Barrington is to put in a good system of water works. Barrington is keeping abreast of the times. They now have a good sewer system, electric lights and streets named and houses numbered.

The Chicago & Northwestern Railway company have just put in a new crossing from the depot platform to Mrs. Schierding's place. We hope, now that they have got started, they will repair the rest of the crossings. They all need it.

Mrs. M. D. Brown and brother and Milton Brown drove to Rockford last week and enjoyed themselves on the way by fishing in the different streams they crossed. They visited with Dr. and Mrs. Clark a few days and returned home Friday. Dr. and Mrs. Clark drove from Rockford for a return visit last Saturday and stayed until Wednesday evening.

The photographer (2) who had his car located on Mrs. Johnson's lot for two weeks, left for greener fields last Tuesday. We understand that a number of our people got a little experience before he left. A number of orders were taken by him to deliver photographs at $1 per dozen and only six pictures were delivered and the rest are still coming. He evidently thought that those who got the first half dozen would not want the remainder after they had seen the first six. Some who paid in advance refused the pictures when they saw them and let him keep the pictures on account of the poor work done. Some Barrington people report the same experience. Arlington Heights is now ornamented by his car.

The best American play yet written, as not only the critics but the principal dramatic authors united in declaring "Secret Service" to be, will begin a season at Hooley's theatre, Chicago, Monday evening, September 27. "Secret Service" is a pretty love story. To be more exact it is several pretty love stories, for there are several pairs of lovers in it. The chief interest, however, centers in the battle of hearts between the Northern secret service man and the charming Southern girl, whose face has won him but whose loyalty to the Confederacy makes her a difficult prize to capture. A finer love story has never found its way to the stage, and Mr. Gillette and his company tell it splendidly.

Palatine sent a big delegation to the fair at Libertyville Thursday, about fifty people from this place being in attendance, and the fair proved a good attraction on this day. The free-for-all running race proved the most exciting of the day's sporting events. John Wilson's horse, Gladys Lee, won the first heat handily against a good field. In the second heat the horse failed to get away with the bunch, but ran a good race, getting up in the bunch at the finish. The third heat proved an easy one for the little black and the crowd cheered the little favorite when she came under the pole. Another crowd from this place went to Libertyville yesterday. Chas. Seip had his horse entered in the free-for-all pacing contest.

The committee composed of C. W. Ost, R. M. Putnam and C. D. Taylor, who were appointed to look up the cost of a water works, went to Woodstock Tuesday, accompanied by Chas. H. Patten. The committee were met at the depot by the mayor and one of the aldermen, and after inspecting their water works system and being shown a drill in getting to and fighting fire, they were carried about town in a hack, and after a dinner furnished them by the hospital officials of the place, they were taken to the more prominent buildings and manufacturing industries and shown something of the town's enterprise. The committee were highly pleased by the manner they were entertained and declare that Woodstock is a good place.

PART II.

As a rule, the more churlish the nature, the more avaricious it is found to be. My promise of liberal remuneration was, after all, not without its effect upon the strange couple whose refusal to afford me refuge had so nearly endangered my life. They condescended to get me some tea and rough food. After I had disposed of all that, the man produced a bottle of gin. We filled our glasses, and then, with the aid of my pipe, I settled down to make the best of a night spent in a hard wooden chair.

I had come across strange people in my travels, but I have no hesitation in saying that my host was the silliest, sulkiest, most boorish specimen of human nature I had as yet met with. In spite of his recent ill-treatment of me I was quite ready to establish matters on a friendly footing, and made several attempts to draw him into conversation. The brute would only answer in monosyllables, or often not answer at all. So I gave up talking as a bad job, and sat in silence, smoking, and looking into the fire, thinking a good deal, it may be, of some one I should have met that morning at Lilymere, and that wretched snow but kept off.

The long clock—that cumbersome eight-day machine which inevitably occupies one corner of every cottager's kitchen—struck nine. The woman rose and left us. I concluded she was going to bed. If so I envied her. Her husband showed no signs of retiring. He still sat over the fire, opposite me. By this time I was dreadfully tired; every bone in my body ached. The hard chair which, an hour or two ago, seemed all I could desire, now scarcely came up to my ideas of the comfort I was justly entitled to claim. My sulky companion had been drinking silently but steadily. Perhaps the liquor he had poured into himself might have rendered his frame of mind more pleasant and amenable to reason.

"My good fellow," I said, "your chairs are excellent ones of the kind, but deucedly uncomfortable. I am horribly tired. If the resources of your establishment can't furnish a bed for me to sleep in, couldn't you find a mattress or something to lay down before the fire?"

"You've got all you'll get to-night," he answered, knocking the ashes out of his pipe.

"Oh, but I say!"

"So do I say. I say this: If you don't like it you can leave it. We didn't ask you to come."

"You infernal beast," I muttered—and meant it too. I declare, had I not been so utterly worn out, I would have had that bullet-headed ruffian up for a few rounds on his own kitchen floor, and tried to knock him into a more amiable frame of mind.

"Never mind," I said, "but remember, civility costs nothing, and often gets rewarded. However, if you wish to retire to your own couch, don't let your native politeness stand in your way. Pray don't hesitate on my account. Leave plenty of fuel, and I shall manage until the morning."

"Where you stay, I stay," he answered. Then he filled his pipe, and once more relapsed into stony silence.

I bothered about him no more. I dozed off for a few minutes—woke—dozed off again for some hours. I was in an uncomfortable sort of half sleep, crammed full of curious dreams—dreams from which I started, wondering where I was and how I got there. I even began to grow nervous. All sorts of horrible travelers' tales ran through my head. It was in just such places as this that unsuspecting voyagers were stated to have been murdered and robbed, by just such unmitigated ruffians as my host—I can tell you that altogether I spent a most unpleasant night.

To make matters worse and more dismal, the storm still raged outside. The wind moaned through the trees, but it had again changed, and I knew from the sound on the window panes that heavy rain had succeeded snow. As the big drops of water found their way down the large old-fashioned chimney, the fire hissed and sputtered like a spiteful vixen. Everything combined to deprive me of what dog's sleep I could by sheer persistency snatch.

I think I tried every position which an ordinary man, not an acrobat, is capable of adopting with the assistance of a common wooden chair. I even lay down on the hard flags. I actually tried the table. I propped up the upper half of my body against the corner walls of the room; but found no rest. At last I gave up all idea of sleeping, and fully aroused myself. I comforted myself by saying that my misery was only temporary—that the longest night must come to an end.

My companion had now succumbed to fatigue, or to the combined effects of fatigue and gin and water. His head was hanging sideways and he slept in a most uncomfortable attitude. I chuckled as I looked at him, feeling quite sure that, if such a clod was capable of dreaming at all, his dreams must be worse even than mine. I filled another pipe, poked the smoldering logs into a blaze, and sat almost nose and knees over the fire, finding some amusement in speculating upon the condition of the churl before me, and thanking the Lord I was not like unto this man. Suddenly an idea flashed across me.

I had seen this fellow before. But when or where I could not remember. His features, as I looked at them with keener interest, seemed to grow more and more familiar to me. Where could I have met him? Somewhere or other, but where? I racked my brain to associate him with some scene, some event. Although he was but an ordinary countryman, such as one sees scores of in a day's ride, only differing from his kind on account of his unpleasant face, I felt sure we were old acquaintances. When he awoke for a moment and changed his strained attitude, my feeling grew stronger and stronger. Yet puzzle and puzzle as I would I could not call to mind a former encounter; so at last I began to think the supposed recognition was pure fancy on my part.

Having smoked out several pipes, I thought that a cigar would be a slight break to the monotony of the night's proceedings. So I drew out my case and looked at its contents. Among the weeds was one of a lighter color than the others. As I took it out I said to myself, "Why, Old Brand gave me that one when I was last at his house." Curiously enough, that cigar was the missing link in the chain of my memory. As I held it in my hand I knew at once why my host's ugly face seemed familiar to me.

About a fortnight before, being in town, I had spent the evening with the doctor. He was not alone, and I was introduced to a tall pale young man named Carriston. He was a pleasant, polite young fellow, although not much in my line. At first I judged him to be a would-be poet of the fashionable miserable school; but finding that he and Brand talked so much about art I eventually decided that he was one of the doctor's many artist friends. Art is a hobby he hacks about on grandly. (Mem., Brand's own attempts at pictures are simply atrocious!)

Just before I left, Carriston, the doctor's back being turned, asked me to step into another room. There he showed me the portrait of a man. It seemed very cleverly drawn, and I presume he wanted me to criticise it.

"I am a precious bad judge," I said. "I am not asking you to pass an opinion," said Carriston. "I wanted to beg a favor of you. I am almost ashamed to beg it on so short an acquaintance."

He seemed modest, and not in want of money, so I encouraged him to proceed.

"I heard you say you were going into the country," he resumed. "I want to ask you if by any chance you should meet the original of that drawing, to telegraph at once to Dr. Brand."

"Whereabouts does he live?"

"I have no idea. If chance throws him in your way, please do as I ask."

"Certainly I will," I said, seeing the young man made the request in solemn earnest.

He thanked me, and then gave me a small photograph of the picture. This photograph he begged me to keep in my pocket-book, so that I might refer to it in case I met the man he wanted. I put it there, went my way, and am sorry to say, forgot all about it. Had it not been for the strange cigar in my case bringing back Carriston's unusual request to my mind, the probabilities are that I should not have thought again of the matter. Now, by a remarkable coincidence, I was spending the night with the very man who, so far as my memory served me, must have sat for the portrait shown me at Brand's house.

"I wonder what I did with the photo," I said. I turned out my letter-case. There it was, right enough! Shading it with one hand, I carefully compared it with the sleeper.

Not a doubt about it! So far as a photograph taken from a picture can go, it was the man himself. The same ragged beard, the same coarse features, the same surly look. Young Carriston was evidently a wonderful hand at knocking off a likeness. Moreover, in case I had felt any doubt on the matter, a printed note at the bottom of the photograph said that one joint was missing from a right-hand finger. Sure enough, my friend lacked that small portion of his misbegotten frame.

This discovery threw me into an ecstasy of delight. I laughed so loudly that I almost awoke the ruffian. I guessed I was going to take a glorious revenge for all the discomforts I had suffered. No one, I felt sure, could be looking for such a fellow as this to do any good to him. I was quite happy in the thought, and for the remainder of the night gloated over the idea of putting a spoke in the wheel of one who had been within an ace of causing my death. I resolved, the moment I got back to civilization, to send the desired intelligence to Brand, and hope for the best.

IV.
HE end of that wretched night came at last. When the welcome morning broke, I found that a great change had taken place out of doors. The fierce snow-storm had been the farewell of the frost. The heavy rain that followed had filled the roads with slushy and rapidly-thawing snow. I managed to extort some sort of a breakfast from my host; then, having recompensed him according to my promise—not his deserts—started, as soon as I could, on the bare back of my unfortunate steed for Midcombe, which place, after my night's experience, seemed gifted with merits not its own.

I was surprised upon leaving the house to find that it was of larger dimensions than, from the little I saw of it during the night, I had imagined. It was altogether a better class of residence than I had supposed. My surly friend accompanied me until he had placed me on the main road, where I could make no possible mistake. He was kind enough to promise to assist any one I might send out in getting the dog-cart once more under way. Then with a hearty wish on my part that I might never again meet with his like, we parted.

I found my way to Midcombe without much trouble. I took off my things, had a wash, and, like a sensible man for once, went to bed. But I did not forget to send a boy straight off to the nearest telegraph station. My message to Brand was a brief one. It simply said: "Tell your friend I have found his man." This duty done, I dismissed all speculation as to the result from my mind, and settled down to make up arrears of sleep.

I was surprised at the reply received that same evening from Brand, "We shall be with you as soon as we can get down to-morrow. Meet us at station." From this it was clear that my friend was wanted particularly—all the better! I turned to the time table and found that, owing to changes and delays, they could not get to C—, the nearest station to Midcombe, until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. I inquired about the crippled dog-cart. It had been brought in; so I left strict instructions that a shaft of some sort was to be rigged in time for me to drive over the next day and meet the doctor and his friend.

They came as promised. It was a comfort to see friends of any description, so I gave them a hearty welcome. Carriston took hold of both my hands, and shook them so warmly that I began to fear that I had discovered a long-lost father of his in my friend. I had almost forgotten the young fellow's appearance, or he looked a very different man to-day from the one I had seen when last we met. Then he was a wan, pensive, romantic, poetical-looking sort of a fellow; now he seemed full of energy, vitality, and grit. Poor old Brand looked as serious as an undertaker engaged in burying his own mother.

Carriston began to question me, but Brand stopped him. "You promised I should make inquiries first," he said. Then he turned to me.

"Look here, Richard"—when he calls me Richard I know he is fearfully in earnest—"I believe you have brought us down on a fool's errand; but let us go to some place where we can talk together for a few minutes."

I led them across the road to the Railway Inn. We entered a room, and having for the sake of appearances ordered a little light refreshment, told the waiter to shut the door from the outside. Brand settled down with the air of a cross-examining counsel. I expected to see him pull out a New Testament and put me on my oath.

"Now, Richard," he said, "before we go further I want to know your reasons for thinking this man, about whom you telegraphed, is Carriston's man, as you call him."

"Reasons! Why of course he is the man. Carriston gave me his photograph. The likeness is undisputable—leaving the finger joint out of the question."

Here Carriston looked at my cross-examiner triumphantly. The meaning of that look I have never to this hour understood. But I laughed because I knew old Brand had for once made a mistake, and was going to be called to account for it. Carriston was about to speak, but the doctor waved him aside.

ILLINOIS NEWSLETS.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

While no occasion for alarm exists in this state over the appearance of yellow fever in the far south, the Illinois state board of health is taking precautionary measures to combat the pest if it moves dangerously near to Illinois.

The railroad and warehouse commissioners have sustained the demurrer of the St. Louis, Peoria and Northern railroad in petition filed against the road by D. L. Wing. The case is dismissed on account of the commission having no jurisdiction.

Dixon.—The annual election of officers of the Rock River Assembly, held in this city yesterday, resulted as follows: Prof. A. A. Krape, Lena, Ill., president; O. B. Blackman, of Dixon, Ill., vice-president; W. H. Hartman, of Forreston, Ill., secretary, and W. T. Schell, of Polo, Ill., treasurer.

"I will close up these joints or I will allow them to remain open, just as I please, and I don't see what you people are going to do about it, anyway. I am not looking for advice from a lot of professional holier than thou fanatics, who nevertheless always have their hands in somebody else's pockets."

Bloomington.—A number of horses suffering from pinkeye were brought to the city yesterday and placed in a livery stable. Steps were taken at once to quarantine the stable and have the horses removed as soon as possible. This is the first appearance of the malady in Bloomington since the great epidemic of it twenty years ago.

Springfield.—The course of James Carson, president of the state organization, at the miners' conference in Columbus today cannot be foretold with certainty. It is probable, however, that he will endeavor to carry out the wishes of the Illinois miners by demanding a rate equally as high as that conceded the eastern miners. Resolutions to this effect were passed here and at many other mass meetings of miners throughout central and southern Illinois.

Muscoutah.—There is trouble over the St. Clair county fair at Belleville. It has been caused by the action of the fair association in arranging for pool selling at the grounds. The clergymen protested without avail. They then called a public meeting at the court house to express condemnation of the action of the fair association. The meeting was packed by the followers of the pool sellers, and instead of condemning the fair association for its work, adopted commendatory resolutions.

Mount Vernon.—"Jim" Berry is still in town and manages to let the neighbors know he is here. When "Jim" passed through here a few days ago a professional tramp he is said to have stopped a few days with Joseph Brown, a farmer. Since he returned Berry is said to have hunted up his former benefactor, whom he found out of luck with a $250 mortgage on his little farm, drought scorching his corn, and a sorry prospect ahead. Berry is said to have given him the amount of the mortgage, besides throwing in a $50 bill as a present to one of Brown's family.

Springfield.—The will of Thomas Brady, who was a wealthy member of the Catholic church and who died here last week at the age of 91, has been filed for probate. Included among the bequests are $14,000 to be used to establish a home in this city for old and infirm persons, $2,500 to St. Agnes' parochial school, $6,000 to the Diocesan orphan asylum at Alton, $500 each to the Ursuline and Dominican schools of this city, $1,000 to the Church of the Immaculate Conception and $500 to St. John's hospital. The remainder of the property is divided among the relatives.

There is one disappointed young woman in Binghampton, according to the Chronicle of that city. She has always declared that when she got married she would have an apple blossom wedding, with her home glorified by these fragrant blooms. The lucky man came along last fall, proposed, was accepted, and the bride arranged for a wedding to occur during the third week of May. The invitations were out but to her horror she saw the apple blossoms falling day by day, and she sadly realized that she had planned for two weeks too late and that something else than apple blossoms must be used for her wedding decorations. The prospective bride had but one recourse, if she wanted to be married under the apple blossoms. She must postpone the wedding a year, and then watch out to have the ceremony performed while the bloom is on the trees. Nature is so uncertain and fickle nowadays that it takes a pretty smart girl to catch her in the right mood. It is not safe to go by the almanac in fixing on apple blossom time.

That is what Nebraska offers to the homeseeker. Ask your nearest ticket agent about the cheap rates, or write to F. S. Eustis, General Passenger Agent, C. B. & Q. R. R., Chicago, Ill.

A Question Answered.

The State Board of Nebraska recently sent out circulars to the farmers of the state, asking the question: "Does farming pay?" The following letter reproduced from the September number of "The Corn Belt" would seem to answer the question pretty effectively: Seward, Neb., Aug. 25, 1897.

To the Editor of the Corn Belt: I landed in Seward County Nov. 22, 1868, from Pennsylvania, overland with a team and wagon and about $800 in money. I now have 400 acres of well improved land within sight of the county seat, unencumbered, worth $20,000. I also have 30 head of horses, 35 head of thoroughbred Hereford cattle and 100 head of thoroughbred Poland-China hogs, some 8 or 10 of them costing me $110 each. I also have city property to the amount of over $3,000, and some $3,000 or more of personal property, besides several thousand bushels of corn and grain. I have made it a point to feed all I raise. I do not believe I have sold over a thousand bushels of corn since I have lived in the state. While we have had a few short crops, we have never had a total failure. I am well pleased with farming in Nebraska and would advise all my friends to cast their lot with us. Yours very truly, Levi Hofer.

The Popular Jacket for Next Winter.

"The tendency of the winter jacket is toward the blouse effect, which is obtained by darts," writes Isabel A. Mallon in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Yokes, collars, cuffs, pipings in fur, whether it be mink, Persian lamb, ermine, sable, silver and black fox, or monkey, will be popular. Velvet and silk braid of all widths are much used. Satin cloth is really the novelty of the day, and obtains in heliotrope, green, mode, golden brown, silver gray, royal blue, dove and Lincoln green. On this are seen, not only the fur decorations mentioned, but also a very thick, coarse black woolen braid, and tiny straps of leather matching or contrasting with the cloth in color. Collars continue high, are gored and undulating, and may be led with fur, velvet or lace. Watteau effects are seen. Capes will continue to be worn. The novelty in their trimming is a flounce of the same material about the edges, described by the French modiste as 'cut in round.'"

A New Through Passenger Route for Colorado, Utah and California.

The Chicago Times-Herald of August 27, says that on September 12 the new traffic alliance between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway goes into effect, and on that date the former will send its first Denver sleeper out of Chicago. This will be attached to its regular night train for Omaha, and will be delivered there to the Rock Island. On October 2 the tourist car route over these two lines, the Colorado Midland and Southern Pacific will be inaugurated. Tourist cars will be run once a week between Chicago and San Francisco. For further details regarding this new route call on or address Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, C. & St. P. Ry., 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.

A Criticism.

"But," said the argumentative friend, "there is some reason for people complaining at the increase of price for sugar."

"Not necessarily," replied Senator Sorghum blandly. "Sugar is unhealthy as a diet, anyway. Where they made their mistake was in not letting sugar alone and saving up their money to buy stock."—Washington Star.

CURED OF CHOREA.

How a Well-Known Young Lady of Du Page was Freed From St. Vitus' Dance.

From the American, Newark, Ohio. Miss Francis E. Barber, daughter of Mr. Franklin C. Barber, of Du Page, Ill., who is one of the best-known citizens of Du Page, for the past year has been in a pitiful condition from chorea, commonly called St. Vitus' dance. Miss Barber is a music teacher, and overwork and a highly nervous temperament brought on the disease. The best physicians were called but they could do nothing for the young lady, and she got so bad and the spasms became so fierce at times that it often required three or four persons to hold her. The contortions of her face at such times were fearful to behold and filled those who saw her with horror. While Miss Barber was thus suffering, with no seeming prospect of relief, the distracted father and mother heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as a last resort they determined to try them on the daughter.

After taking less than one box of the pills the spasms ceased and the twitching of the face became less and less violent. Before four boxes had been used all signs of St. Vitus' dance had gone, her health was restored, and today she is one of the healthiest and rosiest girls in Du Page.

In six months from the time Miss Barber began to take the pills she was able to resume her occupation as music teacher, and never has felt the slightest symptoms of the old malady. The young lady is the niece of R. E. Barber, Esquire, the well-known lawyer of Joliet.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Miraculously Saved.

Up in the city hall they were talking about fires the other day, and somebody spoke of the narrow escape a citizen had not long ago. According to the story he left a certain dwelling just ten minutes before it was struck by lightning.

"It was an awful close call," said the narrator.

Chief Dickinson's eyes twinkled. "That reminds me of a narrow escape I had during the war," he said. "I arrived on the field of battle—it was one of the fiercest engagements of the war—just twenty-four hours after the fight was over. Of course, if I had been there in time I would have been killed. In fact, I have often thought, with a shudder, of that unusually close call."

And the man with the lightning story walked away.—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

The Post of the Future—A Familiar Phrase Explained—A Natural Mistake—From Sunshine to Storm—Where Peace Prevails.

The Future Post.

OME day a post will arise, With well-cut hair and steady eyes, (They usually have flowing hair, And eyes with an outlandish stare,) Who'll make the limpest mortal feel Th' allurements of the speedy wheel; He'll tell them of the pleasant sights, The subtle charm of moonlit nights, And soon they'll think of naught beside, But just to get a "bike" and ride. —S. P. Hazard, No. 169, 203.

From Sunshine to Storm.

The other day an Irishman went to his late employer's house and said cheerfully:

"Good morning, sor. Begorra, you're a gentleman," shakes hands with him; "shure yer woife's a perfect lady," shakes hands with her; "yer daughter's a little angel," takes her up in his arms and kisses her; "and yer dog's a beauty," pats dog on the head.

"Well, Pat," said his employer, "I must thank you kindly for your compliments, but I am very sorry to say I have no work for you this morning."

"What!" exclaimed Pat, aghast, "no work? Then yer an ould pig; yer woife's a female alligator; yer daughter's a baboon-faced haythen, an' yer dog's not worth cats' meat;" and then he bolted.

A Natural Mistake.

Jack—What, mosquitoes here! Agnes—Oh, no! that's only brother playing the mandolin.—New York Ledger.

The Tramp's Generosity.

A gentleman returning home late one night down a lonely country road was suddenly attacked by a tramp, who, not satisfied with annexing his victim's watch and chain, turned his pockets out also.

When the unfortunate gentleman had staggered on to his feet again, he beheld the tramp standing a few yards away smiling at his discomfort.

"Here's half-a-crown for yer, guv'nor," he said, showing his dirty yellow teeth; "my pal's down the road; if he meets you, and you haven't got no money on you, he'll scorch your skin for you. Now, be off."

Familiar Phrase Explained.

Robinson—Well, old chap, how did you sleep last night? Smith (who had dined out)—Like a top. As soon as my head touched the pillow, it went round and round.

Where Peace Prevails.

"Was it a restful place out at that country boarding house?" "Yes; in the parlor was a sign which read: 'This piano is closed for repairs.'"

Cafe De Madrid.

The closing of the cafe de Madrid, for a long time a favorite resort for Parisian men of letters, recalls a couple of anecdotes, says the Bookman. Proth was one day passing the cafe arm in arm with poor Paul Arene. Arene was going in and urged him to do the same. Proth resisted, saying there were too many quarrels in that cafe, only people with hot tempers, etc. At last he yielded, and, five minutes after being seated, in a heated discussion slapped his contradictor's face. "You see," he said to Paul Arene, "is it not an impossible cafe?" The time of the second story was the last years of the reign of Napoleon III. Clement Duvernois, who had just passed from the Republican into the Bonapartist camp, was urging a friend of his—a man whom he judged to be amenable to the same arguments that had convinced him—to follow his example. "But," the friend objected, "what will my friends say?" "Oh," Duvernois retorted, "you will only have to change your cafe."

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

Captain Mahan's Outlook.

In Harper's Magazine Captain A. T. Mahan describes what he believes to be the outlook of civilization on the threshold of the twentieth century.

The nations of Europe are pressing onward and outward with their great armies and navies. In India, in Egypt, on the Turkish border and in southern, eastern and western Africa the trend of events is for occidentism to push on and on and crowd out orientalism and barbarism. Eastern and western civilizations will lock horns in a last combat. One must go down before the other.

Captain Mahan believes, in common with Europeans and Americans, that the aggressive, pushing, materialistic civilization of Europe and the United States is necessary to the progress of mankind. The Turk, the Hindoo and the Chinaman disagree with them. The difference of opinion must be fought out with armies and navies, Captain Mahan thinks.

The United States cannot remain a silent spectator of the war between occident and orient, he says. We must be prepared to take our share of it. We need military and naval stations in the Caribbean sea as outposts. We need also the isthmian canal and Hawaii as other outposts. To take our share in the advancement of civilization it is necessary that we build straightway a strong navy and be prepared to maintain our rights against even our brethren of Europe who are to advance western civilization by the sword. There is no such guarantee for peace as being prepared for war.

Wherever there is oppression there will be lying and treachery. The Russians are said to be a nation of liars, the most elegant and accomplished liars on earth too. It is true, the explanation of it is to be found in the despotic character of the Russian government. When one is too weak to resist, he takes refuge in deceit to save himself. The unreliability of the Chinese, the Hindoos and orientals generally is to be explained by the ages of despotic rule under which they suffered. The greatest difficulty in the way of making any reforms go in Korea is the treacherous and unreliable character of the people, their "want of frankness," as a writer calls it. It is said there are two classes in Korea, the squeezers and the squeezed. The first is the official class, who live off the second class, the producers, and grind money out of them. The result is double dealing and falseness alike among all. The same is true of the official class and the producing class in China. It is lamentable, but what could you expect? Wherever there are severity and tyranny there will be treachery, whether in the case of family discipline or national rule. Harshness begets deceit.

In 1874 Grant was president, Hamilton Fish was secretary of state and Mr. Cushing was minister to Spain. Then Cuba was in rebellion against Spain, and the condition of affairs in the island was much as it is now. It is matter of history that Minister Cushing was quietly instructed from Washington that unless the war were speedily brought to a satisfactory close the suffering interests of the United States in Cuba would make intervention by this government necessary. General Grant believed the only permanent settlement of the Cuban question would be independence for the island. There is reason to believe that the present United States minister to Spain, General Stewart L. Woodford, carried with him from Washington instructions similar to those given to Minister Cushing in 1874.

That the political disturbance in Uruguay culminated in the assassination of the president, J. Idiarte Borda, at the capital, Montevideo, is not surprising. It is in line with methods formerly more prevalent in the South American republics than is the case at present. President Borda was elected by a very small majority. Newspapers of the opposition party stirred up enmity against him and kept at it. Their labors at length brought about a revolt against his authority. An attempt has been made to blame the assassination upon "anarchists and socialists," with no just ground. The cause for the deed is the uncivilized and lawless condition of Uruguayans themselves.

Bad English Fashion.

For now many years rich and fashionable Americans have been straining themselves to live, move and have their being as nearly in the British way as possible. Especially they have gloried in dismissing from their premises the blunt, honest American hired help that would put up with no airs. In truth they did not need to dismiss the American help, for it left of itself, feeling that its own self respect would not permit it, even for wages, to maintain the awful dead line which divides the "classes." Our rich and fashionable Americans have gladly acquiesced. The American help reminded them constantly of the times when they or their ancestors belonged to exactly the same "class" as these people they hired. They have been fond of saying, our fashionable Americans, "Oh, English servants are the only ones worth anything, you know."

The British valet or coachman is obsequious and never oversteps the boundaries of his "class." It must be said of him that he generally understands his work. But the obsequiousness, which his employer considers the respect due from inferiority to greatness, has its price. The valet, coachman or butler takes toll of his employer for every bow and grin and for all that respectful silence which is so characteristic of these admirable foreign "servants."

The fashionable rich of course cannot be expected to take cognizance of such vulgar matters as buying household and stable supplies. In their greatness they leave such purchasing and the money that pays for it entirely in the hands of the invaluable trained foreign servant. "I never touch the stuff," said a rich lady, speaking of a roll of bills supposed to contain $700. So the "stuff" to pay for supplies is left to the butler or coachman. In one instance lately it was found that one of these model coachmen was in the habit of charging his employer $5 extra for every ton of hay purchased. This he had put first into the bill and then converted into his own pocket, and his master was never the wiser. In another instance a trusted English servant was found by his employer to be charging one-third more for all labor hired from outside and pocketing the difference. No wonder, on the whole, that it requires $100,000 a year for a rich family to live comfortably and fashionably.

This bad and dishonest system was brought to America by those admirable trained foreign servants our rich are so proud of. The swarms of underlings in Europe take it out of their superiors somehow. But it is a misfortune to have the system spreading over our country.

Dr. Sheldon Jackson reports that there are 400,000 square miles of territory in Alaska that can never be utilized either for agriculture or grazing. Yet it is not barren and desolate. The greater portion of it is covered with long, fibrous moss, the delicacy on which the reindeer fattens and increases. This very territory on which nothing else than moss will grow is probably rich in gold. If the counsels of Dr. Jackson had been heeded, there would have been already thousands of reindeer grazing over this vast land, and the problem of both transportation and fresh meat for the miner would have been solved.

Let our representatives abroad absolutely keep clear of asking any prime ministers whether their government would approve or disapprove of our intervention on behalf of Cuba. It is none of the business of any European government and would certainly establish a fatal precedent, giving the powers of Europe the chance they long for to put a meddling finger into the affairs of the United States. How can the commerce between the United States and Cuba or the interests of American citizens in Cuba concern the powers of Europe?

Massachusetts has a law that punishes assaulters of women without lynching them. It imprisons them for life. Under this enactment a man brute lately received a sentence of the penitentiary for life from Judge Blodgett at Fitchburg. Confinement for life is a fate more dreaded by outlaws than death. Other states should pass a similar law; then they would be the scene of fewer of those frightful lynchings which bring such condemnation on American civilization.

"As a rule it is safer to gamble on the bull than on the bear side of the market, because more people buy to profit by a rise than sell to take advantage of a fall, and for one bear there are a dozen bulls," writes Matthew Marshall in the New York Sun.

HAVE LET CONTRACT.

The Rockland Road Bridge to Be Built by a Milwaukee Firm.
 The highway commissioners of the township of Libertyville and the committee of supervisors were in Waukegan Saturday to award the contract for the construction of a steel bridge across the Des Plaines river on the Rockland road, east of Libertyville, the various bids upon the work having been examined Friday.
 The successful bidders were J. G. Wagner & Co., of Milwaukee, the firm that built the bridge across the Des Plaines at Gurnee last fall. Their bid was $2,855, evidently much less than expected as the estimate placed upon the work was about $4,000. The bridge is to be a single span of 125 feet. The bid of the Milwaukee firm includes everything but the filling which will be necessary by reason of the new structure being shorter than the old; a feature that is made possible by the absence of center piers.
 The bridge will be a permanent and much appreciated improvement to that locality, and will save the town of Libertyville much future expense in the way of repairs.

PRICES MAY INCREASE

Milk Is Scarce and a Famine Is Feared.

The man who has been getting his milk supply from a small dealer with only one or two dairies at his disposal is apt to wake up almost any morning and find his milk and cream jars as empty as when he put them out, and nothing by way of consolation from the milkman except a note which says that until either the rain falls or the hot weather stops he will be unable to fill his orders. Not for four years have the milkmen had so hard a time finding milk and not in the same number of years has the wholesale price of milk been as high as it now is. Large dealers, who operate or contract for the product of a great many dairies, have been compelled to send agents to purchase on the outside. Others who make butter as well as sell milk have had to give up the butter business. Most of Chicago's milk supply comes from within a radius of sixty miles. It comes regularly in eight-gallon cans, which sell for about 80 cents delivered on the railroad platform. Today any milk offered at 90 cents is considered very cheap, and most dairies can get $1 for their product without any difficulty. Milk of a higher grade is selling right along at $1.10 to $1.25 and rumors are current that dealers hard pressed have been willing to offer as high as $2.50 to $3 a can. The cause of the milk famine lies first of all in the drought. Another cause lies in the hot weather, which has made the consumption of milk much greater than usual. Not only do housewives want more milk, but the demand of ice cream factories for extra amounts of cream is no mean element in the situation. The milk famine is apt to grow worse every day until either cold weather comes to reduce the demand or a heavy rainfall to increase the supply. In the meantime the small dealer who has not the close friendship of some large one to back him up is watching his customers drop away and cursing his stars that he ever went into the business at all.

GRAVEL DAY.

An Affair Which has Connected With It a Delightful Flavor.

The farmers living in certain parts of the state have what they call a "gravel day," and it is hoped that the celebration of the day will become popular elsewhere. This day is set apart for the graveling of roads needing such improvement. The work is in charge of a committee. The committee issues a call for a certain number of teams, and these, as well as drivers and gravel wagons, are willingly furnished by the farmers, while the merchants and town folks furnish shovels.
 The whole affair has a truly delightful flavor. It reminds one of the old time raising bees. One would think that the occasion would bring out the whole neighborhood and that the task would be made light by the general pleasantry. Now, if that scheme could be introduced in a good many neighborhoods in this county, it would mend many a piece of poor road.—Waukegan Herald.

It looks reasonable that prices can not hold down to so low a point but for a short time; in particular that of Linseed Oil. Nearly every one is aware of the rise in price of all grains, which include flax, of which Linseed Oil is made. Prices can not get lower—they are as low as they can get.

Charred fragments of limbs and bodies of a number of persons have been taken out of the ruin, but it is not likely that any more bodies will be positively identified, and it seems certain that the number of killed will remain in doubt.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE NEXT UNITED STATES CENSUS.

S. N. Dexter North, who is slated for the appointment of superintendent of the next census, is a man who has had considerable experience in statistical work and who knows the needs of the census bureau from practical work. Most of his life has been devoted to newspaper work, and he is at present editor of the magazine of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers. If the census bureau is made a permanent institution by congress it is probable that Mr. North will be retained in charge of it. Mr. North was born in Clinton, N. Y., about fifty years ago. He was educated at Hamilton college, where his father was for forty years a professor. After some early experience in college journalism he entered the office of the Utica Morning Herald in July, 1869. During the sessions of the forty-second congress he was in Washington as the correspondent for several newspapers, and in 1874 he became a shareholder in and the managing editor of the Utica Herald, a post in which he remained for thirteen years. In 1880 Mr. North was appointed by General Francis A. Walker as the special agent of the tenth census to prepare the statistics of the newspaper and periodical press of the United States. His report was published in that the number of killed will remain in doubt.

The wreck was caused by a head-end collision between a Denver & Rio Grande passenger train running at the rate of forty miles an hour and a special Colorado Midland stock train running at a speed of probably thirty miles. Conductor Burbank of the Midland special, anticipating the time of the passenger, undertook to "steal a station" and beat the passenger into Newcastle. Burbank escaped uninjured, and has been placed under arrest by the sheriff.

Killed His Daughter's Saitor.
Dr. F. Regnier of Monmouth, Ill., chairman of the democratic county committee, shot and instantly killed Simon Frandsen, a young butcher. Frandsen had been paying attention to Regnier's daughter, against Regnier's wishes, and had been ordered to quit. The shooting was done in self-defense.

Minister Taylor Was Popular.
A dispatch to the London Standard from San Sebastian says that the entire official world of Spain regrets the departure of the retiring United States minister, Hannis Taylor, who leaves no ill-feeling behind him despite the difficult and sometimes unpalatable nature of his task.

Freight Wreck in Indian Territory.
A disastrous freight wreck occurred on the Iron Mountain road at Hanson, I. T., a small station twenty miles west of Van Buren, at 2 o'clock Sunday, resulting in the death of seven men and the serious injury of six others.

Expedition Landed in Cuba.
Another expedition from America has landed near Havana. The expedition sailed from the Jersey coast without trouble. As a result 3,000 more rifles and 800,000 more cartridges are now in the hands of the insurgents.

For United States Senator.
Robert S. Taylor of Fort Wayne has authorized the announcement that he will be a Republican candidate for the United States senate before the next Indiana legislature if that body be Republican.

1883 and made a folio volume of 446 pages. Five years later he was appointed by General Carr, then secretary of state, superintendent of the New York census, which was to be held according to the provisions of the constitution in that year. He had finished all the preparations for the census when the work was stopped by the governor's veto. In 1885 Mr. North was elected president of the New York Associated Press, and he was re-elected in the following year. He was one of the founders of the Oneida Historical Society at Utica, and has been a frequent contributor of historical and statistical papers to meetings as well as to the pages of historical magazines. From 1886 to 1888 Mr. North had editorial charge of the Albany Morning Express, having also a proprietary interest in the paper. He retired from the Express in 1888, shortly after his election as secretary of the Wool Manufacturers' Association, but for a time after this he was connected editorially with the New York Press. In the September number of the Wool Manufacturers' Bulletin, just issued, Mr. North has an exhaustive article on the textile schedules of the new tariff, and particularly on the wool and woolen schedules.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Butter-Making in Hot Weather.
It is possible to make good butter in hot weather without a cellar and without ice, but a good well is essential, writes Kendall Perry in House-keeper. There should also be a milk house, or, at least, a roof set on four good uprights, and a tank or long trough that may be covered. Discard the shallow milk pans and get the tinner to make deep pans with lids, or, if you prefer, make a cloth cover by stretching muslin over a hoop the size of the can. I like this method because it keeps out all dust, but does not exclude the air. The trough connecting the milk tank and pump spout may be a home-made one, or you can buy iron piping for the purpose. Fill the tank at least twice a day. The water, as it warms, need not be wasted. Ours passed through iron tubing into a watering trough in the next yard, where it was used for the stock. Our creamery cans hold three pailfuls of milk. They are skimmed as they are set in the tank by the feminine portion of the household, but are always lifted in and out by the men. By keeping the cream pail in the tank and stirring the cream after each skimming, a good, uniform grade is always assured. Use a churn from which you can draw the buttermilk without lifting. Banish forever the old-fashioned dash churn and the washing of butter by hand or in a butter bowl. Use a thermometer, and churn just when it registers the correct degree. Do not try to get butter in ten minutes by hard churning. I do not begrudge fifteen or twenty minutes. When the butter comes in small granules like shot or peas, drain off the buttermilk, pour in a pailful of cold water, move the dasher briskly from side to side, but do not churn, or you will have the butter in a compact roll. Drain off this first water, add another pailful, repeat the washing, then take up the butter, salt it very thoroughly and work it with a cool paddle. When the salt has thoroughly permeated the butter, work it a second time until no brine flows from it. Sometimes it is better to let it stand over night before working it this last time. Pack it tightly in some jars.

Preventive Against Blackleg.
For several years frequent reports have come to this bureau concerning the great mortality from blackleg among young stock in many widely separated districts of the United States. In some of the Southern and Western states especially, the annual losses from this fatal disease have been so great as to equal or exceed the losses of cattle from all other causes combined. These losses have been particularly felt by the progressive stock owners, as by far the largest percentage of the calves which became affected were either full-blooded or highly graded animals, which seem to be more susceptible to this disease than the ordinary common-bred stock. As the continued existence of this disease has a very detrimental effect upon the cattle industry in general, and especially upon those stock owners who, through untiring efforts and great expense, have endeavored to improve their herds, an investigation has been made by this bureau with a view of devising some measure through which the steadily increasing losses might be arrested or reduced as much as possible. In Europe, where this disease has long prevailed, the animal losses in certain badly infected districts became so disastrous cattle raising had to be abandoned. About fifteen years ago three French scientists, Arloing, Cornevin and Thomas, succeeding in producing a vaccine against blackleg, which is now extensively used in many countries where the disease prevails to a serious extent. The method consists in injecting into each calf two doses of highly attenuated blackleg virus, with an interval of ten days between the inoculations. The first inoculation is made with a very mild vaccine, the so-called "first lymph," and the second one with the stronger virus, the "second lymph," and in each case the vaccine is introduced by means of a hypodermic syringe under the skin of the lower part of the tail. This method, which is very inconvenient, especially where a large number of animals are to be treated, was later modified by a German scientist, Kitt, who reduced the process to a single injection with less attenuated virus, and who chose the loose skin on the side of the chest just behind the shoulder, for the point of inoculation. Kitt's method has been adopted to a very large extent in eastern Europe and northern Africa with very satisfactory results, and it has, for that reason and on account of its simplicity, been taken as the foundation for the investigations made by this bureau. A "single vaccine" has been prepared in the pathological laboratory, and subsequently tested on a large number of calves in Texas, both common and high grade stock, and the results warrant the conclusion that this vaccine is in every way satisfactory. It is desired, however, before distributing this vaccine to stock owners in general to obtain a record of several thousand successful vaccinations. For this purpose a quantity of vaccine will be distributed to such parties as may desire to make preliminary vaccinations and report the result to this bureau. Those stock owners will be preferred who already have experience in vaccinating stock for blackleg and are in possession of a vaccinating outfit. Explicit instructions will, however, be sent with the vaccine to secure uniformity of operation and to assist those without previous experience in vaccinations. Persons lacking the necessary outfit to test the vaccine should procure one if they propose to test the vaccine. It consists of a graduated 5 c. c. syringe with detachable needles, a small porcelain mortar and pestle, a glass funnel and some filters. This outfit cannot be supplied by the department, but must be purchased of some house which supplies such articles.*

Upon applying for vaccine please answer the following questions:
1. To what extent does blackleg prevail in your part of the country and how great is your animal loss from this disease?
2. What experience have you had in vaccinating calves against blackleg?
3. How many head do you wish to vaccinate and what class of cattle are they, common, graded or full blood?
4. What is your express office?
*The outfit is prepared in accordance with the plans of this bureau to meet the temporary demand that may arise in introducing this vaccine. If vaccination should be extensively adopted as a preventive of this disease similar outfits will, no doubt, be for sale by other dealers furnishing this class of supplies. Until this may be the case, the unusual course of mentioning a dealer by name in a department publication is followed.

Home-Made Butter Cooler.
It is not every house that is on a cool cellar, nor every household that can afford ice and an ice box, says a writer in an exchange. Most edibles will keep awhile, even in the hottest weather, with certain precautions, but butter will turn to oil and look quite objectionable on the table. I have for many years pursued a plan that keeps it solid, and therefore presentable. This is by means of a large, unglazed, common flower pot. It must be unglazed, to be thoroughly porous, and large enough to sink a small-sized lard-tin, or a china receptacle for a two-pound roll of butter. Cork the bottom of the flower-pot, and, having scalded it several times to remove its earthy smell, fill it about half full of cold water. A small pot inverted makes a good stand for the butter receptacle, for if light enough to tip, it will, of course, half fill with water, which is no improvement to butter. Cover the flower-pot over entirely with a heavy wet cloth, allowing a corner of it to hang over the inside and touch the water. This on the principle of the "long and short syphon," will keep it always wet, and save trouble. Cover over with a plate and keep another wet cloth over all. Let it stand in a shallow pan (to receive drippings) in a drafty place. The sun aids rapid evaporation, on which the cooling properties depend. A free current of air is the necessity, and you will never have oily butter through the hot summer. The bungalows of India are kept cool by means of the wet "tatties" (or blinds) all round the verandas, as fully as by the punkahs that are pulled within the house.

Breeds Running Together.
When the hatching season ends the different breeds can run together in one flock, says American Poultry Keeper. It would be an advantage to have no males with them, but it will not injure the stock should the males and hens be of different breeds. Some breeders contend that when a hen is kept with a male of a different breed her progeny will never again be up to standard requirements in points, but we have never known any injurious results from such a course if the breeds are separated two months before the eggs are to be used. We have known of the separation of the breeds to occur only ten days before using the eggs, and in the experiments made we found the influence of the male to extend only five days. We advise more time, however, and suggest two months, in order to be sure that no mistake will occur. It is expensive to keep the breeds separated in summer. More fences are required and frequently the separation must be accomplished by confining the hens. We have always allowed all of the hens to run together after the hatching season is over, and have done so for thirty years, with no injurious effects resulting therefrom so far as the purity of the breeds was concerned.

Suspicious Milk.—Any milk having a large amount of sediment is suspicious. Particles of dirt are a sign that germs are abundant. Thus dirty milk may be dangerous as well as disgusting. The dirt in milk consists mostly of particles of dead skin and manure, which fall into the pail from the body of the cow during milking; but dust in the stable, and dirt and dust in the vessels used for handling milk, and unclean attendants, are also common sources of dirty sediment in milk.

Horseflesh for Food.—Horse dealers of France are apparently no longer able to supply the demand for the flesh of that animal in Paris. An order from the French capital for 5,000 barrels of horse meat has been received by a company of Portland, Ore. The animals used are the half-wild cayuse of Oregon, which are bought for about $2.50 each. As the use of horseflesh for food seems to be growing in several foreign countries, it may become a profitable article for export.

MANY STRIKERS KILLED

Deputy Sheriffs Fire Upon Marching Miners in a Public Road.

The coal strike situation reached a terrible crisis on the outskirts of Latimer Friday afternoon, when a band of deputy sheriffs fired into a crowd of miners. Reports run from fifteen to twenty odd killed and forty or more wounded. One man counted thirteen corpses. Four other bodies lie in the mountains, between Latimer and Harleigh. Those who were not injured carried their dead and wounded friends into the woods, and estimate is baffled.

Sheriff Martin claims he ordered the strikers to disperse and was set upon and badly wounded. For the protection of his life, he says, he ordered the deputies to fire. The strikers were on a public road. Great indignation is expressed at the conduct of the sheriff, which is believed to have been uncalled for. Governor Hastings immediately sent troops to the scene.

FAMOUS BRITISH DIVINE NOW AMONGST US.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Gore, canon of Westminster, who is now in America, is one of the most prominent high church men among the Anglican clergy. He is the head of the English branch of the Order of Resurrectionists, and one of his chief objects in visiting this country is to establish a branch of the society for the United States. While here he will also conduct the annual retreat for the clergy, which is held in the cathedral at Albany, N. Y., under the supervision of the bishop of Albany. Despite his high position in the church Dr. Gore is looked upon from many sides as heretical, largely on account of the views that were expressed on the inspiration of the Bible in a volume of essays, entitled "Lux Mundi," which he edited a few years ago. His Hampton lectures, delivered two years ago, excited even greater opposition, as the views expressed on the second person of the trinity seemed to assail the divinity of Jesus. On account of these views much surprise has been manifested at his being invited to conduct the retreat at Albany, and a rival retreat has been arranged for at Atlantic City under Fr. Huntington of the Order of the Holy Cross. The Order of Resurrectionists, of which Canon Gore is the head, is composed of Episcopalian priests who have taken the vow of celibacy for a term of years. The vow is taken not for doctrinal reasons, but to secure greater efficiency in service. The headquarters of the order in the United States will be at Boston, and it is said that Rev. Charles H. Brent will be the superior.—From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

TO END THE STRIKE.

Coal Miners Vote to Accept a Compromise—Resumption Delayed.

The national convention of miners at Columbus finally reached an agreement regarding the great strike late Saturday afternoon. They voted to accept the 65-cent rate in the Pittsburg district and carry on the strike elsewhere. Relative prices may be paid in other states. No work is to be commenced before ten days from Sept. 11.

New Cuban Policy.

Intimations have been given out during the past few days from inner administration circles that the president is getting ready to put into effect a new policy in regard to the Cuban situation. The suggestion is made that Mr. McKinley will interfere for the purpose of restoring peace on the island, but it is not indicated what form the contemplated interference will assume.

The northwest Indiana Methodist conference refused to give its sanction to the proposal to allow the general conference to fix the ratio of the representation to that body at any point from one in forty-five to one in sixty. This also defeats the proposal to admit lay representatives.

The forty-fourth annual county fair of the Lake County Agricultural society held at Libertyville this week was a success in every particular. The weather was perfect. The rain Thursday proved a benefit in settling the dust. The attractions each day were unusually interesting and the attendance was large. Barrington and Palatine were well represented. The receipts for the week is undoubtedly large enough to cover all expenses and pay off a large proportion of the old debt.

The opening concert and organization of a singing class will take place Monday evening, September 20, in the M. E. church. Mr. Milton R. Well, how about the Unions, were they given what they deserved? Nevertheless, as we had predicted, it was a good game, both teams playing good ball from start to finish. As usual, just such an amount of kicking had to be done before the game could be commenced, and when everything had finally been settled the hour was rather late and but a seven-inning game was played. Score, Wauconda Independents, 10; Unions, 8.

School opened Monday with a good attendance and with Orton Hubbard as principal, Miss Tidmarsh presiding over the intermediate room and Miss Grace taking charge of the primary department. Miss Tidmarsh and Miss Grace are both good, experienced teachers and will, no doubt, conduct their rooms in first-class shape.

Quite a social gathering was had at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clough last Monday evening, it being the event of the 90th birthday of the latter's mother, Mrs. Andrew Cook. F. E. Hawley will soon commence the erection of a barn on his farm, formerly the old Brown place, one and a half miles west of Barrington. The building will be 38x100 feet, with basement, and when completed will rank favorably with buildings of that class. Contracts have been let to John Brommelkamp to do the excavating and hauling of material. Wm. Elsner the mason work and Plagge & Co. will furnish the lumber. It is reported that Elvidge & Roloff have the contract for the carpenter work. The fact that the entire work and material furnished has been let to our home people, is favorably commended on by our residents, who are unstinting in their praise of Mr. Hawley for his patriotism.

Owing to over-crowding and bad ventilation, the air of the schoolroom is often close and impure, and teachers and pupils frequently suffer from lung and throat troubles. To all such we would say, try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. For coughs, colds, weak lungs and bronchial troubles no other remedy can compare with it. Says, A. C. Freed, Superintendent of Schools, Prairie Depot, Ohio: "Having some knowledge of the efficacy of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, I have no hesitation in recommending it to all who suffer from coughs, lung troubles etc." For sale by A. M. B. MCINTOSH, P. M.

A prominent Japanese authority pronounces absurd the rumor that his country would make objections to the annexation of Hawaii by the United States. Of course it was absurd on the face of it, and it was only started to make something to do for the foreign correspondents and the ocean cable companies so they could draw their pay. To make money for the correspondents and the cable companies those who are in position to do so telegraph any lie, however absurd, to the journals of the world and call it news. Sometimes the lie is compounded to suit the stock market. The falsifiers will in time, however, overreach themselves, and nobody will believe anything they say. Then there must come a revolution in the whole system. To that revolution the public may look forward in confidence and hope.
