not given up the state, but the dispatches support the republican claim that McKinley's majority in the Blue Grass state will be about 10,000. Nor is there any doubt about West Virginia. The McKinley majority in that state is from 13,000 to 15,000. Maryland gives 30,000 majority for McKinley, and that the state of Gorman has joined the republicans is conceded by the Bryan supporters. At one time North Carolina and Tennessee were claimed by the republicans, but later returns show that both states have gone for Bryan by reduced pluralities.

The Big Cities.

New York city, which has not been carried by the republicans in a presidential election since the war, gives McKinley 16,500. Louisville, the metropolis of Kentucky, comes up with 12,000. Indianapolis, which was carried for Cleveland by 1,000 in 1892, now gives McKinley 12,000. Lincoln, Neb., Mr. Bryan's home, is 2,000 for McKinley. The democratic cities of Rochester and Albany, N. Y., are now republican. Detroit (Wayne county) is reported at 18,000. St. Louis and Kansas City have given heavy republican majorities.

McKinley's plurality of the popular vote appears to be over 1,000,000. The greatest popular plurality ever given a presidential candidate in the past was 763,000 for General Grant in 1872.

unflinching determination to support and uphold the constituted authorities of the country, and have thereby given new vigor and strength to our free institutions. They have, indeed, again consecrated themselves to country, and baptized the cherished ordinances of free government with a new and holy patriotism. The victory is not to party or section, but of and for the whole American people. Not the least of the triumphs of the election is the obliteration of sectional lines in the republic. We have demonstrated to the world that we are a reunited people in purpose as in name. We have manifested in the great cause the spirit of fraternity and brotherhood that should always characterize our common and equal citizenship, and have proven conclusively that in a country of equal privileges and equal opportunity the insidious doctrine of hate or of class or sectional distinctions cannot prevail. Let us, as Americans, straightway devote ourselves to the upbuilding of America; to the peace, honor and glory of our common country. Party dissensions should no longer divide or rack the public mind; nor the zeal or temper of either side deter any citizen from patriotic devotion to the good of all."

Buckner ticket was not put up in good faith. He will appeal to the latent prejudice against bolting and will seek to force the gold standard democrats to remain supporters of McKinley. No one has been able to discover how Mr. Bryan expects to have his ideas carried out in states where free silver has been repudiated by the regular democratic organization.

In Bryan's Own State.

The republican state committee of Nebraska has abandoned all claims to the state, except on auditor and treasurer, which, Judge Post says, the republicans have elected. He concedes the election of Holcomb (fusion) for governor by 8,000, but says that Holcomb's vote in the state will exceed Bryan's by 3,000 to 4,000.

He claims only the congressmen from the first and second districts. Had the counties which have heretofore been reliably republican polled their usual majorities McKinley and the whole republican ticket would undoubtedly have carried the state by Republicans Lose Kansas.

Indications point to the utter defeat of the republicans in all branches of the state government in Kansas. It would be a miracle if the remaining 1,000 precincts to hear from should shade down the majority of the fusion tickets, and give Kansas to the republicans. The free silver forces, which include the populist democrats and free silver republicans, claim the state by 15,000. This is excessive, but Bryan and the fusion state ticket will win by at least 5,000. The legislature is overwhelmingly free silver.

The new chief justice, Frank Doster, is a socialist, and in a speech several years ago he declared that the rights of the Democrats based hopes, fell into line with Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois and returned a plurality for McKinley. The Scandinavian element of the population was practically unanimous against silver, and defeated the Bryan state ticket as well as the populist electors. The congressional delegation will probably stand five republicans and two populists. Towne, the free silver republican who bolted the St. Louis convention with Teller, is beaten. McKinley's plurality in the state is 35,000. Turning to the other states which were not admitted to be doubtful, the results are even more surprising and decisive.

Kentucky, the home of the gold democratic candidate for vice-president, General Buckner, returned a plurality of 10,000 to 15,000 for the McKinley electors. This is an increase of 3,000 to 8,000 over Governor Bradley's vote in 1895. The congressional delegation will stand seven republicans, three democrats and one anti-silver democrat—the latter being W. C. P. Breckinridge of the Ashland district.

BARRINGTON, - ILLINOIS

M. T. LAMEY, Editor and Pub.

Entered at the postoffice at Barrington, Ill., as second-class matter.

SATURDAY, NOV. 14, 1896.

Thursday, November 26th, has been set apart by President Cleveland as a day for offering thanks.

Ten business men of Nunda have decided to close their places of business on and after November 1st at 8 o'clock p. m. Why would it not be a wise move for our business men to do the same thing?

Plenty of food for reflection can be obtained by the advocates of township abolition by reading the report of the secretary of the state equalization board. The Cook county assessments for 1896 have been reduced just $4,946,194, while twenty-nine counties have increased their assessments $1,536,407. The total assessments in the state have been decreased $13,638,690.

The Torrens Law.

The decision of the Illinois supreme court, rendered Monday, that the Torrens law is not constitutional is based, doubtless, on the arguments against its validity that were urged from the start. It clothed the registrar of titles with judicial authority, which is incompatible with the division of powers under the state government. Only the constitutional courts can exercise judicial authority. Only a proper judicial decree can decide the title to property. There must be formal judicial proceedings, a trial by jury, a verdict and judgement in adjudicating property claims.

Perhaps it is feasible to embody in a statute based on the Torrens principle a method for judicial decisions as to titles. But a mere recorder of deeds and mortgages cannot be clothed by statute with judicial power to decide the effect of the evidences of title which he is authorized only to transcribe into his books.

This appears to be the purport of the decision as to its main effects. The text of the decision will disclose where other parts of the Torrens system are incompatible with our constitution.

The Torrens system, like the state ballot, is of Australian origin. It is evident that many things which work well at the antipodes and under the Southern Cross will not work well here, unless properly adjusted to American system of politics and property.

The merits of the Torrens system, if it could be applied under our constitution, are undeniable. It makes titles to real estate a sort of assets available for business uses in some corporate or municipal bonds. It also simplifies and cheapens transfers of property.

But it needs essential modifications in practice in order that it shall be reconciled to judicial methods under the constitutions of the several states. The Australian ballot laws need also essential modifications.—Chronicle.

Slow Criminal Procedure.

The "laws delays" are never more irritating than when they involve the unjust imprisonment of their victims. The case of the two policemen whose conviction for murder was set aside yesterday by the supreme court is in point. Their innocence or guilt does not enter into the question of the justice of their punishment. The supreme court has decided that the verdict was not in conformity with the law. Meanwhile what has become of the prisoners? They are at Joliet serving out a considerable part of a sentence which the highest court has pronounced illegal and void.

Such cases are of common occurrence. A few years ago three men, convicted of a celebrated murder, were sent to the penitentiary for life. The case was carried up to the supreme court, and in the course of time that bench reversed the verdict. Meanwhile two of the prisoners had passed beyond the benefits of courts or legal processes.

In the Moran and Healy case the verdict was rendered in February, 1895. It has taken the supreme court nearly two years to go through the record and discover that the conviction was improper. If the men were absolutely innocent the situation would still be presented of two American citizens being punished for a crime on which final judgment had not been rendered.

It ought to be possible to reform our criminal procedure in such a manner that inconsistencies of this nature will become impossible. As it is, swift punishment for the guilty and early release for the innocent are equally rare in the criminal courts.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Australian Governments.

The movement for a federation of all the British colonies comprised under the name of Australia does not appear to be making as rapid progress as its promoters hoped. One objection that seems insurmountable to the other colonies is the fact that they would have to shoulder their share of the respective public debts of Victoria and New South Wales, which together amount to $500,000,000.

The continent of Australia is divided into five colonies as follows: Queensland on the northeast, South Australia, a strip taking in all the central part from north to south; New South Wales and Victoria in the southeast, and Western Australia, lying on the west from north to south and occupying an immense territory. Besides the five colonies on the mainland of the continent there is the island of Tasmania, lying directly off the southeast of Victoria, which is the southeast corner of the continent. Tasmania makes the sixth of the colonies in the Australian group. It is not uncommon to mix up New Zealand with the Australian governments, but New Zealand is a country to itself and of its own kind, lying 1,500 miles away to the south and having no more connection with Australia than Canada has.

Australia would be the richest and most beautiful section of the globe only for a scarcity of water which afflicts much of the northern and central portions of it. Its white population is about 4,000,000—1,000,000 less than that of Canada. When it is remembered that the area of Australia is 5,200,000 square miles, while that of the United States is only 4,000,000 square miles, it will be seen there is plenty of room in the southwestern continent to grow up with the country. The Australians are the richest foreigners that visit London and Europe. Their gorgeous jewels make even those of millionaire Americans pale.

The Australian colonies are far more independent of one another than the different states of the American Union are. The smaller and richer of them, Victoria and New South Wales, are anxious for a federation, uniting all the six colonies under one general government, giving to every one a local government in the main corresponding to that which each of our own states has, but it will take time and agitation to make Western Australia, Southern Australia and Queensland see the advantage of it.

The northwestern part of Canada and British America may prove to be one of the richest mineral regions in the world. In British Columbia great quantities of gold, silver, coal and copper have been found. In other parts of the Dominion have been discovered salt, petroleum and even natural gas. It has taken a long time to develop the Canadian and British American mines, but there is reason to believe that when their vastness and richness are opened up the British territory will almost rival the United States as an ore producing country. The experiences of early days in California are being repeated in British Columbia, where the miners are sending word back east that they would give anything if they had wives to share their newly found prosperity. A mining agent from British Columbia who lately made a business trip to Montreal declared that the miners were seriously considering their lack of partners and that if 1,500 nice girls could be persuaded to go to his province every one of them would get a good husband.

If you see in a foreign paper the advertisement of a person who wants work, and if you, thinking you would like that person's services, write to the foreign country and secure him and bring him to the United States, that does not constitute contract labor in the meaning of our law, says Judge Buffington of Pittsburg, and you are entirely free to bring your new employee here.

The chainless bicycle may now be considered well established and on the road to common use. It will be seen on the roads in 1897, and it will be a great improvement.

In Sunny Italy.

The land of sunshine and music and high art and vermin did its best to prepare grand festivities for the marriage of its future ruler to Princess Helene of Montenegro. There are many in our country who look forward with dreamful eyes to one day visiting the land of the pomegranate and the gondola and of filling their souls with the sense of all things beautiful. To open the eyes of such dreamers we quote the following edict that the city authorities caused to be posted at public places in the port of Bari before the arrival of the royal yacht that brought thither young Victor Emmanuel and his bride.

The poverty, the squalor, the childlessness of Humbert's kingdom were never shown up more picturesquely than in this altogether serious proclamation. It represents Italy exactly as it is in every corner of it this day. The humor of the proclamation is only apparent to the foreign mind, not to the Italian one:

Citizens of Bari, it is your duty to clean the streets of all unseemly mud. Used and tattered washing linen must be taken away from the windows. Little children must no longer run naked in the streets. Goats, cows, hens and drunken men must be kept at a proper distance. No dust bins may for three weeks be emptied into the streets.

Licensed coachmen are forbidden to wear ragged liveries and are advised to borrow disused police uniforms. Let these things be done, and our citizens will prove themselves worthy of their ancestors, and our city will be duly garnished for greeting her royal bride.

The report of the United States postmaster general shows some impressive indications of how the southern part of this Union is progressing. There has been no great net increase in the number of postoffices established this year—only 896, in fact—but of these more than 25 per cent were in five southern states, Kentucky, Georgia, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas. It is significant that in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania and New York, all taken together, only a little more than a third as many new postoffices were started. These states have probably reached the point where there are already postoffices enough to satisfy all but those who want to be postmasters. It is surprising to find that more new offices were established in the one state of Mississippi than in the four northwestern states of Montana, Washington and the two Dakotas. These facts point unmistakably to the direction in which capital and population are traveling.

The appointment of M. Shiskine as minister of foreign affairs in Russia to take the place of the late Prince Lobanoff is almost a guarantee that Russia will continue good friends with the United States. No foreign ambassador at Washington was ever more popular than Shiskine was during the years he represented Russia here, while he on his part appeared to appreciate Americans highly.

Nearly every state in the Union has passed some kind of an Australian ballot law, real or an imitation, previous to the presidential election this fall. Under our secret blanket ballot Australian system, which is not the Australian system that the Australians themselves have, it takes rather longer than it did formerly to count votes.

THE GREAT GAME.

The Late Political Contest Written Up in Football Style.

The great national football match is on. The day is fair and propitious for such a struggle. And the grounds! The fairest field ever designed by Nature or man. The audience is vast and intensely interested, their faces evidencing the fact that their future prosperity even is to be decided by the contest. Big money is up. On one side of the field are found the rooters for the players in "Yellow." They appear in well trimmed whiskers, seem to be well fed and happy and show evidences of intelligence, good breeding, etc.; but crafty and keen eyes are seen among them and a hooked nose or two. Many have come in great golden tally-ho coaches and other fine vehicles, upon the sides of which appear, in a few cases, coat-of-arms, — whether stolen or manufactured it matters not in this free country. Scores of flags flap in the breeze and bunting streams from everywhere.

Upon the other side we find the "howlers" for the "White." We see a great many with marks of intelligence here also, and men dressed in fine raiment, but the majority seem to be less finely dressed and have to do some tall hustling to raise even the price of admission. The golden coaches are lacking entirely, the most of the people being on foot and the only equipages are evidently farm wagons.

But the opposing teams are on the field, and our gaze leaves the multitude and searches out the individual players. The managers of the teams are all bustle and importance. It is whispered that the manager of the "Yellow" is a new and untried man, he never having appeared in any connection with the game, before. Upon this a number of the supporters of the "Yellow" are seen to hurry across the end and station themselves upon the other side. The thought strikes one, "What a fine coachman this manager would make if he were in livery; he has a true coachman's face." The manager of the "Whites" is considerable older, and it is said he is an old head at the business.

But the men are lined up! The "Whites" have the ball—it is said by fraud. The right half back, a fine, dark complexioned young fellow with clear cut features, seems most confident. His fellows share his enthusiasm. In the full back we recognize, by his thin straggling whiskers and the peculiar lock of hair sticking out in front, an old hand at the game. He does not impress one favorably, yet seems to direct the play, and, as the affair develops, is a powerful player; but more by strategy than otherwise. Down the line we see one or two good looking men, but the majority do not appeal to our judgement, particularly the left end who seems to have a glass eye and we wonder how he got into the game at all.

The "Yellows" line up better. The left half back, a man with a keen eye, a nose with a good-sized bump, tall and commanding, seems to be a most experienced man indeed. He has been in close consultation with his manager and they seem to understand each other perfectly. Along the line we see fine, stalwart fellows, and all seem to be the men for the places. The full back we remember to have seen before, with an indistinct recollection of his having killed his man in years past; but we remember now he was not censured, the affair being the outcome of a bad tackle.

But the ball is about to be put in play! We hear the right half back in silvery tones give the combination, "16-1, 16-1-73," and the ball goes forward with a rush against the line for two yards. This gain brings great applause from the admirers of the "Whites," accompanied by the hammering upon coffee pots with spoons, etc., which makes an awful din. At the line-up the voice of the manager of the "Yellows" is heard, and the "Yellows" take a brace which bodes ill for the "Whites." The same combination, "16-1, 16-1-73," is tried again, but the rush is met and forced back three yards; amid terrific cheers from the tally-hos, a number of the occupants of which are seen to get down, take something from their pockets and send to the manager of the "Yellow" players, who distributes it among his men, after which they seem to be greatly refreshed.

The game is now delayed, as the full back of the "Whites" has his eye upon a large, well fed, short necked man in the audience, who, though rather remote from the crowd, is on the side of the "Yellows" and is taking his ease with his wife and children. He seems, however, to keep an eye on the game. The full back appears to be enraged at this man and does considerable talking, but is finally quelled and the game goes on.

In the next line up the same combination is used, with the result which might be expected. The "Yellows" are onto their game, and the "Whites" not only lose five yards but the ball also.

By the way, who is that handsome, dark complexioned gentleman with a bald head who is at the foot of the field, undecided evidently as to which side to support, but finally stands still? But, no matter, the game goes on. The teams are playing all over the field, the first half resulting in no score for either, and now the last half is nearing its end. The right half back for the "Whites" has excited the admiration of all by his dogged determination and remarkable staying powers. Some of his men, however, have resorted to rather questionable tactics in endeavoring to win the day, notably the left end, who, in a fit of frenzy, seized a pitchfork from a farm wagon and would have made trouble, had he not been overpowered. The left half back of the "Yellows" has made a grand and dignified fight. As they line up for probably the last time determination is seen upon the faces of all. The "Yellows" have the ball. They are on the fifty yard line. The combination "1896-1900" is heard. The ball is passed to the full back who, with a tremendous spurt of speed and behind magnificent interference, clears the end and like a deer makes a touch down.

The ball is brought out for a kick for goal. It is held in position by the left end. The grand and irresistible left half carefully surveys the distance amid appalling silence. He makes a most beautiful kick; the ball sails gracefully over the bar, and the game is won amid the blowing of horns and waving of the Stars and Stripes. C.

FATAL LOVE.

"She gives me up! Margie renounces me! Strangers we must be henceforth! What does it all mean? Am I indeed awake, or is it only a painful dream?"

He read the few lines of the missive a third time. Something of the old dominant spirit of Archer Trevlyn came back to him.

"There is some misunderstanding. Margie has been told some dire falsehood!" he exclaimed, starting up. "I will know everything. She shall explain fully."

He seized his hat and hurried to her residence. The family were at breakfast, the servant said, who opened the door. He asked to see Miss Harrison.

"Miss Harrison left this morning, sir, in the early express," said the man, eyeing Trevlyn with curious interest.

"Went in the early train! Can you tell me where she has gone?"

"I cannot. Perhaps her aunt, Miss Farnsworth, or Miss Lee can do so."

"Very well," he made a desperate effort to seem calm, for the servant's observant eye warned him that he was not acting himself. "Will you please ask Miss Lee to favor me with a few minutes of her time?"

Miss Lee came into the parlor where Archer waited, a little afterward. Archer, himself, was not more changed than she. Her countenance was pale, even to ghastliness, with the exception of a bright red spot on either cheek, and her eyes shone with such an unnatural light, that even Archer, absorbed as he was in his own troubles, noticed it. She welcomed him quietly, in a somewhat constrained voice, and relapsed into silence. Archer plunged at once upon what he came to ascertain.

"The servant tells me that Miss Harrison left New York this morning. I am very anxious to communicate with her. Can you tell me whether she has gone?"

"I cannot. She left before any of the family were up, and though she left notes for both her aunt and her business agent, Mr. Farley, she did not in either of them mention her destination."

"And did she not speak to you about it?"

"She did not. I spent a part of last evening with her, just before you came, but she said nothing to me of her intention. She was not quite well, and desired me to ask you to excuse her from going to the opera."

"And did you not see her this morning?"

"No. I have not seen her since I left her room to come down to you last night. When I returned from my interview with you, I tapped at her door—in fact, I tapped at it several times during the evening, for I feared she might be worse—but I got no reply, and supposed she had retired. No one saw her this morning, except Florine, her maid, and Peter, the coachman, who drove her to the depot."

"And she went entirely alone?"

"She did from the house. Peter took her in the carriage."

"From the house! But after that?" he asked, eagerly.

"Mr. Trevlyn," she said, coldly, "excuse me."

"I must know!" he cried; passionately grasping her arm; "tell me, did she set out upon this mysterious journey alone?"

"I must decline to answer you."

"But I will not accept any denial! Miss Lee, you know what Margie was to me. There has arisen a fearful misunderstanding between us. I must have it explained. Why will you trifle with me? You must tell me what you know."

"I do not wish to arouse suspicion, Mr. Trevlyn, which may have no foundation to rest on. Only for your peace of mind do I withhold any information I may possess on the subject."

"It is a cruel kindness. Tell me everything at once, I beg of you!"

"Then, if it distresses you, do not blame me; Peter saw Mr. Louis Castrani at the depot, and is confident he went in the same train, in the same car with Miss Harrison."

"Again I thank you, and good morning."

He hurried away, got into the first coach he came across, and was driven to the Northern depot.

He was somewhat acquainted with the ticket agent, and assuming as nonchalant an air as was possible in his present disturbed state, he strolled into the office. After a little indifferent conversation, he said:

"By the way, Harris, do you know Mr. Castrani, the young Cuban, who has turned the heads of so many of our fair belles? Some one was telling me he left town this morning."

"Castrani! Yes, I think so. He did leave for the north this morning in the early express. I marked his baggage for him. He had been hurried so in his preparations, he said, that he had no time for it."

"Indeed? It's a bore to be hurried. Where was he checked to?"

"Well, really, the name of the place has escaped me. Some little town in New Hampshire or Maine, I think. We do so much of this business that my memory is treacherous about such things."

"Were you speaking of Castrani?" asked Tom Clifford, a friend of Archer's, removing his cigar from his mouth. Deuced fine fellow! Wish I had some of his spare shillings. Though he's generous as a prince. Met him this morning just as he was coming down the steps of the Astor. Had to get up early to see after that confounded store of mine. Walker's too lazy to open it mornings."

"You met Mr. Castrani?" said Archer, referring to the point.

"Yes. He told me he was going away. Woman somewhere mixed up in the case. Said he expected to find one somewhere—well, hanged if I can tell where. There's always a woman at the bottom of everything."

"He did not mention who this one was?"

"Not he. But I must be going. It's nearly lunch time. Good morning."

Trevlyn stopped a few moments with Mr. Harris, and then went back to his rooms. He was satisfied. Hard as it was for him to believe it, he had no other alternative. Margie was false, and she had gone away from him under the protection of Castrani. He could have forgiven her anything but that. If she had ceased to love him, and had transferred her affections, he could still have wished her all happiness, if she had only been free and frank with him. But to profess love for him all the while she was planning to elope with another man, was too much! His heart hardened toward her.

If there had been, in reality, as he had at first had supposed, any misunderstanding between him and her, and she had gone alone, he would have followed her to the ends of the earth, and have had everything made clear. But as it was now, he would not pursue her an inch. Let her go! False and perfidious! Why should her flight ever trouble him?

But though he tried to believe her worthy of all scorn and contempt, his heart was still very tender of her. He kissed the sweet face of the picture he had worn so long in his bosom, before he locked it away from his sight, and dropped some tears that were no dishonor to his manhood, over the half-dozent elegant little trifles she had given him, before he committed them to the flames.

There was a nine days' wonder over Miss Harrison's sudden exodus. But her aunt was a discreet woman, and it was generally understood that Margie had taken advantage of the pause in the fashionable season to visit some distant relatives, and if any one coupled her flight and the departure of Castrani together, it was not made the subject of remark. Alexandrine kept what she knew to herself, and of course Archer Trevlyn did not proclaim his own desertion.

For a week, nearly, he managed to keep about, and at the end of that time he called at Mrs. Lee's. He wanted to question Alexandrine a little further. The idea possessed him that in some way she might be cognizant of Margie's destination. And though he had given the girl up, he longed desperately to know if she were happy. He had felt strangely giddy all day, and the heat of Mrs. Lee's parlors operated unfavorably upon him. He was sitting on a sofa conversing with that lady and her daughter, when suddenly he put his hand to his forehead, and sank back, pale and speechless.

In the wildest alarm, they called a physician, who put him to bed, and enjoined the severest quiet. Mr. Trevlyn, he said, had received a severe shock to his nervous system, and there was imminent danger of congestive fever of the brain.

His fears were verified. Archer did not rally, and on the second day he was delirious. Then the womanly nature of Alexandrine Lee came out and asserted itself. She banished all attendants from the sick room, and took sole charge herself of the sufferer. Not even her mother would she allow to take her place. When tempted by intense weariness to resign her post she would take that stained glove from her bosom, and the sight of it would banish all thought of admitting a stranger.

"No," she said to herself, "people in delirium speak of their most cherished secrets, and he shall not criminate himself. If he did that terrible deed, only I of all the world can bring a shadow of suspicion against him, and the secret shall never be revealed to any other."

So she sat the long days and longer nights away by the side of this man she loved so hopelessly, bathing his fevered brow, holding his parched hand, and lingering fondly over the flushed, unconscious face.

He sank lower and lower day by day—so very low that the physician said he could do no more. He must leave the case. There was nothing for it but to wait with patience the workings of nature.

At last the day came when the ravings of delirium subsided, and a deadly stupor intervened. It was the crisis of the disease. The sundown would decide, Dr. Grayson said; he would be better, or death would ensue.

Alexandrine heard his opinion in stony silence. She sat by the bed's head now, calm and silent; her powers of self-control were infinite. Her mother came in to watch for the change, as did several of Archer's friends, heretofore excluded. She was not afraid for them to come; there was no danger of Mr. Trevlyn criminating himself now. He had not spoken or moved for twelve hours.

The time passed slowly. The sun crept down the west. The ticking of the watch on the stand was all that broke the silence of the room. The last sun ray departed—the west flamed with gold and crimson, and the amber light flushed with the hue of health the white face on the pillow. Alexandrine thought she saw a change other than that the sunlight brought, and bent over him.

His eyes unclosed—he looked away from her to the vase of early spring flowers on the center-table. His lips moved. She caught the whispered word with a fierce pang at her heart:

"Margie!"

The physician stepped forward, and sought the fluttering pulse. His face told his decision before his lips did.

"The crisis is passed. He will live." Yes, he would live. The suspense was over. Alexandrine's labors were shared now, and Archer did not know how devotedly he had been tended—how he owed his very existence to her.

He mended slowly, but by the middle of May he was able to get out. Of course he was very grateful to the Lees, and their house was almost the only one he visited. Alexandrine was fitful and moody. Sometimes she received him with the greatest warmth, and then she would be cold and distant. She puzzled Archer strangely. He wanted to be friends with her. He felt that he owed her an immense debt of gratitude, and he desired to treat her as he would a dear sister.

Perhaps it was because time hung so heavily on his hands, that Trevlyn went so frequently to Mrs. Lee's. Certainly he did not go to visit Alexandrine. We all know how the habit of visiting certain places grow upon us, without any particular cause, until we feel the necessity of going through with the regular routine every day. He was to blame for following up this acquaintance so closely, but he did it without any wrong intention. He never thought it possible that any one should dream of his being in love with Alexandrine.

But the world talked. They said it was a very pretty romance; Mr. Trevlyn had been deserted by his lady love, had fallen ill on account of it, had been nursed by one whom of course he would marry. Indeed, they thought him in duty bound to do so. In what other way could he manifest his gratitude?

Vague whispers of this reached Trevlyn's ear, but he gave them at first little heed. He should never marry, he said; it was sinful to wed without love. But as he saw Alexandrine's pale face and strangely distraught manner day by day, he came to feel as if he had in some way wronged her, though how he did not exactly understand.

One day he entered the sitting-room of Mrs. Lee with the freedom of a privileged visitor, without rapping, and found Alexandrine in tears. He would have retreated, but she had already seen him, and he felt that it would be better to remain. He spoke to her kindly.

"I trust nothing has occurred to distress you?" She looked up at him almost defiantly.

"Leave me!" she said, impetuously; "you, of all others, have no right to question me!"

"Pardon me!" he exclaimed, alarmed by her strange emotion, "and why not I question you?"

"Because you have caused me misery enough already—"

THE TRADE REVIEW.

DUN & CO.'S REPORT PROMISES BETTER TIMES.

Stiffening in Prices Is the Immediate Result of the Uncertainty Ended by the Election—Failures Decrease in Number.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"A great revolution has been effected this week in the conditions which control business. It was not strictly logical that wheat advanced 5 cents, reaching 82 cents for November and 85 cents for December, and heavy realizing of profits showed perception of the fact. Western receipts were only 6,087,159 bushels, against 8,019,910 last year, and Atlantic exports, flour included, were only 1,588,358, against 1,790,833 last year. A growing disposition appears among farmers to hold wheat for better prices than are now realized, although at present any advance checks buying for export.

"Speculation in cotton was also excited on the theory that mills would now start up, as many have done, and would make a large demand for goods. But the advance was met by realizing sales and a slight reaction. It will be all the better for business if bright hopes do not hoist prices too fast.

"The election immediately stiffened prices of pig iron, which reached $12 at Pittsburg for Bessemer, and the certainty that many large orders for buildings and bridges and other finished forms would now become operative justifies some advance. The billet pool, which is still openly undersold at Pittsburg, and has caused no end of disturbance in business by favoring one class of producers to the detriment of another, has been in session here, and is said to have changed its basis of allotment so as to secure fairer results.

"Practically no change has appeared in woolens, but the reported purchase of wool, including one of 11,000,000 pounds of territory, said to have been made by a syndicate, amounted to 18,561,000 pounds, against 5,621,350 last year, and 8,215,000 in 1892. The average of prices rose about half a cent in October, and since Sept. 1 104 quotations by Coates Bros. have risen from 12.16 to 12.92 cents, or 6.3 per cent.

"Failures for the week have been 230 in the United States, against 280 last year, and 52 in Canada, against 49 last year."

THIRTEEN DROWNED.

Schooner Maggie Sunk in the Harbor at St. Johns, N. F.

The schooner Maggie, Capt. William Blundon, while entering the harbor at St. Johns, N. F., late on Friday night, with twenty-three persons aboard, was struck by the steamer Tiber, Captain John Delisle which was steaming outward at full speed. The schooner sank from the force of the collision, carrying down with it thirteen persons. Four of these were women, one the wife of the captain and another his sister. A young married couple named Power and a brother and sister of the name of Holloway are of those drowned. The passengers were coming to St. John's to procure their supplies for the winter before navigation closed. Those who escaped were kept afloat by the aid of planks from the schooner's decks, and were picked up by the steamer's boat and brought back to the port by the pilot boat which had the Tiber in tow. The Tiber continued on her voyage.

Brutal Murder at Joliet, Ill.

Constable Frank DeLong, a highly honored old citizen, was killed at Joliet, Ill., Wednesday in an attempt to serve a warrant upon Lyman Hall, charged with disorderly conduct. He was met at the door by Hall and shot three times. Hall went to the police station to give himself up. The police sent him at once to jail, fearing he would be lynched.

Offers to Pay Bryan's Expenses.

Charles D. Lane, part owner of the Utica gold mine in California, announces that he will give William J. Bryan financial support in his advocacy of bimetalism. The Californian will see to it that Mr. Bryan's traveling expenses of himself and family are paid during the campaign of education which he proposes to conduct during the next four years.

Andrus Mystery Not Solved.

The inquest into the death of Hamlin J. Andrus, who was killed in his office over two weeks ago by the explosion of a dynamite bomb, has been again postponed, and this time indefinitely. This means that official action looking toward the solution of one of the most remarkable mysteries of the times has been abandoned.

How Congress Will Stand.

A table prepared by the Associated Press from the latest telegraphic returns shows the election of 201 republicans to the next house, 124 democrats, 19 populists, fusionists and independents, a number which perhaps should be slightly increased, as a few of those classified as democrats have independent leanings.

Boys and Postage Stamps.

"A postage stamp is like a boy," remarked Mr. Snaggs to his son. "Because it sticks to its work till it gets there, I suppose," replied Sammy Snaggs, who is a smart boy. "No," corrected his pa. "That is not it. A boy and a postage stamp are much alike because neither is of much use until well licked."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Monon Route & C. H. & D. The Monon has put on a fast flyer for Indianapolis and Cincinnati in connection with the C. H. & D. The train leaves Chicago, Dearborn Station, at 11:50 A. M., reaches Indianapolis at 4:37 and Cincinnati at 7:45 P. M., thus making the run, Chicago to Indianapolis, in four hours and forty-seven minutes, and Cincinnati in seven hours and fifty-five minutes. This is the fastest time made between Chicago and Indianapolis and Cincinnati by any line. The "Cincinnati Flyer" is equipped with elegant day coaches, the Monon celebrated high-backed seats, parlor car and dining car. City Ticket Office, 232 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

The famous trans-continental train via the Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line, leaves Chicago at 6 p. m. every day in the year via the Chicago & North-Western R'y, and makes the trip to California in only three days. Double Drawing-room Sleeping Cars, Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, Dining Cars and free Reclining Chair Cars are features of the equipment of this perfect train. Agents of connecting lines sell tickets via the Chicago & North-Western R'y. Illustrated pamphlets and full information will be furnished on application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago, Ill.

In New Town District. "You don't seem to be making much headway with your new town?" "No; six hundred settlers arrived on Wednesday last, but all were born editors and wanted to start a newspaper. If we could only get three farmers and a couple of mechanics perhaps we could open business!" It goes without saying that an author to succeed must have "The Red Badge of Courage" in no limited measure.—Atlanta Constitution.

Home-Seekers' Excursions. On November 17 and December 1 and 15, 1896, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway will sell round trip excursion tickets from Chicago to a great many points in the Western and Southwestern states, both on its own line and elsewhere, at greatly reduced rates. Details as to rates, routes, etc., may be obtained on application to any coupon ticket agent or by addressing Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Tourist Car to California. An Upholstered Pullman Tourist car is run every Wednesday by the Northern Pacific. Fee, Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent, N. P. Ry. Co., St. Paul, Minn., sending six cents for tourist literature.

Modest Young Man. The following advertisement appeared in a provincial contemporary: "Wanted—Superior apartments by a young man where his company must be considered more than ample remuneration for board and lodging. Apply, etc."—London Exchange.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

CAN'T HELP TELLING. No village so small. No city so large. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, names known for all that is truthful, all that is reliable, are attached to the most thankful letters. They come to Lydia E. Pinkham, and tell the one story of physical salvation gained through the aid of her Vegetable Compound. The horrors born of displacement or ulceration of the womb: Backache, bearing-down, dizziness, fear of coming calamity, distrust of best friends. All, all—sorrows and sufferings of the past. The famed "Vegetable Compound" bearing the illustrious name, Pinkham, has brought them out of the valley of suffering to that of happiness and usefulness.

All Right. Jinks—See here, old boy, you ought to do something to reduce your flesh. You are becoming fearfully stout. Minks—Say, Jinks, you are about the fortieth friend who has made that offensive remark to-day, and I'm getting tired of it. It worries me. Jinks—That's all right. Worry reduces flesh.—Nuggets.

An Important Difference. To make it apparent to thousands, who think themselves ill, that they are not afflicted with any disease, but that the system simply needs cleansing, is to bring comfort home to their hearts, as a costive condition is easily cured by using Syrup of Figs. When bilious or costive, eat a Cascaret candy cathartic, cure guaranteed. 10c, 25c. Wood for tennis racquets is kept five years before being used.

Blood... Bubbles.

Those pimples or blotches that disgrace your skin, are blood bubbles. They mark the unhealthy condition of the blood-current that throws them up. You must get down to the blood, before you can be rid of them. Local treatment is useless. It suppresses, but does not heal. The best remedy for eruptions, scrofula, sores, and all blood diseases, is

WHAT THEY SAW.

Sights and Scenes from the Bridal Trip of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Robertson.

We will leave the busy cities for a while and go about 50 miles north of Syracuse to a little place called Sandy Creek, a town about the size of our town. On entering New York State we noted in particular the vast quantities of apples raised there—thousands and thousands of bushels. The State is wonderfully picturesque on account of the vast forests, the diversity of the surface, abounding in hills and valleys, and the numerous lakes and rivers. We noticed here and there an old-fashioned rail fence, quite frequently stump fences, and in the northern part of the State stone walls are the only fences seen. In many places there are large beds of solid rock. All of the rivers of Northern New York seem to have cut their channels right through the solid stone. Geologists might find a vast field for study in this section. The rock is also fossiliferous. We find impressions of the shell fish, tritobites, etc.

Sandy Creek is only six miles from Lake Ontario. This strip of land along the lake to Sackett's harbor was somewhat famous in the war of 1812. In one grave near the lake are the remains of twelve British soldiers who were killed during the war. John Otis helped to carry the cable to Sackett's Harbor to launch one of the great battle ships. The British took possession of his house, and his wife, with a babe in her arms, fled on horseback amid flying bullets. One of the bullets struck a log near by and shattered it so that the pieces flew and hit her and the horse. Today there is a flattened bullet in the National Museum labeled "The ball that struck Mrs. Otis' foot."

In driving from Sandy Creek to Adams we passed the home of Marietta Holley, author of "Samantha Allen." Little summer arbors and rustic bridges are noticeable here. She does a great deal of her writing out of doors. Another curiosity is the covered bridge. The road appeared to end as we approached the bridge, and one of our party remarked: "What are you going to drive through that barn for?" We passed through a strip of country about twelve miles long and one-fourth of a mile wide that was literally covered with stones, ranging in size from mere pebbles to great boulders, so thick that one could easily step from one to the other the whole distance to the lake. These rocks are supposed to have been deposited during some glacial period in the remote history of the world.

From Adams we went to Clayton and took a trip to Alexandria Bay, down the St. Lawrence River. One could not dream of anything more beautiful than the views obtained in passing among the Thousand Islands. They appear to be of almost solid rock. The rock is in layers or blocks and appears to be easily split. Pines, birch and maple trees grow from the ledges and sides. On every island worthy of note are one or more beautiful residences, that of Geo. M. Pullman being a magnificent structure built of gray stone. The grounds surrounding it is a park in itself. It is called "Castle Rest."

Just opposite Alexandria Bay light-houses are numerous, and are useful as safeguards against danger. The channels necessarily is carefully chosen, on account of the abundance of projecting rock. The largest of the Thousand Islands is Welleis island, fourteen miles long, and enclosing a lake of considerable size. The waters of the St. Lawrence are deep blue, shading into a green. The river is nine miles wide at Clayton.

The Eastern villages show their age mostly in the style of architecture employed in building. Numerous old taverns and wayside inns were pointed out to us as being among those old-time relics. Between Pulaski and Sandy Creek was an immense tavern called the "Half Way Station Between Watertown and Syracuse." Additions had been built to it until the low structure covers about an acre of ground. In this tavern a cheese weighing 1,600 pounds was made and sent as a present to one of the presidents.

M'CLAIN-PRICE.

Yesterday afternoon, at the home of Rev. S. M. Wilcox, occurred the wedding of William S. McClain and Miss Nellie Price, both of Wauconda. Mr. McClain is a young man, and a carpenter by trade, and is very highly esteemed by all his friends. The bride is one of the most popular young ladies of the town. They will make Wauconda their home, where Mr. McClain has a prosperous business.

About a year ago Mr. and Mrs. McClain attended a wedding in this city as best man and bridesmaid, but this year they thought they could do even better. They now know how much easier it is to stand in the middle during the ceremony than at the ends. Thursday's Waukegan Herald.

THE REVIEW offers congratulations.
