Chas. Ainsworth of Marengo ran upon an adder the other day in the vicinity of Coon Creek. On killing it he found it measured 5 feet 2 inches. The next day he killed its mate, which was 2 feet 6 inches long. They were as large as a man's wrist.

A peculiar accident occurred to Harry Jordan of Woodstock a few days ago. A bug crawled into his ear and caused intense pain. An examination showed that the insect was directly against the drum and it required delicate maneuvering to remove the intruder.

Charles Harms, the tenant occupying the farm house of John Thies that was burned May 11, has confessed to setting it on fire and will be prosecuted by the Phœnix Insurance company, which held the policy. He was married May 3 to Annie Schuring, the daughter of a wealthy farmer near Barrington. Her family objected to the marriage and she ran away and was married-at Lake Geneva. She complains of cruelty and had left kim before his confession. He says that he set the place on fire so as to compel her to leave him, eight, days after the wedding.-McHenry County Journal.

Fire Company Wednesday.

On Friday evening the foundation was laid for bringing into life of a live, efficient, up-to-date fire department for Barrington.

Pursuant to a call, between thirty and forty male citizens assembled in the Village hall Friday evening of last'week, and adopted the constitution and by-laws prepared by a committee appointed at a previous meeting. George Stiefenhoefer acted as secretary of the meeting.

It is desired to have a fire company about forty members strong. A committee is now securing names to the roster, which will be acted on at a meeting to be held at an early day. when the organization will be perfected, and officers are to be elected. It should be considered an honor to be a member of the local fire department, and the way the company is starting out we predict a future of honors for the members. With the assistance of a well-drilled fire department and a splendid system of water works our citizens need have little fear of a repetition of the disastrous blazes of the past.

The Stamp Tax Fight.

The mandanius proceedings begun Saturday to compel an express company to pay for the revenue stamp on a receipt for goods for shipment will probably have but a slight effect in shifting the ultimate burden of the tax, even supposing that the case is decided adversely to the express company.

It was inevitable that every corporation upon whose business a tax was levied should promptly pass the burden along to its patrons. The brewers instantly added the dollar additional tax to the selling price of their beer, the telegraph companies required stamp to be affixed by the sender of the message, the express companies did the same, and the brokers and agents charged up the stamp to their principal.

All sorts of concerns, great and small, which constitute the agencies through which certain lines of business are conducted at once shouldered the burden upon their patrons. And if the patrons in the main did not object, it was probably because they realized that in the end whatever burdens of any sort were imposed upon that line of business would have to be borne by them.

Except in the case of import duties, which, as everybody knows, are paid wholly by the benevalent foreigner, the consumer finally pays the tax in one way or another. If the present case is decided against the express company, probably both the express and telegraph concerns will add a little here and there to their charges or cut off some part of their service. / It would be more convenient for the public if the corporation were charged with the duty of affixing the stamp, but moneywise the result would probably be about the same.

CHAPTER XLIII.-(Continued.) "Dying, yet not ill! You speak in lips. riddles, doctor."

"It is all a riddle to me," said the physician; "perhaps you can solve it. He has committed suicide-that is, he has made an attempt on his life, but he has not quite succeeded."

"He was very foolish," remarked the earl. Even the fact that his confidential steward had attempted to destroy his own life seemed to him a matter of less moment than the fact that his

Dr. Randall looked uneasily at the unconscious face.

"May I speak on a private matter?" he said.

"Certainly," was the quick reply. "I have no secrets from my relative, Sir Raoul."

"I cannot quite understand it," continued the doctor. "They sent for me, and when I reached the house I found that Blantyre had attempted to take his life. I will not tell you how-there is no need to add to a list of horrors. I found him dying, not dead; he is dying now. His only cry was for you, Lord Caraven; he wanted to see you."

"I do not in the least desire to see him," said the earl, quickly. "Frankly speaking, doctor, repentant sinners and death beds are not much in my line. I could do him no good."

"Perhaps not-yet he gave me no rest until I had promised to ask you to go and visit him-no rest at all. The strange part of the story has to come, Lord Caraven. It was not a poacher who fired the shot-it was himself. We have this time done the poachers an injustice."

The doctor was not prepared for the effect of his words. The earl sprang from his chair, rushed across the room and seized him by the arm.

"Say that again!" he cried. "John Blantyre fired that shot?"

"So he says," replied the doctor. "He gasped the story out to me in broken words. 'I always hated her,' he said; 'hated her; and last night I shot her death of Blantyre has been a shock to me that I shall never get over. feel as though I am to blame for it, all through my negligence and want of looking after people."

"You have been to blame," agreed Sir Raoul. "I do not deny that. But your indulgence ought not to have made him a thief."

The earl sat down; he laid his head back with a tired, wearied expression.

"How my life has changed, Raoul!" he said. "I seem suddenly to have grown into a man, wiser, sadder, than I had ever thought to be. One thing above all others puzzles me-how could I have been so blind or so foolish as thus to misjudge her?"

"Misjudge whom?" asked Sir Raoul. "Hildred. Oh, I forgot I did not tell you that! You believed of course that she had been sent for?"

"Certainly I did," replied Sir Raoul, in amazement. "Was it not so?"

"No-that is the worst part of my trouble. There is no truth in it. I sent her away myself.'

"You sent Hildred away!' echoed Sir. Raoul, slowly. "What do you mean, Ulric?"

"I told her that she must never enter my doors again. Now I find that it is all a mistake."

Sir Raoul tried to be patient, but it was very difficult.

"I do not in the least understand what you mean, Ulric. Why did you send Hildred away, and what was a mistake?"

"I shrink from telling you. Upon my honor, I am ashamed of myself. Do you know, I positively believed Hildred had done this deed-I believed she had shot Lady Hamilton."

An expression of deepest contempt came over Sir Raoul's face.

"I should never have imagined such a thought would enter your breast," he said, indignantly. "I speak plainly to you, Ulric, as I have never done before -your wife is wasted on you-she is a thousand times too good for you. She is one of the noblest, truest, purist women under the sun. You-if you could so misjudge her-are to be pitied. Hildred capable of murder? Heaven give me patience! I could not have believed you would entertain such an idea. I could not have imagined that you were so utterly devoid of reason."

"Listen, Raoul-do not judge me quite so harshly. You do not know all. Let me tell you my story;" and without further discussion the earl 'related the whole history.

Sir Raoul listened in silence. "What can I do?" asked the earl, humbly, when he had told all.

"Whither have you sent her?" was the stern inquiry.

British Ship Cromartyshire Runs Into La Bourgogne During a Dense Fog-553 Lives Lost-Survivors Talk Bitterly of the Cowardly Conduct of the Crew.

La Bourgogne, the French line steamship, which left New York July 2, bound for Havre, was sunk at 5 o'clock on the merning of July 4 after a collision with the British ship Cromartyshire in a dense fog about sixty miles south of the Sable Islands, off the coast of Newfoundland.

There were 716 persons on board when the collision occurred, and of these 553 were lost. Fifty-three passengers and 110 members of the crew were rescued. Captain DeLoncle and all of the officers of the steamship except the purser and three engineers went down with their ship.

Only one woman, and not one child, of the many on board, were saved, and the survivors talk bitterly of the cowardly conduct of the crew of the vessel.

THE TRADE REVIEW.

War Seems to Have Had No Serious Effect Upon Business.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"The usual half-yearly statement of failures by branches of business is peculiarly interesting because it shows that war and fears of war have not caused increase in commercial disasters. The fiscal year has ended with financial results a shade beyond general expectations, and the new war tax begins to increase revenue, not seriously disturbing business in any line. No reason yet appears to apprehend that the war revenue will fall below expectations."

"It is impossible!" cried the earl. "The man must have been delirious! He never saw Lady Hamilton in his life-how could he hate her?"

"That is the strangest part of the story," said the doctor. "He insists in saying that he shot Lady Caraven. cannot understand the matter?"

"I do," put in Sir Raoul, calmly. "Blantyre was dismissed at Lady Caraven's desire, and he swore to be revenged upon her. This is his revenge -he has shot Lady Hamilton, believing her to be the countess.

"It is impossible!" repeated the earl. "They are so different. Lady Hamilton is fair, the countess dark-he could not mistake them."

Suddenly he remembered that it was in the semi-darkness of the night that the occurrence had happened, and Lady Hamilton was wrapped in a silvery veil. Could he have mistaken them? The doctor shook his head.

"I do not understand-it is, as I have said, a riddle to me. I should certainly advise you, Lord Caraven, to see the man; that is the only way to clear up the mystery."

"There is no mystery," said Sir Raoul. "It is as I say, the man intended | hatred, the bad passions in the dying to murder Lady Caraven-by mistake he has shot Lady Hamilton. How he mistook them is perhaps a mystery, and that you can solve by going to see him. Go, Ulric."

"Yes," responded Lord Caraven, "I will go-I will go with you, doctor, if yoù are ready. Raoul, it would be as well not to mention this."

friend.

The doctor and the earl quitted the room together. The carriage was ordered, and they drove at once to Court Raven.

They were not long in finding Blantyre's house, and before long the earl stood by the death bed of his late steward. The man's dying face was turned toward him, his dying eyes gleamed as they recognized him.

"My lord," he said, "you were always kind to me. Her ladyship ruined me -she turned me away-and I hated her. I would not harm one hair of your head; but I have killed her; and I am not sorry, I am glad."

"Whom have you killed?" asked the earl, calmly.

The dying man glared.

"Whom? The countess of Caraven, the beautiful, proud, imperious woman who, with one wave of her hand, sent me to ruin-I have killed her."

"Elow did you kill her?" inquired the

'AWFUL TO SEE!" Ravensmere. When I found that I was ruined, I swore that I would kill her ladyship, and I have done it."

"Thank heaven you have not," said the earl, hastily. "I am thankful to say that your murderous shot never reached my wife. The lady you have injured is a stranger to you-Lady Hamilton: she had thrown Lady Caraven's scarf over her shoulders-hence the (for me) fortunate mistake."

The look on the dying man's face was terrible to see-the fiendish disappointment, the bitter hatred. "Then I have not killed her after all," he cried.

"No; you have wounded an innocent lady, a stranger to you-that is all; my dear wife you have not injured."

"And I sent for you believing that she was dead, dreading lest an innocent man should suffer for my deed, longing also that you should know I had taken my revenge."

"I can only thank heaven you have failed," said the earl.

John Blantyre raised himself; the face were terrible to see.

"Tell her," he cried, "I am sorry I did not kill her; tell her that she ruined me and that I hate her for it; tell her that I sent her my curse, and that after I had cursed her I never opened my lips again."

He fell back exhausted, and he kept his word. Never again were his "You may rely upon me," said his lips opened in mortal speech. The earl tried, Sir Raoul left his sick room to try to soften and persuade him. gentle, low woiced women knelt by his side, a grave minister pleaded with him -it was all in vain, after that one terrible curse his lips were mute and dumb, whether so stricken by heaven or whether the result of his anger and disappointment no one ever knew; he died in obstinate, sullen silence.

> When the last scene was over, the earl, who had remained with him to the end, returned to Ravensmere. John Blantyre's crime and suicide had saddened him inexpressibly.

"How I wish that I could live my life over again," he thought-"I would act differently; but, as that is impossible, I must make the most of the time that remains."

He was more saddened and unhappy than he ever remembered to have been in his life before. He sought Sir Raoul's room.

"I am quite out of spirits today." he said; "let me talk to you, Raoul. This looking for a man who owes me £15."

"To her father's house," replied the earl.

"Then I will tell you what to do. Go as fast as steam can take you, and ask her pardon. She is a noble woman, she may forgive; but," added the soldier, frankly, with a flush on his honest face, "I declare that if I were in her place I never would."

The earl took the advice offered him and went straight off to town.

CHAPTER XLIV.

ADY CARAVEN had refused to see anyone; she had refused to quit her apartment. The horror of the charge made against her overpowered her. Could it be within the bounds of possibility that she, Hildred, Countess of Caraven, would ever be brought before a public tribunal and tried for a crime of which she was perfectly innocent? Her vivid imagination ran riot about it. She pictured herself in a dark cell. She wept until from sheer exhaustion she slept. A knocking at the door aroused her.

"Hildred," called Arley Ransome, "I wish to see you."

"Papa," said the girl, "I am tired of the world-tired of my life. Let me die in peace."

Fearful of the attention of his servants, he went away, returning again and again with the same entreaty, but she would not see him. She refused all food, she never attempted to go to rest, and at last Arley Ransome grew alarmed about her. He would not force open the door-that would create a scandal, and the notion of scandal was as bitter as death to him. It was with a feeling of intense relief that he saw Lord Caraven arrive.

"This is a terrible business," he said. "My daughter must have been driven to great extremes before she did this." "It is all a foolish mistake!" cried the earl. "Where is she? I want to dignity. Most men would give your conduct another name, Lord Caraven. People should be careful before they make such mistakes."

"Where is Hildred?" cried the earl "I want to see her at once."

The Adirondack Mountains.

The heart of this wonderful region of mountains, lakes and streams is traversed by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, and to more fully inform the public regarding its beauties and easy means of access the Passenger Department has issued a book entitled "In the Adirondack Mountains," describing in detail each resort, and containing also a large map in colors, giving a list of hotels, camps, lakes, etc., together with their location; it has also issued a large folder, with map, entitled "The Adirondack Mountains and How to Reach Them," giving com-plete information regarding stage lines, steamers, hotels, etc.

A copy of the book will be sent to any address on receipt of two 2-cent stamps, or the folder for one 2-cent stamp, by GEORGE H. DANIELS, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

The Majesty of Eternity. Let us imagine ourselves a huge mountain, the largest on the face if the earth-a great, solid mass of granite rock. And suppose that, once every hundred years, a little bird came flying to the top of the mountain, and rested there, and merely dusted its beak upon the summit. The time it would take before the bird's beak, with its little tap every hundred years, had completely worn away and leveled the whole mountain-is only a moment of eternity. And we have to live through that .- William George.

To Take when Travelling.

Every travellet knows that continuous journeying on the railroad is very apt to derange theisystem in some way. "Shabby Old Cont."

West Point was, for the last ten years of his life, the summer home of General Scott, of whom Mrs. Sherwood, in her "Reminiscences," pleasantly gossips: The hero of the Mexican war always, on the Fourth of July, wore his old military coat, the one in which he rode into the Mexican capital "on top of a picnic," as he used to say. "Very shabby old coat, madam, very shabby old coat!" the gratified old man would exclaim, as he felt a lady's hand laid gently on his arm, as she asked to touch the sacred cloth. He wore the coat on many historic days, and was pleased to shoulder his cane and fight his battles over again. Once, while telling the story of Arnold's treason, and pointing out from the hotel plazza the spots associated with the traitor, he said, referring to Mrs. Arnold's devotion to her husband, "She clung like ivy to a worthless thing."

Kindness from the Old.

Kindness seems to come with a double grace and tenderness from the old. It seems in them the hoarded and long purified benevolence of years, as if it had survived and conquered the baseness and selfishness of the ordeal it had passed-as if the wind which had broken the form had swept in vain across the heart, and the frosts which had chilled the blood and whitened the thin locks had no power over the warm tide of the affections.

OPEN LETTERS FROM

Jennie E. Green and Mrs. Harry Hardy.

JENNIE E. GREEN, Denmark, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I had been sick at my monthly periods for seven years, and tried almost everything I ever heard of, but without any benefit. Was troubled with backache, headache, pains in the shoulders and dizziness. Through my mother I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has done me so much good. I am now sound and well."

Mrs. FARRY HARDY, Riverside, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham the story of her struggle with serious ovarian trouble, and the benefit she received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This is her letter:

"How thankful I am that I took your medicine. I was troubled for two years with inflammation of the womb and ovaries, womb was also very low. I was in constant misery. I had heart trouble, was short of breath and could not walk five blocks to save my life. Suffered very much with my back, had headache all the time, was nervous, menstruations were irregular and painful, had a bad discharge and was troubled with bloating. I was a perfect wreck. Had doctored and taken local treatments, but still was no better. I was advised by one of my neighbors to write to you. I have now finished the second bottle of Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and am better in every way. I am able to do all my own work and can walk nearly a mile without fatigue; something I had not been able to do for over two years. Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctors."

end in view should be territorial conquest. But we shall be more than fools if it is not the open gate to such a commercial expansion, to such an output of manufactured products for distant consumption, as even our optimists have never dreamed of.

Secretary Long is wise in his desire for a thorough study of all the conditions of that enormous trade, opening its arms in reciprocation of what our arms have invited with a voice of thunder. Our merchants and manufacturers must surely follow where our battleships have led.

Foreign newspapers and magazines are not yet tired of their studies of Gladstone as a political and social force. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the "Grand Old Man" will live in history less as a man of consummate intellectual achievement than as a statesman of the noblest moral tone and of widest humanitarian sympathies. Some one in Lord Houghton's presence comparing Gladstone and Beaconsfield said that while the latter was a first rate judge of men his rival was a still better judge of mankind. The poetical peer put the epigram in verse:

We spake of two high names of speech and pen, How each was seeing and each was blind; Knew not mankind, but keenly knew all men; Knew not of men, but knew and loved mankind.

Fake sales constitute one of the prevalent tricks of the second class piano manufacturers. Pianofortes are put in private houses with the announcement that they must be sold, and receipted bills are shown indicating prices far beyond the real value. So purchasers are beguiled into paying overprice when they think they are getting a bargain. A similar device is practiced at regular auction sales of furniture, new worthless instruments being surreptitiously introduced. The business is equal in regnery to the mock auction of jewelry, so often shown up in the press.

The theatrical play which has had, with one or two exceptions, the greatest run on the American stage is Mr. James O'Neil's "Monte-Christo." He has applared in it nearly 4,000 times. The only plays which come near this in popular appreciation are "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and Kate Claxton's "Two Orphans." affair is among the inexplicable mental phenomena. Max Nordau, the apostle of degeneracy, will hail this hybrid of diabolism and childishness as a fresh proof of his theory.

Colored Milikia.

The Afro-Americans of New York city have been protesting against the conditions which have prevented their proper representation in the volunteer army now fighting the battles of the country. It is to be presumed that this sentiment is common in other states among the colored citizens, and such patriotism is alike natural and gratifying. Splendid volumes of courage and self devotion are bound in black leather, and our colored friends have shown it too often to have the imprint mistaken. But as Governor Black said, in answer to the complaint of the committee on organization, he was compelled to draw exclusively on the national guard in answer to the president's call. The fact is that there are but few colored regiments in the national guard throughout the whole country. According to the general logic of facts, this element in our population is entitled to a certain representation in the militia. There is no good reason why it should not have it. White men certainly would not oppose it to any considerable extent. As citizens they are entitled to bear arms, to participate in the national defense, to endure the toils of campaigning and to lay down their lives if need be. It is but common sense to give them the chance to stop bullets as senerously as it is given to white men. With the third call for volunteers their chance should come. But as far as the militia problem concerned the deficiency is mainly is the result of the failure of the colored people to agitate the question with resolute zeal in the past. Whatever the prejudice or objection, which may have existed, it has been allayed. Enthusiasm on the part of the would be soldiers would finally work out to a favorable end, even if it failed to be in time to shoot Spaniards.

The Jewish Problem Abroad. The United States and England are the only two countries where the Hebrew race is accorded all the political, social and business privileges accorded to the other elements in the community. Whatever individuals may feel, the

On Sunday morning Captain Marix decid-ed to go in after the gunboats and so signaled to Captain Purcell. Captain Marix tells the story as follows:

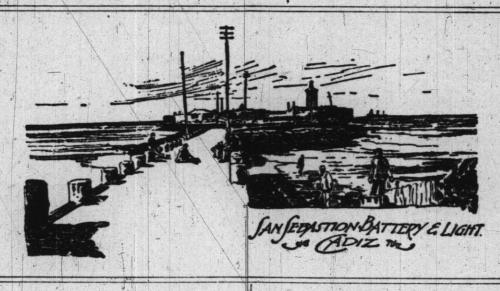

"Imagine our surprise upon finding, instead of gunboats and a small fort, the shore filled with artillery and infantry. The fire we poured into them was a desperate one, considering that we did not have any protection for our men or the guns. For twenty-five minutes we stayed at it, and I think we must have done a lot of damage. I had no pilot and could not move in close. We were hit frequently, and at last, when a shot had cleaned our galley, and I saw that it was useless to risk the men's lives, we moved out. The gunboats lay behind the hills in small coves, and we could not get them. We moved out slowly and the fire ceased: The next morning we captured a large lighter and a sloop filled with provisions. No attempt was made by the gunboats to come out to the defense of these ships. The Spanish steamer Purissima Concepcion,

When the ships ceased firing and before General Shafter had begun a land attack a flag of truce was seen coming from the city. The object of this was known at noon when the correspondent left the front.-At 2 o'clock this afternoon the United States auxiliary cruiser Yale, with General Nelson A. Miles, and the United States protected cruiser Columbia ar-rived.—Rear Admiral Sampson visited General Miles immediately on his arrival, and then the Yale went to Siboney, General Miles and his personal staff landing in a pouring rain.

GREELY OBLIGES BLANCO.

Cervera's report to General Blanco anent his inglorious defeat was much commented upon and revealed a peculiar state of affairs with regard to the interruption of cable communication between Havana and Santiago. In connection with the transmission of Cervera's report to Madrid Blanco incidentally was compelied, literally speaking, to kneel before Gen-eral Greely, chief of the signal service.

Monday, July 11.

For two hours Monday morning Admiral Sampson's ships threw shells toward Santiago. One of them blew up a church filled with ammunition. Just as General Shafter began his land attack a flag of truce was seen coming from the city, which stopped the fighting. The purport of the message is not yet known.-General Shafter believes the Spanish troops have taken advantage of the truce to flee from the city. The attack on the city unteer infantry; Henry H. Gregory of Sunday was not an attempt to capture the Florida, first sergeant Company L, Second city .- General Miles arrived at Santiago

James Allen, signal officer at Playa del Este, for transmission to General Blanco, but in view of the desertion of the English operators of their posts at Santiago the Spanish captain general had no means of telegraphing the report to Madrid. In consequence he tapped the keys of the telegraph in his Havana mansion and called up Captain J. E. Sawyer, press censor at Key West, who has kept the cable betwen Havana and Florida closed since the destruction of the Maine.

Blanco asked Captain Sawyer if he would kindly send Cervera's report on its journey to Madrid, but the signal officer replied it would be necessary to secure General Greely's consent. Blanco accordingly requested Captain Sawyer to transmit a dispatch to General Greely, in which he asked with much profundity for the necessary permission. General Greely instantly complied with Blanco's request and instructed Captain Sawyer to send the report.

"I thought I would let Blanco send Cervera's report over our wire," remarked General Greely to the writer, "since it would serve to clear up the confusion in the minds of the Spanish officials about the present whereabouts of the Spanish And then, too, Cervera's report fleet. contains nothing detrimental to the military or naval interests of the United States.

Peoria Boys in the Battle at Santingo-The Officials of the Dime Savings Bank Arrested and It Is Belleved That They Are on the Road to Joliet.

Peoria Boys There.

Two Peoria boys were in the fight at Santiago Friday. They are Ross Bush, son of Mr. George M. Bush, Sr., of 608 Fayette street, and Walter Bash, son of Maj. Bash, and related to the Ballances and other Peoria people. Peoria also has a soldier at Tampa in the person of Arthur Foster, son of Attorney George B. Foster, who is now ranking as captain, and is on the staff of the Nineteenth regiment of United States regulars at Tampa. Lieutenant Bash and Lieut. Bush are at the front. When last heard from the latter was acting as quartermaster for his regiment, and in view of the present unsettled state of affairs this is a very important post. The commands of both of these Peoria soldiers were in the Friday fight. Lieut. Bash belongs to the Twenty-fourth regiment of United States regulars, and Lieut. Bash to the Thirteenth regiment. Both of these regiments were in the Third brigada, Col. Worth commanding, and in the forces on the left of Gen. Lawton s force in the center of the attacking army. There was plenty of hot work all around them. Foster graduated from West Point in 1888, Bush in 1892, and Bash in 1896. They each represented the Peoria congressional district.

Dime Bank Officials Arrested.

The former officials of the defuact Dime Savings bank were arrested in Chicago on warrants sworn out last week before Justice Everett, charging larceny by embezzlement. Warrants are out for three others. Those arrested were George W. Reed, who was treasurer, and his brother, W. Kelsey Reed, who was one of the heads. It is expected the arrest of the other three will be effected within a few days, although W. C. D. Grannis, who held the office of vice president, is in Boston, and an indictment may be necessary to bring him to Chicago. Samuel G. Bailey, former president, and James G. Converse are sought. The complainant is Stanley F. Goodrich, a compositor for the Methodist book concern. He accuses the bank officials of accepting $25 from him for deposit Dec. 1; 1896, after the bank was n a state of insolvency. The Reed brothers gave bonds of $500 for their appearance before Justice Everett. An interesting law suit, replete with sensational features, is promised by Attorneys Samuels and Seligman, who declare their intention of pushing the case to the last limit. From a legal standpoint the case is said by them to be parallel to the Dreyer and Spalding affairs. Other depositors are ready to prosecute the former Dime bank officials.
