In the Fierce Fight Now Waged on State Administration.

Republican Leaders Ignore Country Contest, Says Lorimer.

William Lorimer, chairman of the republican county central committee, asserted Wednesday that the Cook county leaders were taking no part in the war that is going on in the country between the "allied forces" and the state administration.

"Congressman Hopkins is running his own campaign and is doing fairly well" was Mr. Lorimer's comment. "I have never pledged the Cook county organization to his support. Cook county probably will go to the state convention with the best interests of its constituents at heart. Heretofore I have not been in favor of instructing for United States senator in state convention. It is possible, however, that conditions might arise which would warrant such action this year.

"I think the mass of people in Chicago are opposed to Charles G. Dawes as a senatorial candidate, but I do not know that the republicans of this city or the republican organization is committed to any one candidate. I have no authority to speak for anyone but myself, but is my guess that Cook's representatives in the majority of instances will be unfettered in the senatorial caucus at Springfield.

"Conditions this year are quite different from what they were in 1900. In that y ir Congressman Reeves gained considerable strength by reason of the fact that he had Senator Cullom at his back and the active support of the large army of federal office holders that Cullom represented. Mr. Reeves also gained strength in the northwestern and northern parts of the state by reason of the fact that he opposed Governor Tanner. The sentiment at that time was strong in opposition to Tanner. Now it's different. Congressman Hopkins is not a target. No candidate can gain anything by being against him. The Yates faction still controls southern Illinois, as the state administration did in 1900, and the Yates administration will be strong in Cook county this year-stronger than a year ago.

"No one knows what card the Dawes faction will play when the convention

Congressman Hopkins said Wednesday that he was much pleased with the progress of his candidacy. "I am not particularly anxious to secure instructions from the state convention, but I was compelled to make the fight as soon as I saw that the opposition was seeking instructions. As matters are now progressing we expect to control the state convention," said Mr.

There is no need to spin out into words an analysis of the world-wide "thief of time." If this picture and what has already been written can persuade a hundred thousand young men to try TODAY to cut TOMORROW out of their list of words, a useful work will have been done.

Take this for a motto: "I shall not think of tomorrow; for tomorrow can never come. My only possession is today, and I will do all that I can in it. I will not lull myself to sleep promising myself about a time that will never come. I shall be a man of today."

A GOOD TICKET

Placed in the Field by the Voters of Cuba Township—A Winner.

The weather of last Saturday afternoon was not favorable for a large attendance of voters, of the town of Cuba, at the annual caucus held for the nomination of township officers, but nevertheless considerable interest was manifested and the eighty and more voters present succeeded in constructing a good ticket.

George J. Hager was elected chairman and J. F. Gieske clerk of the caucus. Nominations being in order Miles T. Lamey was renominated for supervisor by acclamation, as was J. F. Gieske for town clerk. No opposition to those gentlemen was in evi-

The interest was supposed to center in the choice for collector, but when nominations were called for assessor, Fred Kirschner, candidate for renomination found there was opposition to his candidacy in the person of Frank L. Waterman. The informal ballot showed Kirschner 38; Waterman 37; scattering 6. Nobody expected it would be quite so close. The Waterman faction was organized. The supporters of Mr. Kirschner recognized the fact and went 'way back, but didn't sit down. They called up the reserves and the formal ballot resulted, Kirschner 45; Waterman 37.

For collector, the contest was expected to reach an exciting stage but the contest did not develop. Henry Kirmse ran away with the nomination on the first ballot by a vote of 50 against 19 for Henry Riecke and 18 for Abner Cornwell.

The last act of the meeting was to nominate a constable to fill the vacancy caused by the removal from the township of James F. Regan. Justices Kimberly and Morrison both addressed the voters relative to the necessity of choosing an officer from their respective localities. I. B. Fox and George Prouty were placed in nomination, Mr. Fox winning position on the ticket by a vote of 50 to 28 for Mr. Prouty.

The ticket is a good one from top to bottom, every nominee having the qualifications necessary to fill the duties of the position for which he is Calling Them In.

Judge Carter in the county court began this morning an investigation into the validity of the bonds of all the constables of Cook county. The constables and their bondsmen have been summoned into court. This is the first time in two years that such an investigation has been made. According to the law the county judge examines the bonds of constables, justices of the peace and police magistrates every six months. He has the constables before him only occasion-

The bonds, it is expected, will be examined at the rate of twenty-five a week. There are 237 constables in Cook county, the bonds of all whom will be reviewed. The bondsmen are required to re-schedule their property. A bondsmen on a constable's bond least $10,000. In several instances, today, constables were required to give new bondsmen. No fraudulent bonds so far have been discovered.

PASS MANY PRIVATE PENSIONS

House Members Break the Record by Voting 229 Bills for the Relief of War Veterans-Review of Measures Before Both Bodies.

Thursday, March 13.

In the senate the conference report upon the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was agreed to. Senator Morgan reported the Hepburn Nicaraguan canal bill without amendment. A large number of minor bills were passed without objection. Consideration of the ship subsidy bill was then resumed. Mr. Berry made a vigorous argument in opposition to it. He became involved in a colloquy with Mr. Hanna who maintained that the ships acquired from foreign countries could not participate in the subsidies. Mr. Perkins (Cal.) delivered a speech in support of the bill. Mr. Penrose favorably reported the Chinese exclusion bill and it was placed on the calendar. Then the senate went into executive session, and at 5:25 p. m. adjourned.

In the house general debate upon the postoffice appropriation bill was closed and consideration of twelve of the twenty-seven pages of the bill was completed. No amendments were adopted. 'I'ne principal portion of the general debate was devoted to the discussion of the appropriations for several small facilities. Mr. Underwood (Ala.) defended the subsidy to the Southern railroad on the ground that it was absolutely necessary to give the South quick mail facilities. Mr. Smith (Ill.) discussed the subject of penny postage and Mr. Sulzer (N. Y.) and Mr. Fitzgerald (N. Y.) urged the immediate necessity of a new postoffice building in New York city. Mr. Cochran (Mo.) then made a speech denouncing the course of the administration on the Boer war. Before adjournment at 5:10 o'clock, a resolution was adopted to authorize the president to invite the families of Marshal Rochambeau and Marquis de LaFayette and the people of France to be present at the unveiling of the statue of Marshal Rochambeau in Washington, May 24, 1902, and Friday, March 14. was again under consideration. Mr. Foraker supported it, although he admitted he would have preferred to Mr. Harris opposed the measure on the ground that it was not constitutional. They maintained that it was class legislation, which amounted to little short of robbery of the people for the benefit of a few ship owners. At the conclusion of Mr. Harris' remarks the senate went into executive session and confirmed The Hague treaty on rules of warfare, and at 6:03 o'clock adjourned.

In the House the postoffice appropriation bill was passed, the only amendment of importance being one to incorporate in the bill the provisions of the bill to classify the rural free delivery service. Quite a number of other bills were passed, including three for marine hospitals at Buffalo, Savannah and Pittsburg. The Burleson resolution calling on the Secretary of State for the facts relative to the case of Dr. Thomas and wife, who desired to go to South Africa to distribute relief funds, was adopted after a short debate. Mr. Sherman called up a bill to prevent false branding and marking of food products entering into interstate commerce, and it was passed. The conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation was agreed to. Adjournment was taken | Ball (Texas), and Lawrence (Mass.), at 4:50 o'clock.

Saturday, March 15. Differences of opinion on the Republican side appeared during the debate in the senate on the ship subsidy bill. Mr. Allison indicated that he was not quite satisfied with the measure as it stands now and gave notice of amendments limiting the time of its operation-no contracts to be made after July 1, 1910, and none to extend beyond July 1, 1920-and limiting also to $5,000,000 annually up to 1907 and to $8,000,000 thereafter the amount of money to be paid from the treasury on mail contracts on account of it. He was followed by Mr. Spooner, who also took exceptions to some provisions of the measure. Earlier in the day Mr. Teller made a speech in opposition to the measure, and was followed by Mr. Elkins with a brief address in support of it. Mr. Bacon Smith, 20 years old, who sought to gave notice of an amendment provid- blackmail a merchant of Tillie, was ing that no contract under the bill shot and killed by one of four men orshall be binding upon the government | dered to entrap him.

until approved by congress. Mr. Mailory submitted an amendment depriving all vessels from the benefits of the act whose owners have been within the last year parties to "any agreement or understanding of any kind with any person or corporation to control ocean freight rates." A bill appropriating $150,000 to establish a marine hospital at Savannah, Ga., was passed; also a bill providing for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri river at Omaha, Neb. Adjournment followed a brief executive The day in the house was devoted to private pension bills, 229 being passed, clearing the calendar. This is the largest number of pension bills ever passed by the house at one session. A resolution was adopted calling upon the war department for information concerning the transport service between San Francisco and the Philippines. Mr. Minor (Wis.) denounced a published statement regarding the speaker and himself as false. The story said that he (Minor) had changed his position on the shipping bill and on the Cupan tariff question because of the speaker's intention to advocate a local revenue cutter measure in which the Wisconsin member is interested. Speaker Henderson also stated that there was not a shadow of truth in the article. Adjournment was then taken.

Monday, March 17.

The day in the senate was chiefly devoted to consideration, amendment and passage of the ship subsidy bill. Among other bills passed were those appropriating $150,000 for a public building at Colorado Springs, Colo.; appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Laramie, Wyo., and appropriating $5,000 for the erection of a dwelling for the keeper of the lighthouse at Kewaunee, Wis. As the last public bill on the calendar was passed Mr. Hale remarked that in all his experience he had never before known the last public bill on the calendar to be reached and disposed of. A resolution providing for the appointment of a board to investigate the project of constructing an inter-oceanic canal across the isthmus of Darien was reported unfavorably by the interoceanic canals committee, and was indefinitely postponed.

In the house consideration of the rivers and harbors bill was begun. Mr. Burton (Ohio) made a speech in explanation of the measure. The impression existed, he said, that the bill carried something over $60,000,000 for the ensuing fiscal year, whereas it only carried $24,000,000 of actual appropriations. Several other members spoke briefly. Mr. Bellamy (N. C.) protested against the treatment his state had received. Firemen Remove Hundreds of Barrels of Kerosene to Places of Safety-Lighter Drifts to Pennsylvania Line Pier at New York, Doing Damage.

Hoboken had a great water front fire Tuesday night, its second in less than two years. One steamship pier was destroyed with thousands of bales of cotton and hay, and the steamship British Queen of the Phoenix line was burned to the water's edge. The pier of the Barber steamship line was slightly burned, and the pier of the Holland-American line, to the south, escaped after being endangered for an hour. Seven oil and alcohol laden barges and lighters floated out into the stream from the burning piers,, and drifted blazing down the North River with the tide, making a glorious night | the heavy seas.

spectacle. There were rumors that men and women had jumped from the burning lighters into the river. The Captain of the lighter Tonawanda saved himself, his wife and his child by pushing a cotton bale into the water, placing his family and himself upon it, and paddling his strange life raft into the river.

Several daring rescues were made by the naval militiamen on the Portsmouth, stationed just above the blazing docks. Under command of Lieut. Davenport they lowered a boat and went in among the blazing lighters and ourning ship and saved persons who had jumped into the water. Five longshoremen were burned in racing with the flames.

At 11 o'clock the river, which had been lighted by burning barges since 8:30 o'clock, was further illuminated by the blazing shape of the big British Queen, which was dragged out into the middle of the stream and half-drifting, half-towed by tug boats, went hissing and spouting sparks and tongues of flames toward the Jersey flats, where it

Party of Five Taken from the Barge Wadena Also Drown-Captain Mayo Shows Bravery by Putting to Sea fa a Frait Craft, Saving One. Captain Marshall N. Eldredge and six members of his crew from the Monomoy (Mass.) life saving station were drowned near Shovelful Shoal, while trying to rescue W. H. Mack of Cleveland, O., and four men from the stranded barge Wadena. Mack and his four companions were also drowned. The life saving crew of eight men had succeeded in taking Mack and his companions off the barge, but in attempting to return to shore the lifeboat capsized repeatedly. The life savers and the rescued bargemen, exhausted in their efforts to right the boat, were washed away one by one by-Only one escaped-Surfman Ellis-and he was rescued by Captain Elmer F. Mayo of the barge Fitzpatrick, who heroically put to sea in a dory in spite of the gale and the boisterous waves.

The barges Wadena and Fitzpatrick stranded on Shovelful Shoal last Tuesday, and wreckers had been at work for nearly a week in getting them off. The Fitzpatrick had been floated, but the Wadena remained fast.

When the southeast gale came on Mr. Mack sent most of his men on board the tug Peter Smith, and told Captain Hansen to anchor in a place of safety. Mack and two Portuguese sailors and the cook remained on board the barge.

A fierce gale was prevailing and the Monomov life saving station was notified of the perilous situation of those on board the stranded barge.

In an hour the lifeboat, with Capt. Eldredge at the steering oar, was seen out among the breakers on its way to the barge. The weather was so thick that the lifeboat was soon lost sight of by the watchers on shore

Two hours later Capt. Elmer /F. Mayo of the barge Fitzpatrick rowed ashore in a dory with Surfman Ellis lying unconscious on the bottom of the frail boat.

Surfman Ellis said that the life savers had great difficulty in reaching the stranded barge. But they lost no time in taking off Mack and his companions.

"We had no sooner started to return when we found ourselves in the midst of a cross sea and were shipping water continually. We were trying to turn to avoid a rip when a big. comber struck us on the broadside and capsized the boat, throwing us all out. Most of us succeeded in getting hold of the boat, and by Capt. Eldredge's orders righted it. More than half of us had now been swept away and. drowned, and we four remaining ones were getting exhausted. We were glad enough to shout when we saw Captain Mayo coming toward us in his dory. Captain Eldridge was so exhausted that he was washed away. The next sea swept off Rogers and Kendrick. I had given up all hope when Mayo reached me."

Hotel Fire at Atlanta. Ga. At Atlanta, Georgia, Gelder's hotel was badly damaged by fire. Chemicals in the basement of a drug store in the building and whisky stored in a saloon next door caught fire and added to the flames. The firemen, after great difficulty, rescued the patrons, the last person removed being Miss Lavohan of Jacksonville, Fla., who was ill in bed. She was hastily carried to a nearby hotel, but admission was refused on the ground that the management did not receive invalids. The total loss is $30,000 fully insured.

The Countess Tolstoi. The Countess Tolstoi, in her way, is almost as wonderful as her famous husband, whose severe illness is at present causing such grave anxiety. Her individuality and her theories are as marked and distinct as are his. Nor does she always agree with him in his views. In fact, she most strenuously opposed his tirade against the copyright system. Neither is she a blind admirer of the count's style and stories, but often freely and somewhat warmly attacks both, the result being a rather heated argument. Eloquent Words Uttered at the Grave of the Departed Leader-Thousands View the Body as it Lies in State at the Public Library.

John P. Altgeld's body was committed Sunday to the earth selected for its final resting place and over it were said the last words of tribute from his followers and friends. It was not with rites of church nor with rites of states that he was buried. No minister of the gospel was there to speak, nor did the officials of city and state, of whom many followed the coffin, appear, except in the character of citizens. The military pomp and the formatities that might attend the funeral of a former governor of the state were all omitted. The burial was one in which all the services centered upon one individual man and his relations to the other men of the society in which he lived. The speakers, two men associated with him in national politics and one who had been a life long friend, all found their consolation and their hope alone in the influence which the personality of the man will still possess when his bones have become dust.

The services of the day made a most perfect showing of the influence which Mr. Altgeld had exercised in his life and of the great number of the followers who felt in his death a personal loss. Despite the 25,000 people who had gazed upon his face as he lay upon his bier in the ball of the public library building the day before, it was seen as soon as the doors were opened that the numbers were by no means exhausted. For three hours they passed in steady stream, and in the last half hour of the time 5,000 men and women were numbered in the line.

Then, through the streets of the city as far north as Lincoln park on the way to Graceland cemetery, a funeral procession of thousands of men, and of many women, walked slowly behind his hearse. It was 2:20 o'clock before the funeral procession reached the cemetery. The coffin was carried from the hearse by the pallbearers. Clarence S. Darrow and Joseph Martin followed immediately after, and behind them were Judge Dunne, chairman of the funeral committee, and William Jennings Bryan. The crowd pressed in behind the relatives and the committeemen and honorary pallbearers, and then, with no formality, the coffin was quickly lowered out of sight. No clod of earth was thrown into the grave, but when all was ready Judge Dunne announced that William Jennings Bryan would offer his tribute to the

Mr. Bryan said: "It is written that the things that are seen are temporal and the things that are unseen are eternal. This is our consolation today. This occasion-sad as it iswould be infinitely more sad if we were committing to earth all that there was of our departed friend. But the better part of him whom we knew as Altgeld survives the grave. As a bird, escaping from its cage, enters a larger world, so the influence of the deceased is broadened, rather than narrowed. by his death. He has proved how great are the possibilities under our institutions. Born in another land, he has demonstrated what one can do unaided If he has ideals and a purpose."

Promotion for Prince Henry. Berlin advices say that Prince Henry of Prussia, after completing the fleet maneuvers during the coming summer, will resign the command of the first squadron, which he has held for two years. He has held all positions in the German navy up to that of admiral. The only possible higher command is that of the double squadron maneuvers, which have hitherto been conducted under a general inspector of the navy. It is expected that Prince Henry will be in command of the double squadron maneuvers next year. Emperor William has ordered the battleships Wuertemberg and Baden to appear before Cuxhaven to welcome his brother upon his return to Germany.

The Coming of Santos-Dumont. The coming of Santos-Dumont with his airship to this country will of course be an event of interest or at least of curiosity, though we are at a loss to know just what sort of attention he should receive at our hands. After exhibiting himself and his machine at Paris, Naples and Monte Carlo his announcement that he will continue his "experiments" in London for awhile and then come over to New York and subsequently visit other American cities smacks more of the showman who is after gate receipts than of the scientist or even the serious mechanic who is seeking to perfect an appliance which shall add to the convenience and pleasure of mankind

If M. Santos-Dumont were really studying the problem of aerial navigation, it is absolutely certain that he would not wander from country to country, breaking up his "plant" each time and giving exhibitions of a machine which is yet far from perfection, if, indeed, it can ever be perfected. By serious students of aerial navigation his machine is regarded as mathematically wrong in principle and, except in a dead calm or close to it, an appreciably more dangerous vehicle than the simple hot air bag of the circus aeronaut.

As the young Brazilian is said to be rich, the chances are that he is not trying to make money out of his complicated toy, but, evidently enough, he delights in public applause and as soon as he has exhausted the interest of the unthinking in one place he seeks a new field for the display of his daring-and folly.

M. Santos-Dumont, with his airship, will, of course, be welcome to this country, but he can hardly expect that thoughtful people will take him any more seriously than they do the ordinary traveling showman.

Births and Deaths In Three Countries.

The London Contemporary Review. gives some rather interesting comparative figures regarding the growth of the populations of Great Britain, France and Germany. They show, as was already generally known, that the population of France is almost stationary, but the revelation they make of a rapidly diminishing excess of births over deaths in the United Kingdom is something of a surprise.

The Review's figures show that the average yearly number of births per 10,000 of the population for the period of 1880-84 was as follows in the three countries: Germany, 371; United Kingdom, 323; France, 248. For the same period the number of deaths was: Germany, 258; United Kingdom, 195; France, 224. Hence the excess of births over deaths was: Germany, 113; United Kingdom, 128; France, 24.

Turning now to the period 1895-99, we find the figures to be as follows: Average yearly number of births: Germany, 361; United Kingdom, 291; France, 220. Average yearly number of deaths: Germany, 213; United Kingdom, 179; France, 207. Excess of births over deaths: Germany, 148; United Kingdom, 112; France, 13,

The United Kingdom still has much the lowest death rate, but Germany has gained more by a fall in that rate and lost less by the fall in the birth rate. Apparently an aversion for large families has taken hold of England, as it has of France, and, as population spells power, this aversion may some day prove rather costly to the British empire.

Dr. Herbert F. Fisk, head of the Northwestern University Preparatory school, has effectively set his foot down on cigarette smoking among the boys under his care. He has pronounced an ultimatum that all pupils who refuse to give up the cigarette habit will be packed off to their parents. That boy must be pretty thick skinned who would not feel thoroughly ashamed if it were known that he had to quit boarding school because he insisted on smoking cigarettes. Dr. Fisk has made a careful study of the effect of the habit on the scholarship and morale of the youths committed to his charge and has found that the boys who smoke are far below the nonsmokers in the average of scholarship. There may be a lesson in this for other schools of the country.

A new law now in force in Rhode Island makes two years' residence in the state necessary before application for divorce will be honored. There is some little speculation as to whether this will operate to discourage divorces or to prolong fashionable sojourning at Newport. Probably it will be the

A Petition From Guam.

The petition just forwarded to congress by the secretary of the navy from the citizens of the island of Guam is a singular and interesting document. It prays for a commission to study the condition and government of the little island in order to devise some method of giving to the inhabitants a just, stable and efficient system of administration in which they shall have a proper share. They represent that the people of Guam are loyal, law abiding and orderly. They do not complain of the naval officer having charge of the military government now in operation-on the contrary, they express great confidence in him-but they urge that military government is radically unsuited for the island, if for no other reason than-that it is liable to change at any moment, and they ask for measures "for the establishment of a permanent government that will enable us to mold our institutions to the American standard and prepare ourselves and our children for the obligations and the enjoyment of the rights and privileges to which as loyal citizens of the United States we feel ourselves rightfully entitled."

It is notable that the petition has the unqualified indersement of Commander Schroeder, governor of the island, who states that radical defects exist in the system of taxation and in the administration of justice, but that these should not be tampered with except for permanency, and that an unsatisfactory condition is better than a succession of changes.

The prayer of our loyal and law abiding Guamese citizens should receive prompt attention.

What Shall We Call Them?

Now that the United States government is about to take possession of the little group of islands which we have purchased from Denmark, questions arise as to their future designation. When our sovereignty is extended to them, they will of course be no longer the Danish West Indies, and that title would be a nuisance. They have so long been associated as a group under the same government that it will be difficult to regard them as units. It is not probable that the names of the separate islands will be changed. They will presumably remain St. Thomas, St. John and Santa Cruz in the future, the last of these titles being preferred in this country to St. Croix. For the group, however, it is fitting that there should be a change in nomenclature to conform to the change in sovereignty. amount of money upon it. If the lost

Inasmuch as their addition to Porto 130 Rico establishes a new and distinct thoroughly examined, smoothed in group of West Indian islands belonging to the United States, it is likely that eventually these four islands, with their smaller adjacent islets, will be known as a group as the American Antrip. tilles or the American West Indies, either of which titles would be significant and appropriate.

The accounts of the adjournment of the legislature of Porto Rico a few days ago read as familiarly as though they were regular and accustomed records of the closing session of a legislature in one of our state capitols. There were the same crowding of belated bills into the last hours, the same turning back of the hands of the clock, the same hurrying of measures to the governor for his signature and, we doubt not, the same scenes of mingled hilarity and sadness that always mark the small strips, falling like shavings from end of a body where men have been their machines, must be carefully colassociated in their daily life. UNCLE SAM'S MONEY.

THE SAFEGUARDS THAT HEDGE ABOUT ITS MANUFACTURE.

Care With Which Even the Shavings of the Peculiar Paper Used Are Handled-Counting and Recounting the Treasured Sheets.

Uncle Sam's paper money has its birth in the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington. Here a corps of engravers cut its lines into plates of steel. Five hundred men and women are in one room. It is the largest printing office in the world. Here are struck from these plates the notes which we give the butcher and the baker. Each steel plate when not in actual use is stored away in a great burglar proof vault to which only the highest officials know the combination. At the side of each printing press is a little indicator like a bicycle cyclometer, which keeps tally of every piece of paper money printed. Thus is Uncle Sam kept informed as to the exact number of paper notes of all denominations which leave his presses daily.

If there is any secret which Uncle Sam jealously guards, it is the process of manufacturing the fiber paper upon which his money notes are printed. He pays a Massachusetts firm a big price for it, and this firm does its work under the surveillance of a government agent. The paper is manufactured of the finest rags, cleaned, boiled and mashed into pulp. As it is rolled into thin sheets silk threads are introduced into it by a secret process. These are the distinguishing marks making imitation of the paper well nigh impossible. The sheets of paper, already counted twice and placed in uniform packages at the paper mill, are stored in a treasury vault and issued to the bureau of engraving and printing as wanted. Before leaving the treasury they are counted three times more, and the receiving official at the bureau must receipt for them. Then the bundles are unwrapped, and the sheets are counted twenty-eight times by a corps of women. This is to insure that each printer gets the recorded number-no more, no less. Before any employee of the division in which this paper is kept can leave for home each night he must exhibit to a watchman at the door a pass certifying that every fragment of every sheet passing through his fingers has been accounted for.

If one sheet of this precious paper be lost, the entire force of men and women having access to the room where the misplacement has occurred are kept in, like so many school children. to find it. Each sheet is issued from the vault for the printing of a definite A suggestion was lately made that sheet were intended to ultimately repcannot locate it within a reasonable

No attempt to steal Uncle Sam's money while undergoing any of these stages of manufacture has yet been detected. As a matter of fact, the money would be practically useless, for its printing is not completed until after it makes this guarded journey to the treasury. There the finishing touch is added in the printing of the colored seal upon the face of each note. With the six sealing presses the same precautions are taken as with the two hundred and fifty big money presses in the other building. Each sheet coming from the former has a row of notes printed upon it. The sheets are put through small machines, operated by girls, who cut TAKE YOUR WASHING out the individual notes. Even the

RICE WATER NUTRITIOUS.

Cu. s Way Some British Officers Discovered This Fact.

It is probable that few occidental cooks who prepare rice in various forms for diet are aware that in discarding the water in which it is boiled they are wasting what is regarded by the oriental as the most nutritious part of the food. This fact was curiously proved some years since when a detachment of Europeans and native troops in India found themselves beleaguered in a fort with insufficient rations, even of rice, to enable them to hold out until a force could march to their relief.

It was when the officers were seriously debating this problem that the natives approached them with what was regarded as a curious solution of the difficulty. If, proposed the latter, the Europeans took all the rice, they, the natives, would be quite content with the water in which it was boiled. The suggestion, in place of any better, was adopted, when it was remarked that while the Europeans found it difficult to maintain their strength on full Misses Ethel and Florence McGraw rations of rice the natives lost none of the water. When the proposal was made, the action of the natives was praised as one of great devotion to somewhat mollified when the discovment lay in the water.

Since that time Europeans in the orient, following the custom of the natives, have given rice water to palients, particularly in cases of cholera, as a last resort when no other food can be retained in the stomach and usually with good results. But the natives always value this water so highly that it is never thrown away.

In fact, it would surprise many cooks to discover how much may be done with this apparently worthless stock. If the rice is cooked in the oriental fashion-that is, boiled only so long that each grain comes out of the pan separate and not as a sodden massthe water when strained off and permitted to cool will become a jelly approaching the consistency of blancmange. To suit the occidental palate the water should be flavored with an extract or otherwise the jelly may have rather an insipid taste.

Finally he walked over to the easel and snatched away the cloth that covered it.

Long and earnestly Overton surveyed the magical work of his hands—so guided his love-inspired brush that the | fire. very breath of life seemed to have been infused into the canvas, and one could almost expect Fedora to step down from the easel, creature of flesh and done of old.

At length the artist heaved a heavy

He took up his pallette knife and approached the canvas-his hand was firm, though his face appeared very pallid in the flickering light.

Suddenly, as the rush of emotion became too great to be longer withstood, he dashed the blade through the canvas, splitting it from top to bottom most ruthlessly.

The first stroke seemed to loosen the passion which had been so long restrained, and with savage, almost brutal emphasis, he cut and slashed furiously right and left, up and down.

Thus in a very brief space of time all that represented his many months of weary yet loving labor, into which he had put his very life, so to speak, was a wooden frame from which dangled dozens of streamers. The masterpiece was as utterly destroyed as his own ambition. Not content, he ground the frame into pieces under his heel and cast the wreck upon the fire that had been purposely started upon the hearth to "Burn," he said, bitterly, as the flames greedily seized upon the fragments: "burn out as my love has done, leaving nothing but bitetr, cold ashes. Henceforth I live but to seek power and wealth. The past shall be a ghastly blank-the future I will build by the power of brain and brawn, until the hour comes for my revenge. Something tells me it will sooner or later reach me-that to him who waits and works everything is given. And now to begin to live a new existence."

Two days later a sailing vessel left London bound for the old Spanish Main, and among those who shipped before the mast, thanks to his early yachting training, was Jack Overton, gone to follow the beckoning finger of fortune.

CHAPTER IX.

In the Land of Revolution. San Jose, the capital of that sturdy little republic of Central America which has through its sudden revolutions made Gautarica famous in history-San Jose was in its periodical state of eruption.

Of course, a revolution was in progress. There was probably no very heavy loss of life during each actual upheaval, though a few men might be accidentally killed—the Gautaricans, like all people of mixed blood, being partly Spanish and Indian halfbreeds. love spectacular display, and while these battles always create a great racket, there was little blood actually split, the party that was outnumbered usually yielding up the palm and retiring to recuperate, while the victors, instead of following up the advantage,

> He found the soldiers of Roblado, the president, holding their own well. After moving around from one quarter to another and seeing that the whole affair was on the guerilla order, Overton was forced to sit down and laugh at the ludicrous aspect of the "battle" by means of which the fate of a republic was to be settled.

Evidently Montejo had overrated the strength of his backing, for the wearers of the green cockade were outclassed, and already several of their number had been stretched hors de combat.

There was something in the clamor and the occasional whistle of a bullet over his head that just suited Over-

> At any rate the first, last and only hand-to-hand conflict of the day occurred under Jack's own eyes, when a detachment of the green cockades suddenly appearing, surrounded the valorous general and demanded his sur-

Although Barrajo was a most flercelooking type of a Central American general, with his mustache curled up like two simitars, and his left breast covered with gorgous medals and deccrations, Jack had been wont to look upon him pretty much in the light of a modern Bombastes Furioso, and could hardly believe there was anything of a game spirit back of this assumed ferocity.

To his surprise and delight the general proved quite equal to the occasion. He faced his enemies, waving his sword like a knight of old, and, launching forth a volley of Spanish expletives that should have paralyzed their craven hearts, but failed to do so.

Then came the crash of battle. The general's lone companion was spitted upon a sword after bringing down a couple of the enemy, and Barrajo himself was sorely pressed by those who, recognizing in him the real head and brains of the present dynasty, were grimly determined to get rid of him, so that the next revolution might prove a success.

It was cut and thrust, slash and parry, and machete against sword.

As they stood three to one, with little hope of the general's followers reaching the scene in time to take a hand in the tragic affair, it began to look as though Barrajo had reached the end of his rope, like all men do sooner or later, with weapons in their hands, in Central America.

Jack's love of fair play, not to speak of his friendship for the general, urged him to shy his castor into the ring.

He little dreamed how fortune was dealing out the cards to him just then, and what a marvelous "jack pot" he would eventually sweep in with the results of this day's good work.

Having resolved to lend Barrajo a helping hand, he dashed forward with his revolver, aiming to wound rather than slay.

Thus beset in the rear, and threatened with the whirling blade of the soldier in front, the three wearers of the green cockade became utterly demoralized, and in a panic fled, two of them bearing wounds to remind' them of the day's doings.

When Jack rushed up to congratulate the general on his victor, the noble Gautarican, who had counted himself as good as a dead man, threw both arms around his deliverer and fell upon his breast, swearing in purest Castilian that his life henceforth belonged to the valiant American, and that he would lie awake nights seeking to repay the great debt he owed

This aspect of the Central American character struck Overton even more forcibly than the peculiar tactics of the day's battle. As an artist he could appreciate anything that bordered upon the bizarre and remarkable, and hence quickly determined to accept the warm invitation of his friend, General Barrajo, to visit the public hall, in order to see still more of the singular habits and customs of this hot-blooded people, with whom he had, at least for the time being, cast his fortunes.

There are times in the lives of all men when they appear to be mere creatures of circumstances, buffeted upon a sea of chance, and yet, upon looking back, one can say that all these events were not links in a chain that boun his fortunes, and the absence of any one would mean the wreck of his ship.

Overton believed-indeed, he often swore the fact over and over again to himself—that his heart was dead so far as the fair sex was concerned-be that as it might, it forced no barrier to the instinct that bade him as an artist look a second and a third time at the queen of the dance, about whom the attention of the multitude seemed to breathlessly center.

She was a magnificent creature, this daughter of the south, of graceful mien and dazzling loveliness, formed in the most voluptuous mold of Iberian beauty, whose complexion showed every violet vein through its veil of luscious brown. Her hair was "such as Athene herself might have envied" eyes blazed like diamonds from a cavern, while her lips pouted of themselves, by habit, or nature, into a perpetual kiss. The excitement of the dance had called the carmine into her cheeks until it put to blush the crimson flowers of the grenadine with which her black hair was wreathed. Her eyes blazed with a fire bred of the fierce measures and the ardent passions of the tropics.

More than once her dusky orbs met the admiring glance of the artist, and he could see the invitation extended perfect had been the witchery that whose bosom he hung like a globe of in the impassioned look she gave him, but each time he shook his head and

> As the dance went on, the crowd about the estrada resolved itself into two factions, each led by a richly dressed young patrician, both of whom were evidently aspirants for the hand of the bewitching Circe. The women dancing upon the estrada chattered among themselves evidently jealous of the attention paid to Dona Juanita, the beautiful one, who, proud and palpitating, clearly felt the power which made her the beauty queen of the flesta. At the sound the men exchanged looks of evident satisfaction, and the women left the estrada, taking up positions among the spectators. All left but Circe. That superb, self-contained figure stood upon the hard-stamped floor like a living Venus of flushed bronze her complexion heightened by the dance, her bright eyes gleaming like a coal. Her tiny feet still kept in motion, though the dance had ceased, seeming to await impatiently the beginning of the new measure.

Modern Mother's Unique Thought as to Her Ancestors.

"There, the task is done, the baby's asleep," said a woman friend the other evening as she entered the sittingroom and piled on the table what appeared to be a very considerable portion of a toyshop's stock. There was a little rubber Lord Fauntleroy with its mouth agape and the end of his nose worn through; a little doll, redgowned and belted and with a tin jewel at her throat, called Betty; a still smaller object in human form, one leg gone and a hole in the top of the head, called Johnny; a white sawduststuffed dog with one eye missing and tail in a state of collapse from frequent pulling, called Jip, and a rubber cow known as Moo.

"I believe that some of my ancestors must have been Chinamen," continued the mother, "and that their dispositions, long hidden through successive generations, are reappearing in my

'How is it,' said she, 'that the Scots who leave Scotland are, usually men of more ability than those who remain at home?' 'Ah, madam,' he responded, with an effort at persiflage, 'the reason is obvious. At every outlet there are persons stationed to examine all who pass, that, for the honor of the country, no one be permitted to leave it who is not a man of understanding.' 'I suppose, then,' murmured George Selwyn to me, 'his lordship must have been smuggled."

Moving Stairs. On the "uptown" side of the elevated station at 23d street and 6th avenue, and on the south side of 23d street, there is a moving stairway, which by a tedious process conveys the tired shoppers from the street to the station

Passengers from down town getting off at 23d street often forget about the stairway and walk to the south side of the station, only to find that the steps move only one way. They then walk over to the other side and down the fixed steps to the street. This was not the case with a young man who made the wrong turn the other day. He had taken perhaps one drink too many, and was being looked after by two of his friends. Discovering the mistake, the friends tried to pilot him over to the other side, but the young man, with a contemptuous look at the creeping steps, remarked: "I always did believe I could outrun that thing, and breaking away from his friends, says the New York Mail and Express, he bounded down two steps at a time and won the race hands

This is Simply Wonderful. Chamrion, Mich., March 17th, Mrs. A. Wellett, wife of a local photographer, has had a remarkable experience recently.

Mrs. Wellett tells the story this way: "I could not sleep, my feet were cold, my limbs cramped. I had an awful hard pain across my back. I had to get up three or four times every night. I was very nervous and fearfully despondent, I had very little appetitie.

"After I had suffered in this way for five years, I begun to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. When I had taken a few pills you ought to have seen what came from my kidneys. It looked like

Men of Affairs

One may sail the seas and visit every land and everywhere will find, that men of affairs, who are well informed, have neither the time nor the inclination, whether on pleasure bent or business, to use those medicines which cause excessive purgation and then leave the internal organs in a constipated condition. Syrup of Figs is not built on those lines. It acts naturally, acts effectively, cleanses, sweetens and strengthens when anything more than a laxative is required the safe and scientific plan is to consult a competent physician and not to resort to those medicines

The California Fig Syrup Co. was the first to manufacture a laxative remedy which would give satisfaction to all; a laxative which physicians could sanction and one friend recommend to another; so that today its sales probably exceed all other laxatives combined. In some places considerable quantities of old-time catharties and modern imitations are still sold, but with the general diffusion of knowledge, as to the best medicinal agents, Syrup of Figs has come into general use with the well-informed, because it is a remedy of known value the laxative and carminative principles of plants, known to act most beneficially on the system, with agreeable and refreshing aromatic liquids, but also to the orginal method of manufacture. In order to get the genuine and its beneficial effects one should always note the full name of the Company-California Fig

THE WEALTHY for investments which are denied the man or woman of moderate means. Have you ever stopped to think why the rich grow richer? Because they are continually looking for investments which yield large return; whether it is termed speculation or investment, it is all the same. The rich people of our country have not amassed fortunes on 5% and 6% money but on investments which yield them dollars for cents invested. We believe there are now opportunities for small investors which should be taken advantage of. We speak of the great State of Texas, the best place on earth to live and the best place on earth to invest your money. The State is well termed the "Empire State" with its OIL. RICE. COTTON. CORN, LIVE STOCK AND GRAIN, ITS FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

If you cannot come, you can write a letter. We want you to write us a letter about investments. We want you to buy some good dividend paying Oil stocks in companies we know are managed by honest, capable and conservative men. You have heard of the wonderful Oil fields but you have probably never realized what they really are. We can tell you. We can also tell you how and what to buy. Millions have been lost in all kinds of speculation except Oil. Do you know of anyone who has lost money in good Oil investments? We have a reputation and we are going to keep it. Look in Bradstreet's for our standing, or write to the National City Bank or Trust Company of America at New York, the Whitney National Bank of New Orleans, La., or the Commercial National Bank of Houston, and then write to us and we will give you the benefit of our experience and Bank of Houston, and then write to us and we will give you the benefit of our experience and advice. Don't delay. The demand for Oil and the stocks of good Companies are advancing steadily. Invest a few dollars for dividends which are being paid now. Capitalists from all sections of the country are investing in stocks.

DO THEY KNOW A GOOD THING WHEN THEY SEE IT? DO YOU? Send for our new directory of the Oil fields. It is worth money but we will mail it to you free.

THE HIGHER LIFE. EDITED BY HACKNEY.

The Sundays of man's life Thread together on time's string, Make bracelets to adorn the wife Of the eternal glorious king, On Sunday heaven's gate stands open; Blessings are plentiful and rife, More plentiful than hope.

Whether a life is noble or ignoble depends not on the calling which is is followed.

Great battles are really won before they are actually fought. To control our passions we must govern our habits and keep watch over ourselves in the small details of everyday life.

Of all foolish habits, worrying over what may happen to us tomorrow is one of the worst. We have a Friend who is watching over us and guarding us, and He knows best what to choose

The shortness of life is bound u with its fullness. It is to him who is most active, always thinking, workdesire to be informed of the meaning ing, caring for people and for things, of the word "hypocrite" that would that life seems short. Strip a life

The polite person must aldelivered at the caucus held in Cuba ways be more popular and give more pleasure to others than the rough and boorish one. A little courtesy costs nothing but a little thought, and it makes the wheels of society move vastly more smoothly. We do not mean that the form of good manners should take the place of reality, but unselfishness can be cultivated, and with its growth naturally comes politeness.

Shall we not labor to improve the general condition of men so that even the most ignorant shall see little justification of revolt? Our material progress is magnificent, but is our moral progress keeping pace with it? adopted, but on the spirit in which it Are love and justice, brotherhood and service, increasing with our wealth? > Who can tell the value of a smile? It costs the giver nothing, but is beyond price to the erring and relenting, the sad and cheerless, the lost and forsaken. It disarms malice, subdues temper, turns hatred to love, revenge to kindness, and paves the darkest paths with gems of sunlight. A smile on the brow betrays a kind heart, an affectionate brother, a dutiful son, a liappy husband. It adds a charm to beauty, it decorates the face of the deformed and makes a lovely woman resemble an angel in paradise.

Few people realize how much happiness may be promoted by a few words of cheer spoken in moments of despondency, by words of encouragement in seasons of difficulty, by words of commendation when obstacles have been overcome by effort and perseverance. Words fitly spoken often sink so deep into the mind and heart of the person to whom they are addressed that they remain a fixed, precious and oft-recurring memory-a continuous sunshine, lighting up years, perhaps, after the lips that have uttered them are sealed in death. A whole life has been changed, exalted, expanded and vests. The world is ruled by faith and illumined by a single expression of apserved by love. Life is a thing of proval falling timely upon a sensative and ambitious nature. Words of cheer cost nothing to the speaker. On the contrary, they are to him, as well as to the hearer, a source of great happiness to be had for the mere effort of utter-Good manners are a part of good ing them. The habit of speaking such words at appropriate times is easily acquired, while at the same time it is of so much importance that it should be sedulously cultivated by all.
