M. L. Pinney claims the record for the biggest haul out of Lake Zurich—a 200 pounder. He, with Mr. Gage of Irving Park, were fishing in Lake Zurich Tuesday and while watching a nibble Mr. Pinney heard a sudden splash, and looking around found his friend in the water. He was hauled back into the boat and both came home with the usual fisherman's luck.

Our streets are rapidly becoming straightened and the improvement in appearance is closely visible. The north part of the village is nearly in line and the board expects no trouble in finishing the work. The changing of sidewalks, fences and buildings is a hardship to some, but it would be much worse a few years later. Let each one look at this action in a sensible way and help straighten out the village.

The Memorial Day committee meeting Monday night was not largely attended, but the work is going along nicely. The committee for the purpose of raising funds for a soldier's monument will go to work soon and solicit subscriptions for this purpose. The committee is composed of Messrs. Filbert, Hicks and Arps. Let everyone assist in this token of remembrance to the dead heroes who are laid to rest in our cemetery.

The village board met in special session Thursday evening and transacted some important business. The proposition in regard to sprinkling the streets was deemed too expensive for the present condition of the treasury. The committee on streets and drainage was instructed to purchase four car loads of flag stone for crossings and also to secure an option from Mr. Langhorst on 6,000 yards of gravel. The treasurer's yearly report, showing a balance of $1,326.39 on hand, was read and placed on file. The treasurer's bond of $3,000 was accepted. On motion board adjourned.

PHANTOM SHIP

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARRYAT.

CHAPTER XVI.—(Continued.)

Philip made no reply; he felt a respect even for Capt. Barentz' misplaced regard for the vessel. They made but little way, for the swell was rather against them, and the raft was deep in the water. The day dawned, and the appearance of the weather was not favorable; it promised a return of the gale. Already a breeze ruffled the surface of the water, and the swell appeared to increase rather than go down. The sky was overcast, and the horizon thick. Philip looked out for the land, but could not perceive it, for there was a haze on the horizon, so that he could not see more than five miles. He felt that to gain the shore before the coming night was necessary for the preservation of so many individuals, of whom more than sixty were women and children, who, without any nourishment, were sitting on a frail raft, immersed in the water. No land in sight—a gale coming on, and in all probability a heavy sea and dark night. The chance was indeed desperate, and Philip was miserable—most miserable—when he reflected that so many innocent beings might, before the next morning, be consigned to a watery tomb—and why?—yes, there was the feeling—that although Philip could reason against, he never could conquer; for his own life he cared nothing; even the idea of his beloved Amine was nothing in the balance of these moments. The only point which sustained him was the knowledge that he had his duty to perform, and, in the full exercise of his duty, he recovered himself.

"Land ahead?" was now cried out by Krantz, who was in the headmost boat, and the news was received with a shout of joy from the raft and the boats. The anticipation and the hope the news gave was like manna in the wilderness; and the poor women on the raft, drenched sometimes above the waist by the swell of the sea, clasped the children in their arms still closer and cried, "My darling, you shall be saved."

Philip stood upon the stern-sheets to survey the land, and he had the satisfaction of finding that it was not five miles distant, and a ray of hope warmed his heart. The breeze now had gradually increased and rippled the water. The quarter from which the wind came was neither favorable nor adverse, being on the beam. Had they had sails for the boat, it would have been otherwise; but they had been stowed away and could not be procured. The sight of land naturally rejoiced them all, and the seamen in the boat cheered and double-banked the oars to increase their way, but the towing of a large raft sunk under water was no easy task, and they did not, with all their exertions, advance more than half a mile an hour.

CHAPTER XVII.

Until noon they continued their exertions not without success; they were not three miles from the land, but as the sun passed the meridian a change took place; the breeze blew strong, the swell of the sea rose rapidly, and the raft was often so deeply immersed in the waves as to alarm them for the safety of those upon her. Their way was proportionately retarded, and by 3 o'clock they had not gained half a mile from where they had been at noon. The men, not having had refreshment of any kind during the labor and excitement of so many hours, began to flag in their exertions. The wish for water was expressed by all—from the child who appealed to its mother to the seaman who strained at the oar. Philip did all he could to encourage the men, but finding themselves so near to the land, and so overcome with fatigue, and that the raft in tow would not allow them to approach their haven, they murmured, and talked of the necessity of casting loose the raft and looking out for themselves. A feeling of self prevailed, and they were mutinous; but Philip expostulated with them, and, out of respect for him, they continued their exertions for another hour, when a circumstance occurred which decided the question, upon which they had commenced a debate.

The increased swell and the fresh breeze had so beat about and tossed the raft that it was with difficulty, for some time, that its occupants could hold themselves on it. A loud shout, mingled with screams, attracted the attention of those in the boat, and Philip, looking back, perceived that the lashings of the raft had yielded to the force of the waves, and that it had separated amidships. The scene was agonizing; husbands were separated from their wives and children—each floating away from each other—for the part of the raft which was still towed by the boats had already left the other far astern. The women rose up and screamed; some, more frantic, dashed into the water between them, and attempted to gain the floating wreck upon which their husbands stood, and sank before they could be assisted. But the horror increased—one lashing having given way, all the rest soon followed; and, before the boats could turn and give assistance, the sea was strewn with the spars which composed the raft, with men, women and children clinging to them. Loud were the yells of despair and the shrieks of the women as they embraced their offspring and in attempting to save them were lost themselves. The spars of the raft, still close together, were hurled one upon the other by the swell, and many found death by being jammed between them. Although all the boats hastened to their assistance, there was so much difficulty and danger in forcing them between the spars that but few were saved, and even those few were more than the boats could well take in. The seamen and a few soldiers were picked up, but all the females and the children had sunk beneath the waves.

The effect of this catastrophe may be imagined, but hardly described. The seamen who had debated as to casting them adrift to perish wept as they pulled toward the shore. Philip was overcome. He covered his face and remained for some time without giving directions, heedless of what passed.

It was now five o'clock in the evening; the boats had cast off the tow-lines, and vied with each other in their exertions. Before the sun had set they had arrived at the beach, and were safely landed in the little sand bay into which they had steered; for the wind was off the shore and there was no surf. The boats were hauled up and the exhausted men lay down on the sands still warm with the heat of the sun, and forgetting that they had neither eaten nor drunk for so long a time, they were soon fast asleep. Captain Barentz, Philip and Krantz, as soon as they had seen the boats secured, held a short consultation, and were then glad to follow the example of the seamen; harassed and worn out with the fatigue of the last twenty-four hours, their senses were soon drowned in oblivion.

For many hours they all slept soundly, dreamed of water and awoke to the sad reality that they were tormented with thirst, and were on a sandy beach with the salt waves mocking them; but they reflected how many of their late companions had been swallowed up, and felt thankful that they had been spared.

They were not more than fifty miles from Table Bay; and although they had no sails, the wind was in their favor; Philip pointed out to them how useless it was to remain, when before morning they would, in all probability, arrive at where they would obtain all they required. The advice was approved of and acted upon; the boats were shoved off and the oars resumed. So tired and exhausted were the men that their oars dipped mechanically into the water, for there was no strength left to be applied; it was not until the next morning at daylight that they had arrived opposite False Bay and they had still many miles to pull. The wind in their favor had done almost all—the men could do little or nothing.

Encouraged, however, by the sight of land which they knew, they rallied; and about noon they pulled, exhausted to the beach at the bottom of Table Bay, near to which were the houses and the fort protecting the settlers, who had for some years resided there. They landed close to where a broad rivulet at that season (but a torrent in the winter) poured its stream into the bay. At the sight of fresh water some of the men dropped their oars, threw themselves into the sea when out of their depth—others when the water was above their waists yet they did not arrive so soon as the ones who waited till the boat struck the beach and jumped out upon dry land. And then they threw themselves into the rivulet, which coursed over the shingle, about five or six inches in depth, allowing the refreshing stream to pour into their mouths till they could hold no more, immersing their hot hands and rolling in it with delight.

As soon as they had satisfied the most pressing of all wants they rose dripping from the stream and walked up to the houses of the factory, the inhabitants of which, perceiving that boats had landed when there was no vessel in the bay, naturally supposed that some disaster had happened, and were walking down to meet them. Their tragical history was soon told. The thirty-six men that stood before them were all that were left of nearly three hundred souls embarked, and they had been more than two days without food. At this intimation no further questions were asked by the considerate settlers until the hunger of the sufferers had been appeased, when the narrative of their sufferings was fully detailed by Philip and Krantz.

We must pass over the space of two months, during which the wrecked seamen were treated with kindness by the settlers, and at the expiration of which a small brig arrived at the bay and took in refreshments; she was homeward bound, with a full cargo, and, being chartered by the company, could not refuse to receive on board the crew of the Vrow Katerina. Philip, Krantz and the seamen embarked; but Captain Barentz remained behind to settle at the Cape.

They shook hands and parted—Philip promising to execute Barentz's commission, which was to turn his money into articles most useful to a settler, and have them sent out by the first fleet which should sail from the Zuyder Zee. But this commission it was not Philip's good fortune to execute. The brig, named the Wilhelmina, sailed and soon arrived at St. Helena. After watering, she proceeded on her voyage. They had made the Western Isles, and Philip was consoling himself with the anticipation of soon joining his Amine, when to the northward of the islands they met with a furious gale, before which they were obliged to scud for many days, with the vessel's head to the southeast; and as the wind abated and they were able to haul to it, they fell in with a Dutch fleet of five vessels, commanded by an admiral, which had left Amsterdam more than two months, and had been buffeted about by contrary gales for the major part of that period. Cold, fatigue and bad provisions had brought on the scurvy, and the ships were so weakly manned that they could hardly navigate them. When the captain of the Wilhelmina reported to the admiral that he had part of the crew of the Vrow Katerina on board, he was ordered to send them immediately to assist in navigating his crippled fleet. Remonstrance was useless. Philip had but time to write to Amine, acquainting her with his misfortunes and disappointment; and, confiding the letter to his wife, as well as his narrative of the loss of the Vrow Katerina for the directors to the charge of the captain of the Wilhelmina, he hastened to pack up his effects, and repaired on board of the admiral's ship with Krantz and the crew. To them were added six of the men belonging to the Wilhelmina, whom the admiral insisted on retaining; and the brig, having received the admiral's dispatches, was then permitted to continue her voyage.

The admiral sent for Philip into his cabin, and having heard his narrative of the loss of the Vrow Katerina, he ordered him to go on board the commodore's ship as captain, giving the rank of commodore to the captain at present on board of her; Krantz was retained on board his own vessel as second captain, for by Philip's narrative the admiral perceived at once that they were both good officers and brave men.

RING PHARAOH GAVE JOSEPH.

Interesting Relic in the Possession of a Jerseyman.

Prof. John Lansing of New Brunswick, who has been spending the winter in this city, will leave soon for Colorado, where he expects to live for a considerable time for the benefit of his health. He is a very scholarly and accomplished gentleman, being a minister of the Dutch Reformed church. He was born in the city of Damascus, Palestine, in "the street which is called Straight," his father being a resident missionary there. Prof. Lansing for 13 years lived in Egypt and is the master of nine languages. He has many curious and valuable relics of Egypt, stones and jewels of the ancient Pharaohs. He has what is thought by the best Egyptologists to be the identical gold ring set with a stone, which Khab Nub, the Pharaoh, gave to Joseph when he made him prime minister over all Egypt, says an Atlantic City paper. It is a curious old jewel and was worn on the thumb. It was found at Memphis 15 or 20 years ago in the coffin of a mummy. He has a walking stone and many kinds of sacred beetles bearing carved inscriptions telling of the reign in which they were the official emblem. He has a silk crocheted cap which was taken from a mummy and is several thousand years old, rare amber beads, the precious images of cats, and ancient symbols which have been unearthed in the land of the pyramids.

WAS IT ALUMINIUM?

A Strange Story of the Time of Tiberius.

It is related by Pliny that during the reign of the Emperor Tiberius a certain worker in metals appeared at the palace, and showed a beautiful cup made of a brilliant white metal that shone like silver. In presenting it to the emperor, the artificer purposely dropped it. The goblet was so bruised by the fall that it seemed hopelessly injured, but the workman took his hammer, and in the presence of the court speedily repaired the damage. It was evident that the metal was not silver, although almost as brilliant. It was more durable and much lighter. The emperor questioned the man, and learned that he had extracted the metal from an argillaceous earth—probably the clay known to modern chemists as alumina. Tiberius then asked if any one besides the worker knew of the process, and received the proud reply that the secret was known only to the speaker and to Jupiter. The answer was fatal. The emperor had reflected that if it were possible to obtain such a metal from so common a substance as clay the value of gold and silver would be reduced, and he determined to avert such a catastrophe. He caused the workshops of discovery to be destroyed, and the luckless artificer himself to be seized and decapitated, so that his secret might perish with him. It is possible that the wanton cruelty of Tiberius deprived the world of the valuable metal, aluminum.—Youth's Companion.

PERU-NA

FOR WOMEN

The debilitating drains and discharges which weaken so many women are caused by Catarrh of the distinctly feminine organs. The sufferer may call her trouble Leucorrhoea, or Weakness, or Female Disease or some other name, but the real trouble is catarrh of the female organs and nothing else. Peru-na radically and permanently cures this and all other forms of Catarrh. It is a positive specific for female troubles caused by catarrh of the delicate lining of the organs peculiar to women. It always cures if used persistently. It is prompt and certain.

Nervous People.

Nervous people not only suffer themselves but cause more or less misery to everyone around them. They are fretful, easily worried and therefore a worry to others.

When everything annoys you; when your pulse beats excessively; when you are startled at the least unexpected sound, your nerves are in a bad state and should be promptly attended to.

Nervousness is a question of nutrition. Food for the nerves is what you need to put you right, and the best nerve food in the world is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

They give strength and tone to every nerve in the body, and make despondent, easily irritated people feel that life has renewed its charms. Here is proof:

Miss Cora Watrous, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. I. C. Watrous, of 61 Clarion St., Bradford, Pa., was seized with a nervous disorder which threatened to end her life. Eminent physicians agreed the trouble was from impoverished blood, but failed to give relief. Mr. Watrous heard Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were highly recommended for nervous disorders, and gave them a trial. Before the first box had been taken the girl's condition improved. After using six boxes her appetite returned, the pain in her head ceased, and she was stronger than ever before. "My daughter's life was saved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," said Mrs. Watrous. "Her condition was almost hopeless when she commenced taking them, but now she is strong and healthy. I cannot recommend these pills too highly."—Bradford (Pa.) Era.

INSURGENTS WILL SUBMIT.

Acknowledge the Sovereignty of the United States.

EARLY PEACE IS PROBABLE.

President McKinley Has Instructed His Representatives in the Philippines to Impose No Unnecessary or Humiliating Conditions—San Fernando Captured.

President McKinley sent a message in answer to the request of President Schurman for instructions regarding the course to be pursued toward the Filipinos.

Mr. McKinley stated he was very anxious to have the peace negotiations concluded as early as possible and that no unnecessary or humiliating conditions should be imposed.

The insurgents, it is said, admitted the sovereignty of the United States. The president is confident of early peace as a result of the concessions recommended.

San Fernando Is Captured.

Gen. MacArthur's troops are now in San Fernando. The insurgents left the village as the Americans entered. The total losses on the American side were two killed and fifteen wounded. In this number are included the officers who were struck by Filipino bullets.

DEWEY COMING HOME.

Conclusion of Peace Negotiations the Signal for His Return.

There is reason to believe that President McKinley has been advised that Admiral Dewey contemplates coming home within a very short time. His return, of course, is dependent upon the success of the commission's present negotiations with the Filipinos.

A Kipling Poem.
Several years ago Eric D. Underwood, now general manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, named two stations in the upper peninsula of Michigan "Rudyard" and "Kipling," one being in an agricultural country and the other in an iron ore district. Some time later a mutual friend informed Kipling of Mr. Underwood's action, and the celebrated author sent Mr. Underwood his photograph with the following lines on the back:

"RUDYARD" AND "KIPLING."
"Wise is the child who knows his sire,"
The ancient proverb ran,
But wiser far the man who knows
How where and when his offspring grows.
For who the mischief would suppose
I've sons in Michigan?

Yet am I saved from midnight ills,
That warp the soul of man
They do not make me walk the floor
Nor hammer at the doctor's door,
They deal in wheat and iron ore,
My sons in Michigan.

Oh, Tourist in the Pullman car
(By Cook's or Raymond's plan),
Forgive a parent's partial view;
But, maybe, you have children too—
So let me introduce to you
My sons in Michigan,
RUDYARD KIPLING.

WANTED—Salesmen to handle a complete line of Lubricating Oils, Greases and Specialties. Best on the market. Good commission. Garland Refining Co., Cleveland, O.

SALESWOMEN understand what torture is. Constantly on their feet whether well or ill. Compelled to smile and be agreeable to customers while dragged down with some feminine weakness. Backaches and headaches count for little. They must keep going or lose their place.

To these Mrs. Pinkham's help is offered. A letter to her at Lynn, Mass., will bring her advice free of all charge.

MISS NANCIE SHORB, Florence, Col., writes a letter to Mrs. Pinkham from which we quote:

"I had been in poor health for some time, my troubles having been brought on by standing, so my physician said, causing serious womb trouble. I had to give up my work. I was just a bundle of nerves and would have fainting spells at monthly periods. I doctored and took various medicines, but got no relief, and when I wrote to you I could not walk more than four blocks at a time. I followed your advice, taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier in connection with the Vegetable Compound and began to gain in strength from the first. I am getting to be a stranger to pain and I owe it all to your medicine. There is none equal to it, for I have tried many others before using yours. Words cannot be said too strong in praise of it."

MISS POLLY FRAME, Meade, Kan., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to write you in regard to what your medicine has done for me. I cannot praise it enough. Since my girlhood I had been troubled with irregular and painful periods and for nearly five years had suffered with falling of the womb, and whites. Also had ovarian trouble, the left ovary being so swollen and sore that I could not move without pain. Now, thanks to your wonderful medicine, that tired feeling is all gone, and I am healthy and strong."

BETTER GO BACK THAN GO WRONG

but just as forceful today as one hundred years ago.

It's good common sense advice in almost every transaction, but for present purposes let us suppose you are going to buy a binder, a mowder or a corn harvester.

Possibly you have made up your mind to get something cheaper than the Deering Ideal.

Perhaps it is not yet too late to "go back." And it certainly is "better to go back than to go wrong."

That word "cheaper" is an old fraud. Do not be deceived by it.

Deering Ideal grain and grass harvesters are "ideal" because they embody the best thoughts and suggestions of the farmer and the mechanic.

They are simple, scientific and substantial.

They are the cheapest to buy because they are the best to own.

W. N. U. CHICAGO, NO. 19, 1899.

When Answering Advertisements Kindly Mention This Paper.

Gen. Thomas M. Anderson, U. S. A., who will soon arrive in Chicago to take command of the department of the lakes, has only recently returned from Manila, whither he accompanied Gen. Merritt. Gen. Anderson started out as a private in Company A of the Sixth Ohio volunteers in 1861, and he had not been in the harness a month before he had won a commission as second lieutenant of cavalry in the regular army. Just five months after he was given his lieutenant's commission, he was made a captain in the Twelfth regular infantry. In 1864 he was brevetted major for gallant conduct on the field in the battle of the Wilderness. On the very same day he was brevetted lieutenant colonel for bravery in the battle of Spottsylvania. The general is a native of Ohio, and before he took up fighting as a regular profession he was a lawyer of ability and a thoughtful and cultured scholar. Hence his rapid rise from the ranks.

REV. L. L. CARPENTER, Wabash, Ind., is President of the Bethany Assembly at Brooklyn, Ind. He is perhaps the most prominent clergyman in the Christian Church to-day. He has dedicated about 500 churches and baptized 7000 converts. He writes—"It affords me great pleasure to give my testimony as to the efficiency of Dr. Kay's remedies.

Dr. Kay's Lung Balm is the very best cough, cold and throat remedy that I ever used.

I have also received great benefit from the use of Dr. Kay's Renovator. My son had for years been greatly afflicted with the piles; he commenced the use of Dr. Kay's remedies and experienced relief almost from the first.

We have no words to express our thankfulness for the benefit we have received as the result of using these remedies. I take great pleasure in commending them to the suffering." L. L. CARPENTER, Missionary and S. S. Evangelist, Christian Church.

Dr. Kay's Renovator.

It is a perfect renovator of the whole system. It is the very best remedy known for stomach troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, constipation, also liver and kidney troubles, and to overcome effects of La-Grippe and SPRING lassitude. It is an excellent Nerve Tonic. Send for free sample and a free illustrated 116 page book of receipts etc., and send your symptoms and we will give you free advice. If druggists don't have Dr. Kay's Renovator don't take any substitute they may say "just as good," for it has no equal; but send direct to us and we will send it by return mail prepaid. Price 25c., and $1.00 or six for $5.00. Also Dr. Kay's Lung Balm 10c., and 25c., postage prepaid. DR. B. J. KAY MEDICAL CO., Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

The Flight of My Lady.

The disappearance of Lady Sophie Scott remains a profound mystery, and has given rise to more surmises in England than any recent event. She is a very handsome woman, extremely hysterical and has had several small misunderstandings with her husband, Sir Samuel Scott, M. P., but they were quite insufficient to account for her running away. That a woman so well known and with so large a circle of acquaintances could succeed in baffling her friends and the police is regarded as very unusual. In spite of all the searches that have been made, her whereabouts is unknown. In the inner circle there has never been any suspicion of foul play, and, it may be said, the discreet and knowing ones attribute her flight simply to an ungovernable desire to get away for a while from society. This impulse breaks out in the English gentleman continually. He gets up some morning, burns his dress coat, kicks his valet and goes into the heart of Africa or the Rocky mountains, with a wild, burning desire to escape from pink teas and flirtation. It is only reasonable to suppose that the same ennui occasionally attacks a woman. Her impulse is to escape from her corsets and tight shoes and seek some boundless contiguity of negligence where she can let her back hair down and chew gum and even go barefooted for a while without being ostracized. One of these fine mornings Lady Scott will reappear, calmed and freckled, and in her right mind. There ought to be asylums for society women who wish to recuperate by cutting their own set.

Chief Clerk Otto Luebker of the division of forestry in the agricultural department has been traveling extensively through the west gathering information with regard to the destruction of timber. He reports that the actual loss by fire is not by any means confined to the burning of the timber. The sterilization of the soil by the heat renders it valueless for 30 years. Some of the facts presented by Mr. Luebker are startling. The most extensive forest fires in America have been those in Michigan and have always been attended by great loss of life. In Hinckley, Minn., 685 persons were burned to death in one afternoon. The heat was so great during this fire that the car wheels standing on the tracks of the St. Paul and Duluth road at Hinckley were melted and welded to the rails. Men were suffocated in wells down which they had climbed for relief and from which the air had been exhausted by the fire. Even in New Jersey there is an annual loss of timber by fires of about $1,000,000. The devastation wrought by forest fires is incalculable. From Maine to California there is one unbroken record of destruction. Mr. Luebker's work, which will not be completed in two years, will be very thorough, and it is hoped that it will afford the basis of some kind of national legislation looking to the preservation of our forests.

The Philippine war is just now very weak in the back, if indeed its back is not broken. Whatever view may be taken of General Otis' refusal to treat with the insurgents as an organized government, there can be no doubt that the desire of the insurgents to treat is a sign of weakness. In short, it is demonstrably impossible for the conflict to be kept up interminably with the killing practically all on one side, and some glimmering of that mathematical fact appears to have got into Aguinaldo's mind. Public opinion in the United States is not at all unanimous with respect to the war in the Philippines, but it is only fair to say that the attitude of our government at this moment is very well expressed by General Otis, who says, "Lay down your arms and stop fighting, and then we will not only treat with you, but consult with you as to how the islands shall be governed."

Beer tablets are now in vogue in Germany. You put one in a tumbler of water and, piff, there you have a foaming glass of beer. Science is now said to be scratching its head over the problem of a tablet that will make the glass of water

Women as Railway Employees.

Whatever may be the arguments for or against the employment of women in the lighter service of railroads the practical movement of the railroads is at present against such employment. The Northwestern road some time ago decided not to employ women, and, later, the Metropolitan West Side railroad of Chicago and one or two other companies followed suit, and the tendency is in the same direction among other large corporations. It is not claimed that the women have proved incompetent in the lighter duties of the offices, but simply that they stand in the way of the promotion of men in the ranks and cut off their chances of advancement, thus affecting the ambition and zeal of the employees all the way down the line. This argument came up in England several years ago, where it was claimed that the competition of women in man's field of labor was demoralizing man's work and remotely injuring woman herself. It is now claimed by the Northwestern road boldly that women are unsuited for promotion to the higher railroading positions and that its civil service policy cannot be carried out successfully except with exclusively male employees. The Union Loop and Lake Shore some time ago discarded women ticket sellers "for the good of the service." It was explicitly stated at the time that this was not an imputation on the ability of women, but a disinclination to deal with them in the present systems of advancement. How this question will be ultimately settled in the labor unions it is not easy at present to perceive. But there is no mistaking the change in the attitude of corporations with regard to the sex question in labor, and the practical conclusion seems to be that the rapid increase of female employees is a positive detriment to the male worker and perhaps to that condition of society in which the male is looked upon as the proper worker.

The tornado which struck Missouri recently and wiped out a town or two is only one of several such experiences that are reported every season from the west. Science offers us at present no safety from this form of elemental danger. To build towns with special reference to tornadoes would be only to deprive them of many necessitous conveniences. There is some hope, indeed, that man in time will modify the conditions so that these storms will be less sudden and perilous. He will do that by changing the surface of the earth. But it will be a long time before the vast arid stretches of the west are covered with trees and the atmosphere loaded with moisture. Therefore we have to turn from science to philanthropy for any immediate assuagement of these terrible events. Here, at least, man is not helpless. He is so connected with every outlying town that his aid and his sympathy can follow close upon the storm. It is in that way that elsewhere in the world man has overcome and changed the effects of famine and scourge. It may be possible to bring insurance into this work in such a way that a disaster that cannot be foreseen may be supplemented by aid and relief that are calculable. The effects of such a tornado as that which visited Missouri appeal to the entire country as very few other disasters do.

Queen Victoria during her tour in France was invited to open a new bridge over the Paillon river, near Cimiez, on invitation of the local French authorities. Then a most absurd squabble arose. The mayor and a section of the municipal council wished to have the bridge named Victoria in honor of the queen. Another section insisted on having it named after Felix Faure, late president of the French republic, while a third party insisted that the bridge should be named after a local patron saint. The town fell by the ears over it, and there was a very lively squabble, with the queen of England waiting for matters to cool down. Finally a compromise was effected, and it was agreed to open the bridge without giving it any name at all.

Occasionally some city in Europe gets ahead of us in enterprise. Vienna has just made a municipal concession to a company to operate a "news and entertainment telephone service." The company undertakes to furnish news of an important character, up to certain hours of the night, to families and individuals by phone and to give by the same service the best sermons, lectures and concerts. In granting the franchise for this company the city exacted a percentage of the receipts, and, according to the terms of the agreement, the property passes into the possession of the city at the end of 50 years.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper. CARTER H. HARRISON, Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically. WASHINGTON HESING, The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country." MARTIN J. RUSSELL, Editor-in-Chief Chicago Chronicle.

The following are a few of the points why the Plano machines are the best over other makes:

In the Plano Jones Lever Binder the knottor contains only 13 pieces, while the Deering has 44, McCormick 28 and the Champion 33. It is the only binder put up with lever power, carrying spring, friction clutch reel and jointless main frame. The main drive wheel is two inches wider than any other made, consequently the machine will not mire or settle down in soft or loose ground.

Farmers should examine this machine before placing their order.

It Doesn't Cost Much TO KALSOMINE A ROOM.

If you use prepared Kalsomine it gives the wall as fine a satin finish as expensive wall paper. It is very simple to make ready—a thorough mixing of the Kalsomine with water only being necessary.

When dry it won't rub off and almost anyone can apply it.

Letter From The Philippines.
BIGAA, P. I., March 31, 1899.
DEAR FATHER:—I am now located about 21 miles north of Manila. I have been through another scrap and did not get touched. We went into camp just outside the city on the 23rd in our small tents. That night the 3rd regiment, regulars from Fort Snelling, came ashore. I only saw one man that I knew. He was a private when we went South from St. Paul, but is now a sergeant.
On the 24th we broke camp at 10 o'clock a. m. and marched out to the water works (about 5 miles) in the hot sun. I tell you, it was a pretty hot march with our blankets rolled across our shoulders. We got there about 10 o'clock p. m. had lunch, which consisted of coffee, hard tack and canned corn beef. We slept in an old church that night, got up about 2 a. m., ate some more army rations and then marched out on a road about 3 miles and waited until daylight, then started across the country as skirmishers. We had some pretty hot firing, but no one in our company was hit. The regiment had 12 wounded. Capt. Spear is acting-major in command of the 3rd battalion, which is the left of the regiment, our company is the left of the 3rd battalion. I had command of the 2nd Platoon, so I was on the extreme left of the regiment.
We chased the niggers for two or three hours. I don't know where they went to. I guess they are going yet. We slept on the ground that night and marched off the road about 3 miles and camped, each company in our battalion is camping about a mile apart along this road and patrol the country.
March 29th we got orders about 6 o'clock to pack up. We marched back through Manila and out to Calocan (between 8 and 9 miles) and arrived there at 11 o'clock at night. We laid down in line and slept until 6 a. m., then took the little one horse train and rode 12 miles north; camped all night then marched 8 miles up the track and our regiment is now scattered along the track guarding bridges, etc. Have just heard that Malolos has fallen and they are still chasing the natives North. I was out scouting this forenoon; we caught two calves and some chickens; have thirty-five chickens altogether for supper and young buffaloes for dinner. Everybody has skiddaddled and left their homes and everything behind and we can get lots of nice curious dishes, etc. I only wish I had a chance to take some things back with me, but my roll is heavy enough now. I don't know when I can get this mailed. Will write again when I get a chance to send mail to town. Direct mail the same as ever. Your son,
JAY C. PRICE.

BEEF REPORT MADE PUBLIC.

Censure Is Bestowed on Gens. Miles and Eagan.

APPROVED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Court of Inquiry Falls to Uphold the Allegations as to Army Meat-Packers Are Exonerated—No Further Action to Be Taken.

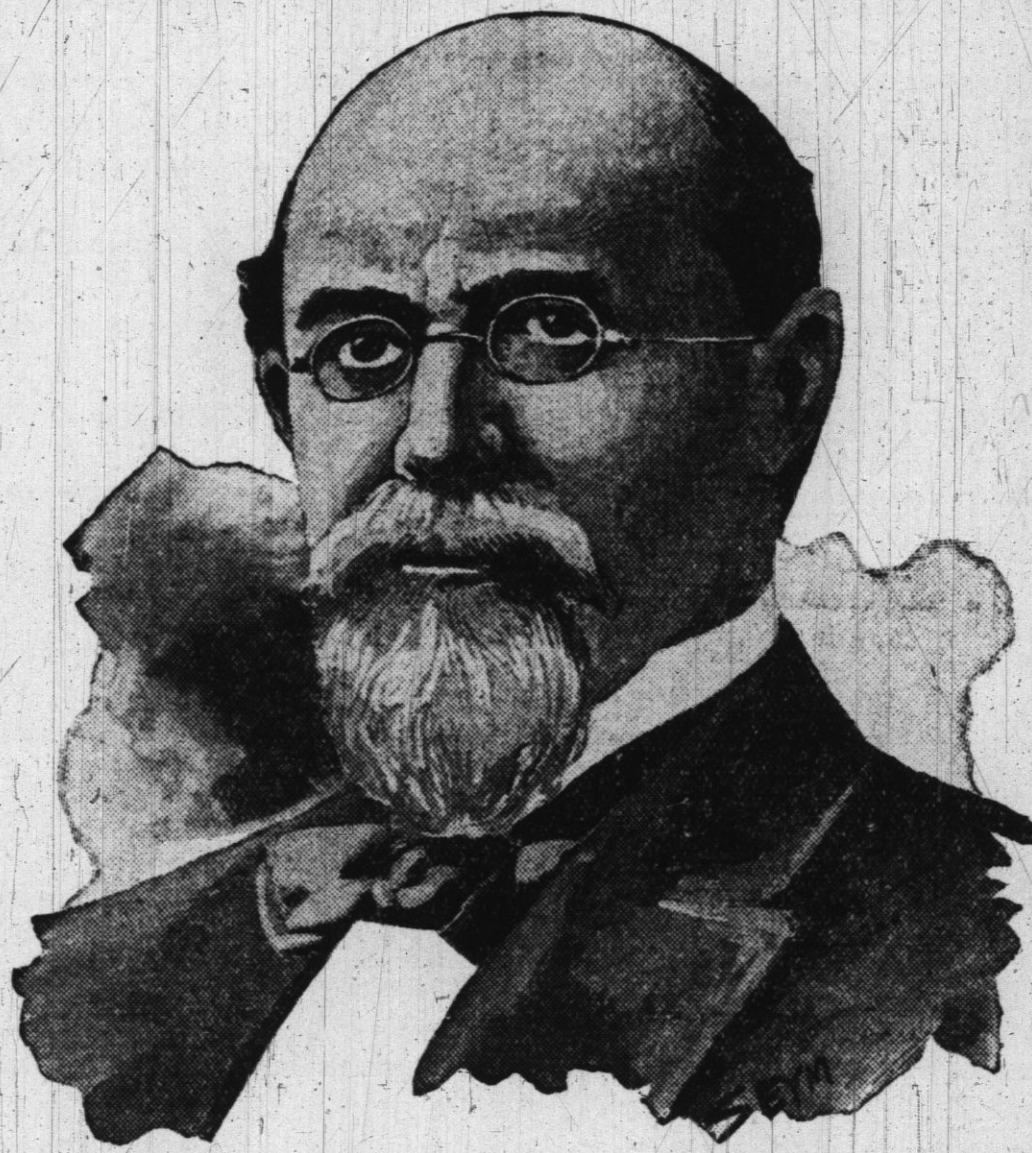

In its report the court of inquiry which investigated the beef charges censures Gen. Miles for not reporting the unfitness of the rations at the time that the complaints reached him. It declares that the refrigerator meat was not chemically treated, and holds that the canned beef was good, although unsuitable as a steady diet for soldiers.

Gen. Eagan is severely scored for buying such immense quantities of an untried ration. The commissary's error is declared to be inexcusable.

The packers are exonerated, it being shown that they furnished the same goods that they put on the general market.

The court recommends that no further action be taken in the matter.

Catalogues by Carloads.

A statistical genius has figured that the various manufacturers of harvesting machinery have printed and distributed enough "advertising matter" during the last decade to fill 2,000 freight cars. The greater portion of this literature has been expended on the farmers of this country in an effort to make them believe that almost any kind of a machine is "as good as the Deering." In the meantime the Deering Harvester Company of Chicago has prospered until at the present time its works employ more hands than any single manufacturing plant of any kind in America.

UBIQUITOUS AMERICAN PERSON ALL OVER.

We Hear of Him from Ice and Tropics—Here is One Who Says "Hello" from Paraguay and Says He is Well—Farming Prospects Down There.

In almost every corner of the world these days one will find an American colonist. Mr. Finch, the United States minister to Uruguay, has sent to the state department a letter from a Yankee who has settled in Paraguay. A part of the letter is summarized as follows:

"The climate of Paraguay is delightful, the heat during the warmest season not being oppressive. An evidence of the purity of the air is the fact that fresh meat can be kept for several days during summer without becoming putrid. The soil in the southeastern part is fertile and capable of producing in abundance corn, sugar cane, alfalfa and root crops of all kinds. Near the Paraguay river the land is not so good. Each colonist receives about sixty-two acres of land, implements, and an allowance of money on which to live for seven months, all to be paid for in ten years without interest. The implements consist of hoes, shovels, axes, saws, etc., for hand labor. Seeds for the first year are also furnished and charged in the same way. A yoke of oxen is loaned free when necessary.

"No cultivation of the land by machinery appears to have been attempted. Very little of the ground is free from stumps, and the horses of the country are not strong enough to pull a plow. It is impracticable to use oxen for this purpose, as the cattle are only half domesticated. The woods are heavy and hard and the grain twisted; they do not adapt themselves readily to building purposes. The typical Paraguayan farm house is built in the following manner: Posts are set firmly in the ground, upon which beams of round or square timber are laid; the roof is made of native straw, and the walls are a combination of upright sticks interlaced with a sort of lattice work and plastered over with mud. Sometimes shingles (made with a hatchet) are used for the roof, instead of the straw. A fair-sized house can be built complete for about $140 in United States currency. Coffee costs about 40 cents a pound; sugar, eight cents; tea, $1.10, and flour, $8 per barrel. Butter can not be had. Lard and pork costs about 13 cents a pound. Beef is cheap—2½ cents a pound—and is fairly good."

CAMEROON DWARFS.

Pygmy Tribe with True Negro Characteristics.

Although reports of a race of small stature in the interior of the Cameroons have been current for some years, no traveler had until last year been able to verify the rumor by his own observation. Quoting from "Allgemeine Wissenschaftliche Berichte," the Deutsche Rundschau announces that the first accurate information respecting such a race was obtained last year by the Bulu expedition of the German military force. Seven individuals of the pygmy tribe were, after much difficulty, brought to the camp through the instrumentality of a native chief. Some of them showed traces of admixture with other tribes, but one woman, who seemed to possess the typical characteristics of the race, was carefully measured and had a height of almost exactly four feet. The color was a chocolate-brown to copperish, the palms of the hands alone being of a yellowish white. The hair was deep black, thick and frizzled; the skull broad and high; the lips full and swollen. The mode of life seems to resemble that of other pygmy tribes, as they are very shy, wandering about from place to place, and avoiding frequented routes. They are skilled hunters, and collect much rubber, but dispose of it to other tribes for transport to the coast. Prof. Virchow, speaking of these people before the Berlin Anthropological Society in November last, said that apart from their small size they possess all the characteristics of true negroes, especially in their hair; and that, like the other pygmy tribes, they must be regarded as the remains of a primitive population, from which the various negro tribes have been derived.

The Inventor of Spectacles.

The Medical Journal says that the invention of spectacles is often attributed to Roger Bacon, who died in 1294. Further research, however, has shown that in 1285 Savrino degli Armati, a Florentine, worked glass into the form of a lens as a help to vision. For him, therefore, may justly be claimed the honor of having invented spectacles. He died in Florence in 1317 and was buried in the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore. On his stone is the following inscription: "Here lies Savrino degli Armati, inventor of spectacles. May God forgive him his sins. A. D. 1317."

Board of Arbitration Report.

The annual report of the state board of arbitration has just been made public. It says: "The work of the state board of arbitration during the last year, as in previous years, has taken largely the form of conciliation. Growing experience makes it manifest that all things considered, this is the most useful function of the board. The formal hearings, the occasions on which the board sits as a court of inquiry, takes testimony under oath, listens to arguments and promulgates a written opinion or decision, are few, when compared to the instances in which individual members of the board exert their good offices to convert discord and turbulence into harmony and peace. This is the situation not only in Illinois, but in states in which arbitration and conciliation laws have been in force much longer than here. The timely presence on the scene of the trouble of a disinterested person charged with the duty of exerting every endeavor to effect an amicable settlement is well calculated to restore good feeling between all parties to the dispute and to impart to them a spirit of concession and compromise which leads to a just and satisfactory conclusion." The report discusses at some length the amendments to the arbitration law embodied in the act recently passed and now in force. It is now the judgment of the board that the amendments thus made place Illinois in advance of every other state in the matter of legislation for arbitration.

Going 1 to Liquidation.

The Fidelity Building and Savings Union of Indianapolis, Ind., has begun voluntary liquidation. President J. B. Patten believes all claims may be paid in full if the intervention of the courts is not sought by stockholders. Withdrawals aggregating $43,000 are eighteen months overdue, and the revenues of the company are decreasing. The union has been retrenching and not seeking to increase its business since 1897, and the announcement of voluntary liquidation is not unexpected in building association circles. The organization has paid large dividends—as high as 20 per cent, it is said, to early members.

Since 1893 legislation has been aimed directly at such organizations as the Fidelity, and President Patten says this legislation has been responsible for the reverses of the union. He says the assets of the association are sufficient to pay off all debts if managed judiciously. There is $163,000 worth of real estate, securing the stockholders. An assessment on the holders of stock in series No. 4 may be necessary.

Coal Scale Not Satisfactory.

State President Hunter and State Secretary Ryan of the United Mine Workers of America say that the miners in the Chicago and Alton sub-district would not accept the decision of the board of arbitration as to the scale of wages and declared if the operators insist on the scale fixed by the board they (Hunter and Ryan) would order the miners to quit work at once. They state that fully 75 per cent of the miners neither lived in company houses nor bought at company stores, so the reduction in rent and discontinuance of store orders would affect but a small per cent. President Hunter further said that the conditions were almost exactly the same as in June, 1893, when the board of arbitration sustained the scale, only the coal companies now have a reduction of 10 cents per ton in freight rates in Chicago.

Loan Association Succumbs.

A receiver has just been appointed for the Equitable Building and Loan association of Bloomington. The Equitable is one of the largest interstate or national associations in the state and has been in existence for about nine years. It has weathered all the gales which wrecked other big Bloomington nationals, but there has for some time been a feeling that it too must succumb. The withdrawals have recently increased greatly in numbers and there has been a good deal of talk about the efforts of the shareholders at Anderson, Ind., to place the concern in a receiver's hands. Edward Barry, who has been made receiver, has been the receiver of the defunct Interstate Building and Loan association, whose affairs he has just wound up.

passed long since, when it won the confidence and esteem of thoughtful men and women 50 years ago.

You need have no doubts, if, when you go to buy Sarsaparilla, you simply say the old name

TRICKED OLD ROMAN NOSE.

Written for the Chicago Daily News: "One of the best fighters in time of war and one of the meanest redskins in time of peace was old Roman Nose," said Col. Childers, as reminiscences were in order. "As a freighter for three different forts he had many opportunities to annoy me. My instructions from the government were to put up with his nonsense and do nothing to provoke him, and knowing this he would do many aggravating things. If he camped down on my road with a hundred of his fighting bucks I had to turn back, buy him off, or wait until he was tired out. I finally determined that I had had about enough of his nonsense, and I didn't have long to wait for a climax. I was hauling supplies up to Fort Chadwick, and on a certain trip we had a drove of a hundred cattle behind us. Some were for the post and some for the miners, and they were a wild lot.

"At a place called Badger pass," continued the colonel, "I found old Roman Nose and seventy of his men camped on the trail. Our way was blocked. I tried a keg of whisky and a ton of flattery, but it was no go. I blustered and threatened, and the old reptile got on his war paint. Then I schemed to buy him off, but he wanted $500 in cash to let my train pass. I wouldn't pay any such sum, of course. After a delay of three days I got mad and determined to teach the autocratic redskin a lesson in manners.

"I left my wagons on each side of the roadway, sent the mules to the rear and then began to 'work up' the herd of cattle. I mean by this that we left them without food or water all day and the men annoyed them and made them nervous.

"When night came we poured gun-powder on the ground here and there, threw stones and clubs among the herd, and about 9 o'clock were ready for the grand coup. The guards were withdrawn from the front, the powder heaps flashed off, and then that hundred of half-crazy cattle started off like a cyclone. They had half a mile to go before they struck the Indians. The pass was about fifty feet wide and a mile long, and Roman Nose didn't have two minutes' warning. It takes something out of the ordinary to surprise an Indian, but they got it good and strong that time.

"What happened?" was asked. "Well, the Indians made for the rocks, of course, but not half of them escaped that way. The main crowd was picked up and thrown down and trampled over by the 400 hoofs, and that was also the fate of about twenty-five ponies. When daylight came we advanced our train, and we found nine dead Indians in the pass. There were others who had dragged themselves away, and we had to clear the way of dead ponies before we could go on. We found the herd, with only two or three missing, in a valley six miles beyond, and many of them had bloodstains on their legs and horns. A month later I met Roman Nose and gave him a 'Howdy' and asked if the cloudburst at Badger pass had come upon him unexpectedly. He looked at me in a doubtful, puzzled way for a minute, and then sulkily replied:

"Maybe cloudbursts have horns and hoofs and tails and walk folks into the earth, and maybe Col. Childers is one big liar of a white man!"
