Owing to the threatening weather Tuesday evening the tenth annual recital given by Prof. J. I. Sears and class in the Methodist church was not largely attended. The concert was up to its usual high standard, however, and those present greatly enjoyed the presentations. The playing by the little folks was especially pleasing, as it was so unusual to listen to music rendered by so small pupils. The concert was the closing of the year's work and Prof. Sears can feel proud of the proof of the success of his efforts.

High School Alumni.

The Palatine High School Alumni held its tenth annual reception and banquet last Friday night. Over one hundred of the alumni and friends gathered at Battermann's hall where they formed in line and marched to the town hall where an ample repast was served. The hall was very beautifully decorated in the '99 colors—pink and green—and the tables were tastily decorated with the same colors, roses and ferns predominating. Miss Lizzie Wilson, president of the alumni, made the opening address in a pleasant manner. James McCabe acted as toastmaster, and throughout the program he was listened to with marked attention. His introductions were par excellence. John Hipwell gave toast, "Ten Years Out," which was heartily enjoyed by all. His toast abounded in such sayings as, "Make hay while the sun shines." This is not intended to imply literally, but means more particularly to hustle for wealth both day and night. While it is well to lay in a supply of hay it is also wise to give some attention to our flower gardens, for in time we may find solace and pleasure after the sun goes down.

"If the Race Was to be Run Again" was well presented by E. J. Beutler. Although a short address it was full of wit. In telling of past time he spoke of how the pupils now march out to the melody of an organ, whereas in the past the exit was made to the hasty tune of "First Baths for Scrub."

Miss Lillian Filbert gave an interesting toast on "Aspirations of Youth." "The great event in every young person's life is the awakening when thrust upon his own resources."

Ray Fox told of "The Real Pomp and Circumstances of War" by giving a detailed, but interesting account of the maneuvers of the 1st Illinois Regiment from the time of its leaving Chicago to its return in the Cuban campaign, he being a member of that regiment, and the only soldier member of the alumni.

"Our Alma Mater" was presented by August Holste, graduate of Chicago University, who gave a stirring address.

Miss Alma Strickfaden, of the class of '99, closed with the toast, "Our Latest Acquisition '99," and she proved a splendid representative of the class. Her speech was short, but very appropriate and interesting.

After the toasts a business meeting of the alumni was held and the following new officers were elected:

President—Bert L. Smith.
Vice-president—Hutchins Hart.
Secretary—Ralph Beutler.
Treasurer—Robert Mosser.
A dance was held in Battermann's hall and a large number were in attendance and the usual good time was enjoyed by all.

Wedding Bells.

Engelking-Glady.

J. H. Otto Engelking and Miss Margaret E. Glady were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Glady, at Galt, Ontario, Canada, on Wednesday, June 21, 1899. They will be at home at 2761 N. Hermitage avenue, Ravenswood, after August 15. Otto is strictly a Palatine boy, having been born and raised here. He has held a position with the Chicago & North-Western railroad for several years and was village clerk for two years. His many friends join THE REVIEW in extending to him wishes for a long, prosperous journey.

Smyser-Schultz.

William L. Smyser and Miss Matilda C. Schultz were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Schultz, in Palatine, Wednesday afternoon, June 28, 1899, at 2 o'clock, Rev. F. B. Hardin, pastor of the Methodist church, performing the ceremony. The bride is one of Palatine's well known young ladies who is possessed with many good qualities, and admired by all acquaintances. She is a young lady of many talents, being a graduate of the Palatine High school of the class of '94. She took up teaching as her profession and has been very successful in her chosen vocation, her latest situation being in the public school at Arlington Heights. The groom is principal of the Palatine High school, which position he has held for the past seven years. He is a young man of sterling qualities, being an active member in the Methodist church. He is well known in this county for his educational abilities and his governing capabilities. He is popular with all and numbers the patrons of the school among his staunchest friends.

The wedding ceremony was followed by an elaborate wedding feast to which the guests did ample justice.

The happy couple left for Chicago on the 3:19 train whence they proceeded to Niagara Falls. From the falls they go to Albany, down the Hudson river to New York, and will visit Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and other eastern cities, after which they will spend a few weeks with the groom's mother in Pennsylvania. Returning to Palatine about the middle of August, they will go to housekeeping in W. E. Daniels' house. All join in wishing the happy couple "bon voyage."

Stetzler-Bicknase.

Henry J. Stetzler, of Chicago, and Miss Martha Bicknase, of Palatine, were united in marriage at St. Paul's church by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister, last Wednesday afternoon, June 28, 1899. A large number of friends of the bride were present to witness the ceremony. The church was tastily decorated for the occasion. After the impressive ceremony the happy couple and the relatives repaired to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. K. Bicknase, where the wedding supper was served. The young couple left on the fast 9 o'clock train for Chicago where they will reside.

The bride is well known in this place, having been born and raised here. She is a young lady of a pleasing disposition and of a social nature.

The groom is a prosperous business man in Chicago, being proprietor of the Ashland Tea and Coffee house on the north side.

THE REVIEW joins many friends in wishing them a long and happy married life.

WILL ENLIST VOLUNTEERS.

Policy Is Definitely Decided On at Washington.

OTIS MUST HAVE MORE MEN.

The Regular Army Is Up to Its Full Authorized Strength, and the New Regiments Will Be Gathered Together Under a Special Act of Congress.

It has been definitely decided to begin the enlistments for the volunteer service under the act of the last congress. As the regular army is up to its full authorized strength, the additional soldiers needed must be obtained under that section of congress authorizing the enlistment of volunteers.

Recruiting officers have been instructed to prepare to enlist volunteers. The present indications are that about 10,000 men will be wanted.

Gen. Corbin said the enlistments would be for three years, although the law for the creation of the provisional army of 35,000 in excess of the regular army of 65,000 provides only for such a force until 1901. AN EPISODE OF THE FOURTH.

Oh, yes, we had a glorious time, of course. We always do. We didn't begin firing till 7 o'clock, partly because it wakes people up, and partly because it is so silly to use up all your crackers before breakfast, as some boys do, and have none for the rest of the day, and have everyone to think you a nuisance beside.

We had a good lot of crackers, and my horn was almost the biggest size there is, though papa did say it was a pity I didn't get a fog-horn. I am not sure whether he was in earnest, however; he isn't always.

We had no accidents; that is, nothing to speak of. Polly burned two or three of her fingers a little, but we made that all right with soda and a rag, and she never cried a bit; but there was an episode, and it happened to me. This was the way it happened. I wanted both my hands to use, and I had a piece of punk in one of them, and there was no place to lay it down, and everybody else's hands were full, too, so I—well, I just put it into my pocket for a minute. It was lighted, but I didn't think it would do any harm just for a minute. I forgot that I had a whole bunch of firecrackers in that same pocket.

Suddenly I heard some one cry out, "Tom is afire!" and then there came a puff of smoke in my face, and then—pop! snap! bang! crack! fizz! whizz! crackety-bang! the crackers began to go off in my pocket!

Everybody was yelling, and just for a minute I didn't know what to do. I ran, but the crackers ran with me, and the faster I went, the harder they popped. Then all at once I saw what to do, and I pulled off my jacket and threw it on the grass. Luckily it was my jacket, and not my trouser-pocket!

Billy took it up and shook out the crackers, and then he turned out the pocket, but there wasn't much left to turn. It was just a black rag, and it dropped into little pieces. Then there was a big piece that looked as if it had once been white, and that, they said, was my handkerchief, but I should never have known it.

Well, of course they all laughed at me a good deal, but I didn't mind much, for it really was very funny, I suppose; but my advice to other boys is: Don't carry crackers in your pocket, and if you do, don't put a lighted slow-match in with them!

LOUIE'S FOURTH WITH "OLD ARIZONA."

It was nearly noon when "old Arizona," coming down from his camp

"AN' SO YOU AIN'T AT THE PICNIC?"

for a bucket of milk, found a lonesome little boy standing guard on the doorstep while mamma was resting within.

"An' so you ain't at the picnic?" he said. How's that? Your ma wasn't feelin' right good, an' you stayed at home with her so's your pa could take everybody else to the picnic! Well, that's rough! I didn't git to go myself, but sure's I'm a old gold-miner from Arizona I'm a-thinkin' right now old Arizona, as he put Louis on his of celebratin' this Fourth if I can run across anybody that'll jine in an' help!"

"Oh, if mamma was well I—" Louis began, and just then mamma, hearing them talking, opened the door; and she said she felt ever so much better, and he must go and help Mr. Arizona celebrate. And besides the bucket of milk, she filled one also with cakes and pies.

"Well, I reckon this beats all the ridey-go-rounds at the picnic!" said old Arizona, as he put Louie on his burro tied at the garden gate.

And Louie thought so, too, as the burro carried him, easy as a cradle, all the way to old Arizona's camp, where the big spruce stood up like a tent over the pack-saddles and picks and pans and blankets.

"Now, this is a ginuwine picnic," said old Arizona, as he set out a whole camp-kettle of cold venison. "Pitch right in."

And Louie politely "pitched in" to the venison, and old Arizona as politely "pitched in" to the milk and pies.

Then for the first time Louie thought of it, and jumped right up with, "Oh, say, Mr. Arizona, how are we going to celebrate 'thout any firecrackers?" "Ha! ha! haw!" laughed old Arizona. "As if I ain't got the biggest an' the best you ever see! Ginuwine cannot ones. Why, one of my giant crackers'll go off louder than all the crackers at the picnic put together! Looky here!"

He reached to a root behind him, and showed Louie a bundle of the queerest looking "crackers."

He laid one on a boulder and lit a fuse; and didn't Louie jump at the noise when it cracked that boulder!

"Now we'll have some water-works," said old Arizona. And he dropped one with a lighted fuse in the creek by the spruce, and it went off with a splutter that sent the water to the spruce's top.

"And now we must have a real big cannon one," he said; and he put three whole crackers in a hole in a dead-cottonwood. And in a minute that tough old tree flew everywhere in splinters, while a roar louder than thunder went rolling through the hills.

"I reckon that beats anything at the picnic," said old Arizona.

And Louie said that it beat the picnic all to pieces.—J. S. Oakling.

Hirsute Statistics.
Blonde hair is finer than that of any other color. By actual count it has been ascertained that 400 hairs to the square inch grow upon the head of a blonde beauty. The brown comes next with 350, then comes the black with 325, and the red with 250 or 260. After counting the hairs growing on an inch square it has been estimated that on the head of a blonde there will be about 149,000 hairs, while a brown suit of tresses will have 109,000, a black 102,000, and a red 90,000.

A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF HAPPENINGS FOR SEVEN DAYS.

Chief Kipley on Gambling—Chicago Superintendent of Police Testifies Before the Baxter Investigating Committee—Probable End of Inquiry.

Chief of Police Kipley was a non-committal witness before the Baxter committee at its closing session in Chicago Friday morning. The only other witness was examined concerning one of the alleged fraudulent damage suits settled by former City Attorney Miles Devine, and at the close of the testimony the committee adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman. It is understood this will be at least two or three weeks in the future.

Chief Kipley was examined upon all of the points in which the police force had been involved by preceding testimony. He said he was willing to accept the statements of his officers detailed upon gambling when they said there was none in the city. He admitted that poker clubs had been run, but he had ordered them closed and did not know if they are running now. He admitted that policy shops were running and said the police gave little attention to them.

Strike at Stockyards.

Chicago telegram: What threatens to become a general strike at the stockyards was begun yesterday, when 400 butchers and platform men left their work, demanding an increase of 25 cents a day in wages. Today sixty more men joined the strikers, and although the managers of the different firms said to be affected by the trouble say matters have been settled satisfactorily the leaders of the strikers say the trouble has but begun and will spread. In a few weeks it is thought it will involve nearly all the houses at the yards.

Are the Gates Ajar?

A somewhat startling announcement has been made in several quarters that at last a scientific proof of the continuance of life and human relationship after death is about to be given to the world. The Society for Psychical Research has been for a long time carefully examining a woman who exhibits the most extraordinary phenomena in the furnishing of messages from personages who are known to have departed from this life and of whom it was impossible for her to have had any acquaintance. If one is to believe the statements already made public, the society has exhausted every means in its power in the endeavor to detect the fraudulency of the manifestations and to explain them on some other than a super-mundane hypothesis. They have come to the conclusion that either the woman has an infinite mind or that her communications are what they purport to be, furnished by persons who have left this terrestrial sphere. Before jumping to any conclusion with regard to this very interesting piece of news it will be well to remember that similar claims have very often been made before, and none of them has ever resulted in a scientific determination of anything. By far the greater portion of mankind believe instinctively in a life after death. They have not reasoned themselves into such a belief. It is imbedded in their natures, constituting what the metaphysicians call a "primal concept," and the intelligence of the world manages its affairs with due regard to that concept. But there has never been any scientific verification of it. Professor Hyslop of Columbia university now declares that the time has come when science will demonstrate by irrefragible proofs that either the individual intelligence and influence do not end with death or else all the evidence from which science draws its deductions must be accounted worthless. All this is very interesting, and the world awaits the professor's proofs with the keenest zest. He says that the materialism of our age demands this proof, and the only reason why it has not been forthcoming before is that science has not hitherto given due attention to the psychologic phenomena with which our age is ripe.

An American heiress who has tried living in an old English castle writes that it is not what it is cracked up to be. She says that she has lived in a New England farmhouse not quite as old as the castle, but which was far superior in comfort, convenience, safety and beauty. Even the much vaunted ghosts are little more than household nuisances and not half as expert or as interesting as the American rapping spook. The castle is generally inaccessible on principle, and its rooms are built mainly to defy bombardment. To get anything into the place requires relays of jackasses and much mountain climbing. Water is always at the foot of the hill, and so is the fuel. The lower part of the house is a dungeon, always damp, although the moat has been filled up for over a hundred years, and the upper part is a stone turret that cannot be warmed. This modern bit of experience is interesting as showing what the ladies of the middle ages had to put up with. Our American lady says, "No wonder they were always making tapestry to cover up their stone walls."

The new Spanish minister, the Duke of Arcos, is a most genial and dignified Mark Tapley. His amiability, benignity, large information and polished manners have made him a great favorite in Washington, but even these distinguished characteristics are thrown in the shade by his delightful belief in the future of Spain. He sees her rising, like the phoenix, from her ashes, all her misfortunes being blessings in disguise. She has shaken herself clear of useless dependencies and can now concentrate all her energies on the renewing of her youth. No wonder the duke is popular. He would shine in a desert amid hyenas and sandstorms, for if he did not charm both he would rise above them on the wings of an infinite complacency.

There are 5,400 policemen in New York and they are getting so fat that it has alarmed their chief, who himself weighs 230 pounds. He has issued an order directing them to take more exercise, and it is suggested by the police commissioners that the city ought to appropriate money for a gymnasium to keep down the superfluous fat. This presents to the humorists and taxpayers as well some curious reflections. It will cost the city about $100 a head to reduce its policemen to athletic dimensions.

The London theaters, in their competition with the music halls, have been induced to ask the authorities to allow their audiences to smoke and drink so as to lessen the advantages which the music halls have over them. No other recent theatrical move so clearly shows how little distinction there is between the theater and the music hall, and that little is provided by law.

Mark Twain never put himself to such good practical use as in riveting the chains of international friendship in England. It is true he did it mainly with humor, but that was all he had to do it with, and others who did not have that did not do it half so well.

Concise of the Czar's Good Intentions.

It is now generally acknowledged that the czar's peace conference, as it is constantly and inappropriately called, has failed to accomplish any of the good results that the Russian emperor looked for and the world, tried to make itself believe it expected. The delegates will go home without having done anything that was worth recording, and they took good care that it should not be recorded, by sitting in secret council, where the public could not laugh at them. While the abolishment of war was not within the possibilities of the time, even to the most sanguine Quaker, it was nevertheless hoped that an entering wedge would be inserted into the preposterous and growing militarism of Europe. It was fondly believed in certain quarters, say in America, that some of the crowned heads of Europe would show that they were a little ashamed of the prodigious waste of human material involved in their establishments. It was thought likely that some modifications would be made in regard to private property in time of war and that the way might be paved for an ultimate arbitration council. Not one of these things now has the ghost of a chance of realization. The United States made every reasonable effort in behalf of arbitration, but it has been known in every imperial clique in Europe and Asia from the start that Germany never for a moment intended to favor that or any other of the propositions which disturbed the old warlike status of the nations. The German emperor in this as in other matters has shown how medieval is his imperial purpose. The conditions of the convention were such that the opinions and arguments were not furnished to the public, and it is well perhaps that they were not, for it is plain enough that, with the exception of the United States commissioners, the members had no opinions that such a convocation could call into action, and they had to telegraph to their masters at the end of each session for fresh instructions. Tolstoi was not far wrong when he said that disarmament would never come to Europe through its sovereigns, but only through its people.

The penal servitude bill, understood to be the work of the German emperor, has been sent to the reichstag. This bill is aimed at strike agitators who interfere violently with workmen who are willing to work irrespective of the labor organizations. It is a very important move on the part of the government, because it is a bold defiance of the Socialistic agitators. The present measure defines various degrees of criminal interference with a man's right to accept work and punishes the offense with terms of imprisonment ranging from one day to five years. Penal servitude is to be inflicted for three or five years in cases where the agitator's action endangers the security of the empire or imperils human life or property. It is pointed out by the Socialistic press that this bill was framed under the influence of Baron Stumm, who is known as the iron king of Germany and its chief monopolist. If this is true, the issue between capital and labor appears to have been made in Germany. It may be said, however, that the passage of the bill would do more for the Socialistic cause than its defeat, for with such an instrument in its hands the government would hardly fail to make it extremely unpopular.

New York can now devote the remainder of the silly season to Mlle.

Lotty, a French figurante, picked out by an enterprising roof garden manager and advertised at a great rate by all the eastern kodaks and poster makers. Some idea of the reasonable piquancy in store for the metropolis is furnished by the manager's announcement that "she will disrobe in full view of the audience, and clad only in a garment of light, will present a bewitching picture of beauty unadorned." It is a historical fact that ten years ago Mlle. Lotty would have been locked up in a station house if she had undertaken to bewitch anybody publicly with her garments of light outside of the Tenderloin district.

Bernhardt's attempts to justify her invasion of Shakespeare's male roles are laughed at in England, and the brutal British assertion is made that she did not want to convince Englishmen that a French woman could understand Shakespeare but that a popular actress was not as lean as represented. Punch intimates very plainly that her profound Hamlet is knocked.

Credit must be given to Oklahoma for the persistency and bravery with which it has pursued the ruffians who took the law into their hands and lynched the two Seminole Indians. Considering how cheap Indian lives are held in the territory, this example of determined justice cannot be too highly commended.

The alacrity with which the governing class of New York proposes to buy the lakes of Killarney and make a park of the property for American politicians is in curious contrast to their utter indifference to the project some time ago proposed to buy the Palisades and save them from destruction by turning them into a park.

Paint up your screens. J. D. Lamey & Co., have paint ready for use in small quantities as pint and half pint cans—just the right amount where but little paint is needed.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper. CARTER H. HARRISON." Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically. WASHINGTON HESSING." The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country. MARTIN J. RUSSELL." Editor-in-Chief Chicago Chronicle.

The recital given by Prof. J. I. Sears and pupils last Saturday evening was fine, a rare treat for our citizens, and all who failed to attend missed one of the finest musicals ever given in our village. Saturday night being a busy night for our business men, and a free show in town, cut the attendance somewhat, but the main part of the church was well filled and if Prof. Sears will give our village a recognition next year we can safely say the entire church will be filled to overflowing.

In a game of base ball between the Martinville team and the Wauconda Colts last Sunday the latter won by a score of 7 to 1. They met at Bangs' pasture, being the second game of the season. CHAPTER XXV.—(Continued.)

Although Phillip had said little to Schriften since the separation from Amine, it was very evident to him and to Krantz that all the pilot's former bitter feelings had returned. His chuckle, his sarcasms, his "He! he!" were incessant; and his eye was now as maliciously directed to Phillip as it was when they first met. It was evident that Amine alone had for the time conquered his disposition; and that with her disappearance had vanished all the good-will of Schriften toward her husband. For this Phillip cared little; he had a much more serious weight on his heart—the loss of his dear Amine; and he felt reckless and indifferent concerning anything else.

The breeze now freshened, and they expected that in two hours they would run on the beach, but they were disappointed; the step of the mast gave way from the force of the wind, and the sail fell upon the raft. This occasioned great delay; and before they could repair the mischief the wind again subsided, and they were left about a mile from the beach. Tired and worn out with his feelings, Phillip at last fell asleep by the side of Krantz leaving Schriften at the helm. He slept soundly—he dreamed of Amine—he thought she was under a grove of coconuts, in a sweet sleep; that he stood by and watched her, and that she smiled in her sleep, and murmured "Phillip," when suddenly he was awakened by some unusual movement. Half dreaming still, he thought that Schriften, the pilot, had in his sleep been attempting to gain his relic, had passed the chain over his head, and was removing quietly from underneath his neck any portion of the chain, which, in his reclining posture, he lay upon. Startled at the idea, he threw up his hand to seize the arm of the wretch, and found that he had really seized hold of Schriften, who was kneeling by him, and in possession of the chain and relic. The struggle was short, the relic was recovered, and the pilot lay at the mercy of Phillip, who held him down with his knee on his chest. Phillip replaced the relic on his bosom, and, excited to madness, rose from the body of the now breathless Schriften, caught it in his arms, and hurled it into the sea.

"Man or devil! I care not which," exclaimed Phillip, breathless, "escape now, if you can!"

The struggle had already roused up Krantz and others, but not in time to prevent Phillip from wreaking his vengeance upon Schriften. In a few words he told Krantz what had passed, as for the men, they cared not; they laid their heads down again, and, satisfied that their money was safe, inquired no further.

Phillip watched to see if Schriften would rise up again, and try to regain the raft; but he did not make his appearance above water, and Phillip felt satisfied.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A few hours after he had thrown the pilot into the sea they gained the shore, so long looked at with anxiety and suspense. The spars of the raft, jerked by the running swell, undulated and rubbed against each other, as they rose and fell to the waves breaking on the beach. The breeze was fresh, but the surf was trifling, and the landing was without difficulty. Krantz supported Phillip to the beach, and led him to the shade; but after a minute he rose, and running down to the nearest point, looked anxiously for the position of the raft which held Amine, which was now far, far away. Krantz had followed, aware that, now the first paroxysms were past, there was no fear of Phillip's throwing away his life.

"Gone, gone forever," exclaimed Phillip, pressing his hands to the balls of his eyes.

"Not so, Phillip, the same Providence which has preserved us will certainly assist her. It is impossible that she can perish among so many islands, many of which are inhabited; and a woman will be certain of kind treatment."

"If I could only think so," replied Phillip.

He and Krantz collected the carpenter's tools, and best arms, and all the ammunition, as the possession of the latter would give them an advantage in case of necessity; they then dragged on shore the sail and some small camp of coconuts trees, about a hundred yards from the beach.

Half an hour they had erected an humble tent, and put into it what they had brought with them, with the exception of the major portion of the ammunition, which, as soon as he was screened by the tent, Krantz buried in a heap of dry sand behind it.

The next day Phillip and Krantz had many serious consultations as to the means which should be taken for quitting the island, and going in search of Amine; for although Krantz thought the latter part of Phillip's proposal useless, he did not venture to say so. To quit this island was necessary; and provided they gained one of those which were inhabited it was all that they could expect. As for Amine, he considered that she was dead before this, either having been washed off the raft, or that her body was lying on it exposed to the decomposing heat of a torrid sun.

To cheer Phillip, he expressed himself otherwise; and whenever they talked about leaving the island, it was not to save their own lives, but invariably to search after Phillip's lost wife. The plan which they proposed and acted upon was to construct a light raft, the center to be composed of three water casks, sawed in half, in a row behind each other, firmly fixed by cross-pieces to two long spars on each side. This, under sail, would move quickly through the water, and be manageable so as to enable them to steer a course. The outside spars had been selected and hauled on shore, and the work was already in progress; but they were left alone in their work, for the seamen appeared to have no idea at present of quitting the island. Restored by food and repose, they were now not content with the money which they had—they were anxious for more. A portion of each party's wealth had been dug up, and they now gambled all day with pebbles, which they had collected on the beach, and with which they had invented a game. Another evil had crept among them; they had cut steps in the largest coconut trees and with the activity of seamen had mounted them, and by tapping the top of the trees, and fixing empty coconut shells underneath, had obtained the liquor which in its first fermentation is termed toddy, and is afterward distilled into arrack. But as toddy it is quite sufficient to intoxicate, and every day the scenes of violence and intoxication, accompanied with oaths and execrations, became more and more dreadful. The losers tore their hair, and rushed like madmen upon those who had gained their dollars; but Krantz had fortunately thrown their weapons into the sea, and those he had saved, as well as the ammunition, he had secreted.

Blows and bloodshed, therefore, continual, but loss of life there was none, as the contending parties were separated by the others, who were anxious that the play should not be interrupted. Such had been the state of affairs for now nearly a fortnight, while the work of the raft had slowly proceeded. Some of the men had lost their all, and had, by the general consent of those who had won their wealth, been banished to a certain distance that they might not pilfer from them. These, walked gloomily round the island or on the beach, seeking some instrument by which they might avenge themselves and obtain repossession of their money. Krantz and Phillip had proposed to these men to they had sullenly refused.

The ax was now never parted with by Krantz. He cut down what coconut trees they required for subjoin them, and leave the island; but assistance, and prevented the men from notching more trees to procure the means of inebriation. On the sixteenth day all the money had passed into the hands of three men, who had been more fortunate than the rest. The losers were now by far the more numerous party, and the consequence was that the next morning these three men were found lying strangled on the beach; the money had been redivided, and the gambling had recommenced with more vigor than ever.

"How can this end?" exclaimed Phillip to Krantz, as he looked upon the blackened countenances of the murdered men.

"In the death of all," replied Krantz. "We cannot prevent it. It is a judgment."

The raft was now ready; the sand had been dug from beneath it, so as to allow the water to flow in and float it, and it was now made fast to a stake, and riding on the peaceful waters. A large store of coconuts, old and young, had been procured and put on board of her, and it was the intention of Phillip and Krantz to have quitted the island the next day.

Unfortunately, one of the men, when bathing, had perceived the arms lying in the shallow water. He had dived down and procured a cutlass; others had followed his example, and all had armed themselves. This induced Phillip and Krantz to sleep on board the raft and keep watch; and that night, as the play was going on, a heavy loss on one side ended in a general fray. The combat was furious, for all were more or less excited by intoxication. The result was melancholy, for only three were left alive. Phillip, with Krantz, watched the issue; every man who fell wounded was put to the sword, and the three left, who had been fighting on the same side, rested panting on their weapons. After a pause two of them communicated with each other, and the result was an attack upon the third man, who fell dead beneath their blows.

"Merciful Father! are these Thy creatures?" exclaimed Phillip.

"No," replied Krantz, "they worshipped the devil as Mammon. Do you imagine that those two, who could now divide more wealth than they could spend if they return to their country, will consent to a division? Never—they must have all—yes, all!"

Krantz had hardly expressed his opinion, when one of the men, taking advantage of the other turning round a moment from him, passed his sword through his back. The man fell with a groan, and the sword was again passed through his body.

"Said I not so? But the treacherous villain shall not reap his reward, continued Krantz, leveling the musket which he held in his hand, and shooting him dead.

The following morning they hoisted their sail and quitted the island. Need it be said in what direction they steered? As may be well imagined, in that quarter where they had last seen the raft with the isolated Amine.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The raft was found to answer well, and although her progress through the water was not very rapid, she obeyed the helm and was under command. Both Phillip and Krantz were very careful in taking such marks and observations of the island as should enable them, if necessary, to find it again. With the current to assist them they now proceeded rapidly to the southward, in order that they might examine a large island which lay in that direction. Their object, after seeking for Amine, was to find out the direction of Ternate, the king of which they knew to be a variance with the Portuguese, who had a fort and factory at Tidroe, not very far distant from it; and from thence to obtain a passage in one of the Chinese junks, which, on their way to Bantam, called at that island.

Toward evening they had neared the large island, and they soon ran down it close to the beach. Phillip's eyes wandered in every direction to ascertain the presence of Amine's raft, but he could perceive nothing of the kind, nor did he see any inhabitants.

That they might not pass the object of their search during the night, they ran their raft ashore, in a small cove where the waters were quite smooth, and remained there until the next morning, when they again made sail and prosecuted their voyage.

They sailed all day and when night came put up their bark for safety in a cove they came across.

Before morning a strong breeze, right on shore, had sprung up, and the surf became so high as to endanger the raft; to continue their course was impossible; they could only haul up their raft, to prevent its being dashed to pieces by the force of the waves as the seas broke on the shore. Phillip's thoughts were, as usual, upon Amine; and as he watched the tossing waters, as the sunbeams lightened up their crests, he exclaimed, "Ocean, hast thou my Amine? If so, give up thy dead! What is that?" continued he, pointing to a speck on the horizon.

"The sail of a small craft of some description or another," replied Krantz; "and apparently coming down before the wind to shelter herself in the very nook we have selected."

"You are right; it is the sail of a vessel—one of those perouas which skim over these seas; how she rises on the swell! She is full of men apparently."

The peroua rapidly approached, and was soon close to the beach; the sail was lowered, and she was backed in through the surf.

"Resistance is useless should they prove enemies," observed Phillip. "We shall soon know our fate."

The people in the peroua took no notice of them until the craft had been hauled up and secured; three of them then advanced toward Phillip and Krantz, with spears in their hands, but evidently with no hostile intentions. One addressed them in Portuguese, asking them who they were.

False Teeth of Paper.

Dentists in Germany are using false teeth made of paper, instead of porcelain or mineral composition. These paper teeth are said to be very satisfactory, as they do not break or chip, are not sensitive to heat or cold or to the action of the moisture of the mouth, and are very cheap.

GREATER EXPOSITION

Almost World-Wide in Scope and Magnificent in Its Display.

GREAT AND POPULAR ENTERPRISE

Bringing Together a Comprehensive Exhibit of Our National Resources, Industries, Manufactures and Products—Four Months of Sight-Seeing, Commencing July 1, 1899.

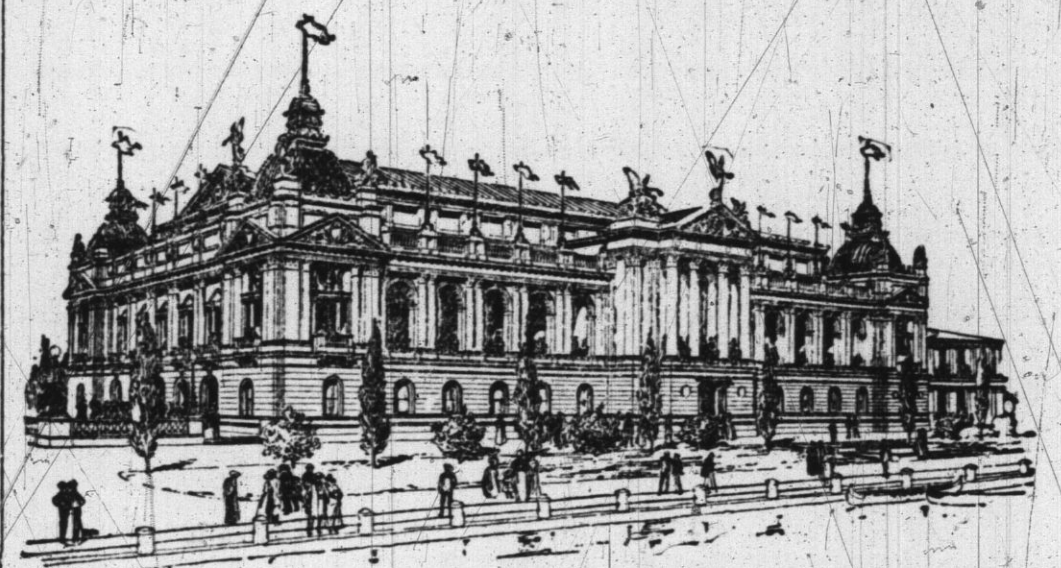

Perhaps there are comparatively few people who appreciate the vast scope of the First Greater America Colonial Exposition which opens its gates at Omaha on July 1st. The United States has become, within the past year, a mighty empire whose possessions lie on either side of the globe, and it is a stupendous undertaking to bring together in one grand comprehensive exhibit the national resources, industries, manufactures and products, not only of the North American continent, but of several of the principal islands of the seas. The peoples of these far away sea-girt lands are of different

The government exhibit will surpass that of last year. The Libby Prison War Museum, an immense collection of historical relics, will be augmented by trophies from the war in the Philippines and the campaigns in Cuba and Porto Rico. The various other exhibits in Agriculture, Mining, Electricity, Machinery, Manufactures and Art are superior to those of last year and in almost every department will be new and interesting features.

The grounds and buildings have been greatly improved, thousands of trees, plants, shrubs and flowers from tropic and sub-tropic lands being used in the decorations. In the Horticulture exhibit are palms, orange trees and scores of trees and plants from our island possessions, many of which are new to the people of the United States.

The Electrical illumination will far surpass anything of the kind heretofore attempted and all that is newest and most novel in electric effects will be shown. The Grand Court will be a fairy city when the thousands of lights are displayed and many of the effects are startling in their novelty and weird beauty.

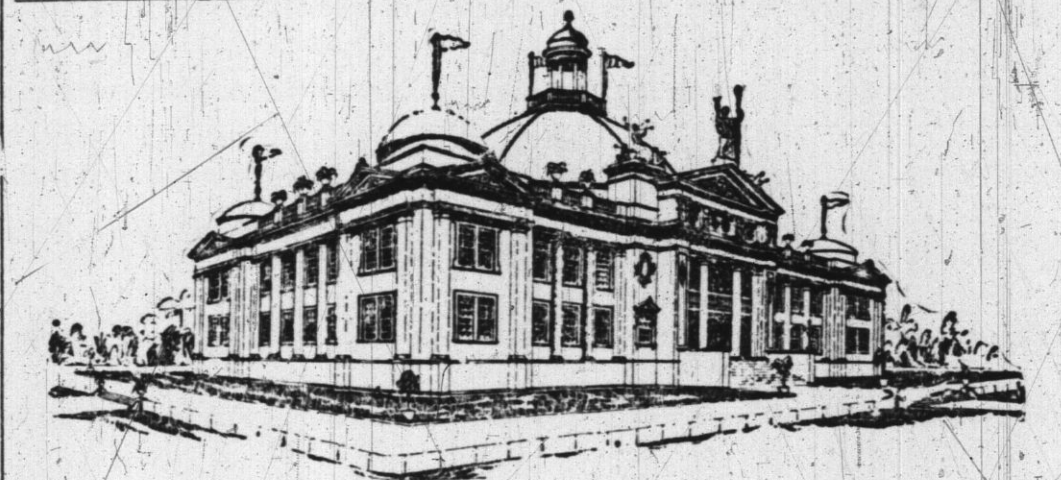

Several features of the coming Exposition have received more than usual attention and among these might be mentioned the Fine Art collection which will be the grandest exhibit in this line since the World's Fair; the Indian Congress, in which the leading chiefs and warriors of the many tribes will participate; the Pain Fire Works company, which employs over three hundred people in its realistic reproductions of Dewey's famous victory at Manila, the Destruction of Cervera's Squadron at Santiago, the Sinking of the Merrimac and the Storming of San Juan Hill. The famous British Grenadier Band, with Dan Godfrey as leader, will fill a five weeks engagement beginning on July 1st, and as this is timely aid extended by the government and its representatives in the various islands. A grand opportunity is offered to the American people to become better informed as to the real character, resources, and possibilities of the islands of the Philippines, Hawaii, Cuba and Porto Rico and the people who inhabit them.

The village life of the natives will be faithfully portrayed, their industries thoroughly exploited, even their daily occupations accurately reproduced.

one of the finest musical organizations in the world, its concerts will be a rare treat for those who attend.

IMPORTANT LAW POINT.

Has Just Been Established for California Fig Syrup Co.

An important decision has just been rendered in San Francisco in the United States Circuit Court, in the case of the "California Fig Syrup Company vs. Clinton E. Worden & Co., et al." The principal defendant is a large non-secret manufacturing concern. A permanent injunction has been granted enjoining the defendants from using the name—Syrup of Figs, or Fig Syrup—and ordering them to pay the costs and account for damages. The decision is of the greatest value, not only to manufacturers of proprietary articles, but to the public generally, as it affirms that the valuable reputation acquired by an article of merit, will be protected by the Courts, and that the party who builds the reputation by extensive and legitimate advertising, is entitled to the full fruits of his enterprise. This confirms the title of the California Fig Syrup Co. to this genuine and most valuable remedy, "Syrup of Figs."

PEOPLE OF TITLE.

The king of Belgium has presented a Flemish painting and a superb piece of Brussels lace to an English bazaar. The prince of Wales was so pleased with his experience of motor cars during his recent visit to the Riviera that he has ordered one to be sent to him at Sandringham from a Parisian firm.

Prince Nicholas, the third son of Prince George of Greece, spends his leisure in writing poems and pieces for the stage. In a recent dramatic competition a piece composed by the prince was considered to be one of the best submitted to the judges. One of Prince Nicholas' plays has been performed by a theatrical company at Athens, but the author hid his identity under an assumed name. Prince Nicholas has artistic as well as literary talent, and at the present time Athenians are admiring his picture at the exhibition of fine arts.

GREAT TAMMANY LEADER.

(The Catarth of Summer.)

New York, Oct. 11, 1898. Pe-ru-na Drug M'g Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—Pe-ru-na is good for catarth. I have tried it and know it. It relieved me immensely on my trip to Congressman Amos J. Cummings. Cuba, and I always have a bottle in reserve. Since my return I have not suffered from catarth, but if I do I shall use Pe-ru-na again. Meantime you might send me another bottle.

Yours, Amos J. Cummings, M. C. Summer catarth assumes various forms. It produces dyspepsia and bowel complaint. It causes biliousness and diseases of the liver. It deranges the kidneys and bladder. Summer catarth may derange the whole nervous system, when it is known to the medical profession as systemic catarth. Pe-ru-na is a specific for all these forms of catarth. Pe-ru-na never disappoints. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on summer catarth.

"DEAR FRIEND—A year ago I was a great sufferer from female weakness. My head ached all the time and I would get so dizzy and have that all gone feeling in the stomach and was so nervous and restless that I did not know what to do with myself.

"My food did me no good and I had a bad case of whites. I wrote to you and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as directed, I can truly say that I feel like a new woman and cannot tell you how grateful I am to you.

FIFTY YEARS OLD

Why let your neighbors know it? And why give them a chance to guess you are even five or ten years more? Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing tells of age so quickly as gray hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

is a youth-renewer. It hides the age under a luxuriant growth of hair the color of youth. It never fails to restore color to gray hair. It will stop the hair from coming out also. It feeds the hair bulbs. Thin hair becomes thick hair, and short hair becomes long hair. It cleanses the scalp; removes all dandruff, and prevents its formation. We have a book on the Hair which we will gladly send you.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Vigor, write the doctor about it. Probably there is some difficulty with your general system which may be easily removed. Address, Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

Death of William H. Selleck. William H. Selleck, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Selleck, died at his home in Janesville, Wis., Wednesday afternoon, after an illness of several months. Mr. Selleck was born in that city October 22, 1873. He spent his boyhood days in Barrington attending the Barrington public schools. At an early age he accepted a position with the McCormick Harvesting Machine Co., Chicago, and was considered one of their most trustworthy men. His health began to fail him about five years ago and he was given the position of traveling salesman, hoping that he might regain his health in another climate. All efforts in this line proved futile, however, and about two years ago he resigned his position and has since remained at home with his parents at Janesville. Mr. Selleck was very popular in Barrington and his many friends deeply regret his early departure from this world and extend to the grief-stricken parents and sister their sincere sympathy. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence. Fourth of July. The people of Barrington will celebrate the Fourth of July in the good old fashioned way by taking their lunch baskets and spending the day with their friends and neighbors in Comstock's grove. The procession will form on the public square at 9 o'clock a. m. sharp, and proceed to the grove, headed by the Barrington Military band, where patriotic speeches will be made by Col. Prescott, of Indiana; Rev. T. E. Ream, Roy Peck and Frank Robertson. There will be singing by ladies' and gentlemen's quartettes, declamations and recitations. The afternoon will be given over to games and races. There will be prizes awarded to the successful winners in the men's, ladies', boys', girls' and children's running races. Tug-of-war, wheelbarrow races, egg races, climbing greased pole, and all kinds of sports and amusements. Refreshments will be served on the grounds. In the evening there will be the grandest display of fireworks ever given in Barrington, from the public square. Every one should turn out and bring their friends and spend a pleasant and sociable Fourth of July. Successful Meeting. The 26th annual meeting of the Barrington Camp Meeting association came to a close Monday afternoon. The meeting this year has proven to be the most successful one ever held by that association. The attendance throughout was larger than ever before and there were many conversions. Saturday was Missionary day and the attendance was very large at all the meetings on that day. Addresses were delivered by Bishop Dubs, Mesdames Matilda Heilman, Lizzie Heintz and Augusta Wiesse. Sunday morning Bishop Dubs delivered an elegant sermon, taking for his subject "The Resurrection." In the afternoon a rally of the members of the Keystone League Christian Endeavor, Rev. H. H. Thoren of Naperville and Rev. A. Lutz of Chicago, delivering the addresses. Immediately following Bishop Dubs delivered a powerful sermon to the old soldiers, which will be long remembered by all who heard him. Bishop Dubs conducted the closing services Monday. Unclaimed Letters. The following is a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Barrington June 30, 1899: Mrs. Sarah Rebmann, N. J. Kelly, Mike Linden, J. Arens, Wm. Lind, H. K. Brockway, P. M.

Sodt-Crouse Nuptials. Miss Clara D. Sodt and D. Howard Crouse were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Grove avenue, Saturday, June 24, at 10 o'clock a. m. Rev. A. Strickfaden, of the Salem Evangelical church, performed the ceremony. Only immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. The bride wore a light grey silk trimmed with chiffon and passametrie. After congratulations, a dainty luncheon was served. The tables were decorated with roses and carnations. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sodt. Her lady-like qualities and her frank, vivacious disposition has won friends on every hand, who wish her a world of joy. Mr. Crouse is a son of Dr. J. N. Crouse of Chicago. He is manager of the Dental Supply and Protective association and is connected with the Dental Digest, a monthly magazine published in the interests of the profession. Mr. and Mrs. Crouse left on the noon train for Chicago the same day and are now enjoying a lake trip, visiting at Macanac, Duluth and other summer resorts. On their return to Chicago they will immediately leave for an Eastern trip and will visit Niagara Falls and the principal cities of the East. They will be at home to their friends at 2231 Prairie avenue, Chicago, after October 1. Estray Notice. A stray horse was taken up at Barrington during the past week. Owner can get same at Charles Jahnke's livery barn by paying costs. The Conspiracy Failed. Once upon a time there lived in Leavenworth the late Len T. Smith, whom all old timers remember, and General Powell Clayton. Smith was in New York one day when he was approached by a chap who said he had on the string a rich friend from Cuba, who was anxious to start a big fare game and wanted him to deal for him. He proposed to Smith that he would take up the offer—Smith should tackle the game and he would co-operate with Smith, so that together they could rob the Cuban of $50,000. Smith sent up stairs for Clayton and told him what the gambler had proposed. All three started out to see the Cuban, and they found him surrounded by everything refreshing that money could buy. Smith and Clayton ate and drank and drove and went to the theater and had all sorts of fun at the Cuban's expense for three of four days, all the time having under consideration the proposed conspiracy. Finally, when they were through with their business in New York, they thanked the gamblers for their hospitality and suggested that they look for suckers elsewhere than from among frontiersmen from Kansas. It was estimated that the gamblers spent at least $1,000 entertaining their intended victims.—Kansas City Journal. The Unearthly Mummy. We saw only the outer gardens and the museum, the chief attraction of which is a magnificent marble sarcophagus decorated with bas-reliefs of Alexander the Great. The collection of statues, bronzes and sarcophagi is interesting and immensely valuable, and I would like to copy some of the descriptions from the guidebook, but space forbids. One Egyptian mummy case had a "Stranger, forbear" kind of inscription on it. The guide furnished me with a liberal translation. The king on the inside of the case, "swathed in spicery and fine linen," had caused this injunction to be placed on the lid of his sarcophagus: "Do not disturb these mortal remains, for there is naught within this casement except my poor body. There is neither gold nor precious jewelry to reward the covetous." The antiquarians who unearthed the sarcophagus did not respect this appeal. When they examined the mummy my wrapped inside of the box they found several pieces of gold clasped in the right hand, which proves that an oriental will lie even after death.—Egyptian Cor. Chicago Record. No Use For the Alligator. The colored prisoners in the penitentiary are acquainted with the habits of crocodiles and fully realize that they relish a pickaninny. Under these circumstances they are not anxious to make the acquaintance of a crocodile that inhabits the fountain of the prison. The other day one of them who had committed some offense was taken to the cellar to be punished. After he had been blindfolded one of the men called out to the other, "Keep that alligator back or he will bite this man." That caused the colored man to commence to plead, and he said, "Fo' de Lord, Mr. Deputy, ef youse let me go, I'll neber come back here ag'in." "But you told me that the other time," replied the deputy. "But dis is de time I tells you de truf, and I neber will come back ag'in." On leaving the tub he declared that the animal had bitten him a few times, notwithstanding the fact that the crocodile had been in the fountain all the time. The colored man has kept his word up to date, but he is liable to soon forget the lesson of the crocodile that is the deadly enemy of the colored men in the south.—Columbus Dispatch. The Automatic Stock Salter. It prevents waste and allows stock free access to salt at any time.
