By mistake the reception given Rev. F. B. Hardin and family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. E. W. Wood was left out last week. Mr. Hardin and family were tendered a farewell that showed that they left many friends behind in Palatine and the pastor and his wife were the recipients of a china tea set, a water set and Miss Amabel received some table linen from the Junior League. Dr. Wood made the presentation in his usual fine style.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Williams of Racine, Wis., visited relatives in Palatine the first of the week and a surprise party was given by Mrs. Chas. Seip in their honor Saturday evening. Miss Millie Ahlgrim was also surprised by a large number of former school mates on her return the same evening. A dance was held in Knigge's hall, which was attended by both gatherings, and a very pleasant time enjoyed. Supper was served to the young people at the hall and to the older people at the home of Mrs. Seip.

Mrs. Henry Menching.

Mrs. Sophia Caroline Menching, nee Willharm, was called to rest Tuesday morning, October 23, at 5 o'clock a. m. The deceased was born on March 8, 1827, at Schaumberg, Lippe, North Sea, Germany. She came to Schaumberg, Ill., in 1864, where she married Henry Menching, a prosperous pioneer farmer. The happy couple were blessed with three daughters, one Mrs. Wm. Melting, died about three years ago. Mrs. Fred Himberg and Miss Louise still survive and with the husband and a host of friends, mourn the loss they have sustained. One brother is living in this country and a brother and sister in Germany.

Mrs. Menching was a very devoted wife and mother and one who took the keenest interest in her household duties. She was a christian woman and true to her religion.

The funeral services were held Friday afternoon at the home in Schaumberg and from thence services were again held in St. John's church, Plum Grove, where the pastor, Rev. M. Holz, preached a touching sermon over the deceased.

Horstmann-Luck Wedding.

A beautiful home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Horstmann Wednesday afternoon when their daughter Bertha was united in the bonds of matrimony to Arthur H. Luck. The wedding march was played by Miss Rose Kuebler and the young couple entered the parlor accompanied by Mr. Charles Plett, a cousin of the groom, and Miss Lydia Meyer, a cousin of the bride. The bride was dressed in white and carried lillies of the valley; the groom wore the conventional black. The bridesmaid was dressed in white and carried pink and white roses. The parlor was tastefully decorated with ferns and red and white carnations. The ceremony was performed under a beautiful floral umbrella, Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister of St. Paul's church officiating. A large number of friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony and attended the reception which followed. Relatives of the groom were present from Chicago and Michigan City. A wedding supper was served to about 100 guests. The Palatine Mannerchor and the Palatine band serenaded in the evening and were handsomely received.

The presents included a silver tea set, cut-glass cake dish, tea spoons, silver water pitcher, cake stand, glass tea set, bread plate, knives and forks, dessert spoons, table linen, carving set, fancy work, silver fruit bowl, salt and pepper shakers, pictures and $150 in cash.

The happy couple left on the nine o'clock train for Iowa, their future home. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Horstmann, is a beautiful and accomplished young lady whose circle of acquaintances extends far and near. She is a graduate of the High School class of '95 and has been a member of St. Paul's church choir for some years. The groom is a prosperous young business man of Des Moines, Iowa, where he holds a lucrative and responsible position with the Iowa Seed Company. THE REVIEW offers its hearty congratulations to the happy couple and wishes them bon voyage.

Have You Realized It's Value?

When you are married to the prettiest girl in the country, where do you look for that notice which was so much to you and so little to anyone else? In your home paper. When your home is invaded by a blue eyed girl or bouncing boy, to whom do you convey the information as to time, sex, etc.? To the local editor of the home paper. In the after years when the bouncing boy, now a man, is given a partnership in the business, when he has secured somebody's else daughter and established a home of his own, to whom do you exhibit a list of the wedding presents and whom do you load up with items of the interesting events once more expecting that item which means so much to you and very little to anyone else? To the editor of the home paper.

Again, when trouble comes and you add to your possessions that desolate bit of realty known as a lot in the cemetery, when somehow the sun does not seem to shine as it used to, when there is a flutter of crape at the door and odor of roses in the house, when the chair that for years has been at the head of the table is vacant—when all this happens—who makes it his business to write in tender, sympathetic strains of the one whose good deeds to others had long been recognized and appreciated? The editor of the home paper and he is always willing to exert every effort to help you over a rough spot in life's pathway; his paper is one which ever stands for home progress and home institutions to the exclusion of all else. As a matter of business have you given the home paper that degree of consideration to which it is entitled?

Have you recognized in the home paper a potent agency for the material growth of the community? Have you realized in it a value to be found nowhere else, in its ability to bring business to you and the town, to encourage new enterprises and promote every branch of legitimate trade and industry? How is it—have you?

Democratic Doctrine.

The people of Barrington filled Stott's hall Thursday evening to hear Clayton E. Crafts, candidate for the legislature in the 7th district, discuss the issues of the campaign. He prefaced his address by calling the attention of the large number of ladies present to the fact that a democratic legislature passed the bill which gave to them the right of suffrage. As expected the speaker attacked the policy of the administration in its treatment of the Philippine question and its attitude on the trust question. He touched upon Cook county affairs and advocated the abolishment of the Board of Assessors and the government of town affairs by local officers; he characterized the proposed action of the city of Chicago in the effort to consolidate the country towns, as imperialism, and pledged himself to work for the defeat of any measure tending to that end. He asked the people to consider carefully the issues of the present and vote the democrat ticket from top to bottom.

Mr. Crafts was followed by Frank J. Emerich of Chicago who spoke briefly in behalf of the state and county tickets, associating Mr. Yates with the Tanner element of the party, but paid tribute to him personally. In their addresses both speakers avoided anything in the way of personal abuse and resurrected no issues of the past.

A GIRL LURED TO HER DEATH.

Four Men Jailed at Paterson for the Crime.

CONFESSION MADE BY THREE.

She Was Drugged, Taken to a Lonely Place and Assaulted While in a Dying Condition—Two of the Accused Are Married Men.

The last trace of the mysteries surrounding the killing of Jennie Bosschleter, the 17-year-old girl whose body was found near the Wageran bridge over the Passaic river on Friday morning last, has been cleared away.

Four Men Commit the Crime.

The girl was lured to a drinking place about 10 o'clock on Thursday night. There she was drugged, placed in a cab with four men, driven to a remote place on the outskirts of the town, taken unconscious to the ground, and there, being then in a dying condition, was criminally assaulted by three of her companions. When they found she still remained unconscious after being put back in the carriage, and after all their efforts to restore her failed, they drove with her to the house of a Dr. Townsend, in Paterson, N. J., who came down to the sidewalk, examined her in the carriage, and pronounced her dead.

That is the story in outline of what is regarded as one of the most horrible crimes in the history of New Jersey. The dead was the work of four men ranging in age from 41 to 24, every one of whom is of excellent family, and who, with one exception, stood well in public estimation in the community. All were active business men. Two of them are married, one with a wife and several children, and the other has a bride of five weeks. The brother of one of them is a former judge and is married to a sister of the mayor of Paterson. All four of them are under arrest and locked up in the county jail charged with murder. Three of them have made full confessions. The case against them apparently is overwhelming. Their names are Walter C. McAllister, George J. Kerr, William A. Death and Andrew Campbell. McAllister, who is 30 years of age, is a member of the firm of James McAllister & Co., engaged in one branch of silk manufacture. He lived with his father, James McAllister, at No. 106 Park street. His two sisters, who are utterly prostrated, stand high socially in Paterson, and are very popular.

Disposing of the Body.
After leaving Dr. Townsend's place the cab went on until the dark spot near Alger's mills was reached. McAllister caught the girl by the feet and dragged them outward. Another of the men lifted the shoulders, and as the hips reached the sill McAllister dropped the feet and the two men held the body upright for a moment and then let go. The girl's body fell backward, the head striking the rock, which crushed the skull. This circumstance, which threw the Bergen county authorities off the scent, was not foreseen by the men disposing of the body. The hackman received $10 for his night's work. This was paid by McAllister.

Bank Teller Steals $700,000.

One of the oldest and richest financial institutions in America, the First National bank of New York, at 2 Wall street, has been robbed of $700,000, and possibly much more. Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., note teller, a trusted employe for twenty years, is accused of the theft and is a fugitive. His is the biggest bank defalcation ever known in New York. National bank examiners two weeks ago went over his books, but pronounced them correct, so skillfully had they been manipulated. An accidental discovery of a fellow-employe ten days ago led to a second examination, which revealed the thefts.

Alvord was at the bank last Thursday, but vanished on learning that his books were being examined. One story says he went to South America, another Europe, a third that he was seen boarding a train for Montreal.

Alvord is 50 years old, tall and portly, weighing 300 pounds. He has a wife and three children. The family lived in a pretentious house at Mount Vernon and entertained lavishly. He also had extensive apartments at a Saratoga hotel, where he lived last summer at the rate of $300 a week.

Charles D. Warner Funeral.

At Hartford, Conn., the funeral of Charles Dudley Warner took place from Asylum Hill Congregational church, with the Rev. Joseph H. Twichell, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Parker of the South Congregational church, officiating. The honorary pallbearers were: Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Col. Frank W. Cheney, Knight D. Cheney, S. L. Clemens (Mark Twain), A. C. Dunham, James J. Goodwin, Judge William Hammersley, Gen. J. R. Hawley, Prof. C. F. Johnson of Trinity college, Prof. T. R. Lounsbury of Yale, Prof. W. M. Sloan of Columbia, and President George W. DESIGNS OF THE NEW BATTLE-SHIP.

The navy department is preparing to build a most formidable addition to the new navy and has called for bids for five battleships and for six armored cruisers. The bids are to be opened Dec. 7.

The five battleships will certainly be the most formidable yet designed for any navy. They are to be built by authority of the acts of congress of March 3, 1899, and June 7, 1900. The act of last year provided that three of the ships shall be sheathed and coppered, while the act of this year left out that provision. The purpose of sheathing and coppering the hulls of the vessels is that they may remain in the water a longer time than the un-sheathed vessels without having to be cleaned. Two swift new war vessels, the Virginia and Rhode Island, to cost $3,600,000 each, calculated to steam 19 knots an hour, will be constructed on the above plan.

St. Petersburg dispatch says Russian press is dissatisfied with Anglo-German treaty, and warns other nations to keep out of northern China. Anglo-German convention regarding China to be approved by United States and added reply sent France. Latter also likely to agree.

Tuesday, October 23.
Dispatch from Li Hung Chang to Chinese minister in Paris saying Pichon, French minister to Peking, is too ill to conduct negotiations, suspected to be diplomatic trick to get rid of astute envoy. Diplomats are convinced there is no secret clause in Anglo-German agreement, which is believed to be a purely mutual guarantee against either country seizing Yang-tse-Kiang valley. Expedition to Pao Ting Fu found letter from Prince Tuan ordering slaughter of allied troops.

Discuss Health Problems.
The first session of the convention of the American Public Health association was opened in the auditorium of the German house, Indianapolis. Among the delegates attending are several men of international prominence in the field of sanitary science and medicine, such as Dr. Theobald Smith of Boston, president of the bacteriology and chemistry section, and Professor Wyatt Johnson of Montreal, member of the faculty of McGill university. President Bryce delivered his annual address, and ex-President Benjamin Harrison briefly addressed the convention. A. C. Harris, minister to Austria, and Dr. Chico of Mexico also spoke.

Shot and Killed in a Fight.
A saloon-keeper and sporting man named Jobber, at Indian Springs, twelve miles from Bedford, Ind., was shot and killed in a fight.

Attacks Coal Screeners.

The discontent of the strikers was shown at the works of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company in the eastern part of Wilkesbarre. A gang of men were going to work Monday morning to screen coal on the bank of the Empire mine when they were set upon by a mob of men, women and boys. John J. O'Hara, foreman of the gang, was knocked down with a stone and his nose fractured. Several other workmen were slightly injured.

During the melee several shots were fired. One bullet grazed the ear of Coal and Iron Policeman McCall. The mob destroyed all the tools of the workmen. The disturbance took place within the city limits and a detachment of police were sent to the scene. When they arrived they found a large crowd of women and boys, but very few men. The local officers of the United Mine Workers say none of their men engaged in the fight.

Prepare to Be Transported.

The members of the unique religious sect known as the Jaerlites, are arranging to take passage for Scotland. The prophets of the sect have fixed a near date for the end of time and the revolution of all terrestrial things. The sect originated in Scotland, and the fight of the faithful is expected to be taken from some mountain there. Small communities of these zealots are located in northern Indiana and southern Michigan counties. The men and the women are disposing of their earthly possessions and the money accumulated will be expended in reaching Scotland, whence they believe they are to be transported heavenward.

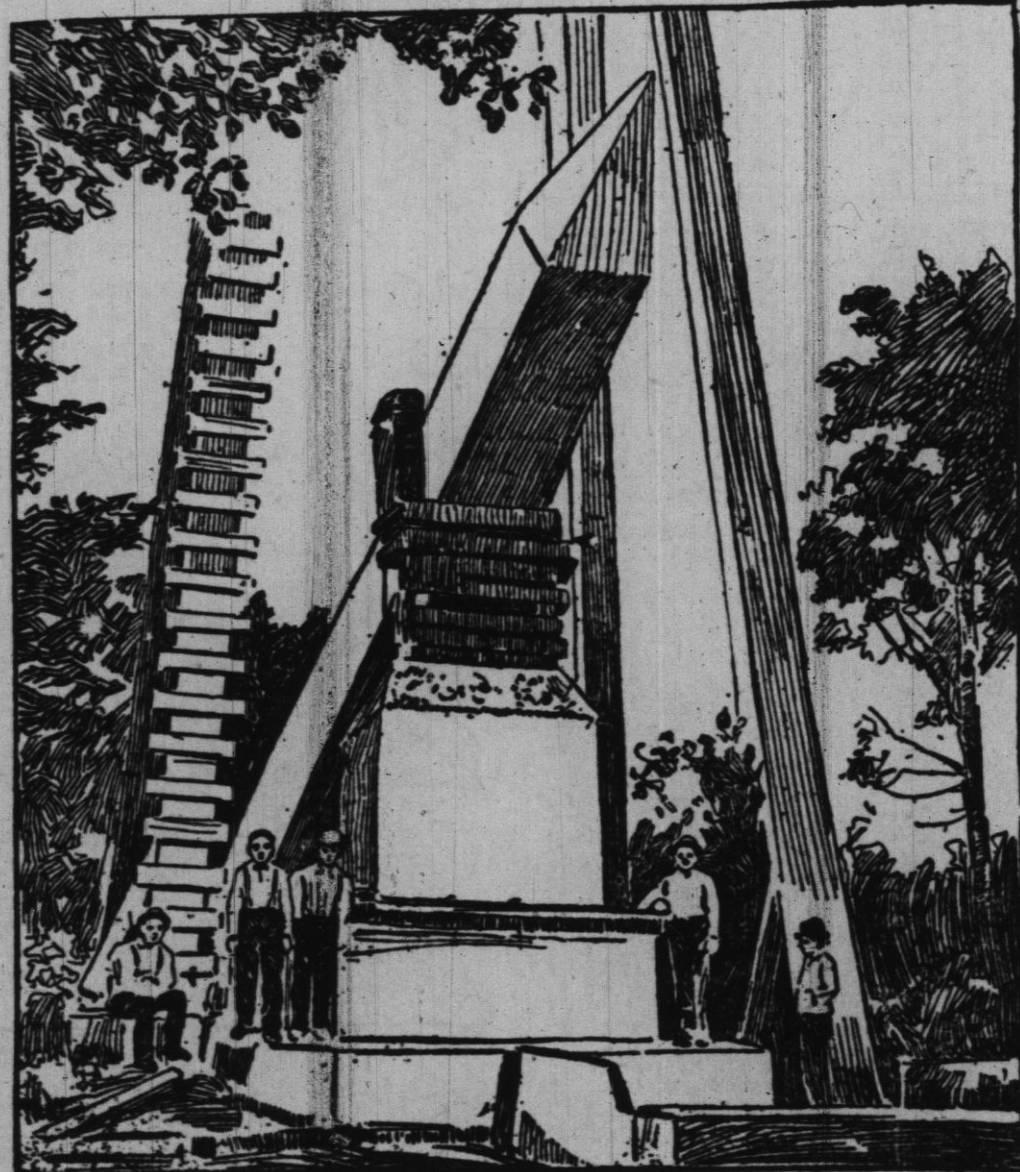

School for Young Wives.

New Jersey brides will hereafter be taken in tow by members of a duly organized mother's congress, and at stated sessions of that body will be taught the fine points of infant rearing. Later on classes may be instituted in the art of keeping husbands at home nights without the use of dancing girls or slot machines. The object of the organization, as officially declared at Riverton, is "to raise the standard of home life." This means, according to the same official statement, a scheme of "wise and better parenthood." It may also eventually wipe out penny-rate poker in parlors.

Flight of Zeppelin's Air Ship.

Another trial of Count Zeppelin's airship was made Sunday at Friedrichshafen, resulting in a series of successful evolutions. The air ship, with Count Zeppelin and Herr Eugen Wolf aboard, ascended to five-eighths of a mile, where various maneuvers were executed. It then descended slowly to the water, which it reached near the point of departure at 5:25. The king and queen of Wurtemberg witnessed the trial.

THE ROCKEFELLER MONUMENT.

The dead children of Frank Rockefeller no longer rest in the family lot in Lake View cemetery, Cleveland, O., where sleep the dead of his brother, John D. So bitter is the feud between the Standard oil magnate and his poorer brother that the dead do not rest in peace. Frank's friends say that the monolith John D. erected over the family lot was too ostentatious for his quiet tastes and that the remains were removed for this reason.

Back of this, however, there is a deeper reason. Years ago Frank Rockefeller and Captain James Corrigan borrowed about $100,000 from John D. Rockefeller to carry through an iron mine deal, giving Standard oil stock as security. In a suit that is still in the courts Corrigan has claimed that John D. Rockefeller cheated him by lies and concealment, so as to retain this stock that, with accumulated dividends, has proved to be worth millions.

Frank Rockefeller was an equal sufferer and the estrangement between the brothers grew out of this. The enmity caused Frank Rockefeller to leave the church of which John D. is Sunday school superintendent.

While citizens were talking about the removal of the bodies it was announced that Frank Rockefeller, before leaving for his Kansas ranch, had removed his office from the Standard Oil building, in Euclid avenue, to the Garfield building, in the same street, and that he had thus estranged himself from his brother in every way.

HIS CAREER IN PUBLIC LIFE.

The Recent Death of His Wife Hastens His End—Mr. Sherman Leaves an Estate Estimated at $1,000,000—Funeral at Mansfield, Ohio.

John Sherman, former representative in the house, for a long term a member of the senate, and twice holding cabinet positions, died at his residence in Washington at 6:45 o'clock Monday morning in the seventy-eighth year of his age. His death had been expected for some days, and loving friends gave him their unremitting care and attention to the end. Most of those who arrived, on account of his critical illness, were at the bedside when the end came, the number including Mr. and Mrs. Colgate Hoyt of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wiborg of Cincinnati, Mrs. William K. Otis of New York city, P. Tecumseh Sherman, a son of the late Gen. Sherman; Charles M. Sherman of Chicago and Miss Lizzie Sherman. Others who were at the bedside were Mrs. James McCallum, the adopted daughter, who had been his constant attendant, and her husband, Gen. and Mrs. Miles, the latter a niece of Secretary Sherman, were at the house the greater portion of the day and evening, but left for their home shortly after midnight.

Estate Valued at $1,000,000.

Secretary Sherman's death occurred in the handsome home on K street, which he had erected eight years ago. It is a large double structure with white stone front and with the hall running through the middle. The house faces on Franklin square, the prettiest reservation and park in the capital city. Some weeks ago the secretary deeded this valuable property to Mrs. McCallum. The secretary was a large holder of real estate in Washington, having invested extensively in that line from time to time during his residence there. Conservative estimates of his wealth place it at a round million dollars, most of which is believed to consist of Washington real estate. Other investments consist of securities, and it is stated that the old family home at Mansfield, O., remained in his possession, notwithstanding reports that he had disposed of it prior to his return to Washington last month.

Arriving in Mansfield on Wednesday, the remains will lie in state in the Episcopal church in that city until the following day, when the interment will take place.

Mr. Sherman spent last winter at his home in Washington, enjoying fairly good health, occasionally going out to social affairs, and attending the theater with the members of his family. The family left there early in the summer for the old homestead at Mansfield, O.

Wife's Death Hastened His End.

They were there but a short time when Mrs. Sherman, whose health had been very frail, died. This was a severe blow to the secretary, from which he never fully recovered. He remained at Mansfield until the middle of September, when he returned to Washington. He was very much broken in health and spirits, but for a time he was able to move about in the open air and to take short rides around the city. John Sherman was born in Lancaster, O., May 10, 1823. When he was 6 years old his father died, leaving a widow and 11 children with only the homestead and an income of $40 a year for support.

In 1840 he went to Mansfield, where he made his home the remainder of his life, and began the study of law. He was admitted to the bar on his 21st birthday, and soon made a success. In 1848 he married Margaret Stewart. Mr. Sherman cast his first vote and made his first speech for Clay in 1844.

In 1848 he was a delegate to the Whig convention in Philadelphia which nominated President Tyler.

As a Cabinet Officer.

Senator Sherman's greatest financial achievements were in connection with the resumption of specie payments in 1873. After a long fight he secured the passage of a bill providing for the resumption of specie payments on Jan. 1, 1875. As secretary of the treasury in the cabinet of President Hayes, Mr. Sherman was able to see the bill become a fact. Mr. Sherman returned to the senate at the end of his service as secretary of the treasury, and remained an active member of that body until he was called to fill the position of secretary of state, the most important position in President McKinley's cabinet. This he resigned in April, 1898, on account of age and ill-health, and since that time had taken little part in public affairs.

Longest Year on Record.

The year 47 B.C. was the longest year on record. By order of Julius Caesar it contained 455 days. The additional days were put in to make the seasons conform as nearly as possible with the solar year.

Six Killed While Hunting.

Dispatches from the state of Michigan show an unusual mortality list among the hunters. Six deaths were recorded and several persons were wounded. In Jackson county Alfred Ashby, aged 18, was instantly killed by Charles Miner, who fired at a rabbit. Clyde Stark, aged 14, of Owosso, while returning home from a quail hunt, attempted to raise his shotgun. The trigger caught and the weapon blew off the side of his head. Robert Hubbard of Hanover climbed a fence with a shotgun in hand and accidentally discharged the weapon. He died last night. Oscar Edgett and C. A. Snyder of Elton Rapids started up a covey of quail. Snyder fired at the birds and hit Edgett in the side. He will recover. Louis Torrence of Ortonville was shot in the face by his father while they were hunting quail.

Greeley's Friend Dies.

An intimate friend and neighbor of Horace Greeley died Monday at Chappaqua, N. Y. The decedent was Henry Miller, 80 years old, a son of Col. Isaac Miller, the first mayor of Auburn, who was related by marriage to William H. Seward. Mr. Miller came to Chappaqua forty years ago from Detroit. He was the inventor of the steam and air brake his patent having been issued Jan. 2, 1855, and all railroad brakes now in use, it is said, are patterned after his invention.

Bride in the Poor House.

After a honeymoon of four short weeks Mrs. Rose Lashaway of Weston made application for admittance to the county infirmary at Bowling Green, O. Prior to her marriage to George Lashaway, Miss Hygeland had been employed as a domestic, saving nearly all her earnings. Lashaway induced her to give him the money and then deserted her. Ill and being without home or friends the deserted wife sought shelter in the county house.

Trial of Edwin Arnold's Son.

Julian Biddulph Arnold, second son of Sir Edwin Arnold, started from San Francisco, Cal., on a journey to London, where he will be tried on sixteen charges of embezzlement. The pathetic side of the Arnold case is that Mrs. Arnold, the prisoner's wife, will be left alone among strangers without money. Marshal Shine says the British consul has made no provision for sending her to her home in England.

New Japanese Cabinet Formed.

The new Japanese cabinet has been formed as follows: Premier, Marquis Ito; foreign minister, Kato Takaaki, former minister to Great Britain; home affairs, Baron Suyetatin; war, Viscount Katoura; navy, Admiral Yamatato; finance, Viscount Watanabe; justice, Baron Kneko; education, Matsuda; communications, Hoshi, former minister to Washington; agriculture and commerce, Hoyashi.

Provides for the Widows.

The will of Thomas Keating, the horseman, was filed in Oakland, Cal., and disposes of an estate of about $50,000. John and William Keating, brothers, and Mrs. Ellen Barnes received $1,000. Frank M. Lee, a friend, is left $3,500 and the residue of the estate, except Keating's racing fixtures, which goes to his foreman, Jno. Blue. Keating also leaves $50 for any widows that may turn up.

Open Switch Causes Wreck.

Three engines, a number of freight cars wrecked and a section of track torn up are the results of a collision near St. Mary's, O., on the Lake Erie & Western road, caused by an open switch. The west-bound local freight was in switch when an east-bound double-header fast freight train came around a curve and crashed into it. No one was injured, the engine crews leaping.

Buyers Meet for American Army.

Bids were opened and contracts awarded at Chicago by Maj. W. L. Alexander, chief commissary officer of the Department of the Lakes, for several large orders of meat for the United States army in the Philippines. The total of bids amounted to about $50,000, and the contract calls for delivery of the orders at the commissary office in Chicago on Dec. 26.

Seeks Aid in Journalism.

A curious request to the porte at Constantinople has been made by the Turkish consul at New York. He asks to be permitted to undertake newspaper work. He explains that his remuneration is insufficient and it must either be increased or he must be allowed to add to his income through journalism.

Boy Mysteriously Killed.

Herrod, the 7-year-old son of P. C. Taylor, manager of the Bell Telephone company at Mount Pleasant, Mich., was found under a barrel in the rear of his father's store at 3 o'clock Sunday night, shot through the heart. He was last seen about 4 o'clock with two boys named Walker. Five revolver shells were found near him.

A GREAT INVENTION.

REMARKABLE IDEA OF A PENNSYLVANIA GENIUS.

Edward McGarvey of Bellefonte Has Perfected a Machine That Will Weigh Railroad Trains While in Motion—How It Works.

Among the remarkable inventions patented this year is an electrical apparatus for weighing moving railroad trains by means of harmonic vibration, and such attention on the part of prominent electricians and mechanical scientists has the invention already attracted that it gives promise of ranking among the great things of the year. The inventor is a Bellefonte (Pa.) young man, Mr. Edward McGarvey, and so confident are those who have closely investigated the claims of the invention, that a company of prominent Bellefonters has been organized for the further perfection and development, as well as to arrange for the manufacture, not only of the weighing apparatus, but also of several other similar inventions which will embrace the fundamental principle, but applicable in various other equally important ways.

The principle of the invention is entirely original, it being the first of its kind ever presented to the patent authorities. A full technical description of the machine would occupy too much space, but a brief review is interesting. The apparatus is composed of two small machines, the ribbon case and the recorder. They can be attached to any pair of scales, railroad or wagon. The principle is harmonic vibration from electrical attachments, and the work of the apparatus is entirely automatic. The working consists in the attaching of a metallic ribbon to the scale lever or beam, the other end to a fixed object. When a weight is placed on the scale the tension on the ribbon naturally increases as the weight becomes heavier. The electrical attachments cause the ribbon to vibrate, and the number or rate of vibration varies according to the strain on the ribbon from the scale beam. These vibrations are very rapid, hardly perceptible to the naked eye, yet they open and close an electrical circuit; and in the same manner another metallic ribbon is made to vibrate that is placed on the same circuit. Harmonic vibration is next applied.

It is a well-known principle that musical reeds and strings will vibrate in unison when their particular tones are produced near them. In the recording machine there is a set of musical reeds. The different weights cause different reeds to vibrate. A heavy load on the scales causes a high tension, and a high rate of vibration of the metal ribbon, and the result is a corresponding rate of vibration in the reeds. The reeds are like the teeth of a comb. Starting from the lowest point, as weight is generally applied to the scale, the reeds commence to vibrate from the lower to the highest tones as the load increases.

A continuous sheet of paper passes under them and as each reed vibrates it makes a record on the chemically prepared paper. As each reed represents a certain weight, the weight of the load is thus automatically and correctly recorded. The arrangement of circuits in the apparatus is such that the recording mechanism may be removed a distance from the scale and placed, for instance, in a railroad's general office, the regular telegraph line being used to conduct the impulses. The recorder will interfere in no way with the regular business on the line, nor will the operation of the regular instruments affect the accuracy of the records.

Though the apparatus is as yet in the experimental stage, it has been thoroughly tested at Bellefonte. One was placed on the scales of the Central Railroad of Pennsylvania at Mill Hall, with the recorder in the office of Assistant Superintendent John J. Walsh in Bellefonte, a distance of twenty-nine miles, and highly satisfactory results were obtained, the practicability and merits of the system being fully demonstrated. The tests were made with moving cars, and it was shown that less than one second of time elapsed after the circuit closed until the ribbon and reed responded to the proper rate. From this and other practical tests it has been plainly demonstrated that the feat of weighing a train moving even at regular transit speed over any properly constructed scales, and of simultaneously recording the weight of the successive cars, is within the capabilities of this system. The illustrations accompanying this article give a correct idea of the size of the apparatus, the hands of a man being shown in one picture.

The invention has already attracted the attention of large railroad and manufacturing companies, who are anxious to give it a thorough test. Bellefonte, however, recognizes the merits of the apparatus, and because of this the aforementioned company has been organized.

Mr. McGarvey is only twenty-four years of age, but has demonstrated his ability as an inventive genius.

IRONY OF FATE.

Famous Artists, Who at First Received Scant Appreciation.

In an article on "The Art of the Age" in Pearson's there is an interesting reference to the early struggles of famous artists. J. F. Millet, the great French painter of peasant life, for instance, only reached a moderate amount of comfort toward the end of his life. Since his death his pictures have sold for enormous sums, "L'Angelus" being bought by his country for $75,000. Can we account for this? Millet was an artist consistently true to himself, never turning aside to do what he considered was below the standard he had set for himself. It not infrequently happens that men of strong personality produce work not understood by the average man, and as he is the largest buyer of pictures, it follows that the artist is left to eat his heart out or starve, as Millet did for years, because he works outside accepted conventions. Recently an exhibition was held in London of the works of the French romancer Montecelli. His career was a remarkable one, for from poverty and obscurity his pictures suddenly became the vogue, and for a while he lived in opulence; then they ceased to sell, and he became little better than a vagrant, tramping from place to place, eventually dying in Marseilles a pauper. He resembles in this respect Morland, whose works are now so fashionable and fetch long prices. He was content to work for a drink or a lodging. His contemporary, Richard Wilson, whose classical landscapes now command thousands, could not sell them and lived all his days in penury.

Siamese Use Odd Numbers.

Number of rooms in a house, of windows or doors in a room, even of rungs on a ladder, in Siam, must always be odd. Even numbers are considered unlucky.

LATEST ILLINOIS NEWS.

Illinois Bankers Meet.

The officers and executive council of the Illinois Bankers' association, together with delegates to the annual state convention, arrived at Rockford from Chicago. They were welcomed by the local executive committee representing the Rockford Bankers' association—William T. Robertson, Paul F. Schuster, Frank F. Wormwood, William F. Woodruff, George C. Spafford and Norman F. Thompson—and escorted to the Hotel Nelson. Delegates from almost every city and town in the state are on hand. The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock Tuesday in the Masonic temple. President H. H. Harris of Champaign presided at the opening session. Major Edward W. Brown delivered the address of welcome in behalf of the city. John H. Sherratt, president of the Third National bank of Rockford, spoke the greeting in behalf of the bankers of the city. Then followed the president's address, the reports of officers, the appointment committees, and the organization of the convention.

To Buy Chicago River Maps.

The drainage board at Chicago offered $12,000 for the maps and field notes of a survey made along the Chicago river from Rush street to the terminus of the south branch. The survey was made by Mathewson & Arnold in 1852, and it shows that the state of Illinois owns a sixteen-foot tow-path along the river, which is covered now by buildings and claimed by property owners. If the board succeeds in maintaining its contention that the state is entitled to the sixteen-foot strip of land, the problem of widening the Chicago river will have been solved. Mr. Mathewson, one of the surveyors, is now 81 years of age, and as his testimony will be needed to support his survey, the drainage trustees are anxious to begin proceedings to recover the property as soon as possible. Fifteen thousand dollars was asked for the map and field notes, but it is expected that the offer of $12,000 will be accepted.

Football Team in Court.

The football eleven of Washington university, St. Louis, came to Lebanon to play the McKendree college team, but ran up against the law instead. Washington university refused to play unless McKendree would remove certain players. This McKendree refused to do and the Washington university eleven retired from the field. Their expenses had been paid on the condition that they would play, and upon their refusal to play or to refund the money Manager Gustin of the McKendree team swore out a writ of attachment against their baggage in Justice Serwick's court. Constable Creed took charge of the baggage and held it until the Washington university team paid half the expense money and half the costs of the attachment proceedings as the result of a compromise.

Waukegan Has a Crusade.

City officials of Waukegan assume ignorance about the wide open features lately introduced, which were noticed by Waukegan ministers and are known to almost everybody. Mayor Pearce when interviewed said he considered the moral status of the town to be as good as ever. The number of arrests is very small for the population. He had not heard that there was gambling. He promised to look into the matter, however, and also the complaints that saloons were open on Sunday and selling to minors. He said he wished that people knowing the facts would report to him. Alderman Dady admitted that the preachers' complaints were true in a general way, as anyone could see, and said the responsibility rested on the mayor.

May Lose Gas Franchise.

The LaSalle city council will be petitioned at its next meeting to revoke the franchise of the Peru-LaSalle Gas Light and Power company or furnish Commercial electric lighting in connection with the municipal street lighting plant. The merchants claim they have suffered much inconvenience and financial loss of late from the fact that their places of business are only open on Monday and Saturday nights after 6 o'clock throughout the week and that they have been forced to close on account of poor or absolutely no gas. Barber shops Saturday night were forced to turn out men half shaved on account of the sudden going out of the lights.

Requisition for Louis Vehon.

Governor Tanner issued a requisition on the governor of New York for the extradition of Louis Vehon, charged with the embezzlement of $15,000 and a large amount of clothing from the Louis Vehon Clothing company of Chicago. Vehon is under arrest in New York city. A dispatch from New York city says that Louis Vehon was held in the Center Street police court on a charge of being a fugitive from justice in Chicago. He disappeared from the latter city according to the complaint, a month ago. At that time he was manager of the house bearing his name.

NOVEL SCENIC RAILWAY.

Herbert F. W. Lyons, of Boston, Mass., has designed the exhibition structure shown in the cut as an attraction for large expositions. It is a large globe constructed of steel, with accommodations for a spiral scenic railway, one or more elevators and a variety of exhibition booths, the latter being located along the line of the railway and utilized to display the products of the several continents of the globe. The designer suggests a diameter of 600 feet for the globe, with the pillars occupying a ground space of 500 feet each way. The exterior is painted to represent the continents and oceans, and has a spiral line of windows running parallel with the railway inside, thus affording a continuous view of the exposition and surrounding country as the cars ascend and descend. In the center are elevators, which carry passengers direct to the observation tower, and the

Sir Thomas Challenges Again.

The expected challenge of Sir Thomas Lipton for the America's cup has materialized. The titled yachtsman who made such a gallant effort to "lift" the cup two years ago has through the Royal Ulster Yacht club of Belfast served notice on the New York Yacht club that he will be on deck again next year. Undaunted by previous defeat, he comes to the front with sportsmanlike courage and confidence. "I have every reason to believe," he says, "I stand a good chance of winning, for I would not challenge unless sure I could get a better boat than my last. Moreover, I know I have got to get the very best going in order to achieve a triumph over the wonderful energy and skill of the Americans, for which no one has greater admiration than I. Realizing this, I have been working steadily for months to perfect my arrangements. I now believe that both the boat and the men next contesting for the America's cup will be an improvement over my first attempt."

Sir Thomas' new challenger, like the old one, will be named the Shamrock and will be selected by a series of contests between the yacht George L. Watson is designing and the old Shamrock after the latter has undergone proposed improvement, though both yachts will be kept fully manned and may cross the water together. It is intimated that the design of the new boat, while embodying several novelties, follows more closely the lines of the American yachts than any previous cup challenger.

To refer to Sir Thomas as a true sportsman is to use a trite and overworked expression, but that's what he is, and he will get a generous welcome when he comes again to these shores to contest for the most highly prized of sailing trophies. Every one over here will wish him good luck—that is, just good enough luck to bring his challenger across the line a few seconds behind the America's cup defender.

Apparently there exists in Chicago an epidemic of matrimonial infelicity for which the divorce court is a remedy too mild to be effective. Within a week, says a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune, no less than seven husbands and wives have attempted to settle their domestic difficulties by taking poison or by the use of revolvers and other instruments of violence. The police are at present struggling with no less than three newly made mysteries in which young wives have either committed suicide or have been killed in ways unknown to the authorities. Herein are a lesson and a warning to the young persons who rush pell-mell into the matrimonial state without giving due and careful consideration to the possible consequences.

It is stated that the Yale authorities have decided not to proceed against the whisky establishment that is making an unwarranted and unwarrantable use of the university seal lest their efforts serve to advertise the whisky, the thing which the liquor men desire. The Yale attitude is something like that of the man who did not object to being horsewhipped on the street by an actress, but who did object to being used as an advertising medium for her show.

That no man is a hero to his valet or to his confidential lawyer is shown by the deep, dark and dismal revelations as to the relations existing between the late Millionaire Rice of New York and those who are supposed to have been looking after his affairs.

Practical Christianity is exemplified by New England farmers who are gathering their surplus apples instead of allowing them to rot on the ground and are shipping them to worthy missions in the cities for distribution among the poor.

The observer may have noticed that Spain is not exhibiting the slightest anxiety to send over a feet and take a hand in the glory getting in the orient.

China Must Prove Her Good Faith.

So far as words go the imperial government of China is making a strong effort to conciliate the western powers and atone for the outrages at Peking and elsewhere. Several decrees ordering the trial and punishment of Prince Tuan and other leaders of the Boxers have been issued, the latest being an order for the execution of Ying Nien, president of the censorate; Kang Yi, president of the civil board, and Chao Shu Chiao, president of the board of punishment; sentencing Princes Chung, Tsai Lien and Yi to life imprisonment and banishing Prince Tuan himself to the Siberian frontier. But these "edicts" are really only promises, and there is some ground for suspicion that they are not made to be fulfilled.

China must give evidence of her good faith. This she is not doing to the satisfaction of the foreign nations. Japan, which presumably understands the peculiar ways of the Chinese better than the western powers, makes no attempt to conceal its suspicion of insincerity, and the opinion is growing in diplomatic circles that China is not acting in good faith. While making fair promises the imperial court retires to the remote ancient capital of Singan-fu, where the ministers cannot reach them, instead of returning to Peking, where negotiations could be carried on directly and without interruption. Let the imperial court return to Peking and prove its sincerity by executing its decrees and punishing the leaders of the antiforeign insurrection, and the prospects for peace in the empire will materially brighten.

There is rather an interesting and novel case on the calendar of a St. Louis court. It appears from the summons and complaint that the plaintiff, Miss Louise Parke, received serious and permanent injuries in a street car collision last February and demanded damages from the railroad company in the sum of $15,000. In the trial of the case, just begun, the defendant company seeks to show that Miss Parke was flirting with the motorman, whose attention was thus distracted from his occupation, and that therefore the plaintiff was responsible for the accident which resulted in her injury. Very naturally she is indignant at this move of the company's attorney. "It is ridiculous," she told the court, "to claim that I was flirting with George when the accident happened. I never thought of flirting with him, and I don't think any woman would. He is no Adonis. Then, too, he is married—twice married—and has a child 7 years old." It is doubtful if the court will accept Miss Parke's disclaimer and accept the reasons she gives for nonflirtation as altogether sound and tenable. If women waited for every man to be an Adonis before indulging in the feminine propensity to flirt, this world would be a model of propriety. Neither are they restrained by the fact that the man is married. If they were, there would be fewer grists for the divorce courts to grind. The young woman in question may be the kind of female who flirts only with unmarried men who are beautiful, but there are others who are less exacting. However, the incident has its moral: Don't flirt with the motorman.

Mercer county, Pa., has in the person of Judge Miller a jurist who evidently believes in the heroic treatment of the gambling vice. He visited the Mercer county fair the other day and there saw a big wheel of fortune in operation. He did not go back to his office and issue a statement that he would investigate the matter, neither did he order any of his subordinates to look into the case and report—when there might be nothing more pleasant to do. No, indeed, Judge Miller picked up an ax, walked over to where the wheel was running and with a few well directed blows put it out of commission. It is said that the largest piece the judge left of that wheel of fortune wouldn't have covered a two pound crock of butter. An occasional exhibition of that sort of judicial activity is rather wholesome if not strictly in accord with the statutes.

A cablegram from Rome says that the Italian government will take the initiative to get European joint action to exact passports from all persons coming from America. King Victor must think we are a hard lot over here. However, we can stand it if the same exactions are placed upon Europeans coming to this country.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic; got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week; had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without relief then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine I have ever tried." For sale by Chas. F. Churchill, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine

Politics, and mostly politics, is what we hear most of the time, sometimes loud, sometimes louder, but apparently it doesn't change the opinion of the sidewalk orator until they finally agree on some point and rest their evidence until the next meeting, when the same harang is again taken up. Soon election day will come and after the result is known all will suddenly subside and peace and happiness will again reign supreme.

Last Saturday evening Arthur Powers was tendered a pleasant surprise at his home by thirteen of his young friends, it being the 22nd anniversary of his birth. The guests assembled at 8 o'clock and spent the evening most pleasantly at various social games. Refreshments were served at 11:30 and by the time the repast was completed and necessary arrangements made for departure it was far past the midnight hour. A most pleasant time was reported by all.

HOUGHTON A WINNER.

The wrestling match at the Oakland hall Saturday evening between Plutarch Houghton, jr., of Wauconda and Ole Peterson, known as Vernie Torrance, proved an interesting bout, Houghton winning in three straight falls. Betting was not heavy at the ringside, but some money changed hands and all passed off quietly.

At 10:08 contestants advanced to the center of the ring, shook hands and returned to their corners.

At 10:11 Referee Thom gave the signal to advance and the wrestle was on. Some skirmishing was done for two minutes when Ole went down and the referee announced a fall for Houghton.

After a rest of four minutes the second round was called and both contestants went to work at once. Houghton caught his opponent unguarded and Ole went down. Houghton was given the fall, the round lasting but 14 minutes. There was some discussion, however, as to the fall being three points down and Houghton agreed to wrestle it over.

After a rest of 64 minutes the next round was opened and both struggled hard for 10 minutes, when Ole was lying on the mat with Houghton hovering over him, and attempting to better his position. He thoughtlessly rolled on his back and Houghton was given the fall.

The fourth and last round proved the most exciting and interesting, lasting for 204 minutes. Both men were warmed up and struggled hard, Houghton being determined to have the round end the contest and Torrance determined to snatch it from his grasp. Many times both were near the danger point. Houghton's wind was now beginning to give out and he took a crouching position on the mat, but, finding Ole always aggressive, arose and in the final mix-up Torrance went down and out. Referee Thom declared Houghton the winner.

This was followed by a boxing contest of three rounds, after both had taken a short rest. It resulted in a victory for Houghton, who secured 27 points to 20 for Torrance. Gate receipts amounted to about $14.

A Sacrifice To Conscience

She hesitated. And he saw her bare hands—they were very small hands he had noticed, with slenderly-shaped fingers—wrapping themselves together as if in overwhelming distress or perplexity. Then she spoke in a half-stifled voice:

"I think I shall go home to him. I am afraid to bring another doctor. I—I shall do what I can for him myself."

A thought struck Enderby and he said quickly, with a shade of embarrassment:

"If you are afraid of Doctor Howarth's charges, Miss Lloyd, I think you can let your mind be easy about that. He is, I believe, a very kindly and generous man."

He saw the girl start and flinch a little, as if his words had stung her. Then she said:

"It is not that. I think I had better go straight home."

"Very well."

Enderby stopped the driver and stepped out. The gaslight fell full on the girl's face as he turned to look at it. What a ghastly, pale, troubled young face it was! Yet it struck him that it might under certain circumstances, be beautiful.

The features were small and aquiline, the brow childishly smooth and white, the mouth and chin softly and roundly formed, though the former had a strange expression of self-repression now; the eyes were weird and dark, though the hair seemed auburn, the brows above them of startling blackness. And what a child she looked! Hardly sixteen, he thought, as he looked at her.

"What address shall I give the man?" he asked.

"Burdon Mansions," she answered. "They are only about five minutes' walk from here."

Enderby knew them well by name—small flats, mostly occupied by needy clerks and poor working women.

He stood still for a moment thinking.

"I hope your foot will be all right," he said then, "and that your father may be no worse. May I call in a few days and see?"

She gave him a quick, almost terrified glance, then suddenly her lips began to tremble pitifully, and she turned aside her head.

"How kind you have been!" she faltered, "and I have never thanked you." She put out her hand as if impulsively, then drew it back before he could touch it. "It is kind of you to wish to call," she said. "Yes, I shall be very grateful if you do. We live two stories up."

"How will you get up with that sprained foot of yours?" he asked. "Don't you think I had better come with you and help you?"

"Oh, it is not much," she said, her voice faltering; but without another word, Enderby got in again, and they drove on to Burdon Mansions.

They were a pile of dull, dreary looking buildings. Enderby paid the man and helped the girl, who limped painfully within the buildings. But when they attempted to climb the stairs, he saw that it cost her terrible pain, and he turned to her, saying quietly:

"Will you allow me to carry you up? It is the easiest and speediest way."

A little crimson patch suddenly showed on her cheek, like the mark of a warm finger; she put up her own hand and rubbed it feverishly as if it burned.

"No, no; you mustn't!" she said. But Enderby had already stooped and taken her in his arms. How light she was—not so heavy as many a child of ten!

Enderby had never had a woman in his arms before, and he was almost astonished himself to find how tenderly they entwined this girl. But for the sake of one woman Enderby was tender to all.

They were soon at the landing of the second flat. Enderby set her down, and she stood leaning on the wall, her face deadly pale again, but her eyes shining strangely.

"I cannot thank you," she said, her lips trembling oddly and uncontrollably. "But, perhaps God will repay you for your kindness to me—a stranger of whom you know nothing. They say London is full of wickedness, but it must be full of goodness, too. Now I must go."

"I shall wait for a moment here," said Enderby, with a sudden resolution. "And you will come out and tell me if your father is any better. Perhaps I can do something yet to help you."

She turned away and opened the door on the left with a latchkey, then closed it gently. Enderby remained where he was. In a few minutes the door opened again, and the girl stood at the entrance.

"He is sleeping," she said, whispering. "Perhaps he will be better now."

"That is good," Enderby answered, heartily. "May I call in a few days?"

"Yes; but my father does not wish anyone to know where he is. You won't tell anyone about us?" she hesitated.

"You may depend upon me," said Enderby, heartily. "Good night."

He put out his hand, the girl laid her small, slim one in it, and Enderby gave it a friendly pressure. Then he went away.

As he emerged into the open air again he fancied a shadow flitted noiselessly round a corner of the mansions. Then he drew himself together with a short laugh, for a disagreeable thrill had run through him at the fancy.

He had bidden the hansom wait, and he went up to the man, who was sitting drowsily before him.

"Did you notice a man go round the mansions as I came out, driver?"

Cabby shook his drowsy head.

"No, sir, I haven't. Why, all wise folks is in their beds in this 'ere locality hours ago, I should say," he retorted, with a touch of personal feeling.

Enderby got in, and was soon being driven to his rooms in the West End.

Somehow, the strange incidents of the night had oddly unsettled him. Even when he went to bed his dreams were disturbed by strange, uncomfortable reproductions of these incidents, grotesquely and even horribly deformed. For so matter-of-fact a man Paul Enderby was oddly fanciful over them.

Still, undoubtedly the experience had been rather a peculiar one.

He felt sure the girl was refined and of gentle birth; it is not difficult to detect the signs of these. Her accent was not exactly an English one, yet it was not peculiar enough to be pronounced un-English.

Who was she? Who was her father? What reason could she have for absolutely refusing to allow another doctor but this Doctor Lyndon to see her father? Who was this Doctor Lyndon?

With the morning the incidents of the night before seemed to have drifted off into the same region as that in which dreams are made; but one reminiscence of them remained with Enderby, and oddly annoyed him. It was the memory of the man who had passed in the hansom while he was speaking to the girl who called herself by the name of Lloyd.

Enderby sauntered along to the Courts, where he assumed gown and wig, and listened to the cases. He was not absolutely a briefless barrister and he was considered very clever.

But, besides that, Paul Enderby came of a very good family, and was not, though he himself was poor, so very far removed from the Barony of Eglin, having only five lives between him and it. So that Enderby was somewhat of a spoiled child of society, being a good-looking, straight-limbed, handsome fellow enough after the pure Saxon type, and without a taint upon his name.

He was coming out of the Courts when some one tapped him on the shoulder.

"Ah, Enderby, going to the club, are you? I'm due there at five and have one or two engagements after dinner. I suppose you will put in an appearance at the Penningtons tonight?"

Enderby's pleasant, fresh-complexioned face had been overshadowed by a look of annoyance as the newcomer addressed him. He was a man a little older than himself—not above middle height, and slender with it, with a pale, dark face, black eyes placed rather close together, and a smooth, straight, unpleasant mouth, which had a disagreeable habit of curling upwards when he laughed. He was Digby Dalton, and was by profession also a barrister.

"I dare say I shall look in at the Penningtons," he answered, drily. "But I have another engagement."

"Miss Lennox's reception?" smiled Dalton. "Yes, of course, you will be there, Enderby. What a man you are for being asked out! By the by, had you anything on last night?"

Enderby looked straight into the smiling face.

"Perhaps I had. May I ask why you inquire, Mr. Dalton?"

"Oh, nothing!" The other shrugged his shoulders. "Only curious, wasn't it? I was driving over Westminster about half past one, and I saw a man with a girl on the bridge. I could have sworn it was you. Curious, wasn't it?"

"Not at all," Enderby answered coldly. "It was I."

"Oh, I beg your pardon! I really would not have mentioned it if I had thought that was the case," said Dalton, as if with regret. "Of course, we men of the world don't inquire too narrowly into each other's affairs; but you know there are a few men whose lives seem open to every one and whose slightest action will bear investigation. I don't require to tell you, Enderby, that we all consider you are one of those. In fact, your membership at the Bayard Club is sufficient proof. Well, I shall not detain you. I have a little matter of business to settle in the Strand." And lifting his hat with elaborate politeness, he disappeared.

Enderby knew every word he had spoken had been aimed with a venomous tip. Dalton had hated him from the first time they had met. That hatred had become deepened into something vindictive and malignant when, through Enderby, though more by accident than choice, Dalton had been dismissed from the club, which was sometimes mockingly called the "Bayard," on account of having been found cheating at cards.

"He recognized me, of course," Enderby said to himself. "And he will go to-night to Miss Lennox, and tell her. Well, she has more than an ordinary woman's sense of fairness. She will let me speak for myself. And will she believe him? Or will her heart have something to say on my behalf? Cecil, Cecil!"

He whispered the name to himself as a devotee might whisper the name of a sacred shrine. For to Paul Enderby, to whom all womanhood was sacred, Cecil Lennox was the incarnation of all that was noblest, purest and fairest in woman. So little does the simple, straightforward nature of a good man understand a woman.

CHAPTER III.

It was two days after the reception at the West End mansion of Sir Henry Lennox, the well-known Queen's Counsel, who was considered one of the wealthiest men connected with the legal profession.

Enderby had seen Cecil Lennox but for a few minutes, but she had then been able to utter the words that thrilled Enderby through as no other words could have done.

"Come to see me on Friday. It is not my day at home, but I shall be at home—to you."

Paul Enderby was thirty, was a barrister, and was prosaic, yet his heart and pulses throbbed like those of a sentimental boy of twenty as he was admitted into the presence of Cecil Lennox.

She was certainly a very beautiful woman. As she came forward to greet him, her tea-gown of pale sea-green and billowy lace falling in graceful folds about her, Enderby thought that no woman who ever lived could have excelled her in beauty and grace. But there were others who might have thought that the beauty of Cecil Lennox—of the soft, exquisitely tinted face, of the rounded chin and throat, the red-lipped, smiling mouth, the deep, changeable, soft, violet eyes—had something sensuous and voluptuous in it.

Enderby did not think so. He loved the woman—or was it the woman he imagined her to be?—and that was enough.

Cecil let her soft little hand lie in his for a moment, then she drew him towards the silk-covered couch from which she had risen.

"It was good of you to come," she said, in her low, caressing voice. "We shall have tea presently. I suppose I needn't ask you how you enjoyed my crush? People never do enjoy crushes. Why do we give them at all? Oh, I often wish I had the courage of my convictions, and could throw off this yoke of social fashions and conventions, and be what I should like best to be—a simple human being, asking to my house only those I really cared for, and being able to interchange thought and friendly kindness with them!"

As a matter of fact, Miss Lennox would not have given up her "social fashions and conventions" for anything that could have been given her in exchange. But she was clever enough to suit her tastes, as well as her conversation, to the individual characters of her companions.

System is the oil which makes the wheels of labor work more easily.

GREAT IS RUSSIA'S SOLDIERY

Characteristics of Czar's Mighty Army.

The peculiar conditions in the east and the prominence of Russia in dealing with them make interesting a study of that empire's military system. In attempting a description of the characteristics of the Russian army one naturally begins with the Czar, who is at once the head and object of the whole organization. It is in Russia alone, of all civilized countries, that at this day we find the idea of personal allegiance existing in its primitive purity, undisturbed by the tendencies of modern representative government. This personal allegiance is the cornerstone of the whole fabric of society in Russia, and it has been strengthened rather than weakened by the changes which have taken place in the development of the country since the days of Peter the Great. In other nations the soldier fights for his country, for the idea that is so clearly crystallized in the German motto, "Für Gott und Vaterland," but the Russian soldier fights for God and the Czar. To his mind the Czar is specially appointed by God as the viceroy to govern that large portion of the earth called Russia, and devotion to the Czar includes all that we understand in the word patriotism.

The peasant class—or moozhiks—which supplies the great body of Russian soldiers, leads a hard life. In an atmosphere of ignorance and superstition, amid dull, somber surroundings, a cheerless climate and monotonous village life, their characters, dispositions and habits are determined. The Russian soldier's disposition is gentle and good-natured, even his brawls being of the maudlin and foolish, rather than fighting kind. Since his surroundings from earliest childhood tend only to destroy his individuality, he is incapable of acting for himself and utterly dependent upon his officers, for whom, naturally enough, he has great respect. He never meets or addresses an officer without standing at "attention," with his hand at his cap through the whole conversation, and until the officer has passed. He does not even answer a question with a direct "Yes, sir," or "No, sir," but with "Quite so," or "Not exactly so."

Yet despite this humility in outward forms, it cannot be said that the soldier degenerates into being servile. Side by side with the unbending discipline there exists a feeling of good-fellowship between officers and men. The men are jovial and good-natured among themselves and have their own glee songs and dances, at which the officers are daily spectators.

In battle the Russian soldier is strongest in all the staying qualities and weakest in all the vivacious ones. He goes in enthusiastically and with lively energy, it may be, but not quite vivaciously; there is more of a grim solemnity in his manner as he marches forward singing lustily the national hymn and thoughtless of his fate. He is at first dull and slow in initiative and self-reliance; and it is only after he has passed through several battles that he learns the knack of looking out for himself—of taking advantage of every shelter, of quickly protecting himself by intrenching, and all the other little tricks of war, which may save a man's life without impairing his efficiency or detracting from his courage. He instinctively looks for orders and obeys them with a blind instinct, without stopping to question their merit; left to his own resources he is almost helpless and will often get killed from sheer stupidity in standing still and waiting for an order when every one is dead who has a right to give one. But these same qualities, which are so different from those of our own quick-witted volunteers, have their good side. The Russian soldier's patience is boundless; his endurance, his good-humor under hardship, his capacity for fighting on an empty stomach and under difficulties, are beyond all praise, and will enable a general who appreciates these qualities to work wonders with them; and he is probably the steadiest of all soldiers under defeat and adversity.

American Girls, Wives of Germans.

It is worthy of note that not only was the wife of the Baron Von Ketteler, the German minister who was murdered in Pekin, an American, Miss Ledyard, of Detroit, but the wife of the German minister appointed to succeed Von Ketteler, the Baron Von Schwarzenstein, is an American, Maud Roosevelt La Vinsin, and the wife of the officer sent out to command the allied armies, the Count Von Walderssee, is an American, Miss Lee of New York. The Baroness Von Schwarzenstein is a second cousin of Colonel Roosevelt, and was a belle in Washington two years ago. She met there the Baron Mumm von Schwarzenstein, who was attached to the German legation. Miss La Vinsin was stopping with her mother's sister, the Baroness Von Orehdorf. The baroness took her niece to Europe, whither the attache followed, and the marriage took place in Berlin. The bride had no fortune of any amount, and the marriage was one of pure affection on both sides. The Baron Schwarzenstein, although only forty years old, has had a long experience in statecraft, and is considered an able diplomat.—New York Press.

Noiseless Powder the Latest.

The success of smokeless powder in modern warfare has been such as to prompt a man of an inventive turn of mind to manufacture a powder which is said to be also noiseless. It is the invention of a German workman who studied chemistry of explosives in this country. He has already given a private exhibition of the practicability of his discovery with considerable success. A shell loaded with his powder was fired at a target fifty yards away and the only sound indicating the explosion was the falling of the plunger of the shell. Bohnengal, which is the name of the inventor, has not, it is said, yet sold the secret of the process, but is still in treaty with different governments for its purchase.

Believes He Is Superior.

The Chinaman in general is completely convinced that in all that constitutes higher civilization he is the superior of the white man. He has invented more different kinds of mechanical improvements than all the rest of the world put together; his wise men were masters of science when Europe was a howling wilderness; no other country has held together so long as this huge empire, and its subjects not unnaturally conclude that such grand results must have sprung from institutions whose excellence is unrivaled elsewhere.

Son of Former Leader.

Hugh John MacDonald, who succeeds Sir Charles Tupper as the conservative leader in Canada, is the son of Sir Charles' old leader and a famous figure in Canadian politics, Sir John MacDonald. The son has the significant nickname of "Man Who Keeps His Word," a title conferred years ago by the Indians with whom he had business.

Charged With Nine Murders

A Bad Man Prohibited by Authorities From Touching Land.

The Allen line steamer Assyrian, which arrived at Halifax, N. S., the other night from Glasgow and Liverpool, brought as a steerage passenger a man who is alleged to be one of the most notorious criminals in Europe. Detective Power, Port Physician MacKay and Immigration Agent Clay were on the wharf awaiting the arrival of the steamer. The detective and immigration agent had telegrams and papers in their possession to prevent from landing at this port Johan Hannu, a Swede, who is credited with having taken the lives of nine human beings. The captain of the steamer, when apprised of the character of the man that he had on board his ship, was greatly surprised. During the voyage over Hannu was one of the best conducted passengers on board. No one ever suspected him of being a murderer. The information of his being on board the Assyrian was received at Halifax from the department of justice at Ottawa, an order in council having been passed to prevent his landing on Canadian soil. The murders were, it is alleged, committed at Stockholm, Sweden, where Hannu was tried and convicted of the crimes.

Hannu afterwards tried to land at Philadelphia, but was not allowed to.

Winter, according to Mr. Deyoe, the weather prophet, will start in to do business about November 8, when we will have a cold wave which will make last winter's weather seem like June in comparison. In December there will be heavy storms the 5th and 8th, and we may enjoy sleighing about the 15th, when zero weather will prevail. The holidays will see slight change, but zero weather will begin again in January with snow storms and a taste of the weather of years ago. This is indeed pleasant to think about. Regular old winter and the price of coal going skyward.

Congressman Foss.

Last Friday night Stott's Hall was crowded to its capacity by the constituents of Hon. George Edmund Foss to hear him discuss the issues of the campaign. Mr. Foss is a polished speaker and being a prominent member of the House, chairman of the important committee—Naval Affairs—was in a position to throw light onto a number of questions considered of vital importance in the struggle for supremacy now drawing to a close.

He attacked the democrats with grape and cannister; ridiculed what they term the paramount issue—Imperialism, and claimed the real issue was still, and would always be under Mr. Bryan's leadership. He contrasted the prosperity of the country during the past four years with that of the four years previous; told why the American army was in the Orient and why the administration proposed to keep it there; hit Mr. Bryan on his tariff theory and other issues advanced by the combined forces at work to overthrow the party "which had made this country the home of the lover of liberty; the land where labor was given its just reward." He turned the search-light upon the record of the opposition and was outspoken in denouncing the past work of that party and claimed the leaders not competent to take charge of affairs at this critical stage or any other time. In closing Mr. Foss paid high tribute to the national and state tickets and predicted a great victory November 6.

Attorney Marston of Chicago made an address at this meeting which was a vigorous arraignment of the democratic platform and the candidates; he confined his talk to national issues.

Gentlemen—I feel it my duty to express to you my gratitude for what your remedy has done for me. I was completely run down with a complication of stomach disorders. For ten months I could not speak and was treated by three eminent physicians. One insisted upon operating on me, declaring nothing short of an operation for appendicitis would cure me. A friend induced me to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and from the first dose I began to improve and have not had any trouble since. I have gained 25 pounds in weight and am enjoying the very best of health. I never fail to say a good word for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for I know what it has done for me it will do for others.

Gratefully yours,

Curstone Musings.

Take up the white man's burden.
And put your own away!
'Tis only right that woman
Should run affairs today.
We want to have the upper hand.
We're bound to be supreme
In everything that's going,
And that's no idle dream.

Take up the white man's burden,
And drive him from the scene:
He's growing pale and penny,
And "parts his hair between."
Come on, oh, sturdy sisters!
Let's show slow-going men
How we could run affairs
On the bargain counter plan.

—Selected.

Did you ever stop to think how insignificant was woman in the estimation of the framers of the constitution? Every free born or naturalized male citizen twenty-one years of age has the privilege of casting a ballot for president and the men who make our laws, even though he be uneducated, a disreputable, low character he is welcomed within the voting booth; but the brightest, purest woman has no such right even though she owns property and pays taxes for the support of the government. A greasy, alcohol-soaked bum is more valuable at the polls. And this is civilization.

During a discussion on matters of a political nature, held at a general rendezvous for the bright lights of this village, one of the debaters, an individual who prides himself on the fact that he was created special—of a finer quality of clay than his fellows—gave utterance to the following: "What's the use of talking on prominent questions with men who do not understand them? A day laborer is not qualified to talk on such subjects. When a man becomes fitelligent he enters a profession; he don't work for $1.25 a day." In that remark is displayed an uncommon large amount of ignorance. It is our private opinion, publicly expressed, that there is more intelligence in the brain of any $1.25 a day laborer in this vicinity than can be found in the whitish mass of soft matter carried around by 17 men of the class who hang around the village stores and abuse their fellow mortals.

An excited Barringtonian rushed into the post office Monday. His $5 Dunlap block shoved well back on his well-shaped head, his countenance wreathed in smiles. "Wow! wow!" he shouted. "We've got 'em!" and he waved a copy of a Chicago paper wildly about. "You bet, we've got 'em!" Those present were of the opinion he had them, and had them bad. He finally calmed his enthusiasm and explained that the latest forecast of the political situation gave the republicans 295 electoral votes. "You bet this paper knows what its talking about; it tells the truth!" Glancing over another column he found a similar table which gave the democrats 272 electoral votes. Then he was not so positive that "We've got 'em." "Darn the newspapers; they don't know any more about it than we do," he remarked. That is true.

A happy (?) married couple in this village invested a portion of their cash in a carpet for the sitting room. She purchased it at a bargain sale. Of course the carpet didn't come within two feet of the wall—she didn't expect it would, but hubby was so good about putting down carpets; he could make it fit. Hubby tried. He pulled, tugged and swore until black in the face. He damned the manufacturer, the man who sold it and the party who purchased it and finally tipped the innocent carpet from the floor and pitched it out of the window. The partner of his joys and sorrows went into a hysterical fit and between sobs informed him that the partition could be moved, or they could move into a house containing a smaller room; that carpet must be utilized. It was. In the absence of hubby a neighbor was called in who suggested a border be purchased. The remnant looks very pretty but it caused all kinds of domestic misunderstanding and did not prove such a bargain either.

Many friends of a popular young man of this village will regret to learn that he will not bring to Barrington society the pretty little woman. It is not his fault. But that is mighty poor comfort.
