Mrs. Tom Catlow of Evanston, accompanied by her brother, H. Schierding of this place, started for Arizona Saturday night to reach their sister, Mrs. Dr. Wadhams, before she died, but they had got but a short distance when they received word she was dead. They returned home at once.

Barrington Public Schools.

Barrington has public schools that, although not so far advanced as those of some larger towns, our citizens can well feel proud of, especially the principal who presides over the same—Prof. F. E. Smith—and his able corps of assistants.

PROF. F. E. SMITH.

Prof. Smith came here some six years ago, and the progress the High school room of the city has made during that time proves the wisdom of the School Board in making the selection, and retaining him. He is an instructor of ability, a keen judge of character and capabilities of children and one in which they place great trust and confidence. Prof. Smith has this year 37 pupils in the 8th, 9th and 10th grades.

Miss Frances Dean, who presides over the 6th and 7th grades, has 32 pupils in her charge. This is Miss Dean's first year in Barrington, having previously taught with great success at Chicago Heights.

Miss Maud Adams has charge of the 4th and 5th grades, which comprise 49 pupils. She has been in our midst for the past three years, and has been very successful. She has made many friends among the parents.

Miss Alvina Myers has 55 pupils to look after in the 3rd grade, and she does it in an efficient manner. She is a Barrington lady, and has taught here for seven years, gaining the confidence and esteem of all.

Miss Alice Lawler came here this year from Avondale to take charge of the 2nd grade, which is composed of 48 pupils. Miss Lawler comes here well recommended, her previous work proving highly satisfactory.

Miss Mary Frey has the first grade, which is composed of the largest number of pupils, 56, and she is well capable of her difficult task. Miss Frey, like Miss Myers, is a Barringtonian, and has taught here for the past ten years. She is unquestionably one of the best primary teachers in northern Illinois.

The pupils living out of the district who are attending school in Barrington are: Miss Ellen Dodge of Wisconsin, Miss Mary Smith and George Hanson of Cary, Chester Catlow, Misses Myrtle and Cora Burtis, Minnie Rinker, Grace Young, and two others.

OLD RESIDENT GONE.

Mrs. Sophia Frye Dies at Crystal Lake—Will Be Buried Tomorrow at Palatine.

Mrs. Sophia Frye died at the home of her son, George, at Crystal Lake, on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the age of 74 years and 3 months.

The deceased was born in Germany, and came to America about the year 1846, locating in Palatine township, and two years later joined her fortunes with Theodore Frye, five children blessing the union—four boys and one daughter, of which the daughter preceded the parents to the great beyond.

Mr. Frye died on December 9, 1896, and last spring the widowed mother made her home with her son at Crystal Lake.

The funeral services will be held in St. Paul's Evangelical church, Palatine, to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

During the long residence of Mrs. Frye in this vicinity she has made many friends who deeply mourn the loss of a true Christian friend and neighbor.

SHOVING IT ALONG.

The College Subscription List Growing Steadily.

It is most gratifying to the members of the committee to see the young men put the older ones, and especially some of the heavy property owners, to shame by affixing their names to the subscription list for $15, $10 or $5. The sums don't seem much, but they count up in the long run. The list is steadily growing and the college is within sight. Hurry up, gentlemen and ladies, and make short work of the remaining few thousand dollars. Sign your name at once.

Auction Sale.

Henry Freye will sell at public auction, four miles southeast of Barrington and four miles west of Palatine, Saturday, October 1st, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. sharp, cows, pigs, wagons, agricultural implements, hay, corn, etc. Wm. Peters of Barrington will be the auctioneer.

Remember This.

Communications for publication in THE REVIEW must be signed by the persons sending in the article, as a protection to the editor, but the name will not be published unless the party wishes it. Communications must be treated as such, and not be credited to the editor. We are willing at all times to publish items of interest to our readers.

Palatine Football Team.

The prospects are encouraging for a good football team this year. A full team was out for practice last Tuesday night, and every member of last year's team, with one exception, has signified his intention of playing again this year. Ernest Beutler will try and play at quarter-back this year. A game with the Marshall Field team is probable next Saturday. This team is much stronger than it was last year. The big game of the season will be at Elgin with St. Charles on Thanksgiving.

Price of Milk.

At a meeting of the directors of the Milk Shippers' Union, held in Chicago Saturday, it was decided to immediately provide a staff of six inspectors who will act under the state laws and see that all dairies belonging to the organization are in perfect sanitary condition and that no impure milk is shipped to the Chicago market. The Union has agreed to provide the necessary funds and the plan will probably go into immediate effect. No change was made in the price of milk. It will be sold at 85 cents a can during October.

THE RUSH FOR GOLD.

From the Times, Bluffs, Ill.

The rush of gold seekers to the Klondike brings thrilling memories to the "forty-niners" still alive, of the time when they girded the continent or faced the terrors of the great American desert on the journey to the land of gold. These pioneers tell some experiences which should be heeded by gold seekers today. Constant exposure and faulty diet killed large numbers, while nearly all the survivors were afflicted with disease, many of them with rheumatism. Such a sufferer was Adam Vangundy, who now resides at Bluffs, Ill., where he has been justice of the peace and was the first president of the board of trustees. In a recent interview he said: "I had been a sufferer of rheumatism for a number of years and the pain at times was very intense. I tried all the proprietary medicines I could think or hear of, but received no relief. "I finally placed my case with several physicians and doctored with them for some time, but they failed to do me any good. Finally, with my hopes of relief nearly exhausted, I read an article regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which induced me to try them. I was anxious to get rid of the terrible disease, and bought two boxes of the pills. I began using them about March, 1897. 'After I had taken two boxes I was completely cured, and the pain has never returned. I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken, and am willing at any time to sign my name to any testimony setting forth its good merits.' (Signed) ADAM VANGUNDY.

Mr. Vangundy's statement ought to be regarded as a criterion of the good merits of these pills, and what better proof could a person want than the above facts. These pills stand unrivalled as a tonic for the blood.

Why He Hurried.

In some places the sight of a man in haste naturally excites remark, as in the following incident reported in the Philadelphia Call: A son of Ireland was painting a fence. His face wore a troubled look. Suddenly a smile shot across it, and dipping the brush into the paint pot, he began to paint faster and faster. "Why are you painting so fast?" asked a bystander. "You're in a rush all of a sudden to finish the job." "Sure, an' that's all right," was his reply. "I haven't much paint left, an' it's finishing the job O'm atther before it's all gone."

While on some bank of moss or fern
Your sister's idle glances turn,
Then idly press on,
That self-same spot, by you if seen,
Yields to your observation keen
An object lesson.

You give no vulgar admiration
To wallflower, lily or carnation
That decks the border;
Each flower you skillfully dissect

Medieval.

"The more I think," observed the studious grandee, "about our great national hero, Don Quixote, the less do I regard him as a true type of Spanish chivalry."

"Your words are almost heresy," replied another grandee. "But why do you think thus?"

Girls Tattooed for $15.

An Urewera tohunga who has been engaged in tattooing the Maori girls in the Bay of Plenty district during the last few weeks has shifted his residence to Otunwhaia, a settlement near Matiphi. ## MRS. PINKHAM'S WARNING TO WOMEN.

Neglect is the Forerunner of Misery and Suffering—A Grateful Husband Writes of His Wife's Recovery.

Nearly all the ill health of women is traceable to some derangement of the feminine organs. These derangements do not cure themselves, and neglect of the sensations resulting from them is only putting off trouble.

Pathetic stories are constantly coming to Mrs. Pinkham of women whose neglect has resulted in serious heart trouble and a whole train of woes. Here is the story of a woman who was helped by Mrs. Pinkham after other treatment failed:
DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It affords me very great pleasure to be able to state that I believe my wife owes her health to your medicine and good advice. For three years her health failed rapidly; she had heart trouble, often falling down in dizzy and fainting spells, shortness of breath, choking and smothering spells, bloating of the stomach, a dry cough, dyspeptic symptoms, menses irregular, scanty, and of an unnatural color. She had been treated by physicians with but little benefit. She has taken your treatment according to your directions, and is better in every way. I am well pleased with the result of your treatment, and give you permission to use my letter for the benefit of others.—
CHAS. H. and Mrs. MAY BUTCHER, Fort Meyer, Va.

The healing and strengthening power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all female ills is so well established that it needs no argument. For over twenty years it has been used by women with results that are truly wonderful.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. All such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

No Room Here For Anarchists.

No anarchist crime has ever thrilled Europe and the world with such a sentiment of horror as that which was aroused by the murder of the empress of Austria. For other outrages of this description some clearly discerned political motive could be discovered. The taking off, for example, of the Czar Alexander, the liberator of the serfs, was explicable. He had just refused the demand for a free constitution for Russia and otherwise offended the nihilists. Carnot's murder was associated with certain repressive and punitive measures which had recently been adopted by the French chambers in regard to anarchist activities. In this last exhibition of anarchy it is impossible to trace any adequate motive. The Empress Elizabeth was not only a woman, but of all the crowned women of Europe that one most indifferent to politics and the management of public affairs. Indeed she had carried this abstinence so far as to absent herself habitually from even those court functions as much as possible which are most admirably graced by the sovereign's wife. Her dislike of pomp and ceremonial and of all the outward show of her rank was such as to excite the protests of the Viennese. Her eccentric seclusion of herself from public sight, though redeemed by great benevolence of disposition, had not made her a popular personage, though always regarded with deepest respect. Empress Elizabeth cared chiefly to live her own individual life without fretting under the chains of rank. That such a woman as this, entirely dissociated from political movements, who spent a considerable portion of her time in travel, as if to escape her own restless thoughts, should have been selected by the assassin's dagger is a mystery.

Her sex gave her no immunity. That she had been in an exceptional degree the target for the worst bolts of fate and was known to be one of the unhappiest of women was no armor against the half crazed perversity of an anarchist assassin. The tragic death of Rudolph, the crown prince, a few years ago, under circumstances which startled the world with a genuine sensation; the death by the flames of the Duchesse d'Alencon, her sister, at the Paris bazaar fire—these and other family misfortunes had left Empress Elizabeth one of the most melancholy of women. Perhaps she would have welcomed death, though not perhaps at the ignoble hand of the assassin, could she have known it was so near. But all those things which had made Empress Elizabeth peculiarly the object of general sympathy made no difference to his impartial stab. And so was quenched the life of one of the most brilliant and picturesque of modern crowned heads, yet whose career had been singularly innocent of private or public cause of blame. The assassin's stiletto seems to have been guided by accident or caprice, and any other personage of exalted place would possibly have satisfied his lust for blood.

It has been proposed that as a consequence of this last imperial assassination the governments of continental Europe should unite in such uniform repressive measures as would free that section of the world from their presence and mischief working hate. Just how this can be done is difficult to perceive, for an overt act in most countries is necessary. It has just been proved how easily the crazed brooding of a fanatic leaps from a dream into action.

When the teachings of such men as Bakunin, Prince Krapotkin and Elise Reclus, the logic of whose instruction is even assassination or any other violence which will shake society, lead to such deeds, it seems clear that the intellectual chiefs of anarchy are as guilty as their fatuous tools. It is almost unfortunate that the freest countries, such as Switzerland, Great Britain and the United States, are compelled to harbor these people by the very spirit and form of their laws. When rats leave one house, they swarm to another. It is greatly to be hoped that if the anarchists are driven from continental Europe they will not come to enlarge the swarm already in this country.

In submitting to any rational requirements of a peace conference as to disarmament this country would have the advantage. Her margin would admit of much expansion to match the contraction of other peoples.

Co-operation.

The National Co-operative festival held annually in Great Britain occurred several weeks since at the Crystal Palace, London, and the reports made on that occasion were full of interest and suggestion. The possibilities of co-operative enterprise as a solution, at least in part, of the clashing of capital and labor have been widely discussed and its experiments closely scrutinized. All the facts naturally command the attention of people on both sides of the Atlantic. The system has acquired a "locus standi" in political economy. It has failed in many instances. Yet it has been markedly successful in others. In England the success has been more distinctly in the line of distributive co-operation than that of productive. In the latter form indeed there have been only a few notable instances in England, with rather more on the continent perhaps, and these have not always lived to be more than temporary. But as an agency of effective and economical distribution co-operation shows a striking aggregate of achievement in Great Britain, demanding a few words of comment. Including both kinds of co-operation they have done a business within less than a generation of $272,000,000. The largest part of this was that of the distributive stores. In the period from 1885 to 1895 the societies increased in number from 1,441 to 1,966 and in membership from 850,659 to 1,430,340, the amount of capital from $55,785,465 to $106,656,995, the value of sales from $156,529,550 to $275,501,245, the value of profits from $14,943,450 to $26,945,355. It should be borne in mind that these figures have reference to distributive as well as productive co-operation societies. The capital of 84 productive societies in England, which represented the copartnership of labor, was only about $2,250,000.

The bonus on the total of the wages paid was 1 3/4 per cent. The distributive stores showed an average saving to the membership of about 5 per cent. The reason is not far to seek why distributive has been more successful than productive co-operation in that there is less temptation to depart from the pure doctrine. This is that the co-operator must take losses as well as accept profits. In distribution he is benefited as a customer, if he fails as a shareholder. But in case of production, should the year go wrong, he loses both as capitalist and as workman. It is said that the danger affecting both forms is that the highly successful societies begin to covet the profits after awhile and refuse further membership, though selling to all desiring to buy on equal terms. In other words, they tend to degenerate from the co-operative idea and become capitalistic in their methods. It is an interesting fact that the English Wholesale societies, which are both producers and distributors, do not pay any bonus on wages to the workmen employed. In other words, they are capitalistic in production and co-operative only in distribution.

These institutions have been of immense value to the English workman, and, while they have not solved the problem of capital and labor, they have gone a considerable way in alleviating some of its difficulties. Mr. Henry D. Lloyd, well known in the United States as an able writer on these subjects, in a recent book calls attention to one notable fact. On the continent democracy has found expression in attempts to topple over thrones and upset the established order of things. In England it has saved its sincipits, established methods of co-operation growing from small to large and striven to work out its own salvation.

From our naval attaches abroad information has come of the approximate cost of the war to Spain, aside from the loss of her colonies. The amount is estimated to reach about $435,000,000. This is nearly double what the cost to the United States will be when all our war debt shall have been liquidated. It is not easy to see where such a vast sum has gone. Certainly not to the Spanish soldiery, for there is said to be an immense arrears of pay. One may speculate how much has stuck to the fingers of Spanish officials in transitu. They certainly have always had the reputation of Chinese mandarins in conscientious retention of commissions.

Pope Leo XIII has paid off the debt left by his predecessors. It is said that he is one of the best of financiers and would have made an excellent manager of the fiscal affairs of a great nation had not his profession devoted him to the sacred task of helping his millions of spiritual subjects to "lay up treasure where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt."

If a large force of the volunteers is to be retained in service to meet contingencies, as has been reported, it is imperative that they should be subjected to regular discipline. But with that they should have the best of regular watchfulness and attention from their officers.

Newspapers are full of the recurrent September rubbish as to why many people come home from the country in the pleasantest month of the year. Unfortunately, schools generally open in September, and children have to be educated.

"Dismemberment" murders have become so frequent that the callous public has grown to regard them as commonplace. The Colt-Adams murder in New York and the Webster-Parkman murder in Boston half a century or more since were regarded as such unparalleled crimes that the public did not cease discussing them for years.

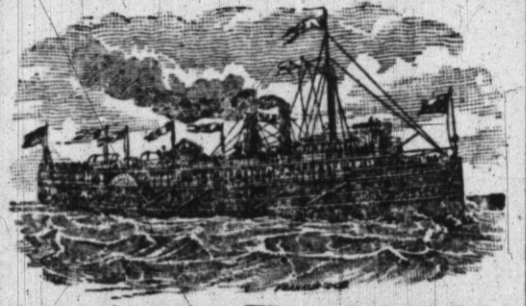

General Wood has revolutionized the sanitary conditions of Santiago in a few weeks. He has reduced the death rate from 70 to 20 per month. Such will be the history of other Cuban cities when Americans get municipal control.

It may be true that every man has in his heart a slumbering hog, but people only realize it when they awaken the beast in others.

The attainment of our greatest desires is often the source of our greatest sorrows.

Senator Frye of the peace commission resents the imputation that the august body to which he belongs is designed to be a mere automaton for the purpose of registering President McKinley's decision. He asserts that the commissioners have ample powers. "Whatever they may have to say in regard to the conditions of the peace * * * will be absolutely independent, and their decision final." This is square, downright talk worthy of a self-respecting man.

Do you want to attend the Paris exposition in 1900? If so don't fail to attend the first meeting of the club at J. S. Haas' barber shop Monday evening, October 3, at 8 o'clock. This club is not built of air castles, and if you really want to go, attend the meeting and see what propositions will be offered you.

Our school opened Monday, two weeks later than was at first intended, but owing to the delay in making necessary improvements on the interior of the school building it was postponed until this week. The same corps of teachers again has charge, viz: Prof. Hubbard, principal; Miss Tidmarsh, intermediate department, and Miss Grace the primary department. The directors did wisely in again engaging these instructors, even at advanced salaries, as the able manner in which they conducted our school for the past year is surely a credit to our village and community. The Meneley Trio gave an entertainment in our village Monday and Tuesday evenings, and, to express it mildly, it was simply out of sight. The singing by the trio was excellent, their voices blending in perfect harmony. The songs all pertained to temperance. The reciting by Mr. Knox simply took the cake. In his selections "Rubenstein" and "The Debating Society" he brought the whole house down, and we must say that he is the best elocutionist we have ever had the opportunity to hear. It is certainly a treat to have the trio come to our village and give an entertainment, and we hope to see them here again in the near future.

According to the veracious New York Herald, the newest Parisian fad among women is the hypodermic injection of perfumes that thin skins may reek with sweet odors. As the habit must surely be a swift road to the coffin it might save the expense of sweet smelling floral tributes.

Chinese Scholarship.

All of us have heard much about the lofty esteem bestowed on scholarship in China and that it is the passport to the highest honors of the empire. It is worth while to examine into just what the Celestials mean by scholarship. In one sense no home staying Chinaman is ever educated. The most erudite man is absolutely ignorant of the current problems of the world, both in practice and theory, unless knowledge is knocked into his skull by contact with foreigners. Yet the race is unique on one side in its scholarly spirit—that is, in its reverence for Chinese classical literature; in its devotion to a style steeped in classical allusion, and in the ardor with which candidates attempt the examination, year after year, even to old age, in the hope of acquiring an honorary degree. It was the passionate revulsion of feeling which accompanied repeated failure and finally accurled into hate of the whole system which inspired Hung Tsu Suen, the Hakka schoolmaster, to teach the new religious and political cult on which the terrible Taiping rebellion was founded.

The Chinese system of teaching is based entirely on memory and the abnormal reverence for the dead sages. All that needs to be said has been said, according to this theory of education. The boy learns by rote and does not understand what he recites in a mechanical singsong. As he grows older and comes before the examination boards for promotion memory of the sayings of the great dead authors and periphrastic restatement of them in a great variety of forms, from which original comment is excluded by the lack of real intellectual knowledge and acumen, still furnish the test of his ability, which opens the door to political promotion.

It can be readily seen then that what is called knowledge is a mountain mass of rubbish in resonant phrases. This furnishes the political equipment of the mandarin official. The scientific spirit, the wish to investigate, the sense of the unknown, which have been at the bottom of all western progress, are absolutely unknown to Chinese education. This petrification of intellect is the root of Chinese life, society, knowledge and politics. With a dead root a dead people has resulted. The only gleam of light that now shines on China is that preparatory schools on the western principle have been inaugurated and that a university of the same model has been established in Peking. But the effect on a dense and hardened mass for many years to come will be like the picking at a huge boulder with a geologist's hammer.

The long silence of Don Carlos warrants the fear that he sleeps in a folding bed.

The Rev. W. B. Costley of Stockbridge, Ga., while attending to his pastoral duties at Ellenwood, that state, was attacked by cholera morbus. He says: "By chance I happened to get hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and I think it was the means of saving my life. It relieved me at once." For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

There is room for the suspicion that France has become a scandal immune.

About one month ago my child, which is fifteen months old, had an attack of diarrhoea accompanied by vomiting. I gave it such remedies as are usually given in such cases, but as nothing gave relief, we sent for a physician and it was under his care for a week. At this time the child had been sick for about ten days and was having about twenty-five operations of the bowels every twelve hours, and we were convinced that unless it soon obtained relief it would not live. Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommended, and I decided to try it. I soon noticed a change for the better; by its continued use a complete cure was brought about and it is now perfectly healthy.—C. L. Boggs, Stumpdown, Gilmer county, W. Va. For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Ptericulture.

About Clods.

Clarence E. Norton, writing in the Kansas Farmer, expresses some excellent thoughts on clod crushing. We make the following extracts:

The condition of the soil, and the season of 1897, have been great financial drawbacks to Kansas farmers, yet, if they study the conditions carefully, it may, in the future, be of advantage to them. In the first place the winter was more open than usual, and the ground did not freeze as much as usual, and the cattle that grazed the corn stalk fields all winter punched up the fresh soil in great shape, and the complaint against the cloddy condition of the soil is general and louder than usual. All this complaint results because the cattle sink a little deeper than usual into the soil. Not a single year passes but what the cattle will make the same amount of clods, only we do not see them, and we are unaware of their presence. The coming intensive farmer will never allow any stock, except sheep, to run in his stalk fields—in fact, there will be no stalk fields, as the fodder will be all cut up and hauled off to be fed. The farmer who thinks he is a careful man, much more careful than his neighbor, will not allow his cattle in his stalk field, except when the soil is dry, while his neighbor will not allow them in the field every day, wet or dry, and farmer No. 1 thinks he is much wiser than farmer No. 2, and he has a great pity for his ignorant neighbor who feeds his stalks wet or dry, alike. When the soil is wet the cattle slump down deep into the soil, and a clod is made below the bottom of the hoof-print, just the same as a clod of wood is formed in front of the square point of a cut nail that is being driven into a board. As this clod is punched down deep into the soil it will be on top of the soil just as soon as the soil is turned over by the plow, and the farmclod-crushing machinery can destroy them, while the careful man, who thinks he is so much superior to his neighbor, will have just as many clods but not so thick ones, and he will hide his clods from sight and put them down into the root zone, where they will be protected from all breaking up, and they will never be destroyed by any machinery that is made, nor by nature's elements, until they are again put on the surface a year later by the plow. Now, which would you rather have, the clods on top, where they can be broken up or down in the root zone, where they are fully protected and where they cheat the root growth, just as much as if they were so many stones? The great remedy for this evil is to not allow cattle to graze the stalk fields, but when they are grazed the surface of the soil should be thoroughly torn up by a cutaway harrow, or repeated disking, before the plow is used, so that the soil that is turned down to make the root zone will be perfectly free from clods. If the careless farmer is satisfied he has a clod reducing machine that will thoroughly reduce any and all surface clods when properly used, he is not so careless a farmer as our neighbors may, in their ignorance, have called him, while, on the other hand, the man who thinks he is careful, who plows clods down deep into the soil and leaves them there for a year, is really a very slovenly farmer, and is yearly cutting off the plant food from the root zone, and it would be better if he never plowed his land at all.

To Grow Violets Successfully.

One all-important item in the culture of violets is ventilation. They must have fresh air and plenty of it at all times. Good ventilation is easily secured by placing blocks under the ends of the sash. They will require careful watching during the bright sunny days, to prevent the temperature from rising too high. The nearer it can be kept at from fifty-five to sixty degrees during the blooming season the better. Cooler temperature before time for blooming will be necessary. During severe winter weather it will be necessary to cover the sash with manure, straw litter or old carpets to keep out the cold. These coverings should not remain on during the daytime, unless it seems necessary.

New Zealand's Frozen Meat Trade.

The American stockmen are directly interested in the frozen meat trade that distant countries are building up with the European markets. Our own trade is bound to be affected to a considerable extent, though up to this time we have not greatly felt the competition. The United States consul in New Zealand reports that the frozen meat industry of that colony has developed with extraordinary rapidity, and has attained such magnitude as to make its projectors proud. It was started by New Zealanders in 1882, who formed the original freezing companies. Its present dimensions have been attained by private enterprise alone, and to this enterprise the magnificent fleet of steamers now engaged in this trade between New Zealand and England owe, in a great measure, their existence. It can hardly be said that the introduction of frozen meat into the London market from Australasia had advanced beyond an experimental stage until about 1881, during which year about 17,000 carcasses of frozen mutton were shipped to London from Australia, and also a limited amount of beef. It is said that only about one-third of this shipment reached London in good condition, the other parts being described as irregular in condition and unsatisfactory.

In 1882 two shipments of frozen meat were made from New Zealand, comprising about 9,000 carcasses, which reached their destination in good condition. A small quantity of beef and about 130,000 carcasses of mutton were shipped to England from New Zealand, while only one-half that amount was shipped from Australia. In 1882 the entire shipment of meats amounted to 1,707,328. This amount had increased in 1896 to 123,576,544 pounds.

This whole business depends on the cooling or freezing plants that have been invented during the last two decades. By means of these machines the air is reduced to, say, 70 degrees below zero, and at this temperature the meat is quickly frozen. The steamers that carry the meats also have cooling plants that enable them to keep down the temperature of the air in the holds of the vessels to a point where the meat remains permanently frozen. The possibilities of these

EVENTS IN ILLINOIS.

Seven Days' Doings in the Prairie State—Telegrams Received from Various Points.

Police Say He Wrecked Dynamos.

Chicago—Charles Fisher, accused by the police of many robberies in the stock rooms of dynamo manufacturers, slept in a cell in the Desplaines street station last night. Fisher was caught yesterday, after a struggle, by Park Policemen Stapleton and Martin, who saw the man leaving the stock room of George E. Lloyd & Co., 200 Clinton street. For three months brass and copper trimmings of electric dynamos belonging to Lloyd & Co. have disappeared. The thieves broke off with a hammer whatever they could use, damaging the machinery. Detectives watched the stockroom, but could find no trace of the thieves. Some of the workmen were suspected, but it was ascertained that these were not the thieves. Yesterday Manager Williams visited the stockroom to inspect a number of new dynamos. He heard the sound of a hammer, and, looking through an opening, he saw a man working at one of the dynamos. Williams ran into the street and called Park Policemen Stapleton and Martin. Then the supposed burglar plunged through a window. He ran west in Jackson boulevard, and after a chase of several blocks he was captured. He made a number of attempts to get away, but was taken to the police station. He said he was only in the store-room looking at the machinery.

Alton Aldermen Arouse Ire.

Alton, Ill.—Alton's noted color line school fight has come to the front again, this time in a most unexpected manner. The terms of President A. Finke and Director A. Neerman of the board of education expired today. At the regular meeting of the city council this week Mayor Brueggemann renominated them for another term. He states that he did this because they were prominent in bringing about the division of races in the schools, and he felt they should be retained until the cases have been fought through the courts. The council elected last spring, however, has been against the mayor in the proportion of nine to five on every proposition he has brought up since then, and these appointments were promptly voted down.

It is now said the opposition aldermen did not realize the importance of this step in their eagerness to override the mayor, but as soon as the people heard of it there was a storm of unmeasured condemnation. Messrs. Finke and Neerman declare they will overlook the action of the council as a merely partisan fight, provided the people stand behind them, and it is said that after the peace jubilee tomorrow a public meeting will be held condemning the aldermen who, by voting down these appointments, have practically repudiated the policy of race separation in the public schools.

In Aid of Railroad Labor.

Decatur, Ill.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Illinois here little beyond organizing the board was accomplished, and an adjournment was taken until Oct. 14.

The purpose of the board is to secure legislation favorable to locomotive engineers and organized labor generally. An effort will be made to have a full representation of the board, perhaps sixty members, present at the October meeting, which will also be held in Decatur.

A resolution was adopted today that the Brotherhood of Engineers would affiliate with all organized railroad labor for legislative purposes only. It was further decided to call a union mass meeting of organized railroad labor to be held in Chicago, Oct. 20.

The day following there will be a delegate meeting of all organized railroad labor, in the First Regiment Armory, Chicago, for the purpose of drafting or deciding upon such legislation as is to receive the support of the affiliated organizations.

L. Buns, of Chicago, was elected chairman of the board, and W. J. Welch secretary and treasurer.

Not Pleased with Hawaii.

Mount Vernon, Ill.—Harry P. Weber, who went from Chicago to the Hawaiian islands to practice law, writes his brother, R. K. Weber, this city, under date of Aug. 27:

The islands are greatly overestimated and this is no place for other than investors and pleasure seekers. The various secret societies of Honolulu met a few days ago and arranged to send out circulars to all affiliated organizations on the continent, warning members not to come here with the expectation of procuring employment of any kind, and not to come in any event without sufficient capital to provide against want while they are making their investigations. I have heard several business men say that owners of sugar stocks are quietly closing them out, and should certainly not think of making investments along that line. Living is also considerably more expensive here than in the States, due to the fact that almost every article of food has to be imported.

Property in Cook County.

Springfield, Ill.—From figures completed by the clerks of the board of equalization today it is found that the enumerated personal property in Cook county is $1,530,298. The figures also show the per cent required to bring the assessed value of the enumerated property in Cook county to the state average, is a deduction of 36 per cent. The value of enumerated property of Cook county at the state aggregate average is $985,146, while the assessed value of the personal property is $2,512,933. The value of all the personal property enumerated and unenumerated at the state average is $13,768,217. Last year the assessed value of personal property in Cook county was $26,190,817, and, according to the figures of the clerks last year, 39 per cent was deducted before the final equalization reached the board. However, the board last year added 40 per cent. This year, it is thought, a small per cent will be added before the final equalization is reached, but that it will be a much smaller per cent than last year. The full table of figures showing the per cent to be added or deducted to bring the assessed value of the enumerated property to the state average was completed by the clerks today. Douglas and Piatt have the greatest added per cents, 49 each, while Pope has the greatest deducted per cent, it being 40.

Aims to Rival the Egg.

Belvidere, Ill.—If a reported discovery by a local creamery company proves as important as is expected, the dairy interests will, it is asserted, be revolutionized and the egg trade demoralized. The company, which operates nearly 100 creameries in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin, has discovered a process of manufacturing from milk what is claimed to be a perfect substitute for eggs in all cooking. It is impossible to get details of the process, as the company is keeping it a secret, but in tests and experiments which have been conducted in Belvidere during the past few days considerable has leaked out regarding the new discovery. The product produced from the milk is in powder form. One kind is yellow in color and is a substitute for a whole egg, while the other powder is white and is used where the white of an egg is demanded. The milk is used when sweet and is put through some baking and grinding process to draw out the ingredients of an egg. The powder can be produced cheaply, and when the process is perfected, the company will engage in its manufacture on a large scale.

Old Father Too Quick at Suicide.

Chicago—While his daughter, Mrs. H. S. Stocking, pursued him with the intention of preventing his suicide, William W. Crawford, a shoemaker at 35th and Halsted streets, swallowed laudanum and killed himself. Crawford, who was 60 years old, was seen passing his daughter's home at 1950 West Harrison street Wednesday afternoon, and as her father had been despondent for some time, Mrs. Stocking followed him. She saw Crawford enter a drug store. She was informed by the druggist that the old man had bought laudanum. Mrs. Stocking hastened after him. She saw him go into a saloon and arrived there to learn that Crawford had called for a glass of beer, into which he emptied the contents of a small bottle. Mrs. Stocking overlooked Crawford and hastened with him to her home; where she summoned a physician, but he died during the night.

Samuel Sillman for Senator.

Joliet, Ill.—The Will county democrats nominated this ticket: State senator, Twenty-fifth district, Samuel Sillman, Lockport; state representatives, Fred Wahl of Peotone, Michael Hennebery of Wesley, Judge R. E. Barber of Joliet; treasurer, Robert Graves of Plainfield; sheriff, John W. Arnold of Lockport; clerk, E. O. R. Frea of Monee; superintendent of schools, Lester D. Stearns of Joliet. Mr. Arnold is the former United States marshal of the northern district and Mr. Stearns is with Company B of the Third regiment, under Col. Fred Bennitt, now in Porto Rico. Resolutions indorsing the Chicago platform and denouncing Governor Tanner's action against the soldier boys were adopted.

Health Board's New President.

Springfield, Ill.—At a special meeting of the state board of health today President A. Adelsberger tendered his resignation, which was accepted. Dr. A. C. Coor of Carlville, the newly appointed member, was elected to fill the vacancy. The board appointed a committee for the examination of embalmers, who are applicants for certificates entitling them to prepare for transportation by common carriers bodies of persons who die from contagious or infectious diseases. This committee will meet in Chicago early in October to prepare for examinations, which will be held later in the month in that city. The board adjourned to meet in Chicago, Oct. 11.

DARTMOOR SHEEP.

On this page we illustrate two individuals of the Dartmoor breed of sheep. The Live Stock Handbook says of them: The Dartmoor sheep of today are a large, long-wooled variety rivaling in size the Cotswold, Lincoln and Romney Marsh breeds. They are the result of crossing the original er can reduce the clods by his machine, or if not, they will be up where nature can gradually dissolve them by the action of heat, cold and moisture. When the soil is dry, or only a little damp just at the top, the careful farmer does not hesitate to pasture his stalk field, and when the soil is in this condition a thin clod is formed just under the hoof-print, but it is near the surface of the soil, and when the soil is turned over with the plow this thin clod is turned down out of sight into the bottom of the furrow, and is never seen by the farmer again. He makes a perfect seed-bed of the surface of his freshly-plowed soil, but does not see the clods and air spaces that rest on the bottom of the furrows where the root zone is. A dry pressed brick is made by using perfectly dry earth pressed together by heavy pressure, and a clod is made the same way.

Dartmoor sheep with the Leicesters and Lincolns and do not give the idea of a forest or mountain race.—Farmers' Review.

A wet or mud brick is made by applying a smaller pressure to a wet soil. The difference is not between the moisture in the soil, but is simply a difference of pressure applied, hence a clod made in wet soil will be thicker than one made in dry soil, and never is a dry soil exempt from clods except when the pressure is kept off. Hence, the careful farmer makes just as many clods as his careless neighbor. The only difference is that one's clods are not quite so thick as the other's, and that the careless man will have his clods on top after plowing, where the rains can dissolve them, or where the

As to watering the grower will have to use some judgment. Violets must never be allowed to dry out, and require considerable water. Allow plenty of water, but avoid daily soaking, whether needed or not. It is rather a difficult matter to grow violets in the house, the hot dry heat of the ordinary living-room being disastrous to the health of the plant.—Woman's Home Companion.

Overfeeding.

If you have a hen to die suddenly, or your flock quits laying, you are at once told that you are overfeeding; that you should discontinue this and that, and feed some other diets. Now, as a matter of fact, strictly speaking, there is no such thing as overfeeding poultry. It is not how much you feed that injures the hen, but the way you feed it. A poorly-fed hen is a poor egg producer. It is food that makes hens lay, and if fed properly too much cannot be given. We are told that a very fat hen will not lay, which is most certainly true, but a hen fed as she should be will not get fat. Hens should be gradually supplied with food during the day, so that when night comes on their hunger is entirely appeased. No matter what you feed, make them work for it, and eat it slowly. Make them scratch for all grain and keep them busy from morning till night, and you will find that there will be no overfed hens in your flock.—Home and Farm.

Sunflowers in Hen Yards.

Sunflowers may become one of the principal plants for growing in the hen yard. There are several characteristics about them that make them particularly adapted to this purpose. In the first place they grow to such a height that they cannot be disturbed after they have attained their first start. This in itself is a great advantage, for we are all impressed with the fact that most of our plants that are desirable for growing in such a place are so low-headed that the hens are able to destroy them in the first stages of their development. But the sunflower develops and develops till its great sunny head blazes far above the fence. A grove may be made of these plants or a shelter belt, with patches of grass between. The hens will find a delightful forest in which to wander during the hot months, and in the cool months of the autumn they will be kept busy picking up the seeds that drop from the now reversed heads. If beauty be desired the stalks should be cut away and burned as soon as the heads have dropped their seeds.

Manager Forbes of the Lake County Unions feels a little "chafed" over the treatment his ball club received at the hands of the Lake County Fair Association and the Everette baseball club during the fair last week.

First, there were four teams to be in the contest, but instead there were only two teams—the Unions and the Everettes. As the Unions were the champions last year they should only have been required to play one game.

But as there were only two nine in the contest the Unions played two games, the Everettes capturing one and the Unions one. On Friday evening Manager Forbes and Captain Yore of the Everettes agreed, in the presence of Director Austin of the Fair Association, that they would not play ball the next day as the expense was too great, and to divide the purse equally.

Acting on this agreement Manager Forbes sent the Union team home on Friday evening. Therefore he was surprised when he went to the fair grounds Saturday and saw the Everette team dressed for playing, and the Unions not being there, they demanded 60 per cent of the purse money.

Furthermore, President Colby insisted on the Unions playing. Mr. Forbes did the best thing he could under the circumstances. He picked up a "scrub" nine and, still having the uniforms on the grounds, dressed the boys up and played an exhibition game with the Everettes.

It appears a clear case of repudiation of their sacred promise on the part of the Everette baseball team.
