The president and members of the village board have become interested in better street lamps and it might be that they will go ahead and do something at the next meeting. Our present system is very poor and in these days of cheap lights there is no reason why Palatine should not be better lighted.

Much interest is being manifested in the history of Palatine and a number have given us corrections to same. We are anxious to have the history correct when completed and ask anyone who notices an error to inform us. We also request that old settlers come in and give us anything that would be of interest in the history. We want the name of every person who settled in Palatine prior to 1860. Please bring or send in your items for the history.

Wood; secretary, Miss Adella Smith; ass't. secretary, Miss Agnes Danielsen; treasurer, Miss Lillian Filbert; missionary treasurer, Mrs. M. Richmond; librarian, Miss Addie Filbert; ass't. librarian, Miss Clara Taylor; organist, Miss Lillian Filbert; ass't. organist, Miss Elsie Baker; illustrator, Irving Beutler.

Archer School Entertainment.
A basket social and entertainment was held in Union hall, Long Grove, Saturday night and it was a success in every way. The affair was arranged by Miss Keyes, teacher of the Archer school, and was gotten up to raise money to buy an organ for the school room. The seating capacity was not sufficient for the big crowd present, but an interesting program made up for any discomforts. Many outside the district assisted in the program. The basket social proved an enjoyable affair and Auctioneer Rob Snively outdid himself in the sale of the baskets and the proceeds of the affair footed up to $30.60.

Woodmen County Convention.
The county convention of Woodmen was held in the Ashland block, Chicago, Thursday afternoon of last week. The delegates of the Chicago camps were in the majority and had everything their own way throughout the proceedings and the country delegates might as well stay at home. The Chicago camps wish to have that metropolis taken into the jurisdiction of the order, so that camps might be instituted in Chicago. The country delegates were opposed to a resolution offered in the convention with this object in view. The question was a hobby of the Chicago delegates all throughout the convention. They will send six delegates to the state convention riding out this hobby. The country delegates have not one delegate to represent their views. We are afraid Chicago will run up against a different proposition in the state and national conventions.

St. Paul's Church Affairs.
A business meeting of the elders and trustees of St. Paul's church was held Sunday and all the former officers were re-elected. The terms of Wm. Voss, trustee; Louis Krueger, elder; and Charles W. Ost, treasurer, expired.

It was decided to fix up the church to a considerable extent provided the money could be raised. A new roof will be put on the edifice, new seats put in and an alcove put on the back to make room for the pipe organ and choir. The interior will be painted and everything done that is necessary to make it an ideal place of worship. Pastor Hoffmeister is a hustler and we have no doubt these contemplated improvements will be completed before many months and St. Paul's congregation have a much nicer place of worship.

Money to Loan.
I have money to loan on unincumbered real estate or approved personal property. WILLARD M. SMITH, Attorney.

ENTERED OTHER LIFE

C. B. Hawley, a Pioneer Resident and Two Ex-Residents Called Home.

The great reaper, Death, has during the week passed removed from the scene of life work a number of those who called Barrington home. The summons has in most cases been sudden proving the truth of the oft repeated saying, "In the midst of life we are in death." Among those called was one who has been identified with the interests of this community for many years, and who was spared to see a family of children grown up and surrounded with the comforts of life.

Charles B. Hawley.

The ranks of the early settlers of Barrington township is fast being decimated. Those who have witnessed this community grow from a hamlet to one of the most prosperous and inviting villages in this section, are being unexpectedly called to lay down the burden of earthly cares and enter into eternal rest prepared for the faithful servants of the great ruler of the universe. Charles B. Hawley was one of the "old guard" of Barrington; one of those New Englanders who braved the trials and privations of the promoters of this great commonwealth. For 65 years the deceased had been a resident of Illinois and was proud of the advancement of his adopted state. He was interested in the development of the county, township and village, though not active in the political or business field. His early days were given to acquiring a perfect knowledge of agricultural pursuits and he prospered. Mr. Hawley was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends whom he had attracted by honorable, upright principles which characterized the 60 years of his residence among them. He crossed the dark river into the spirit land, Monday morning, January 14, 1901, aged 75 years, 1 month and 20 days.

Charles B. Hawley was born November 28, 1825 at Amherst, Mass. In 1832 his parents removed to New York state, and in 1835 they joined the vast army seeking homes in the west, settling in this state. He was one of a family of twelve children, eight brothers and four sisters, Henry of Barrington, and George of Dundee, being the only ones surviving. He was married to Sarah Ann Waterman in 1846 and resided on a farm south of Barrington until 1865 when they removed to this village. His wife died in 1893. One son and two daughters survive, Charles Jr., Mrs. Dr. C.H. Kendall and Mrs. Lyman Powers, all residents of Barrington; five grandchildren and many relatives are left to mourn his death. The funeral occurred Thursday afternoon from the family home, services being conducted by Rev. Blanchard of the Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Tuttle of the M. E. church.

William Naggett.

William Naggett of South Milwaukee, formerly a resident of Barrington, died Tuesday morning at 5:30 o'clock of diabetic coma. He had been ailing for six weeks past, but as he was able to be up and around his condition was not considered serious. Sunday night he complained of a severe headache, and suddenly became unconscious and remained in that condition until his death. He was thirty-four years of age. He leaves a wife and one child, father, mother, one sister and brother to mourn his loss.

Mrs. Caroline B. Kendall.

Mrs. Caroline B. Kendall died at her home, 364 Center street, Elgin, Sunday evening, January 13.

Mrs. Kendall's maiden name was Caroline Bartow, she was the widow of Byron Kendall who died in 1895. They settled at Blackberry, now Elburn, Illinois, in 1840 and resided there until 1875 when they removed to Elgin. Mrs. Kendall lived to the grand old age of eighty years. Three children survive, Dr. C. H. Kendall of Barrington; Mrs. Adella Jennings of Philadelphia, Penn.; Mrs. Etta Springer of Elgin. The funeral was held at her home in Elgin, Wednesday morning, Rev. DuBois of the First Baptist church of that city officiating. Interment was at Elburn.

Harriet A. Sherman.

Mrs. Harriet A. Sherman, formerly a teacher in the Barrington public school, died suddenly, January 6, at Atlanta, Georgia, and was buried at Yorkville, Illinois, January 9.

Mrs. Sherman was a daughter of the late James B. Lowry of Yorkville, one of the oldest and most highly respected families of Kendall county. Mrs. Sherman was born March 1, 1849, and was at one time a prominent teacher in the schools of northern Illinois, having taught for eleven consecutive years in Yorkville, five years at Plano and nearly the same length of time in this village where she endeared herself to all. Upon leaving here she decided to give up teaching and secured a position as manager of a publishing house. She traveled extensively through the east and south and in Canada, and was engaged in this vocation when suddenly called to her last home.

The Atlanta papers state that Mrs. Sherman was found dead in her room at the hotel. She had arranged the writing materials on the table and selected some correspondence to answer but death came before she had written a line. Mrs. Sherman leaves two sons to mourn her death, William J., who resides at Rochelle, Ill., and Frank L., residing at 2623 Stanwood avenue, Chicago.

The Reporter's Specials.

Time is but a narrow ruffle on the edge of eternity.

I was fortunate in being among the invited guests at an enjoyable affair a few evenings ago. The word fortunate is used because the occasion was out of the ordinary, and it is seldom that a newspaper drudge is invited to ornament the cozy corners in the pretty homes in Barrington, but uses the established prerogative of the local searcher for news—and goes without an invitation. It was at the card table some party or parties remarked something about making an offer. One lady said "You'll be lucky if you get it. That's what I have been waiting for this long time." Whether the remark had reference to the game of cards or matrimony I do not know but if it was the last some of the men of marriageable age in this community are blind as bats.

Women either love or hate; there is no happy medium in their affections.

Somewhere it is written "Cast thy bread upon the waters and in many days it will return unto thee," or words to that effect. I have heard it quoted and sung about, but it was never illustrated to my satisfaction until the other evening a man walked into a house in this village, and addressing the lady in charge said: "I boarded with you 16 years ago and left owing you $5.45. Here is the money." The world is evidently growing better or that man has had a presentment of an early departure hence. At any rate he is not like the majority of the 19th century boarders. Generally they forget to return.

If you have occasion to argue with a donkey you might just as well address yourself to his tail as to his head.

"The old man makes me tired. He thinks he knows it all, and the old woman is not much different but she don't say so much. I know what is right and what is wrong and I guess they know I won't be held down to the old-fashioned ideas of propriety," was the expression made by a young man who is a society bud and close attendant on religious service, but sadly deficient in what constitutes honor to his parents. Such expressions do not emanate from the child who is endowed with filial love for those who have so carefully watched his life from the hour of birth to the years of early manhood. When you hear a young man express such sentiments shun him; he who forgets his duty to his parents is not a safe companion. Remember the time will never come when you will not be under obligation to father and mother, and no young man or young woman will ever turn out bad who has love and respect for parents. Never degrade yourself by alluding to them as "the old man or old woman." The venerable brow and frosty hair speak loudly to the love and compassion of the child. There may be times when infirmity makes them fretful; their ways may seem "old fashioned" but remember that time ere long may bring you to need the care and honor they deserve. Don't speak disrespectful of father and mother—it lowers you in the estimation of all.

The man who lives for himself alone is apt to be neglected by the world at large.

REFUSED ALL TITLES.

Beecher Preferred "the Name by Which My Mother Called Me." A reporter, probably broken into work after Henry Ward Beecher died, recently referred to the late Henry C. Bowen as "prominently related to some of the troublous years in the life of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher." Dr. Henry Ward Beecher was not Henry Ward Beecher. He refused all doctorates, whether of divinity, of philosophy, of letters or of law. He did so not ostentatiously, but so positively that degree conferring institutions at last passed him by. His naive and characteristic statement was: "I prefer to be known by the name my mother called me." And, somehow, amid the throng of D. Ds., LL. Ds., S. T. Ds., or D. C. Ls., plain Henry Ward Beecher on a program or on a poster or in an advertisement had an explicit distinction by itself, because the greatness of the man exceeded the greatness of all degrees. "His mother," by the way, was his stepmother. His mother died in his infancy. His stepmother came into his life when he was 4 years old. She was all love, tact and wisdom to him.—Brooklyn Eagle.

LIEUT. MABEL C. HUNT.

A Bright Salvation Army Lassie, Who Knows How to Keep Her Corps in Good Health. Ogden, Utah, Jan. 12, 1901.—(Special.)—The Pacific Coast Division of the Salvation Army, whose noble work in the interests of fallen humanity has done so much for this western country, has its headquarters in this city. One of the brightest and most enthusiastic workers is Lieut. Miss Mabel Clarice Hunt. Everyone knows how these devoted people parade the streets day or night, exposing themselves to all kinds of weather, that no opportunity may be lost of rescuing some poor unfortunate from sin and suffering. In some cases, their recklessness in thus exposing themselves has been commented upon as almost suicidal. Their answer to such criticisms invariably is their unflinching faith in the Divine injunction to "do right and fear not." Lieut. Hunt explains one of the means she employs to keep her "Soldiers" in good health, as follows: "I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills of great value in cases of Kidney and Liver Trouble and Diseases contracted from severe colds. Several of our lads and lassies have been repeatedly exposed to cold weather and rain, and have spoken for hours out of doors, often with wet feet and chilled to the marrow. As a consequence of this exposure, Pulmonary Trouble, Rheumatism and Kidney Disorders often ensue. In such cases I always advise Dodd's Kidney Pills, for I have noticed better results, quicker relief, and more lasting benefit from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases than from all other medicines I know of combined. They cleanse the blood, regulate the system and destroy disease. A medicine which can do what I've said is surely worth the attention of all who suffer with any form of Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism, or Blood Disorders."

Mr. Moffat's Work in Zambesi. Mr. J. S. Moffat, who has been actively connected with the country immediately to the south of the Zambesi for over forty years, first as a missionary and latterly as an official, is about to return to Rhodesia after a holiday in Europe. He first went out under Dr. Livingstone. He was Resident Magistrate at Taunaga when the Jameson raid took place. Mr. Moffat is now sixty-five, but he has work left in him yet.

Lady Pharmacist's High Standing. At examinations recently held by the New York state board of pharmacy Mrs. Marietta Harmon of Syracuse received the highest rating ever given for a license as registered pharmacist. Her examination was rated as perfect. Sixty-two applicants from all parts of the state were examined, Mrs. Harmon being the only woman. Her husband, a druggist, died three years ago and the widow then took up the study of pharmacy.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. PERISH IN A BLIZZARD.

One Hundred and Twenty Lives Are Lost.

A GREAT STORM IN RUSSIA.

Eighteen Hundred Persons Huddled Together in a Railway Station—Unable to Communicate with the Outside World for Five Days—Great Suffering.

Communication with the world has been reopened at Odessa, Russia, after ten days' isolation. The snow blizzard continued unceasingly for 100 hours, and it is reported that 120 persons perished. The Odessa correspondent of the London Daily Mail describes the sufferings of the railway passengers who were overtaken by the storm. Hundreds of persons left St. Petersburg, Moscow, Kieff, and elsewhere for Odessa on Jan. 6, for the Russian Christmas which as the event proved they were doomed to spend isolated from the world. For five days and five nights they were half-starved and half-frozen. The first train struck the blizzard south of Razyelnaia and was soon stuck in a twelve-foot drift. The passengers were not alarmed, expecting that the line would be quickly cleared. They made themselves as comfortable as they could at the station. The expected help did not come, and in the course of twenty-four hours three more trains arrived. There were then 1,800 persons huddled in the station with vanishing hope of relief. The food stores readily dwindled, and the passengers became alarmed. They clamored that something be done. A telegram was sent demanding help, but there was no response. Another 24 hours passed, and two more trains laden with terrified and hungry passengers arrived. They had occupied sixteen hours in covering forty miles. The late arrivals stormed the buffet, struggling ravenously, and consumed what food was left. A horrible night was passed. The passengers were virtually without food. In the morning a peasant volunteered to carry telegrams to the nearest station, which was six miles away. He arrived with several of his fingers frozen. The dispatches begged for help from St. Petersburg and Odessa. Sixty passengers, including Count Kaptist, resolved to trudge and seek sledges rather than to spend another night on their train, where the stench was almost unendurable. Count Kaptist and forty other succeeded in reaching Odessa on Friday. The fate of the others who started with him has not been learned. The Odessa correspondent of the London Daily Mail, giving details of the experience of the railway passengers who were snowbound while on the way to Odessa, says: "All the trains have now arrived here. The drifts have hardened to the consistency of ice, and in one case a tunnel had to be cut through a drift 400 yards long and thirty-eight feet deep. Many passengers who had attempted to walk here were found by sleighing parties frozen to death."

Son of Jem Mace Preaches. Alfred Mace, eldest son of the pugilist, Jem Mace, began a week of revival meetings at Willard Hall, Chicago. Mr. Mace has been an active evangelist in England for more than twenty years, and is said to be one of England's most eloquent preachers. He has been in this country about ten weeks, and is on his way to Australia, where he will conduct revival meetings. From Chicago he goes to Denver, and then to San Francisco.

Tiger Is Fatal Again.

Jacob Cole, a wealthy real estate dealer and an old-time resident of Fordham, N. Y., died at the Fordham hospital just fifteen hours after he had been stricken while playing a game of pinocle at the Roosevelt club. There fell to his hand the "suit of death," and though the old man never believed there was any prophecy in cards the peculiar circumstances just before he was stricken must have impressed him.

Dies from Eating Too Much.

John Shanks, a negro, strong and healthy at night, was found dead sitting in a chair in the morning. An autopsy showed that he died from eating too much. Shanks was called here to Nashville, Ill., for a sick brother. He landed with an empty stomach and penniless. He was given a dollar with which he purchased food and proceeded to gorge himself, and died from the effect of overloading his stomach.

Smallpox Is Under Control.

There are no new cases of smallpox at the Wisconsin university nor in Madison. Strict quarantine is being maintained over the house where the case of Ernest Moore developed, all possible precautions have been taken, and it is believed there will be no spread of the disease. The law school is open, the rooms having been fumigated, and the excitement is quieting down.

Wolves Devour Wedding Couples.

Advices from many points near Bucharest tell of packs of wolves killing and devouring travelers. Two wedding couples who were sleighing in the Marmaros district were attacked and all four persons were killed. The driver of the sledge escaped up a tree, but was nearly frozen to death.

Italian Steamer Is Lost.

The Italian steamer Leone has been lost. Many bodies from the wreck have been washed ashore.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS.

Summary of Legislation in the National Body.

Monday, January 14. The senate again devoted the day to consideration of the army reorganization bill, but made no progress. Messrs. Teller and Pettigrew made caustic remarks. The house postponed District of Columbia business until Monday, Jan. 21, and proceeded with the river and harbor bill. Good progress was made, fifty-nine of the ninety-seven pages of the bill being completed. Many amendments were offered, but all failed.

Tuesday, January 15. In the senate: Army reorganization bill still held right of way. Mr. Bacon's amendment striking out of bill discretionary authority conferred upon president to increase size of army was laid on table by decisive vote of 39 to 20. Bill granting pension of $50 a month to Horatio N. Davis, father of late Senator Davis of Minnesota, was passed. Mr. Davis was captain in commissary department. In the house: Day devoted to consideration of river and harbor bill.

Strike at a Funeral.

While the body of Mrs. Ellen Duffy was being carried from the house to a hearse in the street at Troy, N. Y., a row occurred between several coach drivers caused by information that one of the carriage drivers in the funeral procession was not a member of the Livery Employes' Union. Fred Lowe, who was in charge of the hearse, refused to allow the coffin to be placed in the vehicle unless the objectionable driver were taken out of the line. The casket containing the remains lay on the sidewalk surrounded by the pallbearers and the angry drivers. The latter were threatened with arrest and the police were summoned. The undertaker argued with the men, declared that the objectionable driver had been employed by private parties and it was not until the arrival of the police on the scene that the strikers were brought to reason and the funeral proceeded.

Fatal Head-On Collision.

An east-bound Pere Marquette passenger train on the Saginaw division met a freight engine in a head-on collision at Plymouth, a village about 40 miles northeast of Detroit, with the result that Engineer Alexander Moore of Saginaw, the engineer of the passenger engine, was killed outright by being plied against the boiler of his engine. Express Messenger Warner of the same train is, perhaps, fatally hurt. William Blische, the fireman of the freight engine, was brought to this city shortly after midnight on a special train. He was so badly injured that he died five minutes after he arrived at St. Mary's hospital. The fireman of the passenger engine was John C. Kennedy of Saginaw. He was also killed.

Wins $10,500 at a Single Roll.

Winning the largest single wager ever made against roulette in New York City Michael Meagher on one roll of the ball took $10,500 from the Savoy club. He had placed $300 upon the number "1." When he won he became anxious to force Louis Ludlam, the club proprietor, to quit and laid the entire $10,500 on the red. Ludlam refused the wager and said the house was closed for the night.

Big State Tax Suit Dropped.

A special to the Detroit (Mich.) Free Press from Lansing says that Atty.-Gen. Green, who began a suit to secure from the Continental Tobacco company an additional franchise fee of $12,500, has discontinued the suit. The suit was begun when the company increased its capital stock from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. The reason for the discontinuance was irregular service of papers.

Rumor That Curzon Will Resign.

A rumor has just got started at London, said to emanate from well informed sources, that Lord Curzon is going to resign the viceroyalty of India owing to the failing health of Lady Curzon, with whom the climate of India is said not to have agreed. If so, it is thought that Lord Cadogan will be his successor, or will at any rate be offered the position upon the termination of his reign in Ireland.

Absconder's Property Attached.

Frederick Tetrow of Plainfield, N. J., says a dispatch, has begun an attachment suit for $10,000 against Lewis G. Tewksbury, the absconding broker, who is now in Mexico. The suit is brought to recover money loaned to Tewksbury, and the attachment is taken against certain property in Union county, in which it is claimed Tewksbury holds an interest.

NEELY MUST GO TO CUBA.

Decision by Supreme Court in His Case.

THE OPINION IS UNANIMOUS.

Court Finds Order for Neely's Extradition Was Proper—Friends of Administration See in It Favorable Action in Porto Rican Cases.

Friends of the administration think they get an indication of a favorable decision from the supreme court in the Porto Rico and Philippines cases in this quotation from the decision of the court rendered Monday in the case of C. F. W. Neely, holding he is subject to extradition: "Apart from the view that it is not competent for the judiciary to make any declaration upon the question of the length of time during which Cuba may be rightly occupied and controlled by the United States in order to effect its pacification—it being the function of the political branch of the government to determine when such occupation and control shall cease, and therefore when the troops of the United States shall be withdrawn from Cuba—the contention that the United States recognized the existence of an established government known as the republic of Cuba, but is now using its military or executive power to displace or overthrow it, is without merit."

It is reasoned by analogy that if the supreme court considers the length of time the occupation of Cuba may be continued in order to effect its pacification a political question with which the court has nothing to do the question of the length of time that military occupation of the Philippines can continue will also be considered a political one, and that it can continue indefinitely so far as the supreme court is concerned. Justice Harlan handed down the court's opinion, which was unanimous; and immediately after the opinion was concluded an order was issued requiring that the mandate in the case be issued at once. The opinion embraced a complete review of the case, explaining Neely's crime and arrest, and his effort to prevent extradition to Cuba. The opinion also detailed the laws relating to extradition and quoted the act of June 6, 1900, extending the provisions of section 5270 of the revised statutes to foreign countries which is "occupied or under the control of the United States" so as to make the law cover, among other crimes, embezzlement in such countries.

She immediately took the chair, though a lively legal controversy has been going on as to whether a woman is eligible.

Fire Stops Work in Mine.

Owing to the prevalence of a fire which caused the closing of the escape shafts and otherwise damaged the mine, State Mine Examiner Evans Johns of this city closed the shaft of the Big Muddy Coal and Coke company at De Soto, Ill. The receiver, John Wick, will ask Judge Allen of the United States district court to permit him to put the mine in proper condition. The closing throws a large number of men out of employment.

Postal Commission Reports.

The postal commission of the house and senate which has been investigating postal matters for the last two years has made its report. The commission unanimously reports in favor of excluding from the second-class mail rate: 1. Books, whether bound or unbound. 2. A foreclosure sale of all the Diston Land Company's land in Florida, together with the mules, wagons, farming implements, dredges, etc., on Feb. 4, 1901, has been ordered and will be advertised this month, the sale to take place in Kissimmee. This means the putting on the market of 2,000,000 acres that have been tied up and withheld from settlers for a number of years. Says He Sold Horse Meat.

Jacob J. Memmesheimer pleaded guilty and was fined $3. As he was leaving the court he remarked: "Long Island is getting too hot for use. Guess we will have to go over into New Jersey in some out-of-the-way place." Memmesheimer admitted that for some time he has been horse meat to the sausage-makers of Switzerland every year. During the past week he has killed over thirty horses at his place and has shipped over 1,200 pounds of cured horse flesh abroad.

BIG DAY AT SPRINGFIELD.

Inauguration of Governor Yates a Splendid Affair.

THE CAPITAL IN GALA GARB.

Grand Parade on the Streets—Tanner Introduces His Successor—Yates' Address—Statehouse Brilliantly Illuminated—Formal Reception in Evening.

Richard Yates was inaugurated as governor of Illinois amid a blaze of glory at Springfield, Monday. Although there was no inaugural ball or banquet, in other respects the ceremonies were more extensive and elaborate than in the past. The citizens of Springfield showed keener and more general interest in the festivities than was usual. The governor-elect is popular with a large part of the population of the state, outside of his political supporters, because he is the son of the late Richard Yates, war governor of the state. Mr. Yates arrived from Jacksonville Monday morning and met the outgoing executive.

The two men reviewed the procession from a stand on the south side of the public square. The parade itself formed on North Fourth street at Madison street. After marching over the route laid out by the committee it passed the reviewing stand, where the state officials were stationed.

After the procession had passed the stand the inaugural party proceeded to the Leland, where it was joined by Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. Yates, and Mrs. Catherine Yates. The party rejoined the procession on Capitol avenue and then proceeded to the state house.

Many Soldiers in Line. Besides the party in carriages there were the Fifth regiment, nearly 1,000 governor-elect reached the statehouse the military organizations at its head drew up on either side of the main entrance, permitting the veterans from Chicago, who served as the escort, to pass through their ranks. A salute was fired and massed bands played "Hail to the Chief." In the meantime the senate and house had assembled in their respective chambers. The door-keeper of the house informed the sergeant-at-arms of the senate that the house was in session, whereupon the senate, with Lieutenant Governor Northcott in the lead, proceeded to the hall of the lower house. Here the members were seated immediately in front of the speaker in places vacated by the representatives. The lieutenant-governor presided and the roll of each house was called by its own clerk.

Tanner Introduces Successor. When the governor-elect arrived he was escorted to the platform by Governor Tanner. The prayer was offered by the Rev. David Bradford, chaplain of the house. Chief Justice Boggs of the supreme court, escorted by a special committee, administered the oath of office and Governor Tanner introduced his successor.

The feature of the day was the electric illumination of the Statehouse at the formal reception in the evening. Four thousand lights were used in the interior and exterior decoration. The dome of the building was decorated with festoons of colored lights, strung on wires and running from the top-most pinnacle to the farthest corner of the building. Surmounting the dome there was a great star fifteen feet in diameter and made of gold, white and ruby lights. The largest piece was placed at the base of the dome on the east side of the statehouse and contained the dates 1861 and 1901 with the letters "Y-A-T-E-S" in the center. The receiving party was as follows: Governor and Mrs. Richard Yates and Mrs. Catherine Yates, Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. William A. Northcott,

Jacksonville, and Andrew Russell of Jacksonville.

Gov. Yates' Message. Among other things Gov. Yates said in his inaugural message: "I need not exhaust you by wear your honors worthily. But I may be permitted to remind you that to do so is no easy matter. The difficulties and perplexities continually confronting the legislator are necessarily many and great. More than that, they are complex and intricate. They involve exhaustive attention. Many times state legislators get little credit for their labors, which are really arduous. In the performance of their duties the line between the right and the wrong is often somewhat obscured and hard to find. There will doubtless be many times in trying days to come when you and I both will seek for a time, at least, almost in vain, for absolutely satisfactory solutions of pending problems. Good intentions alone will not suffice for our correct guidance. So many different factors may affect any given situation that the result will, if we are not very careful, be far from either desirable to us or advantageous to the people and this in spite of all lofty motive and high incentive and sincere desire to do right. Such being the situation, the legislator as an assembly there undoubtedly abide, in fact, both that lofty motive and that high incentive which the people so much desire and so much desire."

We all realize that there is, for the time being, no power to rectify our errors if we make them. There is no immediate help for the state, from your hands and mine, there comes during the ensuing two years a fabric of legislation which is defective in construction and detrimental in effect. It behooves us all, therefore, to, in all that we do, move ahead with wisdom and just instincts. We should consider well before we disturb well-settled conditions which are satisfactory.

Little New Legislation Needed. I am satisfied that such is the wish of the people. There is a widespread feeling in all states that there may be too much government and too many laws, and so many of you. Indeed, it is, in part, because of this feeling that I have decided not to make any recommendations to you concerning legislation. There are, however, never was a law so good but that it might not be bettered by amendment. There doubtless are many of our laws which could be improved. There are, perhaps, some which ought to be abolished. There probably are some which ought to be amended, provided other better ones could be put in their place. And, lastly, there are some which ought to be amended which ought to be passed. As a matter of course, proper appropriation bills and an equitable reapportionment are absolutely essential.

There does not, however, seem to me to be any pressing necessity or demand for a large quantity of new legislation. No hidden significance attaches to this suggestion. I have no plans for legislation which I have in contemplation of statute which I would pass or repeal, if such passage or repeal were in my power. But, owing, perhaps, to my inexperience in such matters, I have been much impressed and, indeed, somewhat startled by the multitude of suggestions which have come to me urging me to recommend amendments and additions to our statutes. Hundreds of such propositions and suggestions are on their way to this legislature. Doubtless the greater part of them are worthy of most serious and earnest investigation. Such investigation will be earnestly demanded.

Prophecy for the Country. The coming century is to be one of performance of duty. Human rights having been in large part obtained, duty now presents its claims. And, aggressive as it has been in the past in the fight for human rights, America will be more aggressive still in the duty work of the new century. And in the glorious future, in which America will be the central figure, leading all nations, our state will be expected to perform well its part. Illinois is now, in population, a fifteenth part of the nation. It is, in political influence, much more than a fifteenth part.

Its ever-increasing influence will probably affect the nation and the world, within a generation, much more vitally than we now can imagine or conceive. What a magnificent century this will be if it is, in all respects, started right. What a thing it is to be entrusted for even a short time with the care of the interests of the people of such a state at the beginning of such a century. What a power there is in our humble hands at this time to contribute to the progress of this state toward its magnificent destiny. That progress may be troubled or it may be tranquil. Whatever the complications may be, whether they involve peace or war, let us remember that so far as we are concerned we stand in the shadow of our mighty past. We can now realize all that it may involve. But we approach our duties full of the thought that it may involve much.

Mrs. John R. Tanner sat in the executive mansion Sunday afternoon and said: "It has been worth while. I came here a bride four years ago and I have lived four glorious years and am content." Her voice trembled ever so little, but she didn't seem to mind. "Why shouldn't I be?" she asked. "I consider the position of governor's wife quite as good as anything that can be offered."

Taking Up His Father's Mantle.

Among the throng assembled in representative hall Monday there were old comrades of that other Gov. Yates, who, when the oath of office was administered, saw not merely a governor assuming the obligations of office, but a son reverently taking up the mantle of a father who brought a giant intellect and a dauntless heart to the service of his state in that perilous time, and wrote his name indelibly upon the history of his age. There was another for whom the inauguration day of 1901 was full to the brim—a woman. Mrs. Catherine Yates stood beside her son when he became Gov. Yates; as she stood beside her husband when he became Gov. Yates. When more than a year ago the son gave, as one spring of his ambition to hold the office his father had held, a desire to take his mother back to the executive residence, there were some who sneered at what finally came to pass.

SCENES OF FORTY YEARS AGO

The inauguration of Gov. Yates the second, Springfield, fittingly represented to the million the material side of the forty brilliant years which have passed since Gov. Yates the first was installed. It could not express the sentiment which, for a few, permeated the occasion. Half a dozen militia companies escorted Gov. Yates in 1861 from his hotel to the statehouse. Regiments and brigades of soldiers and hundreds of the ununiformed in civic and political clubs escorted Gov. Yates in 1901 over the corresponding route, and personalities, as well as memories, linked the present with the past. On that inauguration day of forty years ago, an infant squirmed in his nurse's

THE ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE.

Work in Both Houses at Springfield.

REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

Senate at Work in Earnest—Senator Davidson Offers Bill Providing for Taxation of Mortgages Held by Non-Residents and Foreigners.

Thursday, January 10.

The first bill introduced in the house of the XLIII general assembly was put in by Henry C. Beiler of Chicago. It is known as the Pan-American exposition bill, and provides for an appropriation of $150,000 for the purpose of erecting an Illinois building and making a state exhibit at the Pan-American exposition, which opens in Buffalo next May. Benjamin Marion Mitchell of Chicago introduced a bill to amend the Case garnishment law so as to raise the amount of money which shall be exempt from garnishment from $8 to $15 a week. John G. Jones of Chicago, the only colored man in the legislature, introduced a bill for the suppression of mob violence. It is an anti-lynching bill, and among other things provides that any person who shall be taken from the custody of any officer of the law by a mob shall be entitled to recovery from the county in which the offense takes place not less than $100 and not more than $2,000. Other bills introduced in the house and senate were the appropriation bills of $100,000 to pay employes of the general assembly, $5,000 for committee expenses and $22,000 for incidental expenses. The house and senate met in joint session to canvass the vote cast for the state officers, and this protracted proceeding occupied only eighteen minutes. The house and senate adjourned to Monday next.

Friday, January 11.

Activity in the senatorial conflict was transferred, from the time being, from Springfield to the various legislative districts. But few members of the general assembly remained at the capitol. The great majority of them returned home, and will not be back till Sunday or Monday. Meanwhile the work of influencing the senators or representatives followed them to their respective homes. When the flight of the legislators from Springfield began, after the adjournment of the legislature, letters and telegrams from the score went after or preceded them. These were addressed to the men of influence in the republican party in the various districts, and urged the persons to whom they were addressed to do all in their power to induce their senator or representative to act in accordance with the wishes of the letter writer.

Tuesday, January 15.

The house was not in session, having adjourned until Wednesday morning. The senate did little work, passing two or three necessary appropriation bills and transacting a small amount of routine business. Senator Humphrey offered a bill of importance to Cook county. The town of Cicero is incorporated under a special law, and its general town organization now covers several villages. Some of these desire to form organizations of their own, but are unable to do so under the existing law. Senator Humphrey says he introduced this bill at the instance of the residents of Oak Park, who want to make a municipality of their own. When asked if his bill did not intend to cover Harlem or Hawthorne he said no, that it was an Oak Park bill and sent in by Oak Park people. Senator Stringer offered a bill designed to prevent the secession of village territory except by consent of the municipality. Senator Davidson offered a bill providing for the taxation of mortgages held by non-residents and foreigners.

NOTES OF THE SESSIONS.

The veterans of 1860 made a strong feature of Monday's doings, for the old soldiers trooped to Springfield to pay their respects to the son of the war governor who sent them to southern battlefields. All of the notable Grand Army men in the state attended.

Representative Erickson of Chicago has introduced a bill to fix the price of gas to be charged by gas companies organized under the act of 1897. The bill provides that the price for illuminating gas shall not exceed 75 cents, and for natural gas the price shall not exceed 50 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The bill provides that when a company concludes that its business at these prices is not profitable that it may apply to the Circuit Court for relief and the court is empowered to fix fair rates. In case any gas company shall disobey the order of the court the officers shall be subject to a fine of $10,000 and to a further fine of $1,000 for each day during which said disobedience continues, such sum to be collected in an action of debt to be instituted by the attorney general, and also shall forfeit its charter.

The senate is organized as follows: Secretary, J. H. Padcock; first assistant, James W. Turner; second assistant, Lewis Lotz; third assistant, Ed Northum. Secretary's stenographer and typewriter, W. E. Savage. Enrolling and engrossing clerk, O. A. Carlson; first assistant, C. W. Baldwin; second assistant, Henry Froese; sergeant-at-arms, J. G. Reul; first assistant, J. Albin; second assistant, C. W. Greenfield. Postmistress, Ida M. Bacon; assistant, Irene A. Coon. Chaplain, A. G. Goodspeed. Bill clerk, R. Finley Brown.

Plans for Irrigation. Gov. N. O. Murphy of Arizona, who was in Chicago, stated that it had been decided by the governors of several of the western states to make Chicago the headquarters of the National Irrigation Association this winter. "We are of the opinion," he said, "the government should not neglect the opportunities of development offered in several of the western arid states by aiding in providing for a national system of irrigation. We want an appropriation of $25,000 for surveys." Gov. Otero of New Mexico was also in Chicago on his way to Washington to work against the Culbertson bill, which provides for the damming of the Rio Grande River at El Paso.

Battles With An Ostrich. James Lundy, owner of two large ostriches which were brought to Anderson, Ind., for exhibition at the fair of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, was attacked by the larger one and almost killed before he could be rescued. Lundy entered the pen where the birds were inclosed and was set upon at once in a most vicious manner. A desperate fight ensued and Lundy was rescued only by a number of men rushing in with clubs and pitchforks. The lunges of the men were vicious, three men being knocked senseless for a time.

Girls Have a Class Rush. Two hundred girls participated in a class rush at Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, O. The trouble was precipitated by a junior girl wearing a senior cap and gown into chapel. A lively struggle between rival class girls for possession of the cap and gown ensued, but was soon stopped by President Bashford and members of the faculty, who rushed from the platform and secured the battered cap and torn gown.

Miners Have Narrow Escape. A landslide or cave-in occurred at Santiago mine, some six miles from here, entombing sixty men. The main entrance to the mine, which is on the tunnel plan, was completely stopped. The mine was enveloped in total darkness, and the entombed miners had to crawl and feel their way to a small entrance or air tunnel nearly a mile from the main entrance, where the cave-in occurred. Fortunately no one was seriously hurt.

Porto Rico Census Returns. According to the figures of the official census of Porto Rico, just compiled, the total population is 953,243, with 8,721 more women than men, somewhat more than three-fifths are pure white and two-fifths are partially or entirely negro. Porto Rico has 264 persons to the square mile. This density of population is about the same as in New Jersey, nearly twice that in Pennsylvania and three times that in Illinois.

Rout the Rebels at Dumbutu. The British punitive expedition arrived at Dumbutu, West Africa, Jan. 11, and completely surprised and routed the rebels. The troops captured the town after an hour's fighting. Sixty rebels were killed, sixty wounded and 200 captured. Six important chiefs will be brought to Bathurst. The British casualties were six West Indians wounded. More fighting is expected.

Ask for Woman Suffrage. Petitions circulated by Indiana women, and containing the names of upward of 250,000 petitioners, will be forwarded to the thirteen Indiana congressmen within the next ten days, in support of the national movement for woman suffrage. The petition signed in Indiana represents the work of representative women in the various religious denominations in Indiana. The petitions will be presented in congress.

Perpetual-Franchise Test. The attorney general has brought suit in the supreme court at Columbus to test the validity of perpetual franchises in Ohio. The case in point is that of the state against the Cincinnati Edison Electric company, being an action in ouster. The important feature is that the supreme court will be called upon to pass on the perpetual-franchise claims of various corporations in streets of municipalities.

Slighted Wife Aims True. Mrs. William Meek went in search of her husband at Marion, Ind., when he did not return home at 11 o'clock and found him in company with an unknown woman in a saloon. She requested him to accompany her home. He refused to do so and she drew a revolver from the folds of her dress and fired. The bullet took effect in his back. Meek fell to the floor and Mrs. Meek walked out, threw the revolver into the river and gave herself up to the police and was taken to jail. Meek will die.

Ask State Bid for School. A determined effort is to be made to secure from the present state legislature an appropriation to aid in building and equipping a new negro industrial school in southern Illinois after the pattern of the Tuskegee, Ala. school, for which Booker T. Washington is president. A meeting of the officers and board of directors is to be held at Eldorado on Jan. 22, at which time it is believed sufficient funds will be at hand to begin active work. The school will probably be located somewhere in Saline county.

A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF HAPPENINGS FOR SEVEN DAYS.

"Bloody Tim" and "Cherokee Bill" Threaten to Kill Bishop Janssen of Belleville—They Also Avow That They Will Burn the Church.

Threaten to Kill a Bishop.

Bishop Janssen of the Roman Catholic Church has received a threatening letter from unknown persons. The letter is written in German and signed "Bloody Tim" and "Cherokee Bill." The writers demand the appointment of Father James Downey, a former pastor, to St. Patrick's parish at East St. Louis, and the removal of the present priest, Father John Sweeney. They close their letter as follows: "Now don't think we are going to fool with you or Sweeney any longer. Only one thing remains to be done. Give the people the priest that you banished away from here. If you don't we will pay you a visit, and if we succeed in laying our hands on you we will cut your throat from ear to ear and sink your body in Richland creek. The fact that you are a bishop shall not deter us from carrying out our purposes. We defy your officers and detectives, and if it comes to trouble we will give them all they want. We intend to destroy St. Patrick's church and residence if the people's choice is not brought back. If you ignore the requests this time, as you have done in the past, then, Mr. Janssen, you will have to suffer the consequences." The trouble in St. Patrick's parish originated two years ago, when Bishop Janssen appointed Vicar-General Clause, a German priest, to the pastorate. The parishioners demanded an Irish priest. They wanted Father Downey appointed. Bishop Janssen refused, and there followed a bitter war, which led to the excommunication of the entire 2,000 parishioners. They then carried their appeal to the pope, who instructed the bishop to give the parishioners an Irish priest. He appointed Father Sweeney.

McCoy and O'Brien Pardoned.

Governor Tanner has pardoned Michael J. O'Brien, who was sentenced in February, 1897, from Cook county to the penitentiary for life for the murder of his wife. The prisoner's defense was innocence. Since his imprisonment he has been confined most of the time at the hospital for the criminal insane. The governor also pardoned Benjamin F. McCoy, who was convicted in 1898 in McLean county of murder and sentenced to fourteen years. In a fight at a railway station at Shirley on May 18, 1896, J. P. Bullock, alias Smith, was shot and killed. Benjamin McCoy and his brother were arrested, being in the crowd at the time. Benjamin was convicted on a second trial and his brother was acquitted. It is believed that he is innocent.

Illinois Poultry Show.

The annual exhibition of the Illinois State Poultry and Pet Stock Association closed at Bloomington after three days of successful business. The annual meeting of the association elected the following: President, M. W. Summers, Curran; vice-president, Edward Craig, Albion; secretary, C. E. Ellsworth, Danville; treasurer, S. T. Jones, Williamsville; superintendent, A. L. Moore, Normal; executive committee, S. S. Noble, Bloomington; Mrs. George M. Hanley, Hoopston; O. L. McCord, Danville; Dr. F. A. Geller, Palmyra; J. A. Leland, Springfield; judges, Theodore Hewes and W. S. Russell.

Letter to Run Coke Ovens.

Joseph Leiter of Chicago is at the head of a large company which has just contracted for 2,000 tons of coal daily to run 500 coke ovens at and near the new mining town of Herrin, about twelve miles from Carbondale. The ovens will be established at the three principal coal mines, and will give employment to a large force of men, besides using all the slack coal that heretofore was hardly salable.

Storms' Suit Dismissed.

Judge Small of the Kankakee county Circuit court has dismissed, on the defendant's motion, the suit in which Daniel W. Storms, a former patient at the Kankakee insane hospital, sued the institution for $25,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received at the hands of attendants. The plaintiff will file a bill of exceptions. He was formerly connected with the Chicago board of trade.

Vice Smitton at Waukegan.

Waukegan has become strictly law-abiding instead of a wide-open town. The owners of the opera-house have canceled the lease of the managers running the Sunday shows. Chief of Police Powell and Assistant Chief Tyrrell have ordered the closing of the gambling houses, the removal of slot machines and the compliance of the saloons with the city ordinance long violated.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1901.

The local paper is a family necessity. No well-regulated home should be without it.

The Ohio bank robbers who got everything in the bank except two postage stamps did almost as well as if they had been cashiers or confidential bookkeepers.

Incidental to the United Supreme court decision Cuba, Philippines and other parts and parcels of land which this country was supposed to have some title to, owing to the vast expenditure of money and loss of life, has been declared foreign territory.

A bill has found its way into Congress which provides for the increase of $5,000 a year in the salary of senators and representatives. To pay a salary of $10,000 a year to these law makers may not assist in securing a better grade of talent but it will aid materially in reducing the surplus in the U. S. treasury.

The common road is the connecting link between the farm, the home, the country school house and the church. The utility of good roads out of the category of public roads for which government is responsible to the people, one expert estimates that 99 per cent of every load hauled by railroads must be carried in a wagon or truck over a highway. No more convincing proof is needed that building and manufacturing highways is a question of a wise public policy.

A bill has been prepared and will be introduced into the Wisconsin legislature, which is a good one, and should it become a law will place restrictions on the marriage law that are proper, and will prevent an endless amount of misery and cut down the divorce court record. The law provides against the marriage of degenerates, both moral and physical, and one of its sections provides that all marriages in the state shall be in the charge of an examining board, which is to be composed of physicians.

County Commissioner Organ of Cook county has submitted a proposition that the county agent's office be abolished and the charity funds of the county be distributed through regular charitable organizations. The plan has all the appearances of being a good one. Mr. Organ has the facts on his side when he contends that under the arrangement many thousands of dollars could be saved to the taxpayers, and a much smaller sum would accomplish as much good as the larger sum is now doing among the poor. Under the present system the county agent's office is distributing $110,000 worth of charity at an annual expense of $28,500. Twenty-five per cent of the $138,000 spent for poor relief goes to pay for salaries of political hangers on, and the work is not given the attention it deserves. It is said that $75,000 in the right hands would accomplish as much good as the exorbitant amount now expended. One needs only to be in a measure familiar with the workings of Agent Olson's department to know that Commissioner Organ is right.

Governor Yates delivered his inaugural address to the assembly Monday afternoon, and contrary to all established precedents, declined to make any recommendations as to legislation to be enacted during the coming session. On this point he said: "A number of my predecessors have, when about to come into office, found such a condition of affairs that they have deemed it best to, in their inaugural addresses, both convey information and recommend legislation. They were, of course, justified in so doing. For myself, however, believing as I do that the constitution does not require specific recommendations from a new governor before he has by experience acquired information and learned what measures ought to be recommended, I feel compelled to say that at this time my knowledge of state affairs is so limited that it would be discourteous to attempt to convey that limited knowledge to the legislature. And, as to recommendations, I have had so little opportunity to weigh the merits of the great number of measures which have been suggested that I feel that I might be pursuing a mistaken course were I now to indulge in recommendations of any of them. If at any time within the session I shall become satisfied that it is my duty to recommend to the general assembly any particular subject for consideration I shall not hesitate to exercise the constitutional prerogatives of the executive in that particular, feeling well assured that the general assembly will appreciate my motives in then communicating with them, as doubtless they now appreciate my present action in refraining from so doing."

Preserving the Palisades.

Not alone in New York and New Jersey, but throughout the country at large, will it be learned with satisfaction that the imposing Palisades of the historic Hudson are likely to be saved from the ruthless hand of the destroyer. A joint commission, created by acts of the New York and New Jersey legislatures and composed of eminent and public spirited citizens of the two states, has been at work quietly but effectively on the matter committed to them, and such results have been attained that it seems assured that the Palisades will be preserved and form an interstate park and driveway which will be unsurpassed for grandeur and picturesqueness in the world. The commission has obtained a binding option until June 1 on all the Palisades properties where blasting was going on and prevented any further destruction of the cliff during that period, and for the purchase of those properties it has obtained from citizens of New York pledges that they will contribute the required sum of $122,500 provided that the two legislatures shall appropriate enough money at their present sessions to buy other tracts within the limits it has fixed and to build a driveway along the foot of the Palisades.

It seems hardly probable that the states interested will fail to do their share toward carrying out this magnificent plan. The Palisades are mainly in New Jersey, but New Yorkers are even more interested in their preservation than Jerseymen, as practically the only view of them is from the New York side of the Hudson. Like the noble river at their base, the towering and precipitous cliffs form a part of the general outline and perspective of the great metropolis. The Hudson, as it comes down to meet the sea in New York bay, aiding in the formation of a harbor unsurpassed in the world, is the most majestic river of our continent, and the scenic grandeur and impressiveness are scarcely anywhere surpassed in nature's handiwork. The banks on either side of this stately river are keenly suggestive of Revolutionary times, for connected with them are some of the most stirring episodes of the nation's struggle for independence. It is therefore gratifying to the whole country that this most commanding passage of American scenery, enhanced in attractiveness and value by historic association, forming essentially, if not territorially, a part of America's greatest municipality, should forever be preserved in its integrity for the benefit and delight of the people of the city and its environs and its countless visitors from all parts of the world.

The Methodists have been taking an account of stock for the past century in the United States, and the results show an enormous growth. At the close of the eighteenth century the Methodist church numbered 187 ministers and 64,984 members. Now it has over 30,000 ministers and 2,920,000 members. Besides the Methodist Episcopal church 16 other Methodist churches have sprung from it, having the same tenets, which now have 36,424 ministers and 5,985,843 members. In 1800 there was not one Methodist educational institution. Now the church controls 225 schools of various grades, with an endowment of $14,543,489 and debts aggregating $2,336,338. The financial reports of the missionary society began in 1820, when the collections were $823. In 1900 they were $1,233,904. Old world Methodism, which in the days of Wesley had 313 ministers and 76,968 members, now has 6,330 ministers and 1,169,188 members. Such has been the work of Methodism during the past century. In the opening year of this new century the Methodists propose to add 2,000,000 converts to their number and to raise $20,000,000. Of this sum they have already raised $8,192,638. The Methodist church is altogether a vigorous organization.

The statistics of homicide in the United States for 1900 are not particularly encouraging. From 1895 to 1899 there was a steady decrease year by year, the total falling from 10,500 to 6,225, but for the past year the reports show a total of 8,275, an increase over 1899 of 2,050. If in the coming 12 months the figures increase proportionately, the first year of the new century will be as largely marked by crime as was 1895. The millennium seems to be yet quite a long way off.

While the British civil service is recognized as about the best in the world, its military service is an institution in which promotion notoriously goes by favor and not by merit; hence the present row in the British military establishment.

Among the holiday gifts received by a western mayor were five gallons of bourbon whisky, a case of Scotch whisky, a "shaker" for mixing drinks and a basket of champagne. Unfortunately he was obliged to furnish his own cork-screw.

The New York papers have neglected to claim the credit for preserving the Palisades of the Hudson. This is a strangely unaccountable oversight.

Old earth has now a fair start on another century run.

An Elixir of Life.

Medical men all over the country are highly interested in the announcement made in a New York paper that Abram S. Hewitt, former mayor of New York, has found in glycerophosphate of sodium, administered under the advice of Dr. Robin of Paris, an elixir of life. The fact is that ex-Mayor Hewitt lately returned from Paris a greatly rejuvenated man. He went abroad in 1897 very much run down in health and now returns hale and hearty, with an amount of mental and physical vigor and activity surprising for one of his 79 years.

If it be true that Dr. Robin's treatment is really as rejuvenating as it is claimed for it, the old problem of the physicians will be nearer a solution than ever before. Of course nobody claims that glycerophosphate of sodium will enable a man to live forever. The treatment is merely calculated to give to the aged a new lease of life. In an interview with Dr. Robin the French physician is quoted as saying: "To sum the matter up, when the blood is deteriorated or impoverished, it may be given fresh vigor in some cases by a saline injection, but this will not give back life in the essential sense of the word. That is to say, the total amount of vital energy which each person possesses will not be augmented."

Despite this it will surely be a consolation to those whose allotted span of years is nearing its end and who have a desire to live on, as almost every one has, to know that there is a possibility of putting off the day when the pale visitor will come to them.

Again the renewal of the negotiations for the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States is announced, with the statement that this time there is a fair probability that the bargain will be completed. It is explained that the American minister in Copenhagen has offered on behalf of his government to pay $3,240,000 for the islands and that the Danish government shows signs of accepting. When the first negotiations were made for this purchase several years ago, Denmark asked the islanders to vote on the question, and they decided by a large majority that they would like to be annexed to the United States. When the deal was abandoned owing to the withdrawal on the part of this country, Denmark and the islanders alike were incensed at what they considered America's bad faith. Ever since at frequent intervals rumors of renewed negotiations have been heard, but each time for some reason or other they have failed to materialize. Now it looks as though the islands might become a part of our domain. The principal reason for acquiring them is the establishment of a harbor and naval station in that quarter, though they are of considerable commercial value apart from this consideration.

Here is a rather strange instance of the relations of hypnotism to medical jurisprudence: In Red Bud, Ill., a few days ago a young man deliberately shot and killed another young man. The murder was premeditated, since the murderer had openly declared his intention to kill his victim on sight and made his promise good on the first occasion which offered. After the shooting the murderer surrendered to the sheriff. His explanation of the occurrence was that the man he shot "had hypnotized him to his detriment." The coroner's jury seemed to be satisfied with the explanation as good and sufficient, for they promptly exonerated the prisoner. This tends to establish hypnotism, when practiced to the detriment of the subject, as making homicide justifiable or at least excusable. While of course one coroner's jury does not make the law, its finding is at least significant as showing that the popular conception of hypnotic influence is likely to be given weight by jurors in murder cases if skillfully presented.

It is stated that Ujceroy Chang Chih Tung has personally requested the return of missionaries to the provinces over which he is supposed to have charge. Incidentally it is observed that his arsenal in Hanyang is busy day and night turning out small arms. What connection there may be between the two incidents is a matter of conjecture.

A New Jersey goat has the record of whipping a St. Bernard dog in a fair fight. Possibly the goat may have had some experience in a Masonic lodge.

Count Boni Castellane might add to his income by publishing a book for students of economy on how to keep house on $10,000 a month.

We may now expect the ice companies to announce that the prices will have to be higher next summer owing to the failure of the crop.

MCMI is the accepted Roman numeration of the first year of the new century, though it looks rather odd in type.

The Crowe connected with the Cudahy kidnaping case appears to be fully as black as he has been painted.

The conundrum why the new woman is seldom young remains unanswered up to the moment of going to press.

Of Service to Our Readers.

[From the Camden, S. C., Messenger.] We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we haven't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. This testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their homes as a safeguard against croup. Miss Emma Davis, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Davis, died at the National Hospital of Chicago, Wednesday, January 9, aged 15 years, 1 month and 10 days. Funeral was held Saturday, January 12, at 10:30 a. m. at M. E. church, Rev. Dutton officiating, after which the remains were interred in the Wauconda cemetery. Miss Davis had been ailing for the past two months, although her sickness did not take on a serious nature until a few weeks ago and medical assistance was summoned, but failed to give her relief and she was taken to the National Hospital of Chicago, where her sickness was pronounced cancer. The parents were advised that the only hopes for her recovery would lie in an operation, which was performed. She was so weak from the siege of sickness that she could not withstand the strain and never rallied after it. She leaves a father, mother, brothers and sisters, besides relatives and friends to mourn the loss of a loving, kind and obedient child and sister, whose loss will be deeply felt not only in her home, but throughout the community at her home. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Appearances are Deceiving.

Never judge a person by his outside appearance. A shabby coat may envelop a newspaper editor, while the man with a silk hat and a gold-headed cane may be a delinquent subscriber to that editor's paper, says an exchange. And quite often the man who shouts the loudest about "doing unto others as you would be done by," is doing this same editor for two or three years.

He had hoped to be asked to take her in to dinner, but to his great disappointment that duty fell to somebody else. And so until the men arose to let the women file out he could only gaze at her from afar and be politely stupid to the woman next him. He had never met her before, but somehow they seemed to know each other very well by the time they had spoken a few words in the course of the short wait before the guests paired off on their way to the dining room. He didn't know what she thought of him, but he knew that from his point of view she was about right. And he was a man difficult to please.

The men seemed to him to linger over their cigars an interminable time. At last they trooped to the drawing room. He sought her out.

"How did you get along?" he asked.

"To tell you the truth," she said frankly, and her frankness was charming. "I have been bored to death. Have you been?"

"Yes," he said.

"Isn't it a pity," she remarked, "that we didn't get the chance to be bored in each other's company?"—New York Sun.

Lost Her Match.

Loren P. Merrill of Paris tells the story of the particular old woman, and he makes her a resident of Livermore. She was not only old, but she was of the worrying, fretting species of antiquity. She had fretted away her friends and relatives until she was at length living alone in a small house in the outskirts of the town. Just as she was retiring one bitter cold night she discovered that but one unlighted match remained in the house. She lay awake until almost daylight, worrying and disturbing herself with wondering if the match was good. At last she got up and hunted up the match and struck it to see if it would light her kindlings in the morning.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

"That cousin of yours is from Chicago, isn't he?" asked the village postmaster.

"Yes," replied Farmer Haycraft.

"How d'ye know?"

"When he was in here yesterday and asked if there was any mail for the Haycrafts, I told him no. And then a second later when he was turning away I said: 'Hold up. There is one letter for them.' I noticed that when I said 'Hold up' he threw up his hands quicker'n lightning."—Chicago Tribune.

HISTORY OF PALATINE.

COPYRIGHTED BY A. G. SMITH.

Ebenezer Church bought land from John Slade on the south side of the Grove, now the Henry Kueter place and later bought land to the north, near the present Wm. Thies farm.

Albert, brother to Amos Durkee, settled on several acres in the center of Plum Grove and afterwards moved to Bloomington. A few years later he and a gentleman friend came to the Grove with their betrothed and were married by B. B. Lincoln, who was a justice of the peace.

Amos Bailey was the first justice of the peace in the township, he having received the office in 1841.

John Patten with his wife and four children, John, Elizabeth, Mary and Nellie started for "way out in Illinois" from their home in New Hampshire in the spring of 1852. The western terminal of railroads at that time was Buffalo, N. Y. and soon after their arrival there they found themselves aboard the boat Sultana. After a pleasant trip on the lakes they found themselves in Chicago a bright spring morning, May 12, 1852. All scrambled into a lumber wagon and started for a 26 mile ride to the west end of Plum Grove to Samuel Smith's prairie home. They arrived in the afternoon and the Eastern friends were cordially welcomed by the Smith's. Mr. Patten bought the Samuel Smith farm, the establishment called "house," consisted of two log houses connected by a frame part. It was situated on same rise or ground, a short distance west of the house lately built by Mr. Rhode, who now owns the farm, and is located in section 34, north range 10. In the year 1853 prosperity abounded and with it came a baby boy to the new home of the Pattens, a sure enough Westerner. He had come to stay and here he has remained. He was named Charles H. Patten, who with his wife and two children now reside in Palatine. In his western life John Patten was interested in the schools of the district, engaged as teacher and arranged seats in his small log house, where school was "kept" the full term when a new frame school house was built. His later life will be treated on in the history of the village.

Benjamin M. Porter, Franklin Clark and Eben Moore took up land in Plum Grove in 1839 and, all being single, they lived in a log house together. This was called "Bachelor's Hall" by the settlers and many amusing stories are related of this hall. Charlie Lansing, the Malatto who came with John Barden, acted as cook for the bachelors and they used to have good times with him. One morning Porter was fooling with Charlie, who was baking flap-jacks, and threw the basin of pancake mixture over Charlie's woolly head and then ran into the woods while Charlie cooled off.

Wm. George started a truck garden in Plum Grove and he became known as a great gardener in the early days. He planted early in the spring and would haul his vegetables to Chicago for the early market and sell from house to house. At times he would take a large wagon-box full of extra nice onions to Chicago and often got as high as $1 a bushel for them.

John Barden was a cattle buyer and would buy up cattle of the choicest kind to kill and corn the beef. He would ship it to the markets in Buffalo and his old home in Vermont. He also made a great amount of choice cheese which he would ship East.

Oxen were more common than horses, the latter being a luxury. The oxen were used in breaking the prairie and were slow-going animals. The settlers would drive to Chicago with their ox teams to take their wheat or corn to market. Before starting they would send word around the settlement when they would start and the neighbors would send for what they wanted. The journey to Chicago by land on an ox team was a slow, tedious job and one that was not desired. The road was a path across the prairie, through swamps a greater part of the way. It was a common thing for a person carrying a load to Chicago to get stuck in the mud, take his grain out of the wagon bag by bag, get out onto more passable ground and load again. This would sometimes have to be done several times on the journey. Wheat brought from forty to fifty cents a bushel in the early '40s.

The nearest grist mill was in Dundee and it was also here that the first saw mill was started so that settlers who built houses out of sawed lumber had to haul it from Dundee.

The settlers who came before 1841 only had a squatter's claim to land they settled on. Anyone could come, stake out and claim any amount of land he wished and when the government got ready to give possession such persons would have to pay for as much land as he had money enough to pay for. If he could not pay for all the claim he staked out for himself, anyone could purchase the balance. A number of persons came and took up large claims in this way and later sold sections of these claims to later arrivals. In 1841 the government claim agent came to Plum Grove to give titles to the land. A number of Eastern capitalists organized themselves into a wealthy combination to purchase the best tracts in the West and when the agent came to Plum Grove representatives of this wealthy Eastern combination came to bid on the land against the settlers. By bidding more than the regular government price, which was $1.25 an acre, these land speculators hoped to seize the claims from the settlers. The settlers had heard of the contemplated move and formed themselves into an alliance to protect themselves and keep possession of their claims, upon which they had built their homes.

The Skin and the Lungs.

"That the skin is intimately connected with the lungs is proved by the fact that our minor ills of the respiratory tract—colds, for instance—are almost always traceable to a checking of the perspiration, so that the impurities of the blood poison us," says Harvey Sutherland, in Ainslee's. "Everybody knows the story about the little boy that was covered with gold leaf as a cherub for some Roman pomp and how he died in agony a few hours afterward. The poisons manufactured by his own organisms slew him, to say nothing of his suffocation. Burns involving more than one-third of the general surface are fatal because the excretory powers of the skin are lessened beyond the abilities of the other depuratory organs to make up for."

"Varnish an animal and it will die in from six to twelve hours, say some authorities. This incontrovertible fact is matched by another equally incontrovertible—that nobody ever heard of any case of tarring and feathering that killed the victim. He might have had all kinds of trouble in getting the stuff off, and he might have felt a shock to his pride, but he didn't die that anybody ever heard of. I never assisted at a ceremony of this kind at either end of the joke, and so I can't speak as to the completeness with which the body is covered with the tar, but from my general knowledge of the character of the people of the west and southwest, where such sports are freely indulged in, I should say that it would most likely be a thorough and comprehensive pigmentation. It may be that the man breathes through the quills of the feathers stuck on, but I doubt it. I should think tar would seal up the pores of the skin quite as effectually as varnish, and it is a paint warranted to wear in all weathers and not to crack or scale off."

The Kiss That Made Him Mad.

A Boston man, in speaking of certain foreign characteristics, told the following story: "A middle aged American couple traveling abroad some years ago called in Rome on a sculptor with whom they had been acquainted years before. The visit passed off pleasantly, but at its close the host gallantly, but none the less to her surprise and chagrin, kissed the lady as he said goodbye. The sculptor was an elderly man, but nevertheless it was a liberty, and she was not astonished to hear her husband ejaculate: 'Why, I never heard of such cheek! I've a good mind to go back and tell him what I think of him!' 'After two or three remarks of a similar tenor, in which the note of anger was rising, the wife decided to pour oil on the troubled waters and so, laying her hand on his arm, said: 'I know, dear, he shouldn't have kissed me, but what does it really matter? What does a kiss count in a woman of my years? He is a very old man, and probably he was following the fashion of the country.'"

"Her husband turned an astonished face. 'Of course I don't mind his kissing you,' he raged, 'but' and his voice rose. 'It's his having kissed me that has hurt my feelings!' 'The sculptor had followed the Italian custom and kissed both wife and husband.'—New York Tribune.

Not the Bass Viol Man's Fault.

A capital story relating to good old times is still told in the Fen district of the eastern counties. As is well known by many and even now remembered by some, a bass viol was often procured to help the choirs in parish churches.

One lovely Sunday morning in the summer while the parson was droning out his drowsy discourse and had about reached the middle a big bull managed to escape from his pasture and marched majestically down the road, bellowing defiantly as he came. The parson, who was somewhat deaf, heard the bull bellow, but mistaking the origin of the sound, gravely glanced toward the singers' seats and said in tones of reproach:

"I would thank the musicians not to tune up during service time. It annoys me very much."

As may well be imagined, the choir looked greatly surprised, but said nothing.

Very soon, however, the belligerent bull gave another bellow, and then the aggrieved parson became desperately indignant.—Cassell's Magazine.

A Mountain Accident.

A serious seeming accident with a fortunate termination is reported by a western exchange.

A man and his wife, while driving along a mountain road in Oregon, met with a curious mishap. The wagon was overturned, and the occupants fell out. The woman dropped into the branches of a tree 50 feet below, and the man went sliding and bumping fully 300 feet to the bottom of a ravine.

When he recovered his senses, he was comparatively unharmed and went to his wife's rescue, but it was an hour before he could extricate her from where she hung by her skirts.

Forsaking all Others

By AMELIA DUGHEMIN

She followed his movements with yearning eyes, and unconsciously influenced by her imploring thoughts, he half hesitated as he came near. Quick as a dart Helen glanced up; she saw the pale woman bending anxiously forward and her eyes flashed in cruel triumph. The next moment her voice rang out in a gay challenge, and she sped rapidly onward, followed by Harvey, in laughing pursuit, neither pausing until they had reached the road.

All the strength seemed to leave Gladys when he disappeared. She leaned heavily against the window pane, her breath coming in labored gasps. She tried to call to her aid the pride of a woman deliberately slighted or thoughtlessly forgotten, but the agony of the one deserted crushed out all weaker emotions. The slow tears coursed down her white face as memory pitilessly flung at her the frozen hopes of her wasted years.

"Through the haze of grief she saw Harvey in every phase of his infancy and boyhood—the timid baby clinging to her gown, the laughing boy strutting about with dimpled hands in his first pockets; the bold lad flying ahead on his pony, the tall youth walking protectively by her side, and in the dark eyes of babe and boy and youth was the loving light that in man's had faded, and darkened all her days.

"I cannot bear it!" she sobbed. "I am not old; how shall I endure the long, lonely years? Why must we live when joy and hope and courage are gone? Since my poor, imperfect work is done there is nothing left me but to die. Oh, if I could!"

Overwhelmed by her despair and grief she sank, half fainting to be caught by a strong arm.

"No, no, my lamb! Your work isn't done; it's only just begun. God willing," said Phebe, her rough voice softened by deep feeling. "Never give way, dearie—the best of life is before you. Look yonder at the sun in a sea of purple and yellow and red. This morning it rose in clouds, and there was rain. At noon it shone hot and scorching, and we were glad to shut out its rays. But tonight it sinks in glory, throwing a soft light on every little cloud, turning all the gray to gold. So it shall be with your days, Miss Gladys, the last better and brighter than the first. Ay, hide your face on my shoulder, and cry out your sorrow there. It's not for the first time. Years ago we dared together the darkness of an unknown future. We'll do it again, my pretty, and comforted by your gruff old Phebe, you yet will find the road to happiness and peace."

CHAPTER VII.

It was perhaps to indemnify herself for Phebe's victory that in the succeeding weeks Helen, by her bold course of action, seemed to proclaim herself the acknowledged mistress of the house. She waited in sullen inactivity for a day or two after Harvey had sent the letter to his mother, expecting to be summoned by Mrs. Atherton for a conference, though she had no intention of resigning the keys, the symbol of her authority, without a struggle, having fully convinced herself that as the wife of the defrauded sharer in the estate this authority was hers by right.

It is surprising how readily the covetous and selfish believe what they wish to believe. There is no doubt that Shylock considered himself justly entitled to his pound of flesh, despite the trifling inconvenience the giving of it might cause Antonio, and his line of argument has been pursued by many another, though in a modified degree. Helen was prepared to back up her unauthorized claim with a dozen ingenious arguments which she detailed to Harvey with a sweet plausibility that made him her convert in the end, though some of his scruples were hard to overcome. But she was a convincing talker and knew where to stop; her closing sentence always left him with a new thought that did its work in her absence. Gratitude is not the dominant trait of humanity, and it is pleasant to be convinced that what we have blindly enjoyed as a privilege we may arbitrarily claim as a right.

So the days passed on, and Gladys gave no sign, Helen made vigorous movement. She dismantled the best guest chambers, a suite of two handsome rooms, and fitted them up luxuriously for her sisters, taking furniture from every part of the house to carry out her fancy. Why keep vacant, and in the center of the house, rooms that could be used to advantage? she argued. In this town of short distances they never had resident guests, and the chambers in the wing and on the upper floor were quite sufficient for the few who tarried for the night. Helen's reasons were always logical, and stated in a manner so copiously convincing that in agreeing with her arguments her hearers lost sight of the fact that she was regulating a matter in which she had no concern.

She had excellent taste and ample materials to work with; the suite, now arranged as a parlor and bedroom, which also served as day nursery, looked so charming when completed that with her sister's help and management she extended the work of renovation to other apartments. Every evening, when Harvey returned from business, he was playfully dragged into some room in course of alteration, and his approbation demanded by the group of happy workers. If he had misgivings, they argued them away; if he objected, as he sometimes did, they cooed and laughed him into compliance. The odds were against the boy; there was an excuse for his weakness.

Gladys took her meals in her own rooms, and never left them except for a daily airing upon the upper balcony on which her side windows opened. Phebe, in her pilgrimages back and forth to the kitchen and pantries, saw all that was going on and her face grew grimmer than ever. But she made no protest, and Helen, quick to interpret any sign in her own favor, decided that this was one of the instances when silence meant acquiescence. No doubt Mrs. Atherton had thought everything over, and rather than totally alienate her boy, concluded to yield, at least in a measure, to his just demands. Full surrender would come later, when she realized how tardy she had been in a matter that should long ago have been adjusted. Naturally she found it hard to acknowledge herself in the wrong; but the acknowledgement would surely come, and when it did, even though late, they must receive it very kindly and generously. Helen told Harvey, with the air of a very good person magnanimous enough to pardon a very bad one.

Helen, however, was not afraid of Tomlinson, nor of any living being. To do her justice she had thoroughly persuaded herself she was doing her duty, and thus grounded, flatly refused to surrender the keys.

"When I have given an account of my stewardship to Mrs. Atherton," she said, "I am sure she will give them into no hand but her own. I am ready to see her at any time."

"My mistress isn't strong enough to talk business just yet," said Phebe, hastily. "As for the keys, I'm not particular for a week or so. I can't be much about the house until she is well on her feet again. The thing I am particular about is to get her parlor ready for her right away, and I want every servant in the house to help me."

"The room cannot be disturbed today," said Helen, firmly. "I must first make some suitable arrangements for my sisters."

She glanced at her husband, who stood a little aloof, looking as awkward as men generally do when serving as a buffer for two angry women.

"Did you not explain this to your mother, Harvey?"

"Fully; but my arguments failed to carry weight," he answered with assumed lightness, hoping to win Helen to a less determined mood. He knew Phebe better than she did, and feared serious trouble if the housekeeper was defied. "I think we must try and do what the mater asks, sweetheart. She is seldom exacting, and the fancies of an invalid should be humored."

"I have no patience with sick fancies; they are born of weakness that should not be encouraged. She demands an impossibility. In her weak state she does not need the room. I wonder at you, Harvey, for encouraging her in such selfishness."

"Oh, well, well, don't let us quarrel over anything so trifling. No doubt tomorrow will be soon enough to think about it," he hastily replied, slipping his arm about her shoulders and drawing her to him. She gazed affectionately into his face and put up her hand to meet his, her frown gone. He looked at Phebe, smiling persuasively. "I'm afraid this wilful girl must have her way, Tomlinson. Won't you make it all right with the mater? I'm sure you can if you will."

To any other onlooker the matrimonial tableau would have had its charm. It enraged Phebe. She was jealous of her mistress, pushed aside and treated like a child by this presumptuous pair, who seemed to think the world made for them and their paltry love. She glared angrily at them from under her shaggy brows.

"Is that your last word, Mr. Harvey?" she asked with ominous calmness. "Then listen to me, both of you. The rooms will be ready for the mistress in just three hours. I'll give the nurse and parlor maid half an hour to take away their things. If anything is left after that I'll throw it out of the window—and you from the door if you dare interfere!" she added to Helen, who had started forward, hot words on her lips.

"Tomlinson, what do you mean by addressing my wife in that insolent manner?" exclaimed Harvey.

"What do you mean by disobeying the best mother a son ever had, you ungrateful boy?" she furiously returned. "For that's all you are, though you're mightily set up with having a wife and baby. If you were a few years younger I'd larrup you well for your impudence. Get out of my way—you've hindered me long enough. As for this woman, whose jumping jack you are, she'll be dealt with later."

Phebe never gave Gladys the full particulars of the scene that ensued; but for once Helen had found her match, and was forced to yield.

"Though it half killed her to do it," said Phebe. "She was in an awful rage. I thought she'd fly at me when I called Mr. Harvey a boy. I had to give her that shot," she chuckled, her shrewd gray eyes twinkling, "and it hit him, too. I never saw him angrier. He vows he'll not forgive either of us for insulting his wife—or rather she said it, and he fell in with the idea."

Gladys sighed. She had gained her point, but at the cost of her boy's displeasure. She looked around her pretty parlor, with its open piano and music and books and bric-a-brac and pictures, all lit up by the dancing flames of the fire, and thought drearily that its comfort meant little when unshared by any congenial person who loved her.

For the next week or so the house was ominously quiet. Gladys took her meals in her own parlor, waited on by Phebe and Annette. No other member of the household came to her. From her windows she saw Helen and the baby on the covered veranda of the south wing, the woman pacing back and forth in the sun, the child clutching at her hair and crowing with delight, and she yearned to hold the little fellow in her arms, close close to her desolate heart. Was she never again to be loved and loving?

CHAPTER VIII.

One morning a letter arrived from Mrs. Leonard. Gladys read it carefully several times, then lay back in her chair to muse on its contents. All that day and the next—the Sabbath—she was very thoughtful, and in the afternoon, having had a long talk with Phebe, summoned Harvey to her room. His answer was a curt note:

"When you have sent for my wife and apologized for the insult offered to her and her sisters I will see you again—not before. Meanwhile, it is only fair to warn you that I shall resist any interference with Mrs. Atherton's plans through a third party, being convinced that she is serving your interests and ours in the course she is pursuing."

Gladys laughed sadly at the manly assumption of the letter. Helen had rather an imposing style, she admitted. She could scarcely believe that the writer was her once obedient son. He had been an apt pupil—very ready to turn against her at the bidding of another. A measure of contempt for him, a scorn of his weakness, was making itself felt in her heart. She strove to put it away, but it remained, and gained strength.

"I hate Helen," she thought, for she has robbed me of my boy. But she owes me no allegiance, and he does. He should never have written that rubbish, even at her dictation. Their interests! Ah, you are making a sad blunder, poor ingrates!"

She ran over the contents of the note once more, then tore it into fragments and threw them into the grate. There was no fire, the day having been unusually warm for the season, and applying a lighted match to the little heap she watched it burn to ashes, wishing she might destroy the recollection of the written words as easily. Phebe had not returned from her Sunday class meeting. Annette was enjoying her weekly outing. For the coming hour Gladys would be alone, and she longed for companionship.

She went to the window after awhile and stood looking at the pretty scene below. The sun was sinking fast, and the grass and the trees seemed to show a deeper green under the burnished sky, and throw in greater contrast the groups of late flowers touched by its fire. Soon all this autumn splendor would be over, to make way for the white lonely winter. She shivered as she thought of the long, cold days and nights.

The door in the south wing opened, and Harvey and Helen equipped for their evening ramble, came forth, laughing back at some one who accompanied them to the entrance. Helen had pinned a black lace shawl about her head and shoulders, and in her hair shone a yellow rose, the companion of which Harvey wore in his coat. It was one of her loving demands that at all times he would wear the flowers she wore, and he humored her in it. "He'd sport a collar and number if she asked him," Phebe once said, commenting on this. And Gladys, who found nothing amiss in the caprice, reproved her for her unkind criticism. (To be continued.)

CAGAYEN AND CIBOTU.

Two More Philippine Islands Ceded to United States.

A Spanish-American convention has been signed in Washington, by which two small islands, bearing the names of Cagayen and Cibotu, are ceded to the United States by Spain for $100,000. These islands lie at the southern and hottest extremity of the archipelago, being the tail end of the Sulu group. Cagayen lies in the passage from the China sea into the Sulu sea, and Cibotu lies between the Sulu and Celebes seas. Both properly belong to the Philippine archipelago and were supposed to be ceded to the United States by the Paris treaty. But the limits of the cession were designated by geographical lines and two little islands were afterward found to lie outside the boundary named in the treaty, though believed, owing to their position being given incorrectly on the maps, to be within them. They were of no use to Spain, but that government had the right to demand an extra compensation before turning them over to the United States. For this reason the full price of the archipelago in money may now be said to have been $20,000,000. The mistake of the commissioners has cost the extra amount, but the government has acted wisely in purchasing the stray islands and keeping the archipelago intact—Chicago-Tribune.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.

PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR PRAISES PE-RU-NA

First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, Ga., and Its Pastor and Elder.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true today of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men representing all classes and stations are equally represented.

A dignified representative of the Presbyterian church in the person of Rev. E. G. Smith does not hesitate to state publicly that he has used Peruna in his family and found it cured when other remedies failed. In this statement the Rev. Smith is supported by an elder in his church.

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"Having used Peruna in my family for some time it gives me pleasure to testify to its true worth. My little boy seven years of age had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific. As a tonic for weak and worn out people it has few or no equals."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Mr. M. J. Rossman, a prominent merchant of Greensboro, Ga., and an elder in the Presbyterian church of that place, has used Peruna, and in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, writes as follows:

"For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys and tried many remedies, all of which gave me no relief. Peruna was recommended to me by several friends, and after using a few bottles I am pleased to say that the long looked for relief was found and I am now enjoying better health than I have for years, and can heartily recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted. It is certainly a grand medicine."—M. J. Rossman.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

NEGRO BURNED AT THE STAKE.

Fred Alexander Dies Protesting His Innocence.

MOB VENGEANCE IN KANSAS.

Alleged Assaulter, Wounded on the Head with a Hammer at the Jail, is Dragged Out Literally Roasted in Flames Until Dead.

Protesting his innocence with his last breath, Fred Alexander was dragged from the county jail at Leavenworth, Kan., Tuesday, and burned at the stake upon the very spot where was found on the 6th of last November the dead and outraged body of Pearl Forbes. The lynching and summary execution of the negro, who was charged with the crime of murder and also with that of attempted assault upon Eva Roth, was accomplished in the waning light of the afternoon, and in the mob of 3,000 or more blood-maddened citizens were to be seen many of Leavenworth's most prominent men. The torch was applied to the oil-soaked body of the negro by John Forbes, father of the murdered girl, but a moment after he had confronted the victim, imputed to him the crime for which he was about to die and had received from his lips an emphatic denial of guilt. Though vainly trying to convince his captors that they were about to take the life of an innocent man, Alexander uttered no plea for mercy, maintained a stolid nerve to the end and cheated the mob of the joy it anticipated in seeing its victim writhe in fear.

On a Prominent Street.

The scene of the burning was on Lawrence avenue, near the Santa Fe tracks, and for hours after there was nothing left of the negro save a blackened mass of bones and charred flesh crowds continued to come to the place and gaze upon the work of the mob. Early in the afternoon Alexander had been brought from the state penitentiary at Lansing under strong guard and had been placed in the jail at Leavenworth.

Sledge-hammers and cold chisels were brought into play, and with these the hinges of the big sheet iron door were soon cut. Soon several men appeared at the jail door dragging the blood-stained form of Alexander. He had received a blow over his head with a hammer, but was conscious.

Fought Like Beasts.

Men, angered beyond semblance to human beings, fought to get at the negro as he was shored and kicked through the door. In the crowd were fully 1,000 school children and fully 200 women, many of whom vied with the men in the frenzy of their emotions.

Is Electrocutted for Murder.

William Neufeld, who murdered his mother's cousin, Mrs. Annie Kronmann, in her apartments in West 35th street, New York, Aug. 7, 1899, was put to death in the electric chair in the state prison at Sing Sing. Neufeld attributed his trouble to gambling. Robbery was the motive of the crime. He had been introduced to Mrs. Kronmann by his mother at a party, at which Mrs. Kronmann made a free display of jewelry. Soon after the party Neufeld killed his relative with a hatchet and fled with the contents of her jewel box. He was arrested later. He had served a term in the penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., for robbery committed in Chicago.

Steel Trust Hides Injuries.

Aversion to publicity has been carried to a further extreme by the American Steel and Wire company at Cleveland this year than ever before. Since Jan. 1 no accidents have been reported from the trust's mills, and this caused an investigation, as fatal accidents are of frequent occurrence. The investigation developed that the trust has made a contract with an ambulance and hospital service to attend to all employees injured. One of the provisions is that no information shall be given to any one concerning anything that happens at the trust's mills.

Oil Excitement in Texas.

The excitement at Beaumont, Tex., over the big oil well increases with each hour. There is no indication that the flow of oil from the geyser is diminishing, nor is there any change in the character of the fluid. Captain Lucas, upon whose land the well is located, had to stop the immense flow. The town continues to fill up, and the streets suggest a great holiday event. The lumber industry is forgotten in the wild rush for oil lands.

Had a Family and Rob a Safe.

Five masked burglars robbed the farmhouse of Henry Stroker, near Versailles, O., of $50. Mr. and Mrs. Stroker and their son, Grant, were bound and gagged till they told where the safe was in which the money was kept. Besides the money the robbers stole jewelry and horses and then escaped.

Rev. C. M. Sheldon's Salary Increased.

The board of trustees of the Central Congregational church, Topeka, Kan., increased the salary of Rev. Charles M. Sheldon from $1,200 to $1,800 a year. Mr. Sheldon's popularity is greater than ever since his return from his European trip.

Johnson Gets the Decision.

At Findlay, O., Grant Johnson, captain of the Chicago Giants, colored ball team, was given the decision over "Con" Riley, "Kid" McCoy's ex-trainer, after six rounds of clever boxing.

TOO TIRED TO STIR!

Weary Women Get Strength and Vigor from Dr. Greene's Nervura.

She had planned to go out with her husband, but her strength failed her.

Her nerves were excited all day, and when night came she just couldn't find the courage. It is the old story of weakness and nervousness taking the pleasure out of life and filling it with discontent and suffering. It is not honest fatigue resulting from the daily task; it is weariness born of weakness and ill health.

The ideal strengthener for weak women is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It builds them up in every way by toning up the blood and strengthening the nerves. Nothing else in the world can do Nervura's work. It seeks out the weak spots and strengthens them. It enriches the blood and gives it a healthy circulation, thus putting new life into the entire body.

Strength to overcome the general discouragement is followed by the ambition to be well. A few nights of sound, refreshing sleep brings a new sensation of acquired strength. How ready now is this woman for every duty and every plan for pleasure! The new color in her cheeks shows the potent work of the vegetable elements in Nervura. This woman is now a cured woman, and such transformations are occurring in every community through the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura. If you are run-down and discouraged, here is the certain help.

MRS. OLIVER WILSON, of North-boro, Mass., says:

"I was suffering from nervousness, caused by female weakness and nervous prostration. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura and have obtained my old elastic step around the house. After creeping around for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly."

READ DR. GREENE'S OFFER.

Dr. Greene's advice is free to all who seek it, either by personal call at his office, 35 W. 14th Street, New York City, or by letter through the mail. All who are broken in health should call or write without delay to Nervura's discoverer for free counsel.

Here is some timely and sensible advice. If you would increase your happiness, forget your neighbor's faults; forget the slander you have heard; forget the fault finding and give little thought to the cause that provoked it; forget the peculiarities of your friends, only remember the points that make you fond of them; forget the personal quarrels or histories you have heard by accident, and if repeated would seem a thousand times worse than they are: blot out everything disagreeable from yesterday and start out today anew.

A series of revival services under the auspices of the Baptist, Salem and M. E. churches, opened at the Salem church Wednesday evening. Evangelist Conn of Sandwich is conducting the work ably assisted by the pastors or the churches named. The musical program is in charge of Mr. Chas. R. Haudenschild of Chicago who has an excellent chorus composed of local talent to aid him. The meetings are full of interest and attracting large attendance and will prove of great benefit to the cause in this village and surrounding country.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The 10th grade class has just begun to delve into the mystic features of electricity. In their investigations even pet cats have been compelled to assist. The investigators are bracing their nerves for the shocks that are to be endured. Recently the civics class has been learning all about the nomination and election of president and vice-president. In an examination Wednesday they showed that they are able to explain it to all who are not fully informed on this important feature of our government and the writer believes this number is very numerous. In the examination Miss Amanda Kampert stood 100 and several others nearly perfect. The High school room has indulged in the luxury of singing books, which has aroused the vocal organs to renewed exertions. Beautiful singing is now a pleasant part of the opening exercises.

Miss Gertrude Haudenschild, the daughter of the choirster of the revival services, entered school Monday in 3rd grade work. A brave boy in Miss Frye's room prevented a possible panic one day this week by boldly planting his foot squarely on a mouse, on mischief bent. Oral spelling has emerged from obscurity, having survived the ban of the faddists and is now one of the regular exercises of our school. It has heightened the interest in spelling considerably.

The High school pupils last week took an examination in arithmetic, the same examination that was given to the High school pupils of Washington, D. C. Their average standing was considerable better than that reached by the pupils of our country's capitol. The Grammar room pupils have had their respects for the Indians much increased by listening to the reading of Ramona, written by Helen Hunt Jackson.

The pupils of Miss Kublan's room have, with great pleasure, listened to the readings of "Beautiful Joe," which finely teaches kindness to dumb animals. Miss Hahn, teacher of the 5th room, has been confined to the house on account of sickness two days this week and her pupils enjoyed a vacation.

George Meier returned to school Thursday, after an illness of three days.

Of Interest to Milk Shippers.

Within a space scarcely ten miles square dwell two million people. Two million people to be fed and clothed with material from the farm and the loom. Milk, owing to its brief life, must be procured within a few hours' ride of Chicago. As the big city is bounded, the milk producing territory is limited to two sides. Into this territory to an average depth of eighty miles, twenty-one lines of railway carry the vital food to the city. Collectively these lines of railway carry approximately 18,000 eight-gallon cans of milk and cream to Chicago daily. The wholesale value of the milk and cream varies with the season, but will average about $22,500 per day, or over $8,000,000 yearly. The retail value delivered to the consumer is about double this amount. The railroads receive for handling this milk over $1,000,000 yearly. The farmer stands all losses from sour milk or leakage in transit, and pays before service is rendered. The transportation charge per can averages 16 1/2 cents, which is paid by the farmer out of the price he expects to be so fortunate as to get for his milk at the end of the month or the middle of the next month. In May and June, almost one-third of the total value of the milk is paid in advance for transportation. No other commodity pays as princely for the privilege of traveling says the Milk News.

Should Take Rest.

In the long run farmers would accomplish more work, make a gain in every way and live longer if they would take more rest. Many farmers have an idea that in order to accomplish a day's work it is necessary to rise at 4 o'clock in the morning and work as long as it is possible to see. This is an old method and is wearing on man and beast, and experience has shown that no more is accomplished than in two-thirds that time when the body is well rested. With modern farm machinery twice as much work can be done in a day as could have been done 20 years ago, yet many are not satisfied and count a day's labor the space between daylight and dark even in the long summer days. It is this everlasting grind and drudgery that is driving many country boys to the city. Good management will accomplish more than long hours of work without system or method.

Unlimited Pleasure.

Some people are always on the lookout for means and ways whereby they may make others happy; to relieve the monotony surrounding our short stay on this terrestrial sphere and bring us into closer bonds of friendly and social unity. It is indeed pleasant when one is so situated as to be able, and is possessed of the accomplishment of knowing how, to entertain and afford to their guests solid enjoyment without the trimmings of formality—to make you feel at home.

The cozy, inviting home of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. McIntosh was the scene of unlimited pleasure last Saturday evening.

ing, the occasion being an informal party and luncheon given in honor of Miss Rae Nate of Chicago. Various games were introduced and musical selections furnished which occupied the time until eleven o'clock when a dainty and tempting luncheon was served. It was one of the most pleasant of events made doubly enjoyable by the cordial manner in which Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh personally catered to the welfare of each one present. Those in attendance were: Mesdames—Lesoy Powers, Rae Nate, Chicago. Carl Meyer, Grace Peck. J. Cassidy, Belle Dohmire. Messrs—C. Meyer, J. Cassidy, T. H. Creet, George Otis, W. Abilgrim, Palatine Jesse Vele, Chicago. C. B. Morrison.

GIVEN UNANIMOUS VOTE.

Shelby M. Cullom Chosen U. S. Senator for Fourth Term.

Shelby M. Cullom was nominated as the republican candidate for the United States Senate by the representatives of his party in the Forty-second General Assembly in caucus assembled Thursday night without a word of opposition and by acclamation. This is the finish of one of the most eventful and at times one of the most spirited fights known in Illinois politics, and is satisfactory to the people of this great state.

The contest for this honor began at the opening of John R. Tanner's administration four years ago and has been waged in and out of season in every one of the fifty-one senatorial districts of the state since that time. At no time has there been but two leading aspirants for the coveted honor—the victor and John R. Tanner, Congressman Hitt and Cannon were in the race simply to divide the vote in the caucus. Realizing that the people desired that Senator Cullom should be returned the opposition gracefully abandoned the fight because, as they explained, they could not muster votes enough. This is to be Mr. Cullom's last term of service, as admitted by his followers and himself, and it is eminently proper that this last election should come by common consent. We congratulate Senator Cullom and his supporters—the people—on this victory.

What Constitutes a Friend?

An eastern paper says that someone recently asked the question, "What is a friend?" It answers the question truthfully as follows: "It is the fellow who will inconvenience himself for you. It is the man who will sit by your bedside when your frame has been touched by disease. It is the man who will come to you when the clouds are black, while the muttering thunder of misfortune grows along the sky. It is the man who will say: 'Don't be discouraged. I see you are in trouble. Let me help you out.' It is not the man who will talk to you in a pleasant manner for policy's sake. It is not the man who will do you a kindness only when he feels he will get in return full value for services rendered. We would not give two cents for a man who would write his name in fancy letters in our friendship album if he would not visit us when we are in trouble."

The Feminine Observer.

It is easier to earn money than to save it. No woman who is true to her sex will ever marry a man who is so tall she can't reach his hair. A man can fall in love on a small salary, but he should remember that safety pins are not on the free list. To fully realize the folly of superstition you will have only to sleep on a piece of wedding cake and then dream of snakes. Many a girl will weep over the imaginary woes of a heroine in a cheap novel while her mother is scrubbing up the kitchen floor. Charity is the feeling a woman doesn't have when some other woman puts her foot in her gown and tears a flounce off of it and then says, "Excuse me."

Keep Ashes from the Street.

Do not dump ashes in the streets of the village of Barrington. The ordinance prohibiting this will be strictly enforced. If you do not desire to pay the penalty provided for violation of same, you will comply with this request. By order of BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Reconsidered.

A Topeka man lost a small opal set out of his ring and went to a jeweler to have it replaced. Returning home he found the lost set and, putting it in his mouth for safe keeping, hurried back to the jeweler's to have that set used instead of the new opal. Rushing into the store, he said: "Say, I've found the old set, so don't use the new one." He attempted to remove the stone from his mouth, gave a gulp, looked sheepish and said: "I guess you'll have to use the new stone." That man needed a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Sold by Chas. E. Churchill.

SKIRMISH FOR POSITION

In the Probate Court by Contestants for Share of Willmarth Estate.

The interesting contest in which Mrs. Sarah M. Cronk asks that she be given a share in the estate of the late Henry Willmarth, on the grounds that she was lawfully wedded to the deceased, was called for hearing before Judge Cutting in the probate court of Cook county last Friday morning.

The circumstances surrounding the case were tinged with romance and no small amount of mystery. It had been stated by the metropolitan press, that surprises were in store for both plaintiff and defendant, consequently there was an audience of curiosity seekers.

There was but little of the sensational in the skirmish for position, the attorneys for each side reserving the heavy ammunition for the next battle which is sure to come. The plaintiff reiterated the statements made in her complaint, that she had, in the summer of 1893, at the city of Milwaukee, been joined in the holy bonds of matrimony to Henry G. Willmarth, and that she was so recognized by him; that the matter was kept a secret from the general public for obvious reasons. To substantiate the story of the marriage Mrs. Vivian McGuire Scott took the stand and testified that she was present and witnessed the ceremony; that the minister wrote something, presumably a certificate, and delivered it to Mr. Willmarth. This paper Mrs. Cronk claims was destroyed in some manner by the administrator of Mr. Willmarth or someone in his employ.

L. H. Bennett, attorney, was called in behalf of the defense. He was familiar with the case, or at least a part of it, having called on the plaintiff, at her request, in company with Attorney Jackman of Woodstock, and heard a portion of what she (Mrs. Cronk) proposed to use as a basis for her claim in the contest. Mr. Jackman refused to touch the case and Mr. Bennett considered all negotiations at an end. He testified that Mrs. Cronk had called upon him and told him that if he could remember an instance when he had heard the deceased call her wife she would give him the sum of $500.

Mrs. Leroy Powers testified that Mrs. Cronk had stated in her presence that she had never been married but once and that was to Mr. Cronk.

Frank O. Willmarth, the administrator of the estate, disputed the claim of the plaintiff as to being his father's widow.

Judge Cutting reserved his decision in the case.

There are points in this matter—charges and counter charges—which are distributed in allopathic doses, but as their truthfulness seems to be doubtful this paper does not propose to aid in their circulation. THE REVIEW
