The salary of Night Watchman Henderson for the past month was placed at $35.00, by a motion by Willmarth, seconded by Hatje, which was carried. His salary heretofore had been $47.50, but now the electric lights do away with his duties of taking care of street lamps, and in consequence his salary was cut.

The Board was informed that the arc lights at the bank corner and Hough and Main streets could not be made to work satisfactorily, and it was decided to substitute for them six incandescent lights, which it was thought would give better service for less money.

The Board then adjourned to Stotts' hall, where a large number of citizens had already congregated. After the mayor had made a few well-chosen introductory remarks, he called on Attorney A. J. Redmond to give an account of the negotiations that have been pending between the village and the C. & N.-W. R. R. Co. in regard to filling in their right-of-way, and in so doing filling up a natural waterway.

Mr. Redmond made a clear and impartial statement of the contentions of both sides, and justness of their claims. He advised that the village make the most liberal proposition to the company that they possibly could and use every means to settle the difficulty amicably before resorting to law. He said that while he had no doubt as to the justness of the claims of the village and that they would be upheld by the law, it might take a long time before the case would be decided and it would cost considerable money.

Many questions were asked him, and several propositions were discussed by the citizens, who were mostly old residents and business men. When President Boehmer called for an expression from them as to what they thought the Board should do, one citizen made a motion that the waterway remain on the south side of the railroad track, and that if every means of settling the dispute amicably had been exhausted, to fight to the end. This motion was seconded and unanimously carried by a rising vote.

An adjournment was then taken to Wednesday evening.

WATER WORKS.

The meeting then turned their attention to water works.

C. H. Patten of Palatine and Mr. Arnold of Woodstock were present. Mr. Patten was called on first, but requested that as Mr. Arnold was better able to give the desired information he be called on first.

Mr. Arnold then took the floor and gave the following description of the water works system in Woodstock:

He said that it would be a fair estimate to say that it requires 50 gallons of water each 24 hours for each person. He advised the Board not to put in too small a system or too large a one. He said Woodstock had five miles of mains, divided into 8 and 4-inch pipes. He said that it would be good policy to put in a system with enough pressure to force the water high enough for any building in case of fire, as pipe was cheaper than hose. Standpipe pressure in his opinion was the best. The Woodstock system had been in operation two years in September, and it is self-sustaining with 200 consumers. Lots that had been sold, before the water works had been put in, for $500 or $600, now bring $800 to $1,000. The citizens never regretted putting in the system. He gave an exhaustive description of the Woodstock plant, and how it was put in. Mr. Arnold was asked many questions and answered them in a very satisfactory and pleasant manner. Mr. Patten was then called on and said that it would cost about $23,000 to put in water works in Barrington. This would mean about 25,000 feet of pipe, 4, 6 and 8 inches. The cost of digging a well is not included in the above figures, as it would be hard telling how far it would be necessary to bore before a sufficient stream of water could be reached. He thought a well 175 feet deep would cost $500, but if no water could be reached at that depth it might be necessary to go down to such a distance as to make the cost of the well from $500 up to $4,000.

Attorney Redmond advised the Board to get the signatures of the property owners to the petition for water works.

ADJOURNED MEETING.

The Board of Trustees of Barrington met in adjourned session Wednesday evening.

An improvement committee was appointed, consisting of John Robertson, Wm. Grunau and Henry Boehmer.

They re-passed the waterworks ordinance and ordered the publishing of proposals for digging a well.

The selection of an engineer to superintend the digging of a well was given attention, and Trustee Willmarth moved that C. H. Patten of Palatine be selected for the position, but the rest of the trustees thought that the work of selecting an engineer rested with the Committee on Public Improvements, consequently Willmarth withdrew his motion, and it was understood that Patten would be selected.

President Boehmer told what was seen and learned by some of the members of the Board, Tuesday, by inspecting Dundee's system of water works. He said they were shown every courtesy during their visit, and they found the citizens of Dundee to be very well satisfied with water works, and after a long trial, could not be persuaded to do without it.

An adjournment was then taken to Friday evening.

NEW ORGANIZATION.

The I. O. G. T. Organization Invades Barrington with Gratifying Success.

On Monday evening another lodge was organized in Barrington, namely, the Independent Order of Good Templars, an order that has for its object the saving of our young men from the deadly sting of the drinking habit.

The noble work of this order, which has a foothold in nearly every hamlet in this country, cannot be eulogized too much. On the above mentioned evening a lodge of this order was organized in Barrington, at the Baptist church, by Rev. J. F. Carl, assisted by a number of members from the Cary lodge. The organization followed a good temperance lecture by Rev. Carl.

The following officers were elected to guide the Barrington Good Templars to success for the coming year:

Chief Templar, Miss Lydia Robertson; Vice-Templar, Miss Ella Todd; Recording Secretary, Miss Grace Peck; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Flora Lines; Financial Secretary, Max Lines; Treasurer, Abram Combs; Lodge Deputy, Rev. S. S. Hageman; Chaplain, Mrs. Hageman; Past Chief Templar, Mrs. Barnes; Marshal, Miss Lella Lines; Deputy Marshal, Miss Gretten; Guard, Miss Mahalia Dunklee; Sentinel, Miss Dorritt Rouse.

No stronger team of officers could have been selected to guide the new organization to success. They have an excellent field in which to work, and we predict they will make the most of it. Another leading feature of the Good Templar organization is their social advantages. It accepts as members both men and women. Success to the I. O. G. T.

THE BANNER IN PLACE

The Trophy of Lake County's Great Vote Last Fall—Banner Republican County in the State.

The banner of victory presented to the county central committee of Lake county by the state central committee, was put in place in Clerk Hendee's office at the Waukegan court house Monday of last week.

As is well known, this banner was earned by Lake county republicans last fall for having made the greatest pro rata gains over the 1892 vote of any county in the state, and it is a mark of honor of which every voter in Lake county, who helped to swell the tremendous majority, should feel proud. The banner is of blue satin and upon its surface is inscribed in gilt letters the following:

Banner of Victory
Lake County Central Committee from Republican State Central Committee of Illinois

For largest pro rata percentage of gain over the Republican vote for President in 1892.

On the reverse side of the banner is a picture of President McKinley.

The handsome new oak case, which contains the trophy, was made by W. H. Dow, and is a beauty. In the upper right corner of the case appears the names of Lake county's central committee as follows: W. C. Upton, chairman; S. Delano Talcott, Secretary; R. J. Douglas, treasurer; J. W. Simpson, Geo. B. Stevens, Geo. Padlock, D. A. Williams, Dighton Granger, A. W. Whitmore, jr., O. B. Whitmore, C. C. Wenban, W. M. Heath, C. M. Gorman, E. A. Golding, F. Plagge, H. L. Prehm, J. A. Mason, W. H. Wilmot, and A. W. Fletcher.

Y. P. M. S. Elects Officers.

The Young People's Missionary society of the Salem church elected officers at its annual meeting Tuesday evening. A good percentage of the members of this flourishing church society were present, and the contest for the various offices was lively. The following is the personnel of the officers elected to serve for the coming year:

President—Fred Bauman.
Vice-President—Miss Martha Landwer.
Recording Secretary—Miss Emma Kampert.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Ida Gieske.

"At last the crisis came. One Saturday I had paid the men as usual, and bought a muid of meale meal at sixty shillings for them to fill themselves with, and then I went with my boy Harry and sat on the edge of the thundering great hole that we had dug in the hill-side, and which we had in bitter mockery named Eldorado. There we sat in the moonlight with our feet hanging over the edge of the claim, and were melancholy enough for anything. Presently I pulled out my purse and emptied its contents into my hand. There was a half sovereign, two florins, nine pence in silver, no coppers, for copper practically does not circulate in South Africa, which is one of the things that makes living so dear there, in all exactly fourteen and nine pence.

"There, Harry, my boy!" I said, "that is the sum-total of our worldly wealth; the infernal hole has swallowed all the rest."

"Gracious!" said Master Harry. "I say, you and I shall have to let ourselves out to work with the Kafirs and live on meale pap," and he giggled at his unpleasant little joke.

"But I was in no mood for joking, for it is not a merry thing to dig like mad for months and be completely ruined in the process, especially if you happen to hate digging like poison, and consequently I resented Harry's light-heartedness.

"Shut up!" I said, raising my hand as though to give him a cuff, with the result that the half sovereign slipped out of it and fell in the gulf below.

"Oh, confound it all," said I, "it's gone."

"There, dad," said Harry; "that's what comes of letting your angry passions rise; now we are down to four and nine."

"I made no answer to these words of wisdom, but scrambled down the steep sides of the claim followed by Harry, to hunt for my little all. Well, we hunted and hunted, but the moonlight is an uncertain thing to look for half sovereigns by, and there was some loose soil about, for the Kafirs had knocked off working at the very spot a couple of hours before. I took a pick and raked away the clods of earth with it, in the hope of finding the coin; but all in vain. At last in sheer annoyance I struck the sharp end of the pick-ax down into the soil, which was of a very hard nature. To my astonishment it sunk in right up to the haft.

"Why, Harry, I said, 'this ground must have been disturbed!'"

"I don't think so, father," he answered, "but we will soon see," and he began to shovel out the soil with his hands. "Oh," he said, presently, "it's only some old stones; the pick has gone down between them, look;" and he began to pull at one of the stones.

"I say, dad," he said, presently, "almost in a whisper, 'it's precious heavy, feel it,' and he rose and gave me a round brownish lump about the size of a very large apple, which he was holding in both his hands. I took it curiously and held it up to the light. It was precious heavy. The moonlight fell upon its rough and dirt-incrusted surface, and as I looked curious little thrills of excitement began to pass through me. But I could not be sure.

"Give me your knife, Harry," I said. "He did so, and resting the brown stone on my knee I scratched at its surface. Great heavens, it was soft!"

"Another secret and the secret was out; we had found a great nugget of pure gold, four pounds of it or more. 'It's gold, lad,' I said, 'it's gold, or I'm a Dutchman.'"

Harry, with his eyes starting out of his head, glared down at the long gleaming yellow scratch that I had made upon the virgin metal, and then burst out into yell upon yell of exultation, that went ringing away across the silent claims like the shrieks of somebody being murdered.

"Shut up, shut up!" I said, "do you want every thief on the fields after you?"

"Scarcely were the words out of my mouth when I heard a stealthy footstep approaching. I promptly put the big nugget down and sat on it, as though it had been an egg, and uncommonly hard it was, and as I did so I saw a lean dark face poked over the edge of the claim and a pair of beady eyes searching us out. I knew the face, it belonged to a man of very bad character known as Handspike Tom, having I understood been so named at the Diamond Fields because he had murdered his mate with a handspike. He was now no doubt prowling about like a human hyena to see what he could steal.

"Is that you, 'unter Quatermain?" he says.

"Yes, that's me, Mr. Tom," I answered, politely.

"And what might all that there yelling be?" he asked. "I was walking along, a-taking of the evening air and a-thinking about my soul, when I 'ears 'owl after 'owl.'"

"Well, Mr. Tom," I answered, "that is not to be wondered at, seeing that like yourself they are nocturnal birds."

"Owl after 'owl," he repeated, sternly, taking no notice of my interpretation, "and I stops and smacks my lips and says, 'That's murder,' and I listens agin and thinks, 'No, it ain't; that 'owl is the 'owl of hexultation; some one's been and got his fingers into a gummy yeller pot, I'll swear, and gone off 'is 'ead in the sucking of them. Now, 'unter Quatermain, is I right? Is it nuggets? Oh, Lor!' and he smacked his lips audibly—great big yellow boys—is it them that you have just been and tumbled across?"

"No," I said boldly, "it isn't—the cruel gleam in his black eyes altogether overcoming my aversion to the lie, for I knew that if once he found out what it was that I was sitting on—and by the way I have heard of rolling in gold being spoken of as a pleasant process, but I certainly do not recommend anybody who values comfort to try sitting on it—I should run a very good chance of being handspiked before the night was over.

"If you want to know what it was, Mr. Tom," I went on with my politest air, although in agony from the nugget underneath, for I hold it always best to be polite to a man who is so handy with a handspike, "my boy and I have had a slight difference of opinion, and I was enforcing my view of the matter upon him; that's all, Mr. Tom."

"Yes, Mr. Tom," put in Harry, beginning to snivel.

"Well, all I can say is that a played-out old claim is a wonderful queer sort of a place to come for to argify at ten o'clock of night, and what's more, my sweet youth, if ever I should 'ave the argifying of yer—and he leered unpleasantly at Harry—"yer won't 'oller in quite such a jolly sort of way. And now I'll be saying good-night, for I don't like disturbing of a family party. No, I ain't that sort of man. I ain't. Good-night to yer, 'unter Quatermain—good-night to yer, my argified young one," and Mr. Tom turned away disappointed and prowled off elsewhere, like a human jackal, to see what he could thieve or kill.

"Thank heaven!" I said, as I slipped off the lump of gold which had left a dent upon my person that did not wear out for a week or more. "Now then, just you slip up, Harry, and see if that consummate villain has gone." Harry did so, and reported that he had vanished toward Pilgrims' Rest, and then we set to work, and very carefully, but trembling with excitement, with our hands hollowed out all the space of ground into which I had struck the pick. Yes, as I thought, there was a regular nest of nuggets, twelve in all, running from the size of a hazel nut to that of a hen's egg, though of course the first one was much larger than that. How they all came there nobody can say; it was one of those extraordinary freaks, with stories of which at any rate, all people acquainted with alluvial gold-mining will be familiar. It turned out afterward that the Yankee who sold me the claim had in the same way made his pile—a much larger one than ours, by the way—out of a single pocket, and then worked for six months without seeing color, after which he gave it up.

"At any rate, there the nuggets were, to the value as it turned out afterwards, of about twelve hundred and fifty pounds, so that after all I took out of that hole four hundred and fifty pounds more than I put into it. We got them all out and wrapped them up in a handkerchief, and then fearing to carry home so much treasure, especially as we knew that Mr. Handspike Tom was on the prowl, made up our minds to pass the night where we were—a necessity which, disagreeable as it was, was wonderfully sweetened by the presence of that handkerchief full of virgin gold, which represented the interest of my lost half sovereign.

"Slowly the night wore away, for with the fear of Handspike Tom before my eyes I did not care to go to sleep, and at last the dawn came, blushing like a bride, down the somber ways of night. I got up and watched its perfect growth, till it opened like a vast celestial flower upon the eastern sky, and the sunbeams began to spring in splendor from mountain-top to mountain-top. I watched it, and as I did so it flashed upon me with a complete conviction that I had not felt before, that I had had enough gold-mining to last me the rest of my natural life, and I then and there made up my mind to clear out of Pilgrims' Rest and go and shoot buffalo toward Delago Bay. Then I turned, took the pick and shovel, and although it was a Sunday morning, woke up Harry and set to work to see if there were any more nuggets handy. As I expected, there were none. What we had got had lain together in a little pocket filled with soil that felt quite different from the stiff stuff round and outside the pocket. There was not a trace of gold. Of course, it is possible that there were other pockets full somewhere about, but all I have to say is I made up my mind that, whoever found them I should not; and, as a matter of fact, I have since heard that that claim has been the ruin of two or three people, as it was very nearly the ruin of me.

"Harry," I said presently, "I am going away this week towards Delago to shoot buffalo. Shall I take you with me, or send you down to Durban?"

"Oh, take me with you, dad," begged Harry, "I want to kill a buffalo!"

"And supposing the buffalo kills you instead?" I asked.

"Oh, never mind," he says gayly, "there are lots more where I came from."

"I rebuked him for his flippancy, but in the end I consented to take him."

CHAPTER II.

"Something over a fortnight had passed since the night when I lost half a sovereign and found twelve hundred and fifty pounds in looking for it, and instead of that horrid hole for which, after all, Eldorado was scarcely a misnomer, a very different scene stretched away before us clad in the silver robe of the moonlight. We were camped—Harry and I, two Kafirs, a Scotch cart, and six oxen—on the swelling side of a great wave of bush-clad land. Just where we had made our camp, however, the bush was very sparse, and only grew about in clumps, while here and there were single flat-topped mimosa trees. To our right a little stream, which had cut a deep channel for itself in the bosom of the slope, flowed musically on between banks green with the maiden-hair, wild asparagus, and many beautiful grasses. The bed-rock here was red granite, and in the course of many centuries of patient washing the water had hollowed out some of the huge slabs in its path into great troughs and cups, and these we used for bathing-places. No Roman lady, with her baths of porphyry or alabaster, could have had a more delicious spot to lave herself than we had within fifty yards of our skerm or rough inclosure of mimosa thorn that we had dragged together round the cart to protect us from the attacks of lions, of which there were several about, as I knew from their spoor, though we had neither heard nor seen them.

"It was a little nook where the eddy of the stream had washed away a mass of soil, and on the edge of it there grew a most beautiful old mimosa thorn. Beneath the thorn was a large smooth slab of granite fringed all with maiden-hair, and other ferns, that sloped gently down to a pool of the clearest sparkling water, which lay in a bowl of granite about ten feet wide by five deep in the center. Here to this slab we went every morning to bathe, and that delightful bath is among the most pleasant of my hunting reminiscences, as it is also for reasons that will presently appear, among the most painful.

"It was a lovely night, and Harry and I sat there to the windward of the fire, at which the two Kafirs were busily employed in cooking some impala steaks off a buck which Harry, to his great joy, had shot that morning, and were as perfectly contented with ourselves and the world at large as two people could possibly be. The night was beautiful, and it would require somebody with more words on the tip of his tongue than I have to describe the chastened majesty of the moonlit wilds. Away forever and forever, away to the mysterious north, rolled the great bush ocean over which the silence hung like a heavy cloud. There beneath us a mile or more to the right rolled the wild Oliphant river, and mirror-like flashed back the moon, whose silver spears were shivered on its breast, and then tossed in twisted lines of light far and wide about the mountains and the plain. Down upon its banks grew great timber-trees that through the still silence pointed solemnly to heaven, and the beauty of the night lay upon them like a dream. Everywhere was silence—silence in the starred depths, silence in the fair bosom of the sleeping earth. Now, if ever, great thoughts might rise in a man's mind, and for a space he might lose his littleness in the sense that he partook of the pure immensity about him. Almost might he hear the echoes of angelic voices, as the spirits poised on bent and rushing plunions swept onwards from universe to universe; and distinguished the white fingers of the wind playing in the tresses of the trees.

"Hark! what was that?" "From far away down the river there comes a mighty rolling sound, then another, and another. It is the lion seeking his meat."

"I saw Harry shiver and turn a little pale. He was a plucky boy enough, but the roar of a lion for the first time in the solema bush veldt at night is apt to shake the nerves of any lad.

A Good Samaritan.

"There are several things in this book of mine that I think are particularly good," said the young writer. "No doubt; no doubt," replied the man of many experiences. "Have you submitted it to a publisher?" "Not yet. I wanted to get your advice." "My candid advice?" "Certainly." "Well, if I were in your place I'd go through the book and pick out what I considered the passages of striking excellence." "Yes?" "And throw them away." Washington Star.

ABOUT THE ELEPHANT

HOW THE DRIVER DECORATES HIS FRONT.

How a Native Public Works Officer Unwittingly Distinguished Himself by Accidentally Driving a Whole Troop of Wild Specimens into a Corral.

LIGHT REFRESHMENT.

N Burmah the public works and other departments are dependent on the elephant for a large amount of heavy labor. By this gentle giant's strength man is able to accomplish with ease that which would be almost impossible without him. Any one who has seen these cleverly trained animals at work in the forests and timber-yards of Burmah will at once realize their utility. Sometimes harnessed to huge teak logs, they drag them wherever they are required; or a monstrous tusker may be seen trundling a log with his tusks and placing it in any position he is ordered as easily and with apparently as little exertion as a child would handle a tennis ball.

The illustrations are from snapshots of one of these useful creatures, with his mahout (driver), at work and at leisure. In one you see the mahout anointing the elephant's forehead with a coconut-oil, which is supposed to keep the head cool when working in the hot sun. The white marks on the head are made with chalk, with which the mahout delights to decorate his pet. So much for the elephant tamed. In his wild state he is another creature. The most ticklish and difficult part of elephant-catching operations is to drive the herd into the kheddah prepared for its reception; hence the catch which was made in the Mysore jungles a few weeks ago ranks as a unique. A native public works officer, on the way to inspect a bridge in his district, passing near one of the enormous enclosures built for the purpose, saw a large herd of elephants feeding near the gate. Being alarmed, native-like, he fired his gun and shouted for all he was worth; the herd, equally alarmed, fled incontinently—into the kheddah, whose gate stood open! Whereupon the engineer recovered his wits and made his coolies lower the gate, capturing the lot. That various delays gave the elephants time to break down the unguarded stockade, whereby the majority escaped, reducing the number actually secured to 10, does not affect the capture as perhaps the most remarkable in the annals of elephant-catching.

Gold Found by Accident.

Many of the gold fields in the Klondike region have been purely accidental and some of them were decidedly interesting, though, perhaps, not more so than many accidental finds in our own west in the forties and fifties. It was before 1850 that three men, while looking for gold in California, discovered the dead body of a man who evidently had been "prospecting." "Poor fellow!" said one of the trio. "He has passed in his checks!" "Let's give him a decent burial," said another. "Some wife or mother will be glad if ever she knows it." They began to dig a grave. Three feet below the surface they discovered the signs of gold. The stranger was buried in another place, and where they located a grave they opened a gold mine. An adventurer who had drifted into Leadville awoke one morning without food or money. He went out and shot a deer, which, in its dying agonies, kicked up the dirt and disclosed signs of gold. The poor man staked out a claim and opened one of the most profitable mines ever worked in Leadville. "Dead Man's Claim," the name given to another rich mine in Leadville, was discovered by a broken-down miner while digging a grave. A miner died when there were several feet of snow on the ground. His comrades laid his body in a snow bank and hired a man for $0 to dig a grave. The grave digger, after three days' absence, was found digging a mine instead of a grave. While excavating he had struck gold. Forgetting the corpse and his bargain, he thought only of the fact that he had "struck it rich."

HOW TO KEEP EMBROIDERED LINENS BRIGHT AND FRESH.

That hand work on wash materials is far more desirable than on silk and velvet; so popular a few years ago, cannot be doubted, yet many women complain that the colors fade and dingy so soon that the work is labor thrown away. But this is an error, for if properly laundered, wash silks may be kept fresh and bright until the articles they adorn are past usefulness. The doing of the embroidery is no daintier work than that of keeping it in good order, and only by doing it herself can the tasty woman have her fancy linens kept bright and pretty.

When ready to do the work, select a bright day, fill a small tub nearly full of warm water and add a little Ivory soap to make suds, put each piece in and wash carefully. After each article is clean, rinse in slightly blue water, to which a little thin starch is added, wring and hang in the shade. When dry, sprinkle, fold, and let stand half an hour, iron on the wrong side, pressing down heavily to throw out the stitches of the embroidery, thus restoring their original beauty.

Mayor Harrison of Chicago says: "I receive some very funny letters. The other day I received one containing an urgent request from a young woman to call on her. She informed me that she had something of the greatest importance to discuss with me, and said she could not come to my office because her feet were tender and she suffered terribly with bunions. No, I haven't called yet."

THROWN OFF THE RAILS.

Canadian Pacific Express Wrecked at Medford, Mass.

THIRTY PERSONS INJURED.

Defective Trucks Said to Have Caused the Unfortunate Accident—None of Those Injured Thought to Be Fatally Hurt.

The Canadian Pacific express over the southern division of the Boston & Maine railroad Friday night met with an accident at West Medford, Mass., whereby nearly thirty people were more or less injured, but none, it is believed, fatally hurt. There were eight cars on the train, which was running rapidly, and the three rear coaches were derailed. As the train approached the West Medford station, car No. 997 jumped the track, owing, it is claimed, to a defective truck. The rear truck turned completely around, throwing the car partially on the side, while car No. 427 was partially derailed and the sleeper was thrown upon its side.

A GOOD THING

For Women to Remember. That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham they are communicating with a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's ills is greater than that of any living physician—male or female. A woman can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate her private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they should have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician living.

The following invitation is freely offered; accept it in the same spirit.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to freely communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only, thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken, and has induced more than 100,000 sufferers to write her for advice during the last four months. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer for assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

MERIT MEANS MONEY MADE.

You cannot advertise money out of people's pockets all the time; you may do it now and then, but if you don't give them something of absolute merit in return, advertising will never prove successful. The kind of advertising that pays is advertising a good thing. As it has the merit people will use it again and again. Never has it been better illustrated than in the great success of Cascarets, candy cathartic, that is, people buy them, like them, and buy them again and recommend them to their friends. Cascarets are guaranteed to cure constipation or money refunded, and are a delightful laxative and liver stimulant; the best medicine ever made. We recommend all our readers to try them.

Bought Postoffice for $3.74.

Lawyer John F. Montignani has bought the Albany, N. Y., postoffice for $3.74. The federal authorities owed about $4 for a water tax which the city has been unable to collect. Agreeable to custom the debt was put up at auction in the county treasurer's office. Montignani paid $3.74 and a certificate was given him. If the amount is not paid in two years a full deed will be given the bidder in 1899, and he can take possession.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. ### No Need of Dehorning.

Farmers, if you will follow these instructions, you need never go to the expense to dehorn your cattle, which are now commencing to grow up. Buy a five-cent stick of caustic potash, and as the little horns make the first sign of starting on the calf, wet them with a little water, rub them with the caustic stick, and the calf will never know that nature ever intended that it should have horns.—Ex.

The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. ### A Martyr to Melons.

The melon crop was short this year, and a southwest Georgia farmer who had practically "cornered" it in his neighborhood had suffered seriously from the depredations of some of the hungry colored brethren. So he gave it out that he had poisoned his melons, and after the news went forth he ceased to miss them.

Night after night an old negro who lived near the finest melon patch had gazed at their green sides with hungry eyes, but the thought of the poison kept him hungry still.

One moonlight night, however, his appetite got the best of him. He looked in the direction of the melons long and earnestly; then, shouldering a sack, he started off.

"In de name 'er goodness, Rufus, whar you gwine?" asked his wife.

The old man turned, pointed to the melon patch and said, slowly and solemnly:

"I'm a-gwine whar dem melons is!"
"But—dey's poisoned!"
"I know dey is! But I'm gwine ter take my death. Pray fer me!"—Atlanta Constitution.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

How Many of Them Have Quietly Obtained Advice That Made Them Well.

My sister, if you find that in spite of following faithfully your family doctor's advice, you are not getting well, why do you not try another course? Many and many a woman has quietly written to Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., stating her symptoms plainly and clearly, and taken her advice, which was promptly received. The following letter is a pretty strong confirmation of our claims:

"I had been sick for six months; one doctor told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would get well. I had female troubles in their worst form, suffered untold agonies every month; my womb tipped back to my backbone, had headache, hysteria, fainting spells, itching, leucorrhoea.

"My feet and hands were cold all the time, my limbs were so weak that I could hardly walk around the house; was troubled with numb spells. I have taken four bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one bottle of her Blood Purifier, one package of her Sanative Wash, and am entirely cured. I have not had one of those numb spells since. Can you wonder that I sing the praises of a medicine that has cured me of all these ills?"—MRS. LOUISA PLACE, 650 Belmont St., Brockton, Mass.

The Barrington Review

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

M. T. LAMEY, Ed. and Pub.

Entered at the postoffice at Barrington, Ill., as second-class matter.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1897.

As Others See Barrington.

The village board of Barrington is progressive and energetic. A franchise has been granted the Barrington Electric Company to erect poles and electrical conductors in the street and to operate and maintain an electrical plant. A committee has been appointed by the board to procure the necessary plans and specifications for a system of water works to cost $23,000, to be paid for by borrowing money and issuing bonds to pay the same amount by general and special assessments. What's the matter with Libertyville?—Lake County Independent.

Bread or Whisky?

The announcement that the United States government will take measures to curtail the indiscriminate and unlimited pouring of intoxicating liquors into Alaska and down the throats of the gold seekers recalls the fact that neither the United States nor the Canadian government has taken the interest it should have done in the future of the vast region to the northwest. It was high time our government stepped in to limit the shipment of liquors across its border to the Klondike. Those miners who pioneered the way to the goldfields deserve something better than to be made drunk and lose their hard won gold. It is a tragic comment on our way of letting things alone that, while there is a prospect of scarcity of food at Dawson City the coming winter, there is no scarcity at all of whisky and beer. The settlement is fairly swimming in them. Prospectors may starve, but they can die drunk if they choose.

Every incentive to evil and the full gratification of base passions has been allowed to be put before the miners, who are away from home and all refining influences. There is no record that anybody, except one woman schoolmistress, has undertaken to give the men in the Klondike anything better than whisky shops and gambling dens and low shows. There are plenty of these in the Klondike—oh, yes!

If a government exists for any purpose at all, it is to look after the moral and physical welfare of the governed. In the interest of the citizens of each country Canada and the United States should take measures to throw the influences not of theology but of morality and civilization around their citizens who are away from home in the far north. Alaska and the Klondike region are as yet only territories and therefore under full and direct control of the respective governments.

Nearly 50 years ago the experiment was made at Grenoble in France of establishing a municipal kitchen and restaurant. The establishment is still in existence, owned and operated by the city. Besides furnishing meals on the premises, this city restaurant caters to private families, selling food to be taken to homes and eaten there. The aim has never been to make money out of the enterprise; consequently extremely low rates are charged for the food and drink, but the establishment is entirely self sustaining. The restaurant serves 15,000 meals a day. The pure and excellent quality of food and drink served has made the restaurant famous.

The scheme of establishing savings banks in connection with the United States postoffice department, in other words, postal savings banks, is attracting attention. It is argued that the national government, instead of borrowing money on bonds, might have a perpetual fund for its needs if it were to accept at its postoffices small sums of the people's savings and pay interest at the rate it now pays on its lowest priced bonds. The government would in this way be as well off as it is now, so long as it is in debt and pays interest money anyhow. The people would be better off than they now are, for they would know for certain that their money was safe and the interest on it sure.

The practice of wetting postage stamps with the tongue to make them stick to letters is a bad one. Where much attaching of postage stamps to letters is to be done, a wet sponge pressed tight into a little cup will serve to moisten the stamp.

During the last fiscal year the merchant marine vessels of the United States increased in capacity 65,400 tons.

We urge an early call from every intending piano buyer in Barrington and vicinity. We are making, during October, a general clearance sale. It includes second hand, shopworn, old style cases, rental stock and exchanged pianos of many makes, including several Bradburys. Some of these Clearance Sale pianos rank high musically. We recommend them for beginners. Our wholesale and retail departments have both contributed largely to this notable sale.

Every visitor is invited to inspect our complete line of Bradburys in uprights and cabinet and parlor grands, the foremost of all pianos. But we especially urge these cheap but serviceable "Clearance Sale" pianos just now. We need the room badly for new stock.

Terms: A proper discount for cash. But times are good, money easy, our own capital perhaps the largest in our line, (see Dun or Bradstreet) salaried positions secure, hence time buyers will be equally favored and may practically make their own terms. It looks reasonable that prices can not hold down to so low a point but for a short time; in particular that of Linseed Oil. Nearly every one is aware of the rise in price of all grains, which include flax, of which Linseed Oil is made. Prices can not get lower—they are as low as they can get.

EXCURSIONISTS KILLED

Fatal Accident on the Denver & Rio Grande.

DONE BY BREAKING A JOURNAL

Fortunate Circumstances Alone Prevent a Fearful Disaster—Two Passengers Killed and a Large Number Seriously Injured.

The first section of the Denver & Rio Grande narrow gauge train No. 4 met with an accident just west of Catopasei, Col., Sunday morning. The accident was caused by the breaking of a journal. Two passengers were killed. The train was made up of one baggage car, three tourist cars, one coach, three sleepers and a pay car. The wreck occurred at the end of a trestle, the last car of the train having just passed across the bridge. Had the accident occurred while the train was crossing the trestle the loss of life would have undoubtedly been very great. The wrecked train was bringing excursionists to attend the carnival exercises at Catopaxi, Cal.

WHO WILL BE NEW YORK'S NEXT MAYOR?

The municipal campaign for mayor of Greater New York has a widespread interest. Four leading candidates are in the field, representing four parties, each of which seeks to control the immense patronage of the most extensive municipal corporation in the world. The president of the United States alone controls more patronage than the mayor of New York. It is therefore natural that a lively scramble should precede the election to fill the office. Party lines suffer greatly, as they always do when selfish motives come into play.

Tammany has seen fit to nominate candidates of its own, representing ideas peculiar to that organization. The regular Democrats have nominated Henry George, and like the regular Republicans, who are led by Gen. B. F. Tracy for mayor, have indorsed the national platform of their party adopted in Chicago last year. National issues can not fail to cut an extensive figure in the contest. Tracy's platform is the St. Louis one, George's the Chicago article, with municipal ownership thrown in. Both men are of a very high order of citizenship and either would give the City of Greater New York a pure administration. The country at large will await the results of the election with considerable interest.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Beating a Good Cow.

JOHNSON and Ross were two general farmers that lived side by side. Each of them kept a cow, and each endeavored, beside supplying the family with milk, to make some butter for sale. Johnson was one of the farmers that his neighbors declared had been spoiled by reading books on agriculture and agricultural papers. He had got, as Ross expressed it, "high-ker-flutin ideas" on farming in general and the cow in particular. One proof of this was in the action of Johnson when he sold off all the cows he had and took the price and put it into a single cow of great milk and butter-producing capacity. Ross said that this was a piece of foolishness that could have come only from Johnson's continual reading of agricultural papers. Anyway, every farmer knew that a cow was a cow and that was all there was to it, and the man that would go into fancy stock of that kind was simply wasting his money. Why, if he had only put his money into a high-bred hunting dog, there might have been some reason to it.

However, Johnson continued to milk his cow and Ross did the same. Both sent their butter to the same market and got about the same price per pound, as the butter Johnson made was from only one cow and therefore could not well be sent to a distant market or to fancy customers. Johnson's wife kept accounts of the receipts and expenditures in a systematic manner, and Mrs. Ross, wishing to show that a common cow would do as much as a high-bred one, also kept account on her side, though Mr. Ross said that that, too, was a piece of foolishness. At the end of three months Mrs. Ross confided to her husband that the cost of keeping their cow had just equalled the receipts, while the Johnson cow had $17 or thereabouts standing to her credit. Ross went out into the country and paid $15 for another cow, and Mrs. Ross' hopes were accordingly raised. But the two cows cost about double the cost of one, and in two months more he found from his wife's accounts that the two cows had made a profit of only $1.85, while the credit to the Johnson cow was $29. Ross this time bought a $20-cow, but at the end of another month the profit for the three was but $2.65, while the Johnson cow had raised the limit to $33. Ross determined to beat that cow if he had to buy a whole herd, so about once a month he would bring home a new cow, generally bought cheap at some auction.

At the end of eighteen months Ross had a herd of ten cows, all working as faithfully as they could to beat the Johnson cow. The product was greatly increased in volume, even though one or two of the animals had run dry. But the expense of keeping them was considerable, and it seemed to Ross that all the money he took from the grocer he paid out again to the feedman for feed, but this was not quite so. Moreover it had become a great burden with the Ross family to milk ten cows twice a day and otherwise care for them. Mrs. Ross suggested that they had better hire a man to help, but Ross winced at the proposition and said that the profits would not warrant it. At the end of the time specified the Rosses took an account of stock, and found that the last two cows had proved a losing investment and that now the balance was just a trifle on the wrong side of the books. It had actually cost more to keep the ten cows than they had brought in, after figuring the money value of the feed that had been raised on the farm. They learned that the Johnson cow had increased her net balance to $79.37 during the eighteen months. This was the last straw with Ross. He sent nine of his cows to the butcher and gave up dairying except for home use. He says there is no profit in dairying, and he knows it by actual experience. Being asked how it was that Johnson made so much from one cow he replied: "Oh, that was bull-headed luck."

Diarrhoea and Its Causes.

Having seen, under the above heading, a letter, signed J. A. L. in your paper of May 12, I may inform him there are several causes of diarrhoea, writes A. Hemsley in Fanciers' Gazette, London. The cause, whatever it may be, only requires to be removed, and diligent search should be made for it, before any good can be accomplished. In the first place, if your runs are kept perfectly clean, and your water tins are filled once daily, and kept located in a shady place, I advise a complete change of diet, and give wheaten bread flour and prepared chalk—a tablespoonful of chalk to a pound of oatmeal, with two or three tablespoonful of flour. The chalk neutralizes all acidity, which, in most cases, is the cause of diarrhoea, especially in warm weather. The fermentation of the contents of the crop and gizzard is too rapid; thus it is acetic fermentation sets in, which causes irritation of the internal mucous membrane. Dry corn is very poor food for baby chickens. If they eat sufficient it causes too heavy thirst and indigestion, sure precursors of this complaint. We have far too many fancy meals and foods in the market. And sharps should be used with great care for the first month. During the last week the excessive heat will have had a damaging effect upon many things. I have known chickens, ducks, geese, pigs, and even calves killed by too much heat. The system becomes so relaxed, causing much fatty matter to be liberated, which passes through the bowels, causing one of the worst dysenteries. My feeding mixture to about two months of age consists of oatmeal and flour (more of the former), a trace of chalk, or whiting, sulphur, and a little ground linseed. Boiled rice is very good for a change. Although a chemist, I advise all to keep off medicines entirely as long as they can, and employ simple remedies only, for with chickens you only do more harm than good. Avoid leaving milk in the sun by all means, and you boil your wheat, feed off grass, in clean vessels, and upon no occasion feed two or three days off the same bolting; it quickly turns sour; but this can be avoided by plunging it into cold water. It will thus keep sweet much longer. I never feed upon dusty ground, whether sweet or tainted. The former will scour, the latter simply courts disease in her numerous sluggish forms.

Eggs Preserved in Clay.

Li Hung Chang's commissariat carried with it around the world a supply of Chinese preserved eggs for the Ambassador's special use, writes A. V. Mersch in Farm Poultry. "Those wonderful eggs," said my friend, Mr. Doyle, the steward of the Waldorf, at which Li stopped during his sojourn in New York, "are not so bad after all. Here is one of them," he said to me, knowing that I would be interested in it, showing me what looked like a piece of pumice stone, but was an egg encased in clay, which was given me by one of the cooks, and may be a century old for aught I know. This is a preserved hen's egg. The process of keeping them is very primitive and simple, yet very effective. This is the way it is done: First the eggs are boiled hard; then while they are hot they are wrapped in soft clay and packed away. They will keep forever. They were brought here in bags packed in rice husk, some of which you see still clings to the clay. These eggs are almost black, and the yolks are green. They chop them very fine and decorate most of their viands with them, and they enter largely into all their sauces. The duck eggs are from the Pekin and Muscovy breeds. They are first boiled, then preserved in a paste of charcoal which hardens about them. These duck eggs are opened, split in halves and served in the shell, and as old as the eggs are, I assure you that they are delicious." I don't perfectly understand the difference in preserving hens' eggs and ducks' eggs; but I mean to try an experiment on them this season, and will report my experience.

Hardiness and Climate.

In the northern section of the United States careful attention should be given the selection of breeds, says Poultry Keeper. It should not matter to the farmer whether some particular breed may lay a few more eggs during the year than another, as his object should be to keep only those that are hardy and able to stand the cold winters. In making a selection, the proper course to pursue is to visit the yards of those who have fowls that have given good results in his section, and in purchasing stock aim to select the most vigorous. Breeds that have small combs and which are heavily feathered should thrive better in winter than will others, but such breeds should have also been bred for vigor. It is of no advantage to buy special prize-winners when the awards have been for special points in the show-room, but the birds should be pure bred, however, having stout limbs, deep breasts and eyes indicating health. It is the hen that lays every week in the year, except when hatching chicks or undergoing the process of moulting, that pays the most, but such hens can only be had by careful selection and due consideration given climatic conditions and proper management.

Many American weeds which are now neglected, according to a botanist, are good to eat. The tender shoots of milk-weed are said to resemble in taste asparagus. Pigweed is related to beets and spinach. The nettle, too, is declared to be well flavored, although it is somewhat coarse and stringy.

A Well-Filled Garden.—The statement was made at a farmers' club in Great Britain that the income of one garden of ten acres, covered with glass, exceeded that from 1,000 acres of the best farm land of the country.—Ex.

A HAPPY COUPLE.

HOME LIFE OF MR. AND MRS. WILCOX.

Their Summer Sojourn at the Bungalow—The Adjacent Cottages Generally Inhabited by Literary Folk—Mr. Wilcox's Travels.

(New York Letter.)

BUST OF MRS. WILCOX.

THE home life of Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, during the summer months, makes a pleasing picture of American life. Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox have built themselves a charming retreat called "The Bungalow" on a rock on the shore of Long Island Sound, six miles east of Yale college.

I climbed the rugged rocks up to "The Bungalow" piazza. Oriental rugs, German aeolian harps, Japanese screens, Indian wicker chairs and Mexican hammocks were all around.

"The Bungalow," like a great pelican perched upon its rocky home, has for its companions four cottages on the shore side of the lawn, like a row of "Mother Carey's chickens." These belong to the Wilcoxes, and are cosy cots, named "Sea-lawn, Mid-lawn, Rock-lawn, and Oak-lawn," and are occupied by people of the literary, musical and artistic world, who thus share a part of "The Bungalow" life, their relations being fraternal rather than financial. It is therefore a frequent occurrence for them to meet in "the Bungalow" and to contribute to the general fund of amusement by music, song and the other accomplishments, and to join in the impromptu dances which almost nightly, in the height of the season, are liable to occur. Imagine the great leviathan, stranded upon a pebbly beach, around which remnants of a former forest grew with green grass almost to the water's edge, and a bay of sapphire stretching before you for a mile, where it is merged into the darker waters of the Sound. Consider, then, the rock upon which "The Bungalow" is built as that leviathan; upon its gray back stands the house, twenty-five feet above the water: The winds buffet it, and the angry waves thunder in impotent fury against its rock base; the hurricanes lash it with the spray of the surf in vain. From the windows of the home then, as they madly turn, they glare as you might from the windows of a lighthouse, observe the tremendous workings of the sea and wind. In stormy weather one hears musical notes swelling like an organ through the windharps swinging in the breeze, then, as they madly turn, they glare as the wind increases, a strange, weird accompaniment to the shrieking demons of the storm.

The front of the house faces the bay and Sound to the south, and is reached by steps cut and built in the rock, or on the east side by means of a natural stairway of rock, which was left without any artificial touches, and with the rugged storm-torn cedars clinging to the crevices. "The Bungalow" was built, so to speak, by letter, Mr. Wilcox being absent. The architect who superintended the construction of the southeast corner is the poet's own, containing a desk and a great inkstand, that holds a quart—she evidently believes in plenty of ammunition, but, like a good soldier, she does not waste it.

The little cove to the east of "The Bungalow" is at high tide the meeting place of a swarm of good swimmers, of whom Short Beach has a large number. The writer has often accompanied Mrs. Wilcox and her swimming parties, and can vouch that as an amateur she is very expert. The swim to and from Green Island, a quarter of a mile away and sometimes in rough water, is frequently made by her; she has a very beautiful stroke, is an excellent instructor in the art, and she has converted all her young dryad friends into naiads.

"The Bungalow" is a feature in the social life at the beach. Annually Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox send out cards for a "Bungalow" hop. These are characteristic fetes. The invitations are written in the scrawling hand of the fair hostess on pale blue cards with "The Bungalow, Short Beach," raised in deeper blue letters across the top. Throngs of guests from New York, New Haven, Hartford, and the numerous summer resorts along the Connecticut coast are in evidence for this annual gala night, the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox extending to an almost unlimited circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mrs. Wilcox is very industrious, and although she has no regular Medo-Persian rules as to time, she generally writes some every day. She works with intensity and earnestness; and what her literary conscience tells her has been neglected one day, she makes up the next day, being capable of rapid and effective writing under pressure of circumstances. She also possesses a faculty of concentration of mind under conditions that would madden most persons. Ordinary conversation, music and laughter, she does not mind, but I am sure she is more often hindered than most writers are by well-meaning bores, who monopolize her valuable time by nonsensical conversation; or by boorish idiots, who allow their curiosity to drive them to the indecent act of peering through windows, as if at some wild beast show. Mrs. Wilcox writes without the use of many notes or books of reference, and her original manuscripts show a wonderful lack of changes or corrections.

"I wrote my first novel," says Mrs. Wilcox, "on the backs of old letters, seated from time to time in the boughs of an old apple tree. My home was in Central Michigan, and I saw nothing but that bit of country until my marriage. I divided my novel into chapters, and put little poetic lines at the top of each chapter. Original? Yes! But my friends told me that authors always quoted those verses at the head of their chapters, and so, ever after I had a contempt for authors who could not write their own verses."

Girls and Exercise.

In these days, when much is expected of women, the question of their physical training ought to receive more attention. In this respect girls are at a disadvantage as compared with boys, for up to eight or nine years of age a girl mixes often on equal terms with her brothers in their sports, but after that age healthy exercise is sacrificed to the bondage of genteel deportment. The young girl is confined, and any gymnastic exercises that are permitted building was happy in having a man of Mr. Wilcox's artistic temperament as a coadjutor, consequently not a tree was cut down, nor a rock chipped or blasted that was not actually in the way.

Mr. Wilcox has been a great traveler in many parts of the world, an indefatigable collector, and has many rare and beautiful curios. On one side of the big room, on a Navajo blanket, is a fine collection of American Indian relics. On the other above a large and luxurious divan, is another of Oriental arms and armor, from a Damascus blade to a murderous double headed dagger; curious wallets, with Mohammedan prayers on parchment; a rug from inaccessible Tibet; a strange little straw and wicker gate to the stairway in the corner leading to the upper library comes from Corea. Each corner, as well as each central panel, is instructive; over the piano a Bedouin tent; the are too often performed in a close room instead of the open air and under the restraint of ordinary clothing. Anything like vigorous muscular movements are thus rendered impossible, and almost the sole exercise is the torpid walk. Owing of the want of functional activity of the muscular system, the muscles waste and dwindle, and the nutrition of the body becomes impaired. Many of the troubles women suffer from in later life are undoubtedly due to impaired muscular vigor. Girls need not emulate their brothers in the cricket field, but rackets and lawn tennis might with advantage be indulged in—not, however, in tight stays and tight boots. Swimming, also, should be taught in all girls' schools, as it is an admirable exercise and brings into play all the muscles of the body.

The prisons of Germany cost the empire $25,000 a year.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

Chicago has been selected as a recruiting station for the enlistment of men for the United States navy. Shelbyville.—Mrs. Mary Hambleton has begun suit in the Shelby County Circuit Court for divorce from her husband.

Marengo.—A public memorial library building is to be erected here, to cost about $10,000. Elgin architects are preparing plans.

Chicago.—William Deering and twenty other prominent Methodists have issued a call for laymen of the Rock River conference to meet and form an association.

Jacksonville.—Interest in the famous Draper-Hastings murder case has been revived in this city by the visit of Col. Pat Dyer of St. Louis, chief counsel for the defense. It is thought he will try for a change of venue, though this county has a record for never hanging a person. Gen. John M. Palmer has been retained to assist in the defense. Public sentiment toward Draper has in no wise changed.

Springfield.—The executive committee of the Illinois Democratic Editorial Association met in this city today and arranged for a meeting of the Democratic editors of the state to be held at the Tremont House, Chicago, Oct. 22 and 23, for the purpose of consultation and discussion of state and national politics. A program was prepared, including an address of welcome by Mayor Carter H. Harrison and response by James F. O'Donnell, editor of the Bloomington Bulletin. The committee received responses from about 150 editors recommending a meeting. It is expected it will be a political event of importance.

Chicago.—When Congressman George E. White hastened to Washington last May to help along the cause of his constituents he forgot all about renewing his license for the lumber business he transacts in West Lake street. He subsequently received notices that he was in arrears, but the letters of notification passed through the regular course of his official mail and his private secretary did not think them of sufficient importance to turn over to his chief. Yesterday Congressman White paid the penalty of his procrastination by having to submit to the indignity of arrest. He will be given a hearing before Justice Doyle this morning.

Joliet.—Ernest Semper, age 47 years, a butcher and sausage maker in this city, committed suicide early this morning by shooting. He leaves a widow and four children. Mrs. Semper said she had not the slightest idea why her husband had killed himself. Their home life was a happy one in every way. Business has been poor lately, but Mr. Semper rarely talked of his business affairs at home. Meat was high and the profits in the sausage business were very small. Mrs. Semper said her husband had been greatly interested in Luetger's trial, as he was acquainted with the Chicago sausage maker, but she does not think his interest in that trial has affected his mind.

Milford.—A. W. Welch, William and Mrs. Lyons were arrested at this place Monday night, charged with committing a murderous assault upon James Parkes, a resident of the west side. Parkes and the Lyons family live on adjoining property. Friday night Welch, Lyons and his wife lay in wait for Parkes and assaulted him on the streets within two blocks of his home, stabbing him through the left lung. He died this morning. It seems that Parkes had been forewarned of the trouble and had passed through the yards of two neighbors to avoid the trio, but the woman headed him off and held him until the men came to her assistance. The defense claims that Parkes had assaulted the woman, when the men came to her assistance. Parkes was 67 years old and is a man of family.

Chicago.—Mischievous children caused the wrecking of a street car at West Chicago and Hoyne avenues last night, and though no one was seriously injured, fifteen passengers received a scare they will not soon forget. The car was badly wrecked, a lamp post was ground off its foundation, and the lives of two persons were saved by the car coming in contact with the obstruction. Workmen have been repairing the street in the vicinity of Hoyne and West Chicago avenues during the past few days, and the children of the neighborhood have found amusement in placing gravel on the street car tracks to find the dust after the cars had passed. Last evening a crowd of youngsters adopted this form of pastime, and one, more daring than the others, found some paving stones and a couple of them were placed on the tracks.

The social given by the Epworth League in the parlors of the M. E. church was well attended and proved a success financially as well as socially.

Rev. T. E. Ream left Tuesday noon for Chicago, where he attends the Rock River conference. The members of his congregation are earnestly hoping that he will be returned.

Al R. Ficke, the popular Lake Zurich photographer, was in town Monday and took some views of A. W. Meyer's property, which are to be used in evidence in the case of Meyer vs. Village of Barrington.

"Belief in the Unseen" will be the morning subject at the Baptist church tomorrow. At the evening service (7 o'clock) the topic will be "Good Intentions." All are invited.

Fred Sandman sold an engine and boiler to a gentleman who is moving the outfit to Woodstock, where he will establish a feed mill and machine shop.

Last Sunday there were two who united with the M. E. church by letter: Miss Sutherland of Morgan Park church and Miss Minnie Newman of the St. Paul's M. E. church, Chicago.

Have A. W. Meyer & Co. place a Standard sewing machine in your home on trial. It is the highest grade and only rotary shuttle machine made, also the lightest running—and does not cost any more than cheaper makes.

Messrs. and Mesdames Henry and Joe Roloff of Detroit, Mich., and Mr. Jacobs and daughter of Park Ridge, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Grom Monday.

John Hodge of Wauconda was a pleasant caller at this office Saturday. Mr. Hodge has secured a position as principal of the Lake Zurich schools.

Arthur Rieck, the 2-year-old son of Kate Rieck, died at the home of Geo. Meenk, near Wauconda, Saturday. The remains were interred at Wauconda Monday.

Hitchcock & Andrews of Dundee will have on sale, at Barrington, potatoes by the car load, at wholesale and retail. Mr. L. Andrews is in Minnesota buying stock and shipping only choice selected potatoes. Wait a bit for your winter's supply.

HITCHCOCK & ANDREWS.

Messrs. and Mesdames B. Sott, L. F. Schroeder, Mrs. F. H. Frey and Mrs. Fred Lageschulte visited Elgin Sunday, where the ladies attended the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Elgin United Evangelical church.

President Boehmer, Aldermen Grunau, Collen and Willmarth, and John C. Plagge and H. D. A. Grebe, went to Woodstock yesterday to inspect the system of waterworks in that city.

Sometime during Tuesday night unknown parties stole a wagon which was standing outside the blacksmith shop of Albert Kunke. A can of kerosene was found one morning the past week in some shavings alongside the same shop. From appearances one is led to believe that a serious crime was contemplated by the culprits, but were frightened away before they could accomplish their object.

Next Sunday at the M. E. church there will be Sunday school held at the usual hour. All are invited to visit the school. There will be no preaching services as it is conference Sunday.

Winter will soon be here, and now is the time to make arrangements and enter some good school. The Metropolitan Business College of Chicago offers excellent facilities for fitting young people for success in life. Mr. O. M. Powers is the principal, and will send full information to all who write for it.

The dance given in Mrs. Meyer's grove, Plum Grove, Saturday evening was a most enjoyable affair. The music was fine, and those in attendance were well repaid for being present.

Commencing with Monday, September 13, the cider mill of Wm. Hobein, located 1 1/2 miles northeast of Barrington, will be in operation. Cider will be made on Mondays only. Bring on your apples.

We are pleased to know that the question of having a kindergarten in this place is no longer an imaginative one, but is a reality. Miss Gray of Irving Park opened her school Monday morning, in the Sunday school room of the M. E. church. The attendance is increasing daily, and it is to be hoped that our citizens will see that Miss Gray meets with deserved success, and that the kindergarten may become a permanent institution.

Serious Runaway.

Mrs. Boothman, who lives near Barrington Center, was coming to town Tuesday evening with the hired man, when the horses, which were attached to a light wagon, were frightened near the Freeman place by a dog running into the road and snapping the legs of one of them. Mrs. Boothman grabbed one of the lines away from the hired man and both were thrown from the wagon, one in each direction. Mrs. Boothman had one ear nearly cut off in the fall and her head was badly hurt, while her side and arms were bruised in a serious manner from being dragged some distance. The hired man was only slightly bruised. The team ran into a load of hay after going a short way and was easily caught. Dr. Alverson was summoned, and the patient is getting along nicely.

A few weeks ago the editor was taken with a very severe cold that caused him to be in a most miserable condition. It was undoubtedly a bad case of la grippe and recognizing it as dangerous he took immediate steps to bring about a speedy cure. From the advertisement of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the many good recommendations included therein, we concluded to make a first trial of the medicine. To say that it was satisfactory in its results, is putting it very mildly, indeed. It acted like magic and the result was a speedy and permanent cure. We have no hesitancy in recommending this excellent Cough Remedy to anyone afflicted with a cough or cold in any form.—The Banner of Liberty, Libertytown, Maryland. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Oims, Palatine.
