Prosperity has again reached our village. Everything is on the hum; the sound of the carpenter's hammer, the ring of the blacksmith's anvil and the general activity in the business places of our village are good signs of returning prosperity. The general traffic to and from our village has also greatly increased. Only a few years ago one livery could barely make a living, now three do a lively business.

NOTICE, EVERYBODY. Next Tuesday May 30, on the school grounds A Martha Washington ice cream stand will be conducted by the W. R. C. Ice Cream and cake will be served throughout the day. Beginning at 11 o'clock a. m. a light lunch, consisting of coffee and sandwiches will be served to all who desire to partake. There are many who do not care to return home for dinner, and a way is now provided so that it will not be necessary. This is a long felt want for that day and the ladies deserve the patronage of all.

The M. W. A. had another big time Tuesday evening. Ten new candidates were instructed in the way of woodcraft and the Ringwood team of foresters was invited over to administer same. Well I guess they did, the blamed old goat kicked and bucked and ran until the new candidates thought their time had come. Besides the goat we doubt not but a tribe of Comanche Indians was turned loose to add to the terror of the situation and if the candidates thoroughly recover from this ovation they will no doubt be good Woodmen.

Prize Fight at Wauconda.

The big fight between Bob and Frank was pulled off before the Mill Street Sporting club, Frank winning the fight in the third round. This was the best fight the club has had for some time. Both men were in the pink of condition. Frank was the first to enter the ring, closely followed by his seconds. Bob came in a few minutes later, with M. Pool, his chief trainer. E. Ford was referee. The men shook hands at 5:41 and the big mill for the championship was on. The fight by rounds:

ROUND 1—Frank rushes Bob to the ropes and land a terrific blow on head. Bob swings his right on Bob's ear and left on his chin. They clinch and fall heavily to the floor as the gong rings.

ROUND 2—Bob rushes at Frank with both hands, but Frank's clever ducking saves him. Frank reaches Bob's wind with his left, knocking him on the ropes and follows it up with a hard right on jaw when the gong sounds.

ROUND 3—Both men went at it in lively fashion, Frank getting the better of the mix-up. Frank lands a hard right on Bob's ear and right on nose, drawing first blood. Frank is wonderfully clever on his feet and did some elegant side-stepping. He put his right hand on Bob's jaw and Bob went down and out.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. Wilson, Liveryman, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

PHANTOM SHIP

OR

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARRYAT.

It was about a fortnight after they had left the Falkland islands that they entered the straits. At first they had a leading wind which carried them half through, but this did not last, and they then had to contend not only against the wind, but against the current, and they daily lost ground. The crews of the ships also began to sicken from fatigue and cold. Whether the admiral had before made up his mind, or whether irritated by his fruitless endeavors to continue his voyage, it is impossible to say; but after three weeks' useless struggle against the winds and currents, he hove to and ordered all the captains on board, when he proposed that the prisoner should receive his punishment, and that punishment was—to be deserted—that is, to be sent on shore with a day's food, where there was no means of obtaining support, so as to die miserably of hunger. This was a punishment frequently resorted to by the Dutch of that period, as will be seen by reading an account of their voyage; but at the same time seldom, if ever, awarded to one of so high a rank as that of commodore.

Philip immediately protested against it, and so did Krantz, although they were both aware that by so doing they would make the admiral their enemy; but the other captains, who viewed both of them with a jealous eye, and considered them as interlopers and interfering with their advancement, sided with the admiral. Notwithstanding this majority, Philip thought it his duty to expostulate.

"You know well, admiral," said he, "that I joined in his condemnation for a breach of discipline; but at the same time there was much in extenuation. He committed a breach of discipline to save his ship's company, but not an error in judgment, as you yourself proved, by taking the same measure to save your own men. Do not, therefore, visit an offense of so doubtful a nature with such cruelty. Let the company decide the point when you send him home, which you can do as soon as you arrive in India. He is sufficiently punished by losing his command; to do what you propose will be ascribed to feelings of revenge more than to those of justice. What success can we deserve if we commit an act of such cruelty? and how can we expect a merciful Providence to protect us from the winds and waves, when we are thus barbarous toward each other?"

Philip's arguments were of no avail. The admiral ordered him to return on board his ship, and had he been able to find an excuse, he would have deprived him of his command. This he could not well do; but Philip was aware that the admiral was now his inveterate enemy. The commodore was taken out of irons and brought into the cabin, and his sentence was made known to him.

"Be it so, admiral," replied Avenhorn; "for to attempt to turn you from your purpose I know would be unavailing. I am not punished for disobedience of orders, but for having, by my disobedience, pointed out to you your duty—a duty which you were forced to perform afterward by necessity. Then be it so; let me perish on these black rocks, as I shall, and my bones be whitened by the chilly blasts which howl over their desolation. But mark me, cruel and vindictive man! I shall not be the only one whose bones will bleach there. I prophesy that many others will share my fate, and even you, admiral, may be of the number—if I mistake not, we shall lie side by side."

The admiral made no reply, but gave a sign for the prisoner to be removed. He then had a conference with the captains of the three smaller vessels; and as they had been all along retarded by the heavier sailing of his own ship, and the Dort commanded by Philip, he decided that they should part company, and proceed on as fast as they could to the Indies—sending on board of the two larger vessels all the provisions they could spare, as they already began to run short.

Philip had left the cabin with Krantz after the prisoner had been removed. He then wrote a few lines upon a slip of paper: "Do not leave the beach when you are put on shore, until the vessels are out of sight," and requesting Krantz to find an opportunity to deliver this to the commodore, he returned on board of his own ship.

When the crew of the Dort heard of the punishment about to be inflicted upon their old commander, they were much excited. They felt that he had sacrificed himself to save them, and they murmured much at the cruelty of the admiral.

About an hour after Philip's return to his ship, the prisoner was sent on shore and landed on the desolate and rocky coast, with a supply of provisions for two days. Not a single article of extra clothing or the means of striking a light was permitted him. When the boat's keel grazed the beach, he was ordered out. The boat shoved off, and the men were not permitted even to bid him farewell.

The feet, as Philip had expected, remained hove-to shifting the provisions, and it was not till after dark that everything was arranged. This opportunity was not lost. Philip was aware that it would be considered a breach of discipline, but to that he was indifferent; neither did he think it likely that it would come to the ears of the admiral, as the crew of the Dort were partial both to the commodore and to him. He had desired a seaman whom he could trust, to put into one of the boats a couple of muskets, and a quantity of ammunition, several blankets, and various other articles, besides provisions for two or three months, for one person; and as soon as it was dark the men pulled on shore with the boat, found the commodore on the beach waiting for them, and supplied him with all these necessaries. They then rejoined their ship, without the admiral's having the least suspicion of what had been done, and shortly after the fleet made sail on a wind, with their heads off shore. The next morning the three smaller vessels parted company, and by sunset had gained many miles to windward, after which they were not again seen.

The admiral had sent for Philip to give him his instructions, which were very severe, and evidently framed so as to be able to afford him hereafter some excuse for depriving him of his command. Among others, his orders were, as the Dort drew less water than the admiral's ship, to sail ahead of him during the night, that if they approached too near the land as they beat across the channel, timely notice might be given to the admiral if in too shallow water. This responsibility was the occasion of Philip's being always on deck when they approached the land on either side of the Straits. It was the second night after the fleet had separated that Philip had been summoned on deck as they were nearing the land of Terre del Fuego; he was watching the man in the chains heaving the lead, when the officer of the watch reported to him that the admiral's ship was ahead of them instead of astern. Philip made inquiry as to when he passed, but could not discover; he went forward and saw the admiral's ship with her poop-light, which, when the admiral was astern, was not visible. "What can be the admiral's reason for this?" thought Philip; "has he run ahead on purpose to make a charge against me of neglect of duty? It must be so. Well, let him do as he pleases; he must wait till we arrive in India, for I shall not allow him to desert me; and with the company I have as much, and, I rather think, as a large proprietor, more interest than he has. Well, as he has thought proper to go ahead, I have nothing to do but to follow."

"You may come out of the chains there."

CHAPTER XX.

Philip went forward; they were now, as he imagined, very near to the land, but the night was dark and they could not distinguish it. For half an hour they continued their course, much to Philip's surprise, for he now thought he could make out the loom of the land, dark as it was. His eyes were constantly fixed upon the ship ahead, expecting every minute that she would go about; but no, she continued her course, and Philip followed with his own vessel.

"We are very close to the land, sir," observed Vander Hagen, the lieutenant, who was the officer of the watch.

"So it appears to me; but the admiral is closer, and draws much more water than we do," replied Philip.

"I think I see the rocks on the beam to leeward, sir."

"I believe you are all right," replied Philip; "I cannot understand this. Ready about, and get a gun ready—they must suppose us to be ahead of them, depend upon it."

Hardly had Philip given the order when the vessel struck heavily on the rocks. Philip hastened aft; he found the rudder had been unshipped, and the vessel was immovably fixed. His thoughts then reverted to the admiral. "Was he on shore?" He ran forward, and the admiral was still sailing on with his poop-light, about two cables length ahead of him.

"Fire the gun there," cried Philip, perplexed beyond measure.

The gun was fired, and immediately followed up by the flash and report of another gun close astern of them. Philip looked with astonishment over the quarter, and perceived the admiral's ship close astern to him, and evidently on shore as well as his own.

"Merciful Heaven!" exclaimed Philip rushing forward, "what can this be?"

He beheld the other vessel, with her light ahead, still sailing on and leaving them. The day was now dawning and there was sufficient light to make out the land. The Dort was on shore not fifty yards from the beach, and surrounded by the high and barren rocks; yet the vessel ahead was apparently sailing on over the land. The seamen crowded on the fore-castle, watching this strange phenomenon; at last it vanished from their sight.

"That's the Flying Dutchman, by all that's holy!" cried one of the seamen, jumping off the gun.

Hardly had the man uttered these words when the vessel disappeared.

Philip felt convinced that it was so, and he walked away aft in a very perturbed state. It must have been his father's fatal ship which had decoyed them to probable destruction. He hardly knew how to act. The admiral's wrath he did not wish, just at that moment, to encounter. He sent for the officer of the watch, and having desired him to select a crew for the boat, out of those men who had been on deck, and could substantiate his assertions, ordered him to go on board or the admiral, and state what had happened.

As soon as the boat had shoved off, Philip turned his attention to the state of his own vessel. The daylight had increased, and Philip perceived that they were surrounded by rocks, and had run on shore between two reefs, which extended half a mile from the mainland. He sounded round his vessel, and discovered that she was fixed from forward to aft, and that without lightning her there was no chance of getting her off. He then turned to where the admiral's ship lay aground, and found that, to all appearance, she was in even a worse plight, as the rocks to leeward of her were above the water, and she was much more exposed should bad weather come on. Never, perhaps, was there a scene more cheerless and appalling; a dark wintry sea—a sky loaded with heavy clouds—the wind cold and piercing—the whole line of the coast one mass of barren rocks, without the slightest appearance of vegetation; the inland part of the country presented an equally somber appearance and the higher points were capped with snow, although it was not yet the winter season. Sweeping the coast with his eye, Philip perceived, not four miles to leeward of them, so little progress had they made, the spot where they had deserted the commodore.

"Surely this has been a judgment on him for his cruelty," thought Philip, "and the prophesy of poor Avenhorn will come true—more bones than his will bleach on those rocks." Philip turned round again to where the admiral's ship was on shore, and started back, as he beheld a sight even more dreadful than all that he had viewed—the body of Vander Hagen, the officer sent on board of the admiral, hanging at the main-yardarm. "My God! is it possible?" exclaimed Philip, stamping with sorrow and indignation.

His boat was returning on board, and Philip awaited it with impatience. The men hastened up the side, and breathlessly informed Philip that the admiral, as soon as he had heard the lieutenant's report, and his acknowledgment that he was officer of the watch, had ordered him to be hung, and that he had sent them back with a summons for him to repair on board immediately, and that they had seen another rope preparing at the yard-arm.

"But not for you, sir," cried the men, "that shall never be—you shall not go on board—we will defend you with our lives."

The whole ship's company joined in this resolution, and expressed their determination to resist the admiral. Philip thanked them kindly—stated his intention of not going on board, and requested that they would remain quiet, until it was ascertained what steps the admiral might take. He then went down to his cabin to reflect upon what plan he should proceed. As he looked out of the stern windows, and perceived the body of the young man still swinging in the wind, he almost wished that he was in his place, for then there would be an end in his wayward fate; but he thought of Amine, and felt that for her he wished to live. That the Phantom Ship should have decoyed him to destruction was also a source of much painful feeling, and Philip meditated, with his hands pressed to his temples. "It is my destiny," thought he at last, "and the will of Heaven must be done; we could not have been so deceived if Heaven had not permitted it." And then his thoughts reverted to his present situation.

A fly so minute as to be almost invisible has been calculated to make no less than 540 steps in the time a healthy man would breathe once. A man with proportionate agility could run twenty-four miles a minute.

ASK YOURSELF A FEW QUESTIONS

If Deering Ideal Harvesting Machines are not the best in the world, why is it that the Deering works are the largest in the world?

If there is not a greater demand for Deering machines than for any other make why is it that the Deering works employ over six thousand five hundred skilled mechanics—more than twice as many as any other reaper plant in the world?

If Deering machines have not earned the right to universal approval why is it that the Deering works are increasing the output for 1899 by 50,000 machines as against the product of 1898?

If Deering ball and roller bearings are not applied to binders and mowers in the only correct way why is it that competitors are at their wits' ends to make their machines as light draft as the Deering Ideals?

City Rang with Hymns.
Decatur, Ill.—The business and residence streets of Decatur traversed by the electric cars rang yesterday with inspiring gospel hymns sung by several hundred delegates to the state Sunday school convention, who were enjoying a complimentary trolley car ride, and when the march was taken up to the church the entire delegation went down the principal street singing. Yesterday all the officers and chief workers were photographed in a group after the normal graduates had received their diplomas and the Rev. F. D. Howe of Springfield had delivered the address to the class. Mrs. H. L. Hill of Chicago was elected president of the state primary department and Mrs. J. A. Urhans of Evanston secretary. In the normal department Prof. Hamill was made superintendent and Mrs. Hill secretary. President E. A. Turner of the Lincoln university and the Rev. Johnston Myers of Chicago were the speakers at the closing session of the convention last night.

Hair Clipper's Life Ends.
Chicago, Ill.—John W. Jorgensen, "the hair clipper," who confessed that he had cut off the braids of more than thirty young girls, died in Passavant hospital yesterday afternoon from a bullet wound self-inflicted Tuesday last. The man had suffered from melancholia from birth, and to his trouble was due the hair clipping, according to experts in neurology. His arrest, and the suspense awaiting a delayed sentence aggravated his mental condition. After shooting himself in the left breast near the heart Jorgensen was taken to Passavant hospital, where the surgeons at first entertained hopes of his recovery. Inflammation set in Wednesday night and yesterday it was found impossible to perform an intended operation for the removal of the bullet. Jorgensen will be buried Sunday from the home of his widow, North and Milwaukee avenues.

Losses $7,500 to Swindlers.
Braidwood, Ill.—J. J. Smillie, a resident of Custer township, where he owns a valuable farm, was swindled out of $7,500 by two sharpers today. The men, who fled after securing the money, came here yesterday, ostensibly to purchase farms. This morning one of the men drove out to Smillie's place, and while looking over the farm his confederate came up. The first stranger began to bet on a game the second man had. Smillie, becoming interested, took a hand and soon won several thousand dollars. In order to show he could have paid it if he had lost, Smillie was induced to go to the bank at Wilmington, where he drew out $7,500. On the way back Smillie, who is an old man, was forced at the point of a revolver to give the money to the swindlers, who immediately drove away.

Runaway Girl Is Located.
Joliet, Ill.—Cora Palmer, the 16-year-old girl from Wilmington, Ill., who was supposed to have been enticed to Chicago by a woman, and for whom Capt. Collieran of the detective bureau in that city has been searching, has been located in Joliet, where she has been since May 7, working in a restaurant. The girl, it appears, was unhappily married and resolved to leave home and work for her living. She came secretly to Joliet and would have kept her identity hidden but for the publicity given her case in the Chicago papers.

Urbana Boy Killed by a Cow.
Urbana, Ill.—Ethan Green, the 11-year-old son of F. M. Green, an attorney of Urbana, was dragged by a cow and killed. He was leading the animal from pasture, and tied the rope around his body. The cow started to run and he was thrown beneath her hoofs and his head was crushed.

Rev. M. W. Everhart, of Carlinville, Ill., is authority for the following statement. Such authority none will doubt. He says: "I was the victim of an annoying and painful kidney trouble for more than twelve years. My ministerial duties were often performed in suffering. On the Inside.
"I suppose that in this land," remarked the missionary, "a person of my calling cannot make his presence felt unless he gets on the right side of the king." "Not necessarily the right side," corrected the prime minister of Mbango. "Your predecessor made his presence felt after he had got on the inside of his majesty."—Philadelphia Record.

Around the World in a Day.
This globe of ours is a pretty good sized sphere, but we are told the Deering Harvester Company of Chicago can produce in a single day enough Binder Twine to encircle it, with 3,500 miles to spare—30,000 miles of twine is a fair day's output! A reliable publication recently proved by correspondence with dealers in all parts of America that 36 per cent of the twine used in 1898 was Deering Twine.

Kipling's Journalism.
E. Kay Robinson, editor of the Allahabad Pioneer, India, has an article in the current issue of Literature that gives some most interesting reminiscences of Kipling's journalistic life in India. Of particular interest was Kipling's method of making news when hard pressed for copy. "One night in the office," says Mr. Robinson, "a slight tremor of an earthquake was noticed. To verify the matter we looked at a pendulum hook on a door; yes, it was swinging, so in went a paragraph in the paper, among the very latest news, announcing a 'slight earthquake' at Lahore. Not another soul in Lahore or in any part of the Punjab or India felt that earthquake, and the government observatory knew nothing of it. It was our own private and special earthquake, and we treasure its memory. After an English earthquake he wrote to me: "This here English journalism isn't what it's cracked up to be. They can't have an earthquake in England without taking up two cols. of the Times to describe the effects and to verify the direction and the nature of the shock. This does not give scope for invention. Now, I remember the time when you and I could just make an earthquake, same as the Almighty, slip it into the 'local' at 3 a. m. of a Sunday morning, and go to bed with the consciousness we'd done our duty by the proprietors. Wonder what they'd say on the Globe to so strictly local an earthquake as ours?"

Always Doing for God.
When men do anything for God, the very least thing, they never know where it will end, nor what amount of work it will do for Him. Love's secret, therefore, is to be always doing things for God, and not to mind because they are very little ones.—F. W. Faber.

HOME duties to many women seem more important than health. No matter how ill they feel, they drag themselves through the daily tasks and pile up trouble. This is heroic but a penalty has to be paid. A woman in New Matamoros, Ohio, Mrs. ISABELL BRADFIELD, tells in the following letter how she fought with disease of the feminine organs until finally forced to take to her bed. She says: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to write to you to tell you that I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think there is no medicine in the world like it. I suffered for nine years, and sometimes for twelve weeks at a time I could not stand on my feet. I had female troubles of all kinds; backache, and headache all the time. Seven different doctors treated me. Some said I would have to go to the hospital and have an operation performed. But oh! how thankful I am that I did not, that I tried your Vegetable Compound instead. I cannot say too much in its praise, nor thank you enough for what it has done for me. I want you to publish this in all the papers for the good of other sufferers." The wives and mothers of America are given to overwork. Let them be wise in time and at the first indication of female trouble write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice. This advice is promptly given without charge. The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled; for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, advising and helping by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year.

Absolute Proof
Your name and address on a postal card will bring you absolute proof that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will cure you if you are afflicted with any disease of the blood or nerves. Mention the disorder, with which you are suffering and we will send evidence that will convince and satisfy you that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will cure you. These pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, partial paralysis and all forms of weakness either in men or women. To a Lawrence Journal reporter Mr. G. H. Snyder, a well known citizen of Lawrence, Kan., related a wonderful story. He said: "I am now seventy years of age. About three years ago I experienced a coldness or numbness in the feet, then creeping up my legs, until it reached my body. I grew thin, appetite poor and did not relish my food. I became unable to move about. Consulted several distinguished physicians, one telling me I had locomotor ataxia, another, creeping paralysis. I took their medicines but continued to grow worse. A friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Before I had finished my first box I found that they were benefiting me. I used twelve boxes and was perfectly cured. Although over six months since I used my last pill there has been no return of the disease. My appetite is good and general health better than for many years." Look for the full name on the package. The Barrington team met their first defeat (it was their first game) at the hands of the North Western's, of Chicago, at Church's ball park Saturday afternoon by a score of 6 to 1. Only 5 innings were played and the game ended in a general disagreement, it is said, except that Barrington was defeated. Our boys have plenty of good material, but are only in need of practice. They were somewhat crippled in Saturday's game by the absence of two or three of their best men which probably accounts for their failure to win the game. We trust that we will be able to record a victory for Barrington next time.

Unclaimed Letters.

Broemmelkamp-Vermilya.

Mrs. Louisa Broemmelkamp and Mr. Charles Vermilya were united in marriage Tuesday evening by Rev. T. E. Ream, pastor of the M. E. church.

The contracting parties made an effort to keep the marriage secret, but in this respect it was a failure.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bride on Cemetery Ave. Everything passed off as merrily as possible and the congratulations were cheerfully bestowed and taken. A wedding supper was then served, to which all did justice. After the inner man was replenished, Rev. Ream discovered that the license was issued in Lake county, while the ceremony had been performed in Cook county. He was of the opinion that the only remedy would be to perform the ceremony again in Lake county, so at about 11 o'clock the wedding party crossed the county line, which was only a short distance from the bride's home, and the ceremony was performed the second time under the spreading branches of an old oak tree. The bride and groom are well known in Barrington, both residing here a number of years and highly honored and respected by all. THE REVIEW joins with their many friends in wishing for them a happy journey through life.

The celebrated lakes of Killarney are for sale. The price asked is about $150,000. This body of water rivals Lake Como in romantic associations and is very dear to the memory of Irishmen. Everybody who remembers the Colleen Bawn will also remember the light on the Muckross head. The Muckross estate is now in the market. It would be too bad if some syndicate from London should purchase it and put up a factory there, and yet that might be a good thing for the colleens who are left about Killarney.

A doctor in Montreal, called upon to operate upon a boy with an injured eye, triumphantly made the mistake of removing the wrong eye. Apropos of this, a doctor of European standing has declared that operations for appendicitis have all been mistakes, in which the patient, if he did not die, suffered unnecessarily in the attempt to remove a disease that did not exist.
