CHAPTER XXXVIII.—(Continued.) It was hard to go about her daily tasks to smile, to talk, to look as though no sorrow engrossed her-but Hildred did it. Her husband found out, too, quite by accident, that she rose early every morning in order that she might go on with the work that she had begun. Her letters, the plans, the wants of the tenants, were all atsended to before the real householdday began. He was pleased when he found it out; it was part of her noble character to be true to her purposes; but he never dreamed that love for him drove sleep from her eyes, as it had already driven peace from her heartthe state of the state of the the would never have believed it. So they went on through the bright autumn days, playing at cross purposes, each believing simply and implicitly in the dislike of the other. With the days her love grew greater. There was, indeed something most loving in the earl now. While she shunned and avoided him, she would have given the whole world for one kindly word, for one loving glance from him. She watched him with dim, passionate eyes. At the sound of his footsteps Ler heart throbbed, and her pulse quickened at the sound of his voice. Her whole heart went out to him. He was her husband, and she loved him with a wonderful love, although she showed none of it.

With her keen passionate love grew her jealousy. It was not in Lady Hamfiton's nature to pass by the admiration of a man like the handsome earl. He must admire her. Had he not done so spontaneously, she would have won it from him. All homage was acceptable to her-his particularly so, because he was a handsome man, and because he had a beautiful, dark-eyed wife who never looked quite comfortshle when they were talking together -two little incentives which Lady Hamilton profited by, and which afforded amusement to her. What was d young wife who counted every smile that her husband gave her.

She smiled sadly to herself one day, saying:

"Now I know the meaning of the words:

"I have gone mad-I love him-let me die."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

ITH an intolerable sense of shame and disgrace, it suddenly occurrred to Lady Caraven that her lot in life was quite different from other people's. It seemed to pass over her with a sudden terrible commotion. She Mad been so occupied with her efforts as regarded her husband, her plans of reform, her schemes for the benefit of others, that she had not given much thought to her own position as a wife whose husband made no pretense of loving her. The knowledge of her real status came to her now with a keen sense of intolerable pain, yet she would! have borne its bitterness but for the fear lest the brilliant, beautiful blonde should become as wise as herself. That would have been intol-

A triffing circumstance brought Hildred's jealousy to a climax. The earl was going out in a great hurry one morning when he found that the buton of his glove was hanging by a thread. Lady Hamilton, who was enpaged on some kind of fancy work, with reedle and silk in her hand, sat by. He went to her at once.

"Lady Eastliten, be kind to megive this one stitch." She laughingly suplied; she would not let him reove the glove.

"You need not take that trouble," he said-"I can do it as it is."

With a pale face and darkening eyes the young countess watched the little Why had he gone to her for this small service? Why should she hold her husband's hand and look with ghing eyes into his face? She could not endure it. She went up to them.

"I thank you, Lady Hamilton," she "I will do that for Lord Cara-Ledy Hamilton looked up in amazeat, but there was something in the ag countess' face which made her leid at once. She drew back coldly. "Lord Caraven asked me to do it,"

In all probability he had forgotten that I was here," she returned, in a ich clear voice.

The earl, like a prudent man, remained quite silent. He looked at his wife's face as she bent over the glove, and he saw something there that, shrewd as he was, puzzled him. Why was she so pale? What was it that shone and gleamed in the dark eyes? Why did the proud lips tremble? What was in her face? He gazed in silent wonder. She had finished. "The button will not come off again," she declared.

"I hope not," said Lady Hamilton, in a peculiar tone of voice; "and, if it Lord Caraven."

He turned away with a laugh, but the mischief was done; the sight of her guest's golden head bending over story of my marriage." her husband's hand had fanned the jealousy of the young wife into a flame -nor did what followed extinguish it.

The earl had laughed to himself, thinking the occurrence a pretty bit of by-play. He was smiling still when, an hour afterward, his wife met him.

"Hildred," he said in a tone of gay banter, "were you jealous of Lady Hamilton?"

Then the idea seemed so absurd to him that he laughed aloud. To his surprise she grew deadly pale; her lips quivered with emotion.

"Yes," she replied, bitterly-"I scorn to speak falsely-I was jealous of her. You may think what you like of me." Still he would not be serious about it. He said, jestingly:

"I always thought until now that jealousy presupposed love."

"Did you?" questioned his wife, with proud indifference. "I always thought love presupposed perfect trust."

"You are a good fencer, Hildred," laughed her husband; and he thought no more of the matter. But she did. It had wanted but that trifling incident to fan her jealousy into a flame.

How the hours of that day passed she never knew. One picture filled her minu-that of Lady Hamilton's golden nothing but sheer mischief, sheer love head bending over her husband's hand, all the strength and passion of her of admiration, was death almost to the | She could not bear the thought of it. He might not love her, but he should not love anyone else. He should not laugh because she was jealous, he should not admire this fair woman while he so cruelly neglected her. She worked herself into a frenzy of jealous despair, yet was outwardly calm and proud as usual.

The dinner-party at the castle on that day was not a large one; many of the guests had left, Lord and Lady Damers had returned home. Sir Raoul was in his room. Lady Caraven had dresssed herself with unusual care and attention. During dinner she watched her husband and Lady Hamilton. More than once she saw them laughing and heard them talking merrily. Was it of her? Was the earl telling her that his wife was jealous? And was she laughing because the very cream of the jest was that her husband did not care for her? Then she grew ashamed of herself. Such suspicions were unworthy of her. She tried to banish them, but they WHOSE IS THIS?" the golden head stirred, whenever the sweet sound of musical laughter came to her, she fancied that she was the subject of the jest, until her jealous pain grew intolerable and she could bear it no longer. It was a relief to her when she could give the signal and the ladies could withdraw. She wanted to be alone to think.

. For the convenience of one of the guests who was leaving they had dined a little earlier than usual. When the ladies reached the drawing-room the room was filled with ruddy light from the sun setting in the western sky. It would be cruel, they said, to spend such a warm, lovely evening indoors. The gentlemen, thinking the same thing, had hurried from their wine, saying that it would be a pity to lose the last gleam of sunlight.

But before they went out someone prayed the earl to sing one song.

"I will sing a duet," he said, "if Lady Hamilton will help me."

It was useless, he thought, appealing to his wife. The last time he had asked her to sing with him she had refused.

Lady Hamilton was only too pleased. She went to the piano, and very soon the two beautiful voices seemed to fill the room-Lady Hamilton's clear and sweet, the earl's rich and musicalwhile the young countess watched them with longing, pitiful eyes. They were singing about love, love that would never die, love that was immortal. More than once the unhappy young wife saw the widow look at her husband; more than once there came to her a wild impulse, a longing, to strike the fair face. When the song was over, it was time to go and watch the sunset. Hildred saw that her husband did not leave Lady Hamilton's side. He remained near her, saying:

"We will watch the sun set over the lake. It is one of the prettiest sights at Ravensmere."

She did not hear Lady Hamilton's does, do not ask me to help you again, answer; it was given with smiling lips and laughing eyes. Was it her morbid fancy, or did she really hear her husband say, "Yes, and I will tell you the

> She did not wait to ask herself if it were mere fancy. She believed that she heard it, and the idea of it drove her almost mad. They were going to watch the sun fade amongst the flowers, and the earl would meanwhile entertain his companion with the story of his marriage—how he had to wed the money-lender's daughter, or else lose Ravensmere, but how he had avenged himself by neglecting her. Hildred's heart and brain were on fire. The husband she loved, despite his neglect, and the rival whom she disliked, were going to laugh over her together.

> An idea suddenly occurred to the unhappy wife—they should not do this, they should not laugh at her, her love and her jealousy should not be sport for them. She would follow them unperceived, and then, when they began to laugh over her story, she would confront them and dare them to amuse themselves with her anguish. All the pride of her nature was aroused. She would suffer death rather than be laughed at by her husband and her rival.

She was bewildered-not herself. She had never been herself from the moment in which she recognized the fact that she loved her husband with nature. She was bewildered by the pain of her love and the smart of her jealousy. The only idea quite clear in her mind was that her husband and her guest should not laugh at her.

When the idea of going out had first been mentioned, she had sent for a scarf, and it lay upon a couch now, a glittering mass of silvery gauze. "Whose is this?" he asked; and no one answered. "It is very pretty," he added, "and if it has no owner, you shall have it, Lady Hamilton."

The young countess did not step forward to claim it; she saw her husband throw it over the pearly shoulders and the white neck, and Lady Hamilton look up at him with a coquettish laugh.

"Evidently," she said, "you are quite ignorant of the fashion in which ladies now wear scarfs. Our great-grandmothers drew them tightly stretched across the shoulders-we like them in this fashion."

Raising her arms, she wound the silvery gauze around her head and neck and arms, shading the bright face, and making her look so piquantly beautiful that Lord Caraven cried out in admiration:

"That is capital," he said; "ladies always know what is picturesque." The young countess saw them quit the room together. She resolved upon following them. She heard her husband say laughingly to his companion:

"We will go straight to the lake-I want you to watch the sunset there." Lady Caraven delayed only a few moments-it was to go to her room for a large dark shawl that should hide her-hide the amber satin and rich black lace-hide her face and head, so that anyone meeting her should quite fail to recognize her. "Creeping along in the dark, who will know me? Or, if they know me, who will care for me?" she said to herself. When she reached her room she found a message there from Sir Raoul, asking if she would go to his apartments for a short time. She said to herself, "No;" with her heart and soul in a ferment she could not talk to Sir Raoul. She had a dim idea that what she was about to do was wrong, undignified, ungenerous. She could not have persevered in her purpose had she looked but once in the calm, noble face of the man who wanted her to be a heroine.

"Tell Sir Raoul that I am engaged just at present, but that I will see him later on in the evening," she said.

She sent him some books and flowers she did not go to him. (To be continued.)

Condensed Report of the Doings in Senate and House.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

ADOPT CONFERENCE REPORT.

Senate Immediately Agrees to Amendments to War Revenue Measure-To Consider the Question of Annexation of Hawail

Friday, June 10. The house agreed to consider and vote upon the Newlands resolution to annex Hawaii next Wednesday afternoon. The bill to enable volunteer soldiers to vote at congressional elections was passed. In the senate the conference report on the war revenue bill was agreed to by the senate after a discussion lasting four hours. The report was agreed to by the decisive vote of 43 to 22. Every republican voted for the measure. The vote against the report was cast by sixteen democrats, three silver republicans and three populists.

Monday, June 13.

In the house Mr. Newlands (silverite, Nev.) spoke in support of his resolution for the annexation of Hawaii to the United States. Mr. Bell (Col.) followed, opposing the resolutions. Mr. Pearson (rep., N. C.) advocated annexation. Mr. Henry (rep., Ind.) spoke for the resolution on the ground of strategic value. Mr. Mann (rep., Ill.), Mr. Barrows (rep., Mass.), and Mr. Stewart (rep., N. J.), spoke for the resolution, and Mr. Smith (dem. delegate Ariz.) in opposition.

There was no business of importance in the senate.

Tuesday. June 14.

In the senate the resolution of Mr. Lodge (Mass.) directing that an inquiry be made into the disposition made of the methodist book concern claim, which was paid recently by congress, was adopted without division.

Gloomy Picture of Cuban Affairs. Toronto, June 14.-Letters received from an officer of the British cruiser Talbot and a merchant of Havana by persons in this city give gloomy pictures of affairs in Cuba generally and the capital in particular. The navy officer says he had every opportunity of noting the state of affairs. He found the common people were slowly starving, while the wealthy were reduced to considerable hardships. The garrisons are on rations slightly under the egulation quantity. General Blanco is using every natural formation to make the defenses stronger, and is mining and intrenching at all points. . The mood of the garrison, he says, varies. At times it is buoyant, then depressed. Soldiers are fairly well disciplined and armed. 150 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK. Of, Kay's Lung Balm for coughs, colds Population of Porto Rico.

It is not generally realized that this queer little parallelogram in the Caribbean has more than half as great a population as the whole of Cuba. The population of the Hawaiian islands is only about a tenth of that of Porto Rico, which is one of the most thickly populated portions of the new world, its total of 808,708 (in 1887) giving over 216 people to the square mile. There are just two of the United States so densely settled, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The average of our northern Atlantic states is but 107 to the square mile. And in the aggregate Porto Rico har more inhabitants than either Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, West Virginia, Florida or both Dakotas or any of the states of the far west except California. So it will be seen that it is quite a mouthful, even if it is only a speck on the map,-Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MOTHERS.

We are asserting in the courts our right to the exclusive use of the word "CASTORIA," and "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," as our Trade Mark.

I Dr. Samuel Pitcher, of Hyannis, Massachusetts, was the originator of "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," the same that has borne and does now bear the fac-simile signature of CHAS. H. FLETCHER on every wrapper. This is the original "PITCHER'S CASTORIA" which has been used in the homes of the mothers of America for over thirty years. Look carefully at the wrapper and see that it is "the kind you have always bought," and has the signature of CHAS. H. FLETCHER on the Wrapper. No one has authority from me to use my name except The Centaur Company, of which Chas H. Fletcher is President.

Col. T. W. Higginson, in his autobiography, "Cheerful Yesterdays," thus characterizes John Brown; "I saw before me a man whose mere appearance and bearing refuted in advance some of the strange perversions which have found their way into many books. In his thin, worn, resolute face there were the signs of a fire which might wear him out, and practically did so, but nothing of pettiness or baseness; and his talk was calm, persuasive and coherent. He was simply a high-minded, unselfish, belated Covenanter; he had that religious elevation, which is itself a kind of refinement; he lived, as he finally died, absolutely absorbed In one idea; and it is as a pure enthusiast-fanatic, if you please-that he is to be judged."

WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

(From the Free Press, Detroit, Mich.) A prominent business man recently exd the opinion that there is one thi that will prevent women from completely filling man's place in the business world they can't be depended upon because they are sick too often. This is refuted by Mrs. C. W. Mansfield, a business woman of 58 Farrar St., Detroit, Mich., who says:

"A complication of female ailments kept me awake nights and wore me out. I could get no relief from medicine and hope was slipping away from me. A young lady in my employ gave me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I took them and was able to rest at night for the first time in months. I bought more and took them and they cured me as they also cured several other people to my knowledge. I think that if you should ask any of the druggists of Detroit who are the best buyers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills they would say the young women. These pills certainly build up the nervous system and many a young woman owes her life to them.

No discovery of mod-Suddenly Prostrated. ern times has done so much to enable women to take their proper places in life by safe-guarding their health as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore the strength and health to the exhausted woman when every effort of the physician proves unavailing.

For the growing girl they are of the greatest benefit, for the mother indispensable, for every woman invaluable. For paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and other diseases long supposed incurable, these pills have proved their efficacy in thousand of cases.

As long as I can recollect, my mother's hair has been gray. About twelve years ago, my hair began to show signs of turning. I still use this dressing occasionally, a bottle lasting me quite a while; and though over forty years of age, my hair retains its youthful color and fullness. To all who have faded and gray hair, I would heartily secommend Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor."—Mrs. Magors Pickett, Canton, Ga.

To heredity, to the transmission of traits from sire to son, we owe most of the possibilities of growth and development. If each newly born being started out anew, without the force of heredity the level of life might be expected to be that of the digger Indian or Bushman. Naturally bad traits descend like the good. Peculiarities of feature, excentricities of speech and manner, birth marks, etc., are handed down just as surel as manual dexterity, physical beauty, mathematical ability, and the mental and moral qualities in general. A curious example of this descent of family aits is furnished by Mrs. Maggie Pickett, Canton, Ga., in whose family gray hair was hereditary. She writes:

"Gray hair is hereditary in our family."

Military Operations.

The policy of war which chose the eastern end of Cuba as the first really serious objective is a wise one, as it stook many varied considerations into view. Successful attack by land and sea at this point, with the fall of Santiago, means the effective reduction of the whole of eastern Cuba, nearly half of the island, and will greatly shrink the iron band in process of compression about Havana. The concentration of forces for the operations against the capital alike from the sea front and the rear will make the early surrender of that city inevitable as quickly as movement to this end shall have been made with the ripening of occasion.

In the meantime the troops co-operating with the navy in eastern Cuba will have the advantage of the most efficient help from the insurgents, who are in fargest force in this part of the island. The climate and conditions are better here than in the west for unacclimatized men who are compelled to do summer campaigning, and the supply of available food in the country is greater. It furnishes a convenient basis of operations against Puerto Rico, which lies nearer this portion of the island. For this reason alone such a campaign is most desirable. It has been logically enforced on the conviction of the government at Washington that the attack on Puerto Rico should be made with the least practicable delay. Diplomatic and military considerations demand that all war operations shall be prosecuted with the most drastic energy, even in the face of overtures from the enemy and any peace protocols proposed by foreign powers at the plea of Spain. With Puerto Rico and the Philippines in our military possession diplomacy rests on an immutable basis in securing as the final result, in settling terms of peace, the only sure indemnity which we can expect from a bankrupt nation. Our sanest policy in any contingency is to perfect first the grip of steel.

Our line of strategy makes a smaller demand on us than would a present concentration of our energies against Hacome of quick success. It gives the larger portion of our undrilled troops the more time for complete organization, for equipment in full, for drill and field work-in a word, for the whole of that process which transforms a man into a hardy and effective fighter who can take good care of himself as well as of his enemy. The policy of the government seems to be to conduct this war with as little unnecessary loss of life as possible to accomplish the end in view. Skillful warmaking never hesitates to pour out lives lavishly when needful, but it will not do so recklessly and without counting the cost.

Prize Money.

It occurs to many minds just now, no doubt, that there is something a little incongruous in the fact that the naval servants of the government are allowed a premium in the shape of prize money. On the other hand, the army, with equal patriotism and devotion to its work, receives simply its specified pay. On the face of things it would seem that such preference is unjust, however sanctioned by habit, and that the government, put to enormous expense by the needs of war, should recoup itself with the full value of prizes taken at sea.

To speak frankly and with the fullest desire that our gallant navy, from admiral to bluejacket, should enjoy all the privileges possible, the prize money system is an anachronism. It arose at the time when land and sea forces were for the most part raised by individuals and government pay was irregular and spasmodic. A share in the loot of fortified towns or an enemy's camp was a recognized recompense. Officers of both ervices were gentleman adventurers and divided the plunder with the men. The legalized doings of that day we should be very apt now to brand as robbery and piracy. When military service on land and sea was fully organized as a part of the government system, looting ashore was abolished in law, but the seaman's prize money stuck like the "fly in amber," though under the jurisdiction of prize courts. Privateering. the more flagrant form of the prize money system, has all but ceased. Its milder phase in the navy is pretty sure to go before long. In the meantime we hope our Jackies will fill their pockets

A National Lesson.

The difficulty of creating and mobilizing an effective army in a few weeks was taught us during the late civil war with bloody emphasis. A similar lesson, though less cruelly enforced, has lately been brought home to our experience. Our national guard system as a reliable nursery of troops disciplined and equipped for prompt action is full of faults. In short, it is not a good working apparatus, except as a means of repressing local disturbances. Possibly this has been regarded as the rightful compass of its operation. Suddenly developed need finds our militia for the most part defective in regimental organization and very imperfectly equipped for the field. The question is not one of mere drill in the manual of arms or of company and battalion tactics or of parade marching. These are only the alphabet of the good soldier's acquirement. While the inherent defects are not inevitable in the state control of our militia, they are its natural outcome.

Military men are more and more convinced that the constitution of a first rate national guard would be best insured by this force passing from the management of the state to that of the general government. By this means the militia could easily be preserved in a state of excellent general efficiency, uniformly armed, organized and equipped, ready at any time for prompt service. But the jealousy inherent in our states rights convictions will probably always operate to prevent this change of base. It may be that such jealousy is the part of a larger wisdom, though it makes the machinery creak and go ramshackle in some of its details. But it is at all ST. & JOE BENTON HARBOR events practicable for the states to enlarge and perfect their national guard methods under the supervision and advice of the war department and thus secure uniformity and exactness of administration. This would go far to cure the more obvious evils and insure a trustworthy force ready for easy mobilization.

America May Fix Fashions.

The hasty and unguarded expression of sympathy for Spain that so many of the French people indulged in may have a more farreaching effect than could have been foreseen by anybody. So soon as the quick sighted Parisians saw what they and their newspapers had done they could have bitten their tongues off. It is broadly stated and generally believed that leading French newspapers offered their services to the United States for a consideration, said services coasist in creating a public sentimen in our favor. Their disinterested offer was declined with thanks. Then they proceeded in revenge to create a hostile sentiment. Immediately it reacted on the most sensitive part of a Frenchman, his pocket, American women love their country, even if they do buy millions of dollars' worth of French fallals every year.

Our ladies abroad refused to patronize the Paris dressmakers and milliners. Many of them actually came home without Paris wardrobes. The French tradesfolk are in despair. They admit the United States is the best market France has. They say American women have better taste than any others and spend more on their toilets, and that they are well capable of designing and executing beautiful costumes at home. Perhaps the result will be that American women will use their native taste and their money to design artistic costumes of their own, and that in time the United States instead of Paris will set the fashion for women's dress.

So soon as the hurry of immediate war legislation is over congress should turn its attention to the Danish West Indies bill which has already been reported by the senate committee on foreign relations. It is a bill directing the president to purchase from Denmark if he can any one or two or all three of the islands of St. Croix, St. Thomas and St. John and utilize them for coaling and naval stations. The need of these purchases requires no argument with the American people.

Une of the most useful of philanthropic institutions has been started and is operating successfully in New York. It provides for recently discharged convicts of but one imprisonment. It aims to rehabilitate the unfortunate man in his own self respect and to find employment for him. This is a form of benevolence to be imitated.

The hundreds of fishing and game clubs which have come into existence attest the increasing devotion of Americans to manly outdoor sports. It is stated that there are more than a thousand of these between the Atlantic and the Mississippi.

Nobody is altogether bad.

TOPICS OF TODAY.

WORK OF THE MINTS.

If all the plans relating to the coinage of both silver and gold are adopted the capacity of the mints of the country will be taxed beyond their ordinary limits and they will be obliged to work overtime to make much headway in disposing of accumulated stocks of bullion. The secretary of the treasury has asked an appropriation of $250,000 to enable him to coin the gold bullion in the treasury, which on the 1st inst. amounted to $96,998,864. Besides this the new revenue bill provides for the coinage of about $42,000,000 of silver at the rate of $1,500,000 a month. In addition to these demands upon the mints it is expected that from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 of gold will shortly arrive from the Alaskan mines at the San Francisco mint for coinage. This will make a requisition upon the mints for the coinage of more than $150,000,000 of gold and silver bullion, for which there is an immediate demand.

THE CAROLINES.

It has been surmised, from a good many circumstances, that Capt. Glass, who left San Francisco on the 18th of May, ostensibly for Manila, with the cruiser Charleston, is not bound directly for that port, but has an important mission to perform on his cruise to Luzon. It is said, with a good deal of positiveness, that the Charleston has gone to the Caroline islands, which belong to Spain, situated east of the Philippines and about two-thirds the distance fro Hawaii to Manila. There is on the island of Ponape one of the finest harbors in the Pacific, which is defended by a fort and a small garrison, supported by two puny wooden gunboats, and Capt. Glass has enough troops to take the fort and enough guns to sink the little boats.

READING THE PAPERS.

There has not been a time for years when the people of the United States. already the greatest readers of newspapers in the world, have read the news of the day as carefully and at such length as at present. Conversation with one's friends all tends to show that, however literary their tastes and pursuits, the real life of the daily paper has irresistible charm against the temptations of fiction, history, poetry and all the rest. Every word in the news columns is scrutinized lest some fact in the progress of the war with Spain should escape; and this is as true of those who have no direct personal interest in the conflict as of those whose fathers, brothers, husbands and sweethearts have enlisted to fight the nation's battle for freedom and humanity.

SITUATION IN SPAIN.

Nothing can be more anomalous and bewildering than the conflicting accounts of the popular attitude toward the war in Spain. There is but one point upon which all observers agree, namely, the apathy which prevails on the surface. The common people are said to be taking very little interest in the progress of hostilities and considering the problem to be exclusively a governmental affair. But does this mean that the cabinet is at perfect liberty to settle the matter in accordance with its own judgment? By no means, apparently. Despite the apparent indifference the cabinet dare not sue for peace lest the terms should be deemed "dishonorable" and a revolution precipitated.

BLOOD ON CUBAN SOIL.

To the navy must be accorded the honor of shedding the first American blood on land in the war for the independence of Cuba. Assistant Surgeon John Blair Gibbs, Sergeant Charles H. Smith and Privates William Dunpny and James McColgan, all of Colonel Huntington's battalion of marines, which landed at Guantanamo last Friday, died in a Spanish attack on the American position Saturday afternoon. Smith was the first victim, falling while relieving guard on an outpost at the opening of the engagement. Assistant Surgeon Gibbs was shot in front of his tent before the Spanish force was repulsed in its most desperate assault.

REAL CONTEST.

Presumably American troops will land in force on Cuban soil this week. Unless the strategy board is waiting to build a bridge or dig a tunnel, it is difficult to understand why there should be further delay. The navy has accomplished all that is to be expected of it at Santiago, and its achievements there will go for nothing unless they are supplementel within reasonable time by the co-operation of an army. With the landing of the army in Cupa the second stage of the war will begin and in that stage results will be accomplished more slowly, at greater st and by far greater expenditures of effort and of life than in the first stage.

NEWS OF ILLINOIS.

MINOR HAPPENINGS THROUGH-OUT THE STATE.

More Places in the Army for Illinois Men-Rail Rates Too High for Modern Woodmen-Wreck on the Burlington -Remembering Prof. Inglis.

More Places for Illinoisans.

Springfield: | Captain J. B. Inman, manager of the local office of the Western Union, today received his commission as captain, commanding the Illinois signal corps, which is soon to be called into service. The commission was received at 9 o'clock, and in less than thirty minutes Captain Inman had qualified and reported by telegraph to Brigadier General Greely, chief of the signal corps at Washington. Later in the day Captain Inman received an order which assigned him as recruiting officer of the corps and designated Springfield as the recruiting station. Lieutenant R. O. Rickard of the Illinois signal corps also received his commission as lieutenant, and he at once qualifled and reported to General Greely. A call for signal corps is expected to arrive in the near future. Illinois is to have a troop of fifty-five men, twothirds of whom must be expert telegraphers. These will be selected from all parts of the state, and it is probable that one-third will be taken from Chicago and the remainder from different parts of Illinois.

Remembering Prof. Inglis.

Springfield: The board of trustees of the Southern Illinois Normal, at Charleston, have adopted resolutions on the death of the late Professor S. M. Inglis, formerly state superintendent of instruction. A copy of these was received today by Secretary of State James A. Rose. They are as follows: "Resolved, That we gratefully remember his unswerving devotion to duty, during the years in which Professor Inglis has been connected with this school, first as a member of our board of trustees, ready with sympathy and counsel; then as our fellow worker in the faculty, untiring in effort for the highest of both pupils and teachers, and last as state superintendent of public instruction, and again as a trustee, where he so long and so ably labored. Resolved. That in the death of Professor Inglis the faculty has lost a trusted friend, the teachers of Illinois have lost a willing and efficient helper, and the cause of education has lost a ready and competent worker. Resolved, That we tender to the stricken wife and mourning friends our sympathy in their great bereavement.

Rallroad Rates Too High.

Elgin: Silver Leaf camp, Modern Woodmen of America, with nearly 700 members, did not attend the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Picnic association's picnic at Rockford June 2. A number of other camps also stayed home. The reason was that the railroads refused to grant rates that the Woodmen would accept. It looks as if the Elgin camp and others will remain away from the annual picnics permanently. Silver Leaf camp proposes to organize a Kane County Picnic association, and a committee was last night appointed to confer with camps in other towns. It consists of C. S. Higinbotham (brother of H. N. Higinbotham of Chicago), Eugene Hammond (son of a former sheriff of Cook county, David S. Hammond), Joseph Richmann, Oliver Ober and W. W. Fraser.

Burlington Train Wrecked.

Aurora: A stock train broke in two on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road, seven miles west of this city, and the rear section ran back, crashing into a Chicago, Burlington and Northern fast freight. The way car and three grain cars were destroyed. Those injured in the wreck were: Engineer A. L. Spencer of Chicago, formerly of Aurora, one leg cut off and otherwise seriously injured; F. Jacobs of Sterling, stockman, several ribs broken, badly hurt; W. H. Schroeder of Sterling. stockman, wrist and hand cut; Dan Holm of Hinckley, face and hand cut and bruised; Bert Baxter of New Milford, neck bruised and scalded; John Peaff of Oregon, arm bruised! Frank Hills of Chana, bruised.

Union Stock Yards Inspection.

Springfield: The assistant state veterinarian reports to the state board of live-stock commissioners the result of the cattle inspection at the Chicago Union stock yards for the week ending June as follows: Number inspected in yards, 128; passed in yards, 91; held for post-mortem, 37; passed on postmortem, 31; condemned as unfit for food and tanked, 6; cases of tuberculosis discovered on post-mortem, 3.

Will Recruit for the Sixth.

Monmouth: Lieutenant McIntosh and Corporal Cox, company H, Second battalion, Sixth Illinois infantry, arrived here from Camp Alger today. Their mission is to assist in recruiting 120 men to complete the quota of the battalion. Galesburg, Abingdon and Geneso are included in this order.

Wai a Good Pedestrian

Mr. Gladstone never appeared to greater advantage than when taking a walk in the country with a congenial friend whose physical powers were equal to the task of keeping up with a pedestrian whom no distance could tire. It was not until he was well advanced in life that he took, partly as an amusement and partly for exercise, to the practice of felling trees. In this difficult art he attained a skill which was the marvel of the professional woodman, and of which the muscles of his arms, wiry and spare like the rest. of his body, gave little promise. In hisyouth he often spoke of himself as being good for a forty mile walk, and although he never accomplished the feat performed more than once by his second son, the Rev. Stephen Gladstone,. rector of Hawarden, of walking up from Oxford to London in a day, it was from no deficiency of pedestrian endurance. No ordinary frame was indeed requisite to carry Mr. Gladstonethrough the superhuman labors which he imposed upon himself. "Gladstone," remarked Sir James Graham, in 1852, 'can accomplish in four hours what it takes me sixteen to do, and he worksfor sixteen hours every day."

How Mrs. Brown-Potter Met Dumas. Mrs. Brown-Potter has been giving a representative of the Westminster Gazette some interesting reminiscences. Her meeting with the late Alexander Dumas was very pleasing. "I was: playing 'Camille,' " she said, "at a little French seaside town, some years ago, when one evening, feeling tired and rather despondent after the performance, I was told that an old gentleman had come round behind and wanted to see me. I invited him intomy room, and he spoke to me with great kindness of my portrayal of Camille, particularly of what he thought the girlish naturalness of the performance. I was pleased to hear the old gentleman say so, but you can imagine my delight when on taking his leave he remarked: 'You may wonder why I come to tell you this, but you will understand when I mention that my name is Alexander Du-

Attention is called to the fact that. the salts of aluminium are quite harmless, while the salts of zinc, copper and lead are poisonous. When in cooking certain fruits in aluminium utensils the metal shows signs of discoloration, there is not the slightest danger from such action, for the acid in the fruit is merely attacking the impurities of the metal. It has been proven that there is no injurious consequences can result from such possible discoloration, and such pure aluminium is now to be obtained that there is little probability of the aluminium ware becoming discolored.

Odd Name for a Mile.

A Burman mile is about equal in length to two English miles. The word for 'mile" in Burmese means "tosit" and a mile is the distance that a man goes before he considers it necessary to sit down.

Among the many expenses borne by railroad companies the ice bill figures. quite prominently. For instance, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad it is expected it will take over 50,000 tons of ice this year to meet the requirements of the service. The greater portion is used in connection with shipment of perishable goods; the balance in the passenger train service. A great deal of this ice is put up by the company in its own ice houses, but as the past winter has been so warm a very large proportion will have to be purchased.

There's a Tenderness

About our meats that is appreciated by the cook.

It is not necessary to pound the steaks with a mallet to make them yield up their juciness. Nor to use great care in broiling or roast-

Our beef, lamb, veal, mutton and pork is so good in itself that the chances of speiling them in bad cooking are small. Every piece of meat we sell is cut from prime, well fed and carefully handled animals.

Fresh Home-Made Sausages. Oysters and Vegetables in Season. Highest Price Paid for Hides and Tallows.
