The Passion Play.

The moving pictures, representing the passion play of Oberammergau, attracted big audiences at the St. Paul's church. The church was filled Monday night and a number braved the storm Tuesday night to see the pictures. The affair was repeated on Wednesday night to allow many to attend who could not get out Tuesday night and another good audience was present. The entertainment was good and the proceeds very satisfactory. The money goes towards renovating the church.

THE THURSDAY CLUB

Celebrates Its Seventh Anniversary in a Most Royal Manner.

The seventh annual banquet of the Woman's Thursday club of Barrington, was held at the residence of Mrs. Luella Austin, Wednesday evening, March 6. Everything was done by the entertainment committee to make this one of the most enjoyable of the many pleasant events that have been participated in by the members and friends of that organization.

Mrs. Austin's hospitable and pretty home was thrown open to the fifty invited guests, and mirth and good fellowship reigned supreme. The parlors and dining room were beautifully decorated in the club colors, and potted plants and cut flowers added brightness to the scene and the perfume of springtime to the atmosphere.

It was a happy gathering of the ladies, who for seven years have kept alive an organization that has for its object the advancement of women in a social and literary way. That the ladies have had much to contend with cannot be denied. The Thursday club is the leading society of and for women in our village, and wields a large amount of influence in making Barrington society circles the envy of the neighboring towns. The management of the club are to be congratulated on their success in placing the organization on so substantial foundation. This the seventh anniversary found the members growing in years as well as wisdom and good looks, but as efficient and alert in their work as in the first days of club life.

At nine o'clock the members and their guests gathered about the four handsomely appointed tables, and after thanks were returned by Rev. Tuttle, they partook of the following menu:

Small Biscuit.	Pressed Chicken.
Veal Loaf.	Jell.
Olives.	Pickles.	Potato Salad.
Assorted Cake.	Cheese.	Vanilla Ice Cream.
Fruits.	Bonbons.	Coffee.

After full justice had been rendered the menu the following program was given:

Vocal Solo.....	Mrs. Austin
Address.....	Rev. W. H. Tuttle
Instrumental Duet.....	Mesdames Austin and E. H. Hawley
Address.....	Charles H. Morrison
Vocal Selection.....	Club
Address.....	Rev. W. L. Blanchard

After this entertaining program a season of social pleasure was heartily enjoyed. Those present were:

The following is the address of welcome read by the president, Mrs. Wm. Howarth:

Members and guests: We meet together again tonight to celebrate the seventh anniversary of the Woman's Thursday club of Barrington. We are glad that once a year we are permitted to look upon the handsome and genial faces of the husbands of our members. We bid you a hearty welcome, and you may feel assured that the welcome will be extended to you on the 6th day of March of each year, to come. To our other guests present we extend also a hearty, earnest greeting, and say that it gives us pleasure to go, from time to time outside the ranks of our club and extend the hand of good fellowship.

We, the ladies of the Thursday club, have hearts full of kindness and love for all, and in our club rooms and at our several meetings, may often be found dear friends whom we would feel proud to enroll as members of our club were it not for the fact that our need of a roomy club home compels us to limit our number to twenty-five. We look forward to the future when we may, possibly, be able to possess larger quarters for our membership, for an organization like the Thursday club is bound to grow. It is composed of women of broadness of intellect, earnestness of purpose, and a firm desire ever to promote things that are elevating and uplifting. Such a band of women are sure to reach out and take in all who likewise are ready to add their efforts to an organization for the promotion and strengthening of the social, moral and intellectual atmosphere of our own homes and our hamlet.

The Thursday club was organized seven years ago today at the home of Mrs. Lizzie Fitzsimmons, with five charter members. It has been steadily growing in knowledge and membership since then. The first president was Mrs. Fitzsimmons, who held the office for three years. She was followed by Mrs. C. Meyer. Mrs. McIntosh served as vice-president. These ladies held office for two years when Mrs. McIntosh was promoted to the presidency, and Mrs. Howarth chosen vice-president. They served one year when Mrs. Howarth was elected president and Mrs. S. Peck vice-president. These ladies, assisted by Mrs. C. F. Meyer as secretary and Miss Cora Higley as treasurer, are endeavoring to fill the positions as best they can.

Who is the Reporter?

Albert L. Blair, editor of the Boston Journal, recently delivered an address before the News Writer's association of Troy, N. Y. Among many other good things he said:

"Who is the reporter? Many people would have us believe that intellectually he is a scrag, socially a scullion and morally a satellite of satan. Whatever the reporter is or is not, he is the maker of your newspapers. Obviously the harvest in the local department was gathered by his hand, and even the telegraph was first gathered by a reporter before it was sent from the 32 points of the compass. Who is the reporter? He is the newspaper toiler who sleeps on the fly and eats between winks. The newspaper reporter, in a word, is a human machine that must have the clairvoyance of an angel, the varied knowledge of a cyclopedia and the constitution of a disembodied spirit."

"His duty is to the patrons of the paper he serves. He should treat all matters from a standpoint of news—not to please faction. State the facts as near as obtainable. Present the narrative of current events without deception or misleading setting."

"Will the ideal newspaper publish accounts of crimes? Yes. Why not? Whatever wickedness is of public concern and menaces society should be handled by the press without fear or favor, without cloaking or exaggeration. The mission of journalism is to tell for your information and mine, what the world is doing. Justice needs at her back all the restraining forces known to progress to keep in check the infernal elements of society. Among these restraints, next to Christianity and education, I know of no other—I will not except courts of law—that is superior to fearless, conscientious and aggressive journalism."

"The peerless trinity to which the race looks for instruction and public opinion for its molding is composed of the school, the pulpit and the press."

From Our Exchanges.

The maddest man in Carroll county resides at Lamark, says the Marengo Republican. He attended a social and during the evening the ladies inaugurated a hugging bee, the proceeds to go to a Sunday-school. Prices were graded according to the person being hugged. For instance, for hugging a young, inexperienced girl, the bidder had to give up ten cents, married women brought 15 cents and a widow 25 cents. Well he was blindfolded, and giving up 15 cents said he would take a married woman. After he had hugged 15 cents' worth the bandage was removed from his eyes and lo and behold he was hugging his wife. Then he kicked and wanted his 15 cents.

After all our talk of the good of our humanity and the obligation resting on us to abate a nuisance at our doors, says the McHenry County Democrat, the Cubans are a good deal astonished at the high price we are asking for the job. The poor fellows actually believed what we solemnly declared.

All legislation is blocked down at Springfield, asserts the Elgin Advocate, because of bossism. Just now two ways out of the difficulty suggest themselves—one is to dig a hole in the ice and chuck Lorimer into the cold waters of the lake, and the other is to send representatives to Springfield that own themselves, that will not sink their personality in slavish obedience to a self-created political whiff. For nearly two months the legislature has been in session and has done nothing—nothing that is of value, and the man Lorimer is practically responsible for it, though he holds no office. It is shameful!

The circumstances that the Philippine insurgents are attacking our wagon trains in Cavite province, almost within gunshot of Manila, is calculated somewhat to impair confidence in the cabled reports of the optimistic MacArthur to the effect that everything is peace and brotherly love in Luzon, says the Times-Herald. Let us hope that MacArthur is not falling into Kitchener's habit of dashing off reassuring dispatches only to follow them with the disagreeable and disappointing "I-regret-to-state" announcement.

CHAPTER VI.

A HUNDRED POUNDS REWARD—Left her home on April 30, a young lady, aged 18, brown hair, grey-blue eyes, fair complexion, a very diminutive figure. When last seen wearing a black tailor-made costume and a small lace toque trimmed with violets. The above reward will be paid to any one giving such information as may lead to her recovery. Apply to A. B. C. Porter's library, Wilton Place.

Two people at Easthill read that notice and knew whom it concerned—Beryl Landon, who rejoiced with all her heart that the gathering coldness of the April evening had made her put on her cloak before she left Easthill station; and Harold Dynevor, who felt convinced that the young lady inquired for was no other than the lonely little traveler who had asked the way to Mrs. Tanner's school.

No doubt other people in the neighborhood read the advertisement, but none of them guessed it was in their power to earn the reward. Mrs. Wilmot had never seen her sister's teacher in walking attire, Mrs. Tanner never looked at the agony column. Helen Craven, who was of a romantic turn of mind, read the paragraph aloud to her family, and declared the poor girl it concerned had evidently escaped from a lunatic asylum; but Captain Tempest was at the Manor and engrossed most of her attention, so that she soon forgot the matter.

Beryl felt terribly nervous. She had expected her father to be rather relieved at her departure, and the advertisement seemed to imply he was set on finding her. She longed to confide in Mrs. Tanner; but, though she could have trusted the widow perfectly, the possession of such a secret would, if discovered, have embroiled her very much with her sister. So beyond a visit to the one draper's at Easthill-on-Sea, where she purchased a bunch of forget-me-nots to replace the violets in her toque, the advertisement made no immediate difference to Beryl.

As for Harold, he thought of it again and again. He could not get the girl's sweet, sad face out of his head. And after a few days' doubt and perplexity, during which the announcement was repeated in the paper every morning, he decided to call on Mrs. Grey, the wife of the curate-in-charge of the Easthill-on-Sea, and ask her openly for Mrs. Tanner's address.

He was prepared to face her wonder at the question, but it was spared him. The first greetings were barely over when little Olive Grey came in through the French window, with two or three school books strapped together, and a very important little face.

"You don't mean to say you send that note to school?" Harold asked, when Miss Olive had installed herself on his knee. "Why, she can't be six!"

"Turned eight, Mr. Dynevor. I should have sent her before, only there was no school here. A young widow, Mrs. Tanner, opened one in January, and Olive was one of her first pupils."

"I shouldn't have thought there were enough children for a school to pay."

"I think Mrs. Tanner must be getting on, for she has just started an assistant. Such a pretty girl! I saw her at church on Sunday and lost my heart to her. Lendon her name isn't it, Olive?"

"Yes; only one letter different from Mr. Lendon's," said Miss Olive; "and she comes from London, too."

The child ran off to her tea, and Mrs. Grey, who did not possess as much tact as kindness, suddenly asked:

"Is it true that the Lindons are coming to live at the Manor when General Craven leaves?"

"I have no idea. I know it is rumored."

"Mr. Grey thinks the rumor only got about because Mr. Lendon refused to renew the general's lease."

"General Craven thinks he will renew it in the end, but is standing out for increased rent. The agent, Wilmot, has hinted as much."

"Then it is probably true. Mr. Wilmot is very much in the big man's confidence. I do hope the Lindons won't come here."

Harold shrugged his shoulders. But he was unusually grave and thoughtful that evening. Before he went to bed he had written a very brief note to Beryl, enclosing the advertisement from the Telegraph.

"One who witnessed Miss Lendon's arrival at Easthill-on-Sea sends this to warn her she is being sought for. She may rely on his absolute silence now and always."

There was no signature. Beryl could not in the least imagine who sent the note, but she felt it was meant to be reassuring. And as May faded into June she tried hard to forget the dark shadows which hung threateningly over her pathway, and to be as happy as she could.

It was a quiet and monotonous life she led at Woodlands. After the luxury at Elchester square, the hard work, and plain fare would have been distasteful to many girls; but Beryl was only too thankful to have escaped from her gilded cage. Mrs. Tanner was kindness itself, and if the Wilmots rather grated on Beryl with the condescending patronage, she knew perfectly it was not her employer's fault, and resented their cold reproaches to the gentle widow far more than any slight to herself.

And then a wonderful thing happened. Mrs. Grey, who was the nearest approach to a friend the widowed school mistress had at Easthill, descended on Woodlands one day, and begged Mrs. Tanner to lend her young assistant to help at a kind of open air fete she was getting up for the church building fund.

The curate's wife never forgot that the widow was unfortunate, that her husband's death had brought her from a pleasant, careful rectory to fight for her bread. Mrs. Grey had helped the enterprise at Woodlands in many ways, not least by her kindness and friendly sympathy with Woodland's tenant. She told her difficulties as frankly as if Mrs. Tanner had been her sister.

"You know we are not rich, but just because Frank is the curate I have to take a stall and do my utmost to make things go. I'm not clever at bazaars, and I had depended on my sister coming to help me. I've just had a letter to say she has sprained her ankle—nothing serious; but she won't be able to put her foot to the ground for a fortnight, and the fete is next week. Do lend me Miss Lendon! It's a Wednesday, and so, being a half holiday, the school can't suffer. Besides, I'm pretty sure all your pupils will be there. I don't ask you to come"—she looked kindly at the crape-trimmed dress, "it would be hard on you to appear at a gay scene so soon, but you might lend me your assistant."

"I will spare Miss Lendon to you with pleasure," said Mrs. Tanner; "but are you sure she will be of any use? She is a dear little thing, but almost painfully shy. She has been with me over two months, and I know no more of her than I did the day she came."

"Well, may I ask her and see what she says?"

Mrs. Tanner fetched Beryl and explained what was required of her. The girl blushed crimson.

"I never was at a bazaar in my life," she told Mrs. Grey; "but if you think I can be of any use I shall be glad to do my best."

Mrs. Grey was delighted and Beryl left the room, pledged to be her chief lieutenant on the eventful Wednesday.

"You know," said the curate's wife, when Beryl had gone, "she is so pretty she is sure to charm money out of people's pockets, and there was really no one else I could ask. Mrs. Craven has taken a stall, and her daughter and Miss Dynevor will help at it. There wasn't a girl in Easthill I could think of who would have been of any use."

Mrs. Tanner hesitated.

"Ought it to be a very grand toilet? I am not sure what Miss Lendon has in the way of finery."

"Every one is to dress just as they please. The sellers are to wear a favor of black and gold to distinguish them. I'll send over the one I made for Cicely."

Mrs. Tanner and Beryl talked over the bazaar after supper that night.

"It will be a little glimpse of gaiety for you," said the elder woman kindly. "This is a very dull life for you, Miss Lendon."

"I am not at all dull," said Beryl, simply.

She had altered since she came to Easthill. The scared, anxious look had gone from her face, and, in spite of hard work, she looked younger and brighter. She really quite looked forward to the garden fete, as its promoters called it, as a festival; for, after all, she was young enough to enjoy the sight of pretty things and bright faces.

CHAPTER VII.

Mrs. Tanner almost started when Beryl came to show herself when she was dressed for the fete, and yet the girl only wore the white cashmere which had been her best attire last summer. It was very soft and clinging, falling from waist to hem in long, straight folds, the bodice trimmed with a little white silk, and a broad sash of the softest surah knotted loosely round her waist. Her hat was white, too, and trimmed with a long white feather and a quantity of chiffon. She looked far more like some rich wandering princess than a humble school assistant.

"Shall I do?" asked Beryl, a little anxiously.

"You had better put a cloak over your dress for the drive, the lanes are so dusty," said Mrs. Tanner. "You look charming, and I am sure Mrs. Grey will think so."

That lady drove up then in her rather shabby pony carriage. The fete was to be held in the grounds of Dynevor's are the last people to think three miles from Woodlands, so she had arranged to call for Miss Lendon.

"I'll bring her back safely," she promised Mrs. Tanner, "but I can't promise when. The fete opens at 3, and we are supposed to go on till we've sold everything."

She talked very pleasantly to Beryl as they drove along, saying she would introduce her to Miss Dynevor, who was about her own age.

"Please don't," said Beryl shyly—"I mean, she might not like it. Miss Dynevor of Dynevor must be a great lady, and I am only a teacher."

"My dear," said Mrs. Grey, "the Dynevors are the last people to think less of you for that. And so far from being great, they have fallen on very evil times. Harold farms his own land; but it's all he can do to struggle on these bad times, and if Kitty does not have to earn money, she works very hard at home."

"But the Manor is called after them."

"And it ought to be theirs, only it isn't." She went on to give Beryl the full and particular story of Nina Dynevor's infatuation for Eustace Landon, and the wrong it had led to. Beryl only kept silent by an effort. It was terrible to listen to the reproach of her own parents and say nothing; but deep down in her own heart the girl felt her gentle mother had never done the wrong ascribed to her. No, the will which led the Manor away from the Dynevors had been extorted from her weakness, not made of her own free will.

"I hope I have not tired you out," concluded Mrs. Grey, "you are looking very pale."

"I am generally pale, thanks."

The general stood on the steps of the Manor to welcome them. He looked a little astonished as Mrs. Grey introduced her companion—the girl was so unlike what he had expected; but he soon led the way to the huge marquee which had been erected in the grounds for the five stalls held by the elite of Easthill.

A smaller tent was devoted to flowers, yet another held refreshments, a ladies' orchestra—from Brighton, by it whispered—discoursed sweet music in a third. Mrs. Grey and Beryl hastened to their places, while the general went back to await the advent of the great lady who was to formally declare the fete open.

It looked to Beryl like fairyland; and when a few minutes later things were in full swing, and the people began to flock in, she proved herself quite an expert saleswoman. Many of the visitors thought Mrs. Grey's assistant the prettiest girl present.

"Harold," whispered Kitty Dynevor to her brother, when he made his appearance, "your fair traveler is here."

"What do you mean?" He asked, bewildered.

"Don't you remember asking if there were a school at Easthill-on-Sea, because a girl was making her way to it at the station one day? Well, the girl is just here at Mrs. Grey's stall; but she doesn't look like a school teacher, does she?"

She did not. It flashed on Harold that he had never seen a sweeter face. He thought the shadow on the grey eyes was lighter, and he wondered if she had ceased to worry over the hundred pounds reward offered for her recovery. She did not look in the least like a fugitive and a runaway.

Mrs. Grey's voice broke on his meditations.

"Mr. Dynevor, do take Miss Lendon to the house to have some tea. Mrs. Craven has some in the dining room specially for our benefit; the tent is only for outsiders, you know, who pay as they go. I have been there long ago; but I couldn't find any one to send with Miss Lendon, and, as she has never been inside the Manor, she does not like to go alone."

"I shall be only too pleased," said Harold; and the two left the marquee together.

It was not far, only a few hundred yards as distance went; but it seemed miles to Beryl because all the way she was trying to decide a question. One glance had told her that Mr. Dynevor had been at Easthill station when she arrived, therefore it must be he who sent her the advertisement and words of kindly warning. Should she allude to it or not?

It was only when she was in sight of the old Manor house that she made up her mind.

ODD OCCUPATION.

Professor of Being Buried Alive Testifies in a Courtroom.

One of the witnesses in a recent lawsuit in Cleveland was Edward Kaehn. The Cleveland Leader says: "The examination of Kaehn proved to be very amusing. On the cross-examination Prosecutor Keeler demanded to know the business of the witness. The witness said that he lived at 325 Lake street, and was known as Prof. James Smith, and that his specialty was being buried alive for exhibition purposes. He declared that he never had really died, but claimed that he could lie in a grave six days and nights. He averred that he was ready at any time to be buried for $500 per week, providing that there was a proper and an unmistakably trustworthy committee to play the role of resurrection angels should they be needed to save his life. He was rather reluctant about 'tipping off his act,' as he expressed it, but Judge Neff became interested and wanted to hear all about it. Kaehn declared that he has been placed in a coffin which had been properly upholstered, and that it has been lowered into a grave six feet 4 inches deep. An air shaft is constructed and the grave closed.

"What is the air shaft for?" asked the prosecutor.

"For air," replied Kaehn, "and for sending down the beer, water and grub."

"Then you always had to have air, did you?" continued the prosecutor.

"Oh, no. Sometimes I was completely buried for twenty-four hours. In a case of that kind a bucket of water was placed in the coffin and several sponges saturated with water. The water evaporated, and that furnished all the oxygen I needed to live on."

Godmothers to the Bells.

An odd ceremony took place in France not long ago in the baptism of two new bells for the Church of Preignac, in the department of the Gironde. Two pretty children, Miles, Mirvillie de Girod and Odette de Braquillange, were godmothers to the bells, and were dressed, respectively, in pale blue and pale pink.

SHENKLE SAVED FROM MOB

Illinois Soldiers Guard Him at Trial.

ORDERED OUT BY GOVERNOR.

The Prisoner Pleads Guilty in Order to Escape Personal Violence—His Incarceration Ordered by the Court Under State Indeterminate Law.

Albert Shenkle, charged with assaulting Gracie Giller, a daughter of Charles H. Giller, the girl being aged but 13 years, pleaded guilty in the court at Carrollton, Ill., Friday, and was sentenced by Judge Owen Thompson under the indeterminate law. He was taken to the depot immediately upon the announcement of the sentence and hurried by special train under a heavy guard to the south Illinois penitentiary at Chester. Upon the arrival of the prisoner from the county jail at Springfield, whither he had been taken to avoid a lynching, a large crowd had assembled in the street at Carrollton, but all plans of violence were frustrated by the presence of four companies of state militia, specially ordered out for the occasion by Gov. Yates. The accused marched through the streets heavily shackled, with a strong cordon of police keeping the mob back along the line of march. No hostile demonstrations were made, the people appearing to be aware that the numbers of the soldiery were sufficiently large to insure the failure of any attempt to subvert the due processes of law.

No unnecessary time was wasted in preliminaries. The warrant charging Shenkle with the crime was read and the prisoner asked to plead.

"I plead guilty," said Shenkle.

"The judgment on your plea is that you be confined in the penitentiary at Chester, there to remain until your discharge in the due process of law," said Judge Thompson.

Shenkle flushed, but his lips and then sat down.

Sheriff Conlee arose, and without a word the condemned prisoner extended his hands for the shackles. A moment later the militia formed a guard around the sheriff and his prisoner and started down the street for the station. Within five minutes after their arrival the train departed for Chester.

Shenkle made a full confession of his crime while on the way from Springfield to Carrollton.

Fishermen Die on Lake.

Twenty-one fishermen were swept out on Lake Erie by the loosening of an ice floe at Silver Creek, N. Y. Seventeen of the number were rescued, but the other four undoubtedly met death. The dead are: Henry Turner, John George, James McBratney, Julius Ludwig. The four men doomed were still on the ice when last seen, but a big sea was running and the ice was fast breaking up.

French Deputy Ejected.

An exciting discussion occurred in the French chamber of deputies Monday following the reception of the report of the special committee dealing with the case of M. Paul Deroulede and Marcel Habert, which recommended that the names of those deputies be stricken from the rolls of the chamber. M. Firman Faure, anti-Semite and revisionist, followed with a violent speech condemning the decision of the high court, which he described as "crime" and "felony." M. Deschanel ruled that M. Faure had insulted the government, and he submitted the question of censure to the chamber, which promptly voted the temporary exclusion of the deputy from the precincts of the house. M. Faure refused to budge, whereupon M. Deschanel donned his hat and suspended the session. The ushers begged M. Faure to retire, but he still refused. Then an officer, with a squad of infantry stationed outside the chamber, marched in and placed his hand on M. Faure's shoulder. The deputy said: "I yield to force," and withdrew, shouting, "Long live an honest republic," "Down with the Jesuits" and "Down with Waldeck-Rousseau."

Reveals Plot to Kidnap Girl.

Jacob Pollock, proprietor of a wholesale dry goods house and of the local theater at Mobile, Ala., received a letter, written in a good hand and evidently by an intelligent person, giving particulars of a plot to abduct his 12-year-old daughter, Clara, and hold her for ransom. The writer alleged he was one of four men who had arrived in the city from Omaha for the purpose of conducting the kidnaping, but that his companions had mistreated him and for that reason he revealed the scheme. The Mobile police refuse to make public the letter, but all strangers are being rounded up, and, in addition to the force of men engaged from the regular department, the services of a private agency have been obtained to hunt the gang down. Pollock is well known in Chicago, where he has extensive business connections.

Kills Father and Mother.

Dell Johnson, living with his parents nine miles west of Orlando, Ok., shot both his father and mother with a Winchester, killing them instantly. The father was hot while preparing to retire and the mother as she was entering the bedroom. The murderer is an unmarried man about 26 years of age. He was taken into custody today by the authorities. He was adjudged insane some time ago, but was thought to have been cured.

Unite to Doom Kidnaping.

E. A. Cudahy, whose son was kidnaped last December, is one of the members of a child-protecting and saving institution incorporated in Nebraska. The society looks to the safety and well being of children, and Omaha is to be the headquarters. The capital stock, if any, is not given. Other prominent Omaha gentlemen are among the incorporators.

Some Illinois Wheat Injured.

The United States weather bureau has issued the following climate and crop bulletin for Illinois: "A good covering of snow protected wheat in the northern part of the state during February and in that part of the state the crop is believed to have suffered no injury. It was generally in good condition before the snow fell. Over the greater part of the central district the snow disappeared shortly after the middle of the month, and wheat was subjected to alternate freezing and thawing weather which followed. Considerable damage is believed to have resulted. The greatest injury appears to have occurred in the western part of the district. In the southern district there appears to have been considerable injury because of the severe weather. A few correspondents speak of the injury from the Hessian fly."

"Rye seems to have suffered less than wheat. Grasses appear not to have suffered greatly."

Alleged Embezzler Caught.

After an exciting chase through three counties Sheriff Cohlmeier of Nashville succeeded in overtaking and arresting Charles Meentemeyer, a fugitive wanted in Franklin county for the alleged embezzlement of $7,000. Meentemeyer was formerly a prominent business man of Nashville. For the past two years he has been conducting a brokerage business at Benton, Ill., and is accused of embezzling funds placed in his hands by business men of the city for investment. He was arrested at Ashley after resisting the officers, and taken to Nashville and placed in jail to await the arrival of the sheriff of Franklin county.

Guilty of Selling His Vote.

In the Appellate court at Mount Vernon decision was rendered in the case of George Persefield, appellant, vs. the people of Illinois. The case came up from Union county. Persefield was accused of having sold his vote at the election in November, 1900, the only positive evidence against him to this effect being his own confession, alleged to have been made to A. J. Hunsacker, T. R. Mullins and F. M. Coles, that he was to receive $5 in cash and a job at one of the state institutions should the party to whose tenets he was converted by the offer win in the general election.

Boy of 11 Years Is Indicted.

Probably the youngest person ever indicted in Illinois is Tony Hull, aged 11 years, who was indicted by the St. Clair county grand jury and lodged in jail at Belleville. Hull was arrested at school in East Carondelet and brought to Belleville. He is charged with having perjured himself by swearing that in a fight between Frank Helsen and John Simons at East Carondelet Helsen brained Simons with a shovel. It is charged he received a gold watch for falsely swearing. Young Hull is the son of John Hull, a wealthy resident of Carondelet.

Shoots Wife and Himself.

Edward Van Dorp, a well-to-do Belgian workman, while in a fit of jealousy, shot and fatally wounded his wife at Kewanee. He then turned the revolver upon himself, the bullet passing through the right side of the body. Van Dorp returned a week ago from Europe and charged his wife with unfaithfulness. Quarrels followed and the tragedy was the result. She is 25 years old and was married to Van Dorp five years ago at Oconto, Wis., where her parents now reside. The shooting was witnessed only by the 4-year-old daughter.

First District Scale Fixed.

In a four hours' session at Springfield the sub-committee of miners and operators of Illinois reached an agreement on the mining scale for the first district, where the hardest fight was promised. The scale in the first district is to remain the same as last year and it is not believed that any material changes will be made in the other districts. This is a victory for the operators, for they had positively refused to consider the 5 per cent increase demanded by the miners.

Frank Pew Is Arrested.

Frank Pew was arrested at Sandwich and taken before the Federal officers at Chicago for sending threatening letters through the mails. Secret service men have been working on the case for two weeks. Pew signed a statement that he was the one who wrote the letters, which were addressed to Charles Lauser, who was shot while preparing for bed on the evening of Dec. 22d.

Foster Now Electric Road.

The project of constructing an electric railway from Oakland to Ashmore, via Spring Lake and Newman, is being promoted by prominent Coles county capitalists, headed by State Senator S. C. Pemberton, Judge Winkler, W. P. Fanning and others. It has been demonstrated that the venture will be a paying one and open up a territory without railway facilities. The promoters will organize a stock company, and intend taking out letters of incorporation within the next 90 days.

DEATH OF WILLIAM M. EVARTS, SCHOLAR AND STATESMAN.

William M. Everts died at his home in New York city Thursday, aged 83 years. His death was caused by pneumonia. For several years he had been without the use of his eyes and was otherwise so feeble that he was unable to leave his home. Up to the time of death he was the nominal head of the law firm of Everts, Choate & Beaman, although for many years he had not been in active practice. The life of this distinguished American was an active one. Born Feb. 6, 1818; son of Jeremiah Everts, the philanthropist; graduated from Yale and from the Harvard Law school; counsel in the celebrated Cleopatra filibustering case, in the Lemmon slave case, the Parrish will case, and in the President Johnson impeachment trial, 1853 to 1856; United States attorney-general and counsel at Geneva arbitration; senior counsel for Henry Ward Beecher; counsel for Republican party in Hayes-Tilden contest; secretary of state; United States senator; founder firm of Everts, Southmayd & Choate.

In Fear of Smallpox at Anna.

The Southern Illinois hospital for the insane at Anna has a smallpox scare. There are no cases in the institution, but there are several suspected cases in the town, and the superintendent, Dr. R. F. Bennett, has applied to the state board of health for assistance in diagnosing the disease which has been pronounced petigo by local physicians. Dr. J. C. Sullivan of Cairo, member of the state board, has been ordered here to investigate.

Five Zinc Miners Are Killed.

Five men were killed and two others seriously injured in a mine accident in the Englefield zinc mine in Center Valley, eight miles east of Joplin, Mo., Monday. The dead are: William Buzard, Hale Foster, Fritz Morris, Edward Stothard, George Wilson. The injured: John Burton, William Daniels. One of the men accidentally discharged an unexploded shot and a box of powder was set off. A man at the surface entrance of the mine was thrown thirty feet in the air.

Testimony of Handwriting Experts.

The refusal of Justice Fursman to permit a handwriting expert to give to the jury his opinion as to the authorship of certain papers submitted by the prosecution in the Kennedy murder trial in his court in New York raises an important point in criminal jurisprudence and bears upon the whole question of expert testimony as well as the particular form of testimony covered by the ruling.

In the present instance it was sought by the prosecuting attorney to identify the defendant as the murderer by proving by comparisons that he was the writer of certain signatures found on the person of the murdered woman. This method has heretofore been generally permitted by the courts. Justice Fursman, however, held the writings offered for comparison were not disputed writings, that they were not in issue, not in controversy and that expert testimony as to their authorship could not be admitted unless they were in dispute.

The effect of this ruling, if it should be sustained by the court of appeals, will be to place much narrower limits on expert testimony in New York state courts than now surround it. Indeed it would practically eliminate the testimony of handwriting experts from the majority of cases in which they have been a considerable factor, at least in the matter of occupying the court's time and the expenditure of the public's money. In so many cases have these experts, apparently possessing equal qualifications, been found to flatly contradict each other regarding any given exhibit of penmanship that the public and even the courts themselves come to look with more or less discredit upon this sort of testimony. Frequently the expert witnesses, whether in the matter of handwriting, chemistry, medicine or surgery, are inclined to give purely ex parte testimony in behalf of the party by whom they are employed. Unquestionably there are times in criminal cases when the opinion of men trained in specialties is vital, but it would seem that in the interest of justice and public economy some change or limitation might be put upon the prevailing system of ex parte employment of experts. As Justice Fursman apparently brought up the matter for the purpose of having the court of appeals pass upon it the final decree of that tribunal will be awaited with interest.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is greatly elated over the successful results of the experiments in tea growing at the Pinehurst gardens near Summerville, S. C., and is now preparing to use $5,000 appropriated by congress by sending out a large number of tea plants to the agricultural colleges in the gulf states. He believes it will soon be demonstrated that tea can be raised with profit all over the south, possibly including states as far north as Tennessee and Missouri, and that in time the United States will cease importing tea and will become an exporter of that article. Already one or two companies with large capital have been organized to establish tea plantations. The tea raised at the Pinehurst gardens in 1899 sold for over $3,500, some of it bringing $1 a pound. The American product is said to be superior to any of the imported black teas. Last year the yield was 12 per cent greater than in 1899 and was sold in bulk at a price that netted a handsome profit. The experiments of the last three years seem to prove that a good grade of American tea can be grown at a cost not exceeding 15 cents a pound and that it can be sold in bulk at from 30 to 50 cents a pound. As the yield averages 400 pounds to the acre the profit on this basis would be from 100 to 175 per cent.

The reported decision of a number of capitalists to build a large sugar refinery in Philadelphia and to operate it independently of the sugar trust furnishes another illustration of the fact that an attempt to monopolize the production of an article of general use begets competition. If present plans are carried out, the public is likely to be the gainer.

A bill is pending in the Illinois legislature which, if it becomes a law, will make it criminal for a candidate for public office to ask a voter to "take something." It might go a step further and enact a statute restraining the official when elected from taking anything more than his salary and mileage.

Congressman Naphe rises to inquire as to whether the exportation of mules to South Africa is in violation of the spirit of our neutrality laws. This would seem to hinge on the question as to whether a mule is a horse or combat.

Young Mr. Rockefeller is now telling other young men how to get rich. It will be quite impossible, however, for a good many young men to do this in the way young Mr. Rockefeller did.

Marrying Foreigners For Culture.

Countess Frenfanello-Cebo, who is visiting in this country, has told a Chicago reporter the reason why American girls marry foreigners. Heretofore it has been supposed that titles had something to do with the case, but the countess says that it is not so—that American girls choose foreigners simply because of the superior culture of European men.

This plain talk will doubtless set American young men inquiring as to the particular faults of the homemade brand of culture. It has been supposed hitherto that American frankness, honesty and genuine manliness would outweigh any mere veneer of studied politeness or the superficialities that come with education in a foreign capital. But of course this visiting countess knows, or thinks she does, what constitutes real culture. Doubtless the noble Count Boni de Castellane is her ideal.

If the countess would prove her assertion that American girls marry foreigners simply for the brand of culture they receive, let her bring over a number of Europeans who have culture, but no titles. Let them be put on the market and advertised as bargains in European culture and see how many of them will be married in a year. If European fortune hunters had to depend solely on their culture to contract rich alliances, there would be mighty little American money going abroad to patch up decayed European estates. It is the title that attracts certain American heiresses, a large proportion of whom rue the day they surrendered hand and fortune to it.

Every now and again there is revived the picturesque proposition to construct a railroad from America to Asia and thence to Europe. The projector of the latest of these apparently visionary and improbable schemes is Captain John J. Healy, an Alaskan pioneer, who confidently declares it not unreasonable to expect the construction of such a line before many years have passed. As an evidence of the possibilities, Captain Healy calls attention to the railway into the heart of Alaska, which he expects will be put under way within a year. The projected route of this line is northward from the mouth of the Copper river, up that stream, over the divide and down the Tanana river, which flows into the Yukon not far from the trading post of Wedre, which aspires to be the capital of the territory when Alaska is divided. He predicts that this line, already in fair prospect, will be extended from the Yukon to Nome and thence to Bering strait. An international bridge across that strait would bring the railway to Siberia, after which it would be but a matter of detail to continue construction to a junction with the Siberian railway itself, which reaches Europe by direct train service. In view of what has been accomplished in the past, the railroad thus outlined might not be an impossible engineering feat, but it would be useless expenditure of vast sums of money for which there would be no return. The line would traverse thousands of miles of unproductive country, frozen for many months each year, sparsely settled by semicivilized tribesmen without industries of commercial value and promising no future more attractive.

A recent London dispatch says: "Bishop Hartzell, who has been in London for ten days, sailed for South Africa to resume mission work for the Methodist Episcopal church. He is taking with him two students from an Illinois agricultural college to teach the natives how to use American plows and reapers. The bishop is an ardent supporter of the British cause in South Africa, which he identifies with the interests of higher civilization." This combination of things spiritual and things temporal ought to produce some results in South Africa.

One of the curious things in American life is the fondness of people and legislators for new laws. Everybody seems to think the millennium can be hastened by legal enactment, and hence legislators every year are busy passing new laws, which sometimes are a dead letter within three months after the date of their supposed enforcement.

The billion dollar steel combine need not regard itself as the whole thing. There is the Standard Oil company, which has a capital of $100,000,000, and every $100 share is selling above $800. This brings it pretty close up to the billion dollar class.

Now Minister Wu desires to say that he never means to be understood as advocating the intermarriage of whites and blacks. It would appear that Mr. Wu would have to restrict his output of talk if he desires to avoid trouble.

The chief stenographer of the relictstag says that the German emperor talks very fast. The stenographer might have added, if he dared to do so, that he talks very much.

"Anarchy stalks in Mrs. Nation's wake!" excitedly remarks a Kansas newspaper. If anarchy doesn't look out, it will get hit with a hatchet.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has succeeded in turning out another piece of state furniture which he will use for a few days as a cabinet.

Lumber Supply Nearing Its End.

The American Lumberman publishes some figures which should stir congress and state legislatures to prompt action touching the preservation of American forests. They ought also to move owners of forest lands to consider whether self interest would not require them to take steps to prevent the destruction of their industry.

In 1890 the states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota produced 8,597,000,000 feet of pine lumber. Since then the product has steadily declined and in 1900 was but 5,485,261,000 feet. During the last two years prices of lumber have been high, and there has been every inducement for the mills to turn out a heavy product. Every resource has been strained, but without avail. The trees could not be found. The end of the white pine industry of the northwest is almost at hand. The years of its greatness are already passed.

While the destruction of the forests in the states named has perhaps been more rapid than elsewhere by reason of the proximity to markets and favorable shipping facilities, all forest sections of the country are suffering irreparably from the woodman's ax. Chief Geographer Gannett of the United States geological survey, from the best data obtainable, estimates the total stand of timber throughout the United States at 1,880,000,000 feet. In 1890 the cut was about 25,000,000,000 feet, and since that time it has steadily increased throughout the country at large, though decreased in some sections by reason of the practical exhaustion of the supply.

At the present rate of consumption the available supply will last not to exceed 50 years and perhaps not so long as that. The present generation is likely to feel the pinch of scarcity. Aside from the meteorological influences of land denudation and its effect upon the water courses there is shameful waste of natural wealth which is justly a part of the heritage of coming generations. The preservation of the yet remaining forests is one of the most important matters to which legislators, state and national, can direct their wisdom and energy.

An American woman, Mrs. Conover, widow of a former secretary of the United States legation in Madrid and a long resident of London, has been doing a good work in Paris. It is generally known that the Paris cab drivers are or have been notoriously cruel to their horses and unskillful in their craft. The visitor to the French capital endures many a shock before he becomes callous to the sufferings of the unshod horses which fall at every turn on the slippery asphalt boulevards and are lashed incessantly by their drivers. When Mrs. Conover visited Paris, she chose not to become calloused. She talked about the cruel treatment of the horses, she wrote to the newspapers about it, she tried to organize a citizens' movement in protest. Finally she induced the chief of police to issue an order for the arrest of drivers mistreating their horses. Then she went to the streets and began the watch for offenders. Her orders for arrests were obeyed, she became known to every driver, public interest was aroused and sentiment was enlisted on the side of laws long dormant. Since then a great banquet for the 12,000 cab drivers has been given by the Paris Society For the Protection of Animals, and prizes were awarded for special care and kindness to horses. The promise now is that the old abuses are to be done away with and Paris cab drivers brought into the list of merciful men.

The crowned heads of Europe have lately been kept pretty busy acknowledging their profound appreciation of certain metropolitan journals for expressions of sympathy and congratulation, as the case may be. As advertisements for rival journalistic enterprises their majesties are almost as useful as a billboard or a sandwich man.

A murder trial in Maine has brought out the usual conflict of testimony as to whether it is possible to differentiate between human and lower animal blood spots. It is not likely that this controversy will be settled so long as the services of expert witnesses can be obtained to testify against each other on the question at the usual rates.

Added opportunities are coming to those American heiresses who have an ambition to marry a title. It is reported from China that titles in the Celestial empire are now on sale at greatly reduced prices.

Bishop Potter recommends that some of the population of overcrowded New York be transplanted. There are several places which would be willing to take sections of Fifth avenue or even some chunks of Broadway.

The reign of King Edward VII promises to be a profitable epoch for London modistes and tailors. A gay court booms business in merry England.

The heathen Chinese is still peculiar, as the smuggling of him over the Canadian border demonstrates.

As a suitable instrument for breaking the Nebraska legislative deadlock a hatchet is suggested.

The Wauconda Gym and Social club gave a reception and banquet at their club rooms last Friday evening. Invitations were extended to many of their friends and a very pleasant time is reported.

She.—I have never loved before.
He.—And why not, precious? Surely there are others as worthy as I.

She.—That wasn't it. I had indignation so bid I never could endure their prattle, but I took a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and have never seen any sign of it since.

A pleasant surprise was tendered Messrs. and Mesdames Henry and Clayton Werden at their home, three miles west of our village, last Saturday evening. About thirty of their friends and neighbors were in attendance and cards, caroms and other games were the amusements of the evening, interceded with a bounteous relay of refreshments. A good time is reported.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Smith were pleasantly surprised last Friday evening by about fifteen Royal Neighbors and Woodmen friends, who arrived at about 9 o'clock. Mr. Smith had retired for the night but Mrs. Smith was still up when suddenly she heard a general tumult in front of the house and, looking through the window, realized what was up. A few of her son's working garments were hanging in the room and, being excited, threw them down cellar instead of hanging them up in the closet. She then called to Mr. Smith to get up and help put away the team. The guests then walked in and took possession of the house, which Mrs. Smith gladly turned over to them and the few short hours of the evening were pleasantly spent, concluding with an oyster supper. About 12 o'clock all departed, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Smith for their kind hospitality and hoping for many returns of the pleasant event.

Bill Relative to Back Taxes.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of back taxes unpaid in all the counties of the state and having accumulated during the last 30 years will have to be paid, according to Representative Clayton E. Crafts, if the bill put in by him is passed. The measure is to protect the purchaser of a tax title from suits for ejectment by the delinquent property owner. Under it the delinquent would have to pay the amount of legal taxes in all cases after the tax title was defeated. Under the present law, says Mr. Crafts, payment of hundreds of thousand dollars in taxes has been evaded because there has been no such provision.

This would include special assessment as well as other taxes.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for nearly thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by Chas. E. Churchill.

New Order for Farmers.

A new social and beneficiary order is being organized throughout the state, the parent organization being located at Carbondale. It is known as the Knights of Egypt. The order has a number of unique features. During the past eighteen months at least four Farmers' unions patterned after the labor unions have sprung into existence and all have made a splendid growth. An effort is being made to combine the four and push the organization throughout the central west.

The Stars and Stripes at Acre.

A good American had been making some soul stirring remarks about the glorious star spangled banner when an Englishman who is pretty well Americanized told a little story apropos: "I remember once to have seen the stars and stripes applauded uproariously on a peculiar occasion. It happened many years ago when the British flag wasn't as popular in the United States as it is now and a party of us Englishmen were at a theater in New York considerably farther down town than theaters are now to be found on Broadway. The play was 'Richard I,' and if you remember there is a scene in the play where Richard, after putting his foes to flight in terrific style, mounts the walls of Acre and plants the British colors there. Evidently the management knew the temper of the audience and felt that even under such circumstances the British flag would not be a good thing, so what did they do but give Richard the star spangled banner, and, by all the gods, he took it with him in the charge and planted it on Acre's walls. It was ridiculous, of course, and we Englishmen laughed, but the audience took it quite as the correct thing, and the way the people stormed and shouted and clapped was enough to have made Richard turn over in his grave. Historically it was away off, dramatically it was open to criticism, but patriotically it was a howling success."—Washington Star.

Trigonometry in X Ray Work.

"Few people know," said Dr. J. C. Egelston while performing an operation at the City hospital, "that it takes trigonometry to locate a bullet in the body. But in every X ray operation in which the bullet or foreign substance is deeply imbedded a mathematical computation is necessary to show just how deep the bullet is. The X rays make the flesh transparent, leaving only the bones and foreign substance visible, so that you see just where the bullet is, and yet you don't know where it is. You know its latitude and longitude, so to speak, but those measurements are surface measurements, and you don't know how deep the object is beneath the surface. The point on the surface of the body beneath which the bullet is can be readily located, but how far beneath that point is the bullet? "This is the question that trigonometry has to answer, and by knowing the answer a great deal of unnecessary cutting may be saved, and what might otherwise be a difficult and dangerous operation may be rendered comparatively safe and easy. If the bullet enters one side of the body, for instance, and lodges within an inch or two of the skin on the other side, the other side of the body would be the one from which to operate."—Kansas City Journal.

The Chinese Cuisine.

Though Chinese cuisine has been credited with some utterly fabulous dishes, such as white mice served alive, which add piquancy by their squeak as they dive down the gullet, curiosities in the edible line do form a considerable list.

Bird's nest soup, for instance, a clear soup made from the refined gluten with which a certain species of swallow fasten their nests beneath the rocks; stewed "sea slugs," another nasty sounding dish, but transcending in flavor the aldermanic green turtle fat. There may be, too, on first introduction, some prejudice against fried grasshoppers. But courage in this instance is rewarded, by a deliciously crisp, brown mouthful, of a delicate nutty flavor.

It is a fallacy to suppose that pork forms a constant article of diet in China. As a matter of fact, it is too expensive and is only eaten on high days and holidays or at restaurants. Neither do milk, beef or game enter much into Chinese cookery, the first two being tabooed on religious grounds. Dog flesh is eaten in the south but rarely and only by the poorest of the poor.—Blackwood.

A Curious Receipt.

Hanover's registrar discovered a very curious document some time ago as he was looking through a bundle of papers that date back to the eighteenth century. The document is a receipt—probably the only one of its kind in existence—which was given to a Hanoverian captain by a canon of Duisburg during the Seven Years' war.

"I, the undersigned," it reads, "hereby acknowledge that I have received 50 blows of a stick, which were inflicted upon me by a lieutenant of Captain B's regiment as a punishment for the stupid and frivolous calumnies which I have uttered in regard to the regiment of chasseurs. For my imprudent words I now admit that I am profoundly sorry. I received my punishment lying on a heap of straw and held by two men, and I bear testimony to the fact that the officer struck me as vigorously as he could with a stick that was as thick as my finger.

"In proper form and with due gratitude I sign this receipt and avow that all therein is true."

Not the Greatest.

Smith—I suppose Dobber regards himself the greatest artist that ever handled brush.
Jones—You do Dobber an injustice. He never presumed to regard himself in any such light. Why, I have heard him say very modestly that he was a second Raphael. Isn't that admitting that Raphael was a greater painter than himself?—Boston Transcript.

Would Like Some.

"What do you find in that stupid old paper to keep you so busy?" petulantly asked Mrs. Youngcouple.
"I was just looking at the money market," he answered.
"Oh, do they have a money market? Are there ever any bargains?"—Indianapolis Press.

Couldn't See the Humor.

"I can't for the life of me see," remarked an Englishman during the course of conversation with Nat Goodwin once, "what people mean by American humor. To me all humor is alike, whether it be of American or English origin. Perhaps you can explain to me just what distinguishes American humor from any other sort?"

"Well," replied Mr. Goodwin, "I think the American type of humor is rather more subtle. It doesn't always fully impress itself upon you at once. The more you think about it the funnier it seems. I can perhaps best illustrate my meaning with a little story.

"A man was walking along the street one day when he passed another man who was carrying a letter in his hand.

"Pardon me," said the man with the letter. "Do you know where the post-office is?"

"Yes," said the other man and passed on. On second thought he decided that he had been rude and went back to where the man with the letter was still standing.

"Do you wish to know where the post-office is?" he asked.

"No," said the other man.

The Englishman's gaze was vacant. "Just turn it over in your mind for a few minutes and tell me what you think of it," said Mr. Goodwin.

Ten minutes later the Englishman clutched at Mr. Goodwin's elbow. "You won't be offended, will you, old chap?" he murmured. "But, really, I think they were both blawsted post."—Saturday Evening Post.

Closeness Personified.

There's a good story told on a young fellow here noted for his closeness. He went to spend the night with a friend. During the entire night he betrayed much restlessness, which kept the host wide awake, and finally the slumberer betrayed signs of violent emotion. "He's going to have a nightmare," said the friend, "but he always grumbles so when you wake him up that I hate to disturb him." He waited awhile longer, sitting up in bed staring on the miserable sleeper, and finally, becoming alarmed, he roused him. He sprang up in bed, glared wildly around and said: "Where am I? I don't see the storm."

"Why, here in my room," said the host soothingly. "You remember you staid all night with me? I beg your pardon for waking you up, but you carried on so I had to."

"Beg your pardon," gasped the guest. "I shall never be grateful enough to you. I dreamed I was out with Miss Bud, and a terrible storm came up, and my shoes were new, and I was just ordering a coupe for two when you roused me. Old boy, you have saved me a dollar."

And the host says he was actually afraid to go to sleep again that night for fear the coupe would come.—Louisville Times.

Here are some specimens of childish humor from the Chicago News:

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed 4-year-old Flossie as she observed the moon in its second quarter, "come and look at the moon. Half of it is pushed into the sky, and the other half is sticking out."

Tommy, aged 5, had been busy whitening and managed to raise a blister on his hand which caused a slight break in the skin. Running to his mother, he showed it to her and said, "Mamma, I guess I'm beginning to wear out."

"Did they sing any pretty songs at Sunday school?" asked a mother of her little 4-year-old daughter upon her return home. "Only one," replied the little miss. "It was something about Greenland's ice cream mountains."

Papa—Well, Willie, have you been a good boy today? Small Willie—Did you ask mamma? "Why should I ask her? Don't you know whether you have been good or not?" "Yes, but mamma's idea of goodness differs from mine, and I don't want to go back on anything she says."

The Benefit of the Doubt.

Not long ago a young lady was spending some weeks at a Scotch country house, and just before dinner one evening two cousins of the host—one of them the great man of the family—arrived unexpectedly. Shortly before dinner was announced the butler sought the young lady and said to her confidentially:

"We're puttin on yesterday's soup, an for fear there shouldna be enough, ye maun decline."

"Decline soup!" exclaimed the young lady, much amused. "But, you know, John, that wouldn't be manners."

"Na," said John coolly; "but they'll think ye ken nae better."—London Tit-Bits.

The Second Need.

Stockman—You remember that "pointer" you gave me on the street yesterday?

Bonds—Yes. What about it?

Stockman—Why, I tried it, and as a consequence I've come around to see if you couldn't let me have a retriever.—Richmond Dispatch.

It Costs.

"I'm thinking about that lodger of ours," the landlord remarked to his wife.

"About what?"

"He pays his rent so punctually I think I'd better raise it on him."—Philadelphia Times.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

McKinley to the People of the Country.

SECOND INAUGURAL SPEECH.

The Verdict of 1896, He Says, Has Been Fully Justified by Present Conditions—Cuba Must Be Independent—The War in the Philippines.

President McKinley delivered his inaugural address Monday to a large assemblage of people, gathered at Washington from all parts of the country and the nations of the old world. He was listened to attentively as he spoke to the multitude in a clear voice and evident earnestness. The following is the full text of his address:

"My fellow citizens: When we assembled here on the 4th of March, 1897, there was great anxiety with regard to our currency and credit. None exists now. Then our treasury receipts were inadequate to meet the current obligations of the government. Now they are sufficient for all public needs, and we have a surplus instead of a deficit. Then I felt constrained to convene the Congress in extraordinary session to devise revenues to pay the ordinary expenses of the government. Now I have the satisfaction to announce that the Congress just closed has reduced taxation in the sum of forty-one millions of dollars. Then there was deep solitude because of the long depression in our manufacturing, mining, agricultural and mercantile industries and the consequent distress of our laboring population. Now every avenue of production is crowded with activity, labor is well employed and American products find good markets at home and abroad.

"Our diversified productions, however, are increasing in such unprecedented volume as to admonish us of the necessity of still further enlarging our foreign markets by broader commercial relations. For this purpose reciprocal trade arrangements with other nations should, in liberal spirit, be carefully cultivated and promoted.

Verdict of 1896 Executed, He Says.

"The national verdict of 1896 has for the most part been executed. Whatever remains unfulfilled is a continuing obligation resting with undiminished force upon the executive and the Congress. But fortunate as our condition is, its permanency can only be assured by sound business methods and strict economy in national administration and legislation. We should not permit our great prosperity to lead us to reckless ventures in business or profligacy in public expenditures. While the Congress determines the objects and the sum of appropriations, the officials of the executive departments are responsible for honest and faithful disbursement, and it should be their constant care to avoid waste and extravagance.

"Honesty, capacity and industry nowhere are more indispensable than in public employment. These should be fundamental requisites to original appointment and the surest guarantees against removal.

"Four years ago we stood on the brink of war without the people knowing it and without any preparation or effort at preparation for the impending peril. I did all that in honor could be done to avert the war, but without avail. It became inevitable; and the Congress at its first regular session, without party division, provided money in anticipation of the crisis and in preparation to meet it. It came. The result was signally favorable to American arms and in the highest degree honorable to the government. It imposed upon us obligations from which we cannot escape and from which it would be dishonorable to seek to escape. We are now at peace with the world, and it is my fervent prayer that if differences arise between us and other powers they may be settled by peaceful arbitration, and that hereafter we may be spared the horrors of war.

Looks to People for Help.

"Intrusted by the people for a second time with the office of President, I enter upon its administration appreciating the great responsibilities which attach to this renewed honor and commission, promising unreserved devotion on my part to their faithful discharge and reverently invoking for my guidance the direction and favor of Almighty God. I should shrink from the duties this day assumed if I did not feel that in their performance I should have the co-operation of the wise and patriotic men of all parties. It encourages me for the great task which I now undertake to believe that those who voluntarily committed to me the trust imposed upon the chief executive of the republic will give me their generous support in my duties to 'preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States' and to 'care that the laws be faithfully executed.' The national purpose is indicated through a national election. It is the constitutional method of ascertaining the public will. When once it is registered it is a law to us all, and faithful observance should follow its decrees.

"Strong hearts and helpful hands are needed, and, fortunately, we have them in every part of our beloved country. We are reunited. Sectionalism has disappeared. Division on public questions no longer can be traced by the war maps of 1861. These old differences less and problems demand the thought and quickness of the conscience of the country, and the responsibility for their presence as well less disturb the judgment. Existing as for their righteous settlement rests upon all—no more upon me than upon you. There are some national questions in the solution of which patriotism should exclude partisanship. Magnifying their difficulties will not take them off our hands nor facilitate their adjustment. Distrust of the capacity, integrity and high purposes of the American people will not be an inspiring theme for future political contests.

Way of Safety and Honor.

"Dark pictures and gloomy forebodings are worse than useless. These only disclose what we do not help to point, the way of safety and honor. 'Hope maketh not ashamed.' The prophets of evil were not the builders of the republic, nor, in its crisis since have they saved or served it. The faith of the fathers was a mighty force in its creation, and the faith of their descendants has wrought its progress and furnished its defenders. They are obstructionists who despair and who would destroy confidence in the ability of our people to solve wisely and for civilization the mighty problems resting upon them. The American people, entrenched in freedom at home, take their love for it with them wherever they go, and they reject as mistaken and unworthy the doctrine that we lose our own liberties by securing the enduring foundations of liberty to others. Our institutions will not deteriorate by extension, and our sense of justice will not abate under tropic suns in distant seas. As heretofore, so hereafter, will the nation demonstrate its fitness to administer any new estate which events devolve upon it and in the fear of God will 'take occasion by the hand and make the bounds of freedom wider yet.'

"If there are those among us who would make our way more difficult we must not be disheartened, but the more earnestly dedicate ourselves to the task which we have rightly entered. The path of progress seldom is smooth. New things are often found hard to do. Our fathers found them so. We find them so. They are inconvenient. They cost us something. But are we not made better for the effort and sacrifice, and are not those we serve lifted up and blessed?

Will Stand by Our Equality.

"We will be consoled, too, with the fact that opposition has confronted every onward movement of the republic from its erty and conforming to the established and historical policy of the United States in its relation to Cuba.

"The peace which we are pledged to leave to the Cuban people must carry with it the guarantee of permanence. We became sponsors for the pacification of the island, and we remain accountable to the Cubans, no less than to our own country and people, for the reconstruction of Cuba as a free commonwealth on abiding foundations of right, justice, liberty and assured order. Our enfranchisement of the people will not be completed until free Cuba shall be a reality, not a name; a perfect entity, not a hasty experiment bearing within itself the elements of failure.

Regarding the Philippines.

"While the treaty of peace with Spain was ratified on the 6th of February, 1899, and ratifications were exchanged nearly two years ago, the Congress has indicated no form of government for the Philippine Islands. It has, however, provided an army to enable the executive to suppress insurrection, restore peace, and establish the authority of the United States throughout the archipelago. It has authorized the organization of native troops as auxiliary to the regular force. It has been advised from time to time of the acts of the military and naval officers in the islands, of my action in appointing civil officials, and of the instructions with which they were charged of their duties and powers, of the recommendations and of the several acts under executive commission, together with the very complete general information they have submitted. These reports fully set forth the conditions, past and present, in the islands, and the instructions clearly show the principles which will guide the executive until the Congress shall, as it is required to do by the treaty, determine 'the civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants.'

"The Congress having added the sanction of its authority to the powers already possessed and exercised by the executive under the Constitution, thereby leaving with the executive the responsibility for the government of the Philippines, I shall continue the efforts already begun until order shall be restored throughout the islands, and as fast as conditions permit will establish local governments, in the formation of which the full cooperation of the people has been already invited, and when established will encourage the people to administer them.

Good Work Being Done.

"The settled purpose, long ago prevailing, to afford the inhabitants of the islands self-government as fast as they were ready for it will be pursued with firmness and fidelity. Already something has been accomplished in this direction. The government's representatives, civil and military, are doing faithful and noble work in their mission of emancipation and merit the approval and support of their countrymen. The most liberal terms of amnesty already have been communiated to the insurgents, and the way is still open for those who have raised their arms against the government for honorable submission to its authority. Our countrymen should not be deceived. We are not waging war against the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. A portion of them are making war against the United States. By far the greater part of the inhabitants recognize American sovereignty and welcome it as a guaranty of order and of security for life, property, liberty, freedom of conscience and the pursuit of happiness. To them full protection will be given. They shall not be abandoned. We will not leave the destiny of the loyal millions in the islands to the disloyal thousands who are in rebellion against the United States. Order under civil institutions will come as soon as those who now break the peace shall keep it. Force will not be needed or used when those who make war against us shall make it no more. May it end without further bloodshed, and there be ushered in the reign of peace to be made permanent by a government of liberty under law."

Address of Mr. Roosevelt.

The solemn oath, the taking of which places Mr. Roosevelt in the gallery of the country's eminent patriots and statesmen, was administered by Senator William P. Frye, of Maine, president pro tempore of the Senate. In his inaugural address Mr. Roosevelt said:

History of Free Government.

"The history of free government is in large part the history of those representative legislative bodies in which, from the earliest times, free government has found its loftiest expression. They must ever hold a peculiar and exalted position in the record which tells how the great nations of the world have endeavored to achieve the destinies of mankind. For no man can render to his fellow man a service that is rendered by him who, with fearlessness and honesty, with sanity and disinterestedness, does his life work as a member of such a body.

Especially is this the case when the legislature in which the service is rendered is a vital part in the governmental machinery of one of those world powers to whose hands, in the course of the ages, is entrusted a leading part in shaping the destinies of mankind. For weal or for woe, for good or for evil, this is true of our own mighty nation. Great privileges and great powers are ours, and heavy are the responsibilities that go with these privileges and these powers. Accordingly as we do well or ill, so shall mankind in the future be raised or cast down. We, young nation, already of giant strength, yet whose present strength is but a forecast of the power that is to come. We stand supreme in a continent, in a hemisphere. East and west we look across the two great oceans toward the larger world-life in which, whether we will or not, we must take an ever increasing share. And as, keen-eyed, we gaze into the coming years, we see the clouds of risk and fast to confront us from within and from without.

Facing Toward Duty.

"There is every reason why we should face these duties with a sober appreciation alike of their importance and of their difficulty. But there also is every reason for facing them with high-hearted resolution and eager and confident faith in our capacity to do them aright. A great work lies ready to the hand of this generation; it should count itself happy, indeed, that it is given the privilege of doing such a work. A leading part therein must be taken by this, the august and powerful legislative body over which I have been called to preside. Most deeply do I appreciate the privilege of my position; for high, indeed, is the honor of presiding over the American Senate at the outset of the twentieth century."

Church's Work in Salvation.

Dr. Johnston Meyers says: "The first work of the church and the Christian is salvation. It held a supreme place in the life of Jesus. It is unfortunate when a church or a minister places the work of training, educating or developing above the work of soul saving. The exact reverse of present conditions would be found if the church were doing the Savior's will. Salvation would be the regular service and the development of the church the special service."

Sheep Perish by Millions.

The drouth in the western districts of New South Wales is terrible. Over 20,000,000 sheep have perished. The area of drouth-afflicted country is vast enough to find room for two or three kingdoms, and it is as monotonous as vast. Hills are unknown. The rivers are mere ditches. At the whisper of rain these scallie plains blossom into unparalleled verdure, but under the painless crystalline skies these shaded pastures shrivel into one vast level floor of sand.

When Sir Robert Hart speaks of the Chinese question the world does well to listen. In the Fortnightly Review for last November he directed attention to the fact that China in Arms would be a great power some day. In a second article, which appeared in the January number, he urged care in settling the present question so that the China of the future might have something to thank us for and not to avenge. In his article in the February number, on "China and Non-China," he gives a most serious warning to the powers.

Many white men say that it is impossible to understand the Chinese or the motives most likely to control them. Sir Robert believes that a little earnest effort to put ourselves in their place would show us the error of this view. They are not so inhuman, after all. The Boxers and the special advisers of the empress were plainly enough unreasonable in presuming to settle their troubles with the foreigners with gun and sword. But how much more reasonable is it for the powers to go on overriding, robbing, insulting, trifling with the four hundred million Chinese, discriminating against them in all international ways, regarding with contempt the historic Chinese aversion to war, presuming upon their everlasting meekness, sowing the seeds of vengeance and treasuring up wrath against some day of wrath when the Celestials may be forced to learn as much about fighting as the white men know.—Ex.

Abduction of Child Actress.

Because of the abduction of a pretty Italian actress, Miss Colomba Quintana, 16 years old, one of the stars of the Companie Infantile, a riot was started in Chichihuahua, Mexico, the other night. When the time came for her to go on the stage her absence was announced to the audience. Police searched the city for the missing actress. She was found in a house where she had been kept prisoner by the proprietress, Juana Tapia. The woman refused to release the girl, and a mob smashed the house, rescued the young actress and beat Senora Tapia severely. The actress says she was invited into a restaurant.

BEST SPRING MEDICINE

The Palm Given to Doctor Greene's Nervura

THE GRAND JURY: THE PEOPLE, HAVE SO DECIDED

Used by Hundreds of Thousands in Spring—as a Blood Medicine

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is indeed "The World's Great Spring Medicine." It has come to be recognized by almost everybody as the best possible spring medicine to take, and hundreds of thousands of our people use it during the trying spring months, to tone up anew the relaxed nerves and re-invigorate and enrich the blood.

A spring medicine is a necessity if one wishes to keep in perfect health and vigor during the changes from winter to summer. This grand spring tonic, this perfect spring medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is exactly what the system needs at this season. It not only purifies, but makes rich, red blood; it not only strengthens and invigorates the nervous system, but re-energizes and revitalizes the nerves by feeding them with renewed nerve force and power. It is not only an aid to digestion, but it creates a regular, natural and healthy action of the bowels, liver, kidneys, which in the spring are always sluggish and inactive.

In fact, it is just what people need to make them well and keep them well during these months, so threatening to the health of all, and when it is considered that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is made entirely from pure, health-giving vegetable remedies, and that people give it more testimonials of cure than any other remedy on earth, no one can doubt that it is the very best spring remedy for everybody to use.

Mr. Gustave Lebach, of 337 First St., Jersey City, N. J., says:

"I was troubled with sick headaches, and could not sleep on account of the pains in my head. I was suffering night and day with dyspepsia, could not eat anything, my stomach would shut up. I had to starve myself to have any ease. I had to give up work at last. I was so nervous and miserable, and I was falling away in flesh so that my friends hardly knew me. I tried several remedies, but without avail. At last someone recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I tried one bottle and began to improve. I started in to eat all right; then I picked up my health; my headaches disappeared, and my weakness and sour stomach went away. I used three bottles and could sleep all night with ease; I used

We are in receipt of a copy of the Berkshire Courier, published at Great Barrington, Mass., the town from which our village and Barrington township derived its name. It was in the 40's that S. W. Kingsley from Berkshire, Mass., settled here. Here also found homes the Slades from Berkshire; the Willmarths and Watermans from North Adams; A. C. Bucklin from South Adams, and others from that beautiful section of New England. When the time arrived to incorporate the township the residents proud of their native shire christened it Barrington. We are proud of being the namesake of a city that has produced so many talented men and gives to the country so handsome and well-edited newspaper. The Courier was established in 1835 and ranks at the top with the journals of the east.

Mrs. McIntosh's Recital.

One of the pleasant affairs of the week was the elocutionary recital given by Mrs. M. C. McIntosh at the M. E. church Tuesday evening under the management of the Epworth League. Her program consisted of seven numbers; selections from the best and popular authors, and was fully appreciated by the audience as was shown by the numerous encores to which she readily responded. The fact that Mrs. McIntosh is in constant demand to appear before Barrington audiences is in itself a high recommendation of her talent as an elocutionist, as Barrington people do not appreciate poor talent in any direction.

Mrs. McIntosh has read in public since she was a little girl and her education has been under the supervision of some of the best instructors in the state. Her selections are given in a perfectly natural manner, entirely devoid of all affectation and artificialness which is so prominent in many who aim to entertain by repeating the work of others.

In connection with the readings a program of musical selections, every number being well received, was given by Messrs. Kendall and Phil Hawley; Miss Alvina Meyers; Rev. Tuttle and Miss Tuttle; Messrs. Lines, Waterman and Heise.

The following selections were given by Mrs. McIntosh: John Burns of Gettysburg, by Bret Harte. When Malindy Sings, Paul L. Dunbar; Mr. Trimble's Christmas Gift, Ruth Stuart; Pittypat and Tip-toe, and Sometime, Eugene Field; Sally Ann's Experience, Eliza Hall; Mary's Night Ride, George W. Cable; L'envoi, Rudyard Kipling.

Firemen Enjoy Themselves.

The Barrington Volunteer Fire department gave a stag party for its members at the engine house Thursday evening. Instrumental music was furnished by an orchestra composed of Messrs. Wagner, Gieske and Mayfield and they rendered many excellent selections while the boys enjoyed themselves in playing social games. An elegant repast prepared by Chefs Shales and Brasel was served and heartily relished. The menu consisted of everything good to eat and there was loads of it.

After the refreshments were destroyed the time until past midnight, was occupied in listening to impromptu speeches, selected tales of truth and fiction. The party was a most enjoyable one and the participants adjourned regretting that their constitutions would not allow them to continue the program indefinitely, and that many more occasions of the same pleasant character might be theirs.

The people of Barrington are to be congratulated on having so efficient a band of fire fighters as this company. They should be given all necessary equipment and encouragement. The following is the membership roll and every man was present when the general alarm was sounded for lunch: Wm. Shales John Donlea F. H. Plagge H. T. Schroeder H. S. Meier S. J. Selections.

Words are things, and a small drop of ink, Falling like dew upon a thought produces That which makes thousands, perhaps millions think.—Byron. "There is no seed so vital as the seed of habit. Bad habits are the weeds that spring up among our crops of good resolutions and good endeavors. These will never of themselves choke out the invaders, no matter how thickly the good seed may have been planted. The only way to extirpate bad habits is to determinedly pluck them out."

"What is this here diplomacy?" asked the grocery loafer. "It is like this here," said the grocer. "For instance, if I wanted to call you a liar, I'd just do so right out; but if I wanted to be diplomatic, I'd go at it sorter roundabout an' jist say to the surroundin' air that while I wasn't namin' no names, I reely did believe that a certain red-nosed, squint-eyed cuss that had eat at least ten pound of my best cheese without ever payin' a cent was not so keerful with the truth as he orter be. See?"

"The man who obtained a divorce secretly and left his wife to discover at his death that she had not been married to him for years, must have had an unique gift for meanness."

"Many young men greatly need anchoring to a few great truths and principles. Some things must be settled and fixed in their moral convictions. This should be done early. If not they will drift and founder in life and suffer irretrievable disaster."

THE CUBAN SITUATION

In-a Nutshell Explained by Uncle Henry in Chicago Times-Herald.

The following excellent piece of poetry tells in a most able manner, the real cause for the opposition to Cuba being given the independence so faithfully promised. It is from the pen of S. E. Kiser of Chicago.

"Land takes!" said Aunt Eliza, "what's the trouble, anyway? It's Cuba, Cuba, Cuba in the papers every day! I thought we drove the Spaniards out of Cuba long ago— Thought we sent the tyrants kttin' for abusin' Cuba so. And I thought we'd made the Cubans just as glad as they could be By a breakin' of their shackles and a settin' 'em free."

"Well, yes," said Uncle Henry, "so we did knock off the chains. We did drive out some tyrants and we sunk some boats of Spain's— You see, us lovin' freedom as we do we couldn't let Our next-door neighbors suffer without gettin' all upset, So we riz, one day, and hollered that we couldn't stand no more, And our boys they went a-sailin' fer the sunny Cuban shore."

"Yes, they went a-shoutin' 'Freedom,' and the Cubans yelled 'Hurrah!' And it was the noblest action that the world had ever saw, My! my! how we did trounce 'em on the shore and on the sea— Though the fight was rather costly—there, don't cry—for you and me— Our boy's asleep down yonder—he's a-sleepin' sound and well— But remember what a noble cause he fit for when he fell!"

"And there's other parents, mother, that hev lost as much as us— So there, now, stop your cryin'—what's the good o' such a fuss? We sent a master sprawlin' and we raised a bleedin' slave, And we stood up proudly, shoutin' hallelujah, and we gave The world another nation—stopped a wrong and made a right— All we asked fer was the honor and the glory of the fight."

"Then what is all this trouble—all this talk of Cuba for? Are the Spaniards lockin' back and must we have another war? Well, no; fact is, some people ruther seem to think as how It'd pay to kinda keep a-holdin' onto Cuba now— There's tobacco and there's sugar and so forth and all—well, you see It'd hurt some peoples' bizness if we turned the Cubans free."

"And was it fer the profits that some people are to git. That our soldiers and our sailors went away down there and fit? Did our boy, asleep down yonder, die so sugar men could gain? Was it fer tobacco sellers that we sent along the Maine?"

"Well, o'course, I'm not jist certain and I can't azactly say— But I've got my own suspicions—and it kinda looks that way."
