PALATINE HAPPENINGS.

Events Past, Present and Future of Village and Vicinity.

Gathered and Compiled by A. G. Smith, Local Editor.

Board meeting Monday night.

Mrs. Morse of Wheeling was in town on business Tuesday.

Palatine vs. Suburbans at Palatine this morning. Come out and celebrate by witnessing the national game.

Irving Beutler has secured a position with the Daniel Scute Co. in Chicago. They are scenic painters and a large firm.

Miss Pierce of Florida has been a guest of her aunt, Mrs. Jonathan Wilson, this week. Mrs. Wright, Kitson of Chicago has also been a visitor.

John Wilson lost a valuable stallion last Wednesday. The horse was winner of the Kentucky Derby and Mr. Wilson had him but a short time.

Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister will address the Young Peoples' society at St. Paul's church Sunday evening in English. His subject will be "Dreams." Everybody invited.

The following were elected trustees of the Palatine Cemetery association Saturday. Chas. E. Julian, George D. Stroker, Henry Wittenberg, Henry C. Matthei and Rush M. Putnam.

Lee Bissell received $200 from the railway company to pay for a sprained ankle received from a fall on account of a bad place in the crossing on Slade street. Lee asked for this amount and the company considered the claim reasonable and paid it.

In a letter from Linstrom, Minn., Mayor A. S. Olms writes that he is having remarkable success fishing—pickeral and bass are plentiful. On Monday he succeeded in landing a five pound bass while casting. He states that the weather is good.

Louis Keyes and Miss Amelia Baker were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Baker, in Palatine, on Sunday, June 29, Rev. D. J. Holmes tying the nuptial knot. Only the members of the families of the contracting parties were present. Many beautiful and useful gifts were presented to the couple. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keyes of this place and is the proprietor of a barber shop of Roselle, where the happy couple have set up house-keeping. We wish them a long and prosperous wedded life.

Miss Eva Biggs was seriously injured Monday morning by being struck by a mail sack thrown from the early mail train going south. She was waiting at the depot when the train approached and stood with her back towards the train. The mail clerk threw the heavy mail sack before reaching her and it struck her with fearful force, throwing her feet from under her. The shock was so severe that she was unconscious for about half an hour. She is still unable to leave her bed, although no serious injury has been discovered. We understand that the mail clerk has been given a vacation and the company is trying to make a settlement with Miss Biggs' parents. We hope enough will be demanded to let the responsible ones know that a life is worth something.

Muzzle Your Dogs.

Notice is hereby given that after July 1st, 1902, and up to October 1st of same year, all dogs found running at large without being muzzled, in the corporate limits of the village of Palatine, will be killed by the village marshal.

Dated at Palatine this 1st day of July, 1902.

ALBERT S. OLMS, President.
Attest: A. G. SMITH, Village Clerk.

HOLD YOUR HOME TRADE.

To Do So Depends Upon Your Ability to Meet the Inroads of Mail Order Houses and Such.

In conversation with a local merchant some days ago, relative to advertising, he remarked: "We are up against the mail order houses. They are taking 25 to 30 per cent of the business which belongs to us, and we cannot afford to advertise."

There is an old saying, "every man knows his own business best," but in this instance we do not agree with the local tradesman, who says he cannot afford to advertise judiciously. If the lavish use of printers' ink is good for the mail order, catalogue house, and that is the ammunition they use to bring down country patronage, it is good for the local merchant. There is no question about this fact.

The great houses of Montgomery

Ward & Co., and Sears, Roebuck & Co. of Chicago, flood this section with their mammoth catalogues and advertisements, keeping everlastingly at it, attracting the trade of the home merchant, taking from him hundreds of dollars each year, dollars to which he is entitled and which he might have if he would make an effort to compete with those houses.

The local merchant can each week, through the columns of the local publication, enumerate many articles, household necessities, and make this offer: "Will duplicate the prices of any mail order house on these articles. Trade at home." And he can keep his word, quality of goods considered. Don't be content with the announcement "largest stock, lowest prices," but offer goods at stated prices. Put out a trade winner and advertise it and the public will call for it.

The merchants of Barrington assert that they have in stock a better grade of goods than is sent out by the mail order houses, and their prices are lower. We believe that statement, and believe also that if they would present the facts to the people through the columns of the local newspaper there would be a large decrease in the business of mail order houses from this village. If you want trade bid for it. Printers' ink is the magnet that never fails to attract the public. Try it and be convinced. Judicious advertising is the foundation stone of the successful merchant.

JUDGE GEST DECIDES

That Woodmen's Rules Affecting Saloon Keepers Are Unreasonable, Retroactive and Void.

Judge Gest of Rock Island has rendered a decision of great importance to the Modern Woodmen and other fraternal insurance societies which have expelled liquor dealers from their membership. The case upon which decision was rendered was that of Mrs. Wieland, widow of George J. Wieland, vs. Modern Woodmen, to recover the amount of a policy of $2,000 held by deceased in said society.

Wieland was proprietor of a saloon in Rock Island. At the time of his admission to membership keepers of saloons were not barred from the society. Some years after the head camp enacted a by-law excluding liquor dealers and saloon keepers from membership and expelling those who were engaged in that business. Wieland tendered his assessments and dues to the clerk of the camp who refused to receive the same.

In 1897 Wieland died and his widow entered suit to recover. Judge Gest has rendered a decision, finding for the plaintiff and awarding her the amount of the policy, $2,000, and $438 interest. The court held that the by-laws mentioned were retroactive, unreasonable and void so far as it affected Wieland's status in the society.

Political Notes.

The democrats have changed front and dropping the Philippine question will make the campaign along the lines of tariff reform and opposition to trusts. Failure to give relief to Cuba and to keep republican pledges will be strongly emphasized. It is the opinion of some of the leaders of the re-united democracy that the party can win on such a platform.

Mr. Hopkins has completed plans for an elaborate campaign this fall and has secured promises of assistance from such well-known republicans as Senators Foraker, Dooliver, Spooner, Burrows, Quarles and Hanna. Representatives Cousins, Cooper and Tawney, besides prominent orators of this state. The republican campaign will open sometime in September. Senator Mason rises to remark: "If Congressman Hopkins has been elected to the senate what is he going to conduct a campaign for? There seems no doubt about the republicans carrying the state by a large majority, but Congressman Hopkins seems in doubt about some of the counties said to have instructed for him. If Mr. Hopkins has arranged an 'elaborate' campaign for his personal benefit it is a confession of weakness of his much advertised support. A campaign is generally conducted by the state committee for the benefit of the party and not for any special candidate. It is possible Congressman Hopkins has departed from the established custom. I shall stump the state in behalf of republican candidates for the legislature. The senator to serve the coming six years has not yet been chosen."

In 1896 Mr. Bryan led the democratic party away from the path indicated by Thomas Jefferson and which it had followed without deviation from its earliest existence to the fatal moment when it made a supporter of Populist Weaver its candidate for president. Mr. Bryan aspires now to be dictator of the democratic party. It looks as though the great apostle of a silver standard had outlived his political usefulness except as a populist. To be honest about it we believe the press of the county is responsible for the sudden rise to prominence of William J. Bryan. He was successfully advertised.

The democratic senatorial committee of this, the Eighth district, met in Chicago, Monday, and after a long session the date for holding the senatorial convention was fixed for August 7, and the place Harvard. There were eight votes in the meeting, Lake 3, McHenry 3, Boone 2. One of the committee members from Boone failed to appear but his proxy was there in the hands of a McHenry county man. Several ballots were taken which stood 4 and 4. Lake and the one member from Boone voting against McHenry and the Boone proxy. Finally the lone delegate from the banks of the Kishwaukee got weary or thirsty, and deserted to the Donnellyites. That is how Harvard secured the convention. A McHenry county man will be nominated as minority representative.

THE DAY WE CELEBRATE.

One Hundred and Twenty-Sixth Anniversary of National Independence.

My Country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of Liberty,
Of thee I sing.

Land where our Fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrim's pride,
From every mountain side
Let Freedom ring!

WHEN, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another; and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them; a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires, that they should declare the causes which impel them to separation. We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.

That was the introductory to the grandest declaration ever placed upon parchment. It was the resolve of that noble band of patriots who, almost crushed by the tyranny of King George, determined with the help of Divine Providence, to erect upon the American continent a government for the people and by the people. The pages of history fail to reveal nobler sentiments than those penned by that great apostle of human liberty, Thomas Jefferson, and the Declaration of Independence will, until the end of time, be treasured in the hearts of all lovers of freedom, especially by all who have found refuge in this land of the free and home of the brave.

One hundred and twenty-six years ago today that great document which shattered the chains binding the colonies to Great Britain, was proclaimed from the front of the old state house in Philadelphia: from that moment the colonies of America were free and independent of monarchical rule—was a republic. To a mere handful of illustrious patriots we owe the liberty and the freedom which this day we enjoy. Their acts will ever live as the brightest in the history of this best, most enlightened and greatest nation of the world. From the dawning of the 4th day of July 1776 to the present moment, the American people have held fast to that great declaration of rights inspired from on high. The day represents our national birth and deserves our homage, therefore

Go ring the bells, and fire the guns,
And fling the starry banners out:
Shout Freedom! till your lispings ones
Give back their cradle shout.

It is a glorious day. It portrays the principles that lie at the foundation of our representative government. We of today revere the memory of the heroes of that struggle which has no parallel in the history of nations; that revolution which gave to us our greatest heritage, and this day shall never fail to be grandly and gratefully remembered. Today Fourth of July is a sentiment, as has truly been said, "that extends more than half way around the world." It follows the sun from its rising on the islands of the Atlantic to its setting on the islands clear across the broad Pacific. So long as the day remains upon the calendar of the year the sun never sets upon it, and the boom of the cracker is heard around the world. When our illustrious forefathers affixed their names to the Declaration of Independence they were the representatives of less than 4,000,000 people. The area included within the boundaries of the colonies which they declared "free and independent states," was but 827,844 square miles. But their efforts and thoughts were not only for the time, but for posterity, and this morning the Fourth of July sentiment is known throughout a territory embracing 3,385,115 square miles, in which reside nearly 100,000,000 people.

It was indeed a precious heritage which the founders of the republic secured for us and upon which they planted the emblem of human freedom. A land stretching from the frozen regions of the north to the sunny skies of the tropics. The American people have kept well the legacy bequeathed them. They have built up a nation on a scale of magnificence which is the envy of all nations of the earth. They have covered it with powerful states, and great cities, connected by a network of railroads, telegraphs, canals which bind all into a solid whole. They have made a commerce and system of manufactures before which the fabled wealth of ancient Egypt sinks into insignificance. They have created a literature which commands the respect of the known world, and have illustrated our history with deeds of arms not less splendid than our more peaceful achievements. We have given to the world names in every walk of life that will forever illuminate the brightest pages of the world's progress. We have just cause for celebration, and our sentiment of taking under protection the oppressed of possessions of foreign powers has driven from the world the ancient fallacy of the divine rights of kings and emperors. Today the star spangled banner is honored wherever it is unfurled.

Our Fathers' God to Thee,
Author of Liberty,
To Thee we sing,
Long may our land be bright
With Freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God our King!

KING IS NOW OUT OF DANGER

Physicians Are Confident That the Crisis is Passed—City of London Practically Deserted on Procession Day.

"The king has made substantial improvement."

Such is the latest word from the sick room of King Edward. The bulletin breathes the spirit of encouragement and hope. There is a definite comparison made. Instead of being told that his majesty's condition is satisfactory or that he has rested well, the unqualified announcement is made that no matter what his condition was in the morning, he was better at night.

This is something tangible. At the same time it must not be forgotten that the serious nature of the king's ailment and the gravity of the operation forbids the wisdom of taking too optimistic a view. Some days yet must elapse before the success of the operation can be assured.

There is, however, not the slightest reason for anything like alarm. A great deal of importance is attached to the return of pain in the wound, but, according to medical opinion, such symptoms are the ordinary result of the process of healing, which tends to contract the tissues to a certain extent. This would naturally cause a certain amount of discomfort, the seat of the operation that, while King Christian, who is in excellent health, had intended coming to London, Queen Alexandra had wired back that there was no necessity for his undertaking the journey, as Edward was making excellent progress. The crown prince, Waldemar, telegraphed an equally assuring message to King Christian.

As to the critical period it is significant that some foreign princes, near relatives of his majesty, purpose to remain in London for some days.

The medical men are satisfied with the king's progress, which, though slow, is reassuring, after the alarm caused by the recent relapse, when it was generally understood in palace circles that it was almost a case of life or death. His majesty throughout has exhibited remarkable fortitude, to which his physicians attribute his present favorable condition.

It is said that after the issue of the last bulletin Lord Marcus Beresford asked Lord Lister how the king was progressing and that Lord Lister replied: "His majesty is practically out of danger."

Despite circumstantial reports to the effect that the king was allowed now believe that all danger of any septic process has passed and that, so far as can be seen, the crisis may be regarded as at an end.

The crowds in the streets are much smaller. The work of tearing down the decorations is proceeding apace.

What was to have gone down to history as procession day, when it was expected there would be the greatest crush ever witnessed in the streets of London, found the city practically deserted. The bank holiday proclaimed paralyzed business. The masses, apparently, surfeited with their eventless wanderings in the streets, either cleared out to the country, tempted by the perfect weather, or else staid at home. Certainly the main thoroughfares could not have been more deserted on any Sunday in the year.

The fashionable cafes and restaurants were the scenes of numerous smart luncheons, while extensive but quiet preparations were made for week end house parties at the surrounding country places, whose owners seem to think the situation warrants at least some subdued gaiety in honor of the many prominent visitors.

The people are taking the greatest pride in the king's fortitude. It has been learned that his majesty facilitated the preparations for the operation and that when the surgeons were ready he stretched himself upon the operating table, declining assistance.

King Edward's calmness, cheerfulness and pluck are considered most favorable auguries for a speedy recovery, and the messages from Queen Alexandra and Sir Francis Knollys, the king's private secretary, in reply to expressions of solicitude, and the statements of persons most familiar with the situation, all bear out the confident hopefulness which prevails to-day.

Queen Alexandra has received a message from the Sultan of Turkey expressing his joy at the improvement in the king's condition.

PERSONAL TRAITS OF THE KING.

Incidents in His Life Favorably Commented Upon.

A writer in the London Outlook, who has long been personally acquainted with King Edward, instances how he is essentially and above all human. He recalls, as though it occurred yesterday, King Edward's beaming face and tear stained eyes thirteen years ago as a friend raised him on the garden wall of Buckingham palace as he threw an old shoe after the carriage of his first married daughter, the duchess of Fife, on her wedding morning.

This man also recalls his majesty's shock and surprise when at a race meeting he opened a telegram and exclaimed: "Little Albany is dead!" and without an instant's hesitation hurried into his brougham and never staid his journey by land or sea until he reaches Cannes, returned to Portsmouth, and consigned his brother's remains to the tomb of St. George's Chapel, Windsor.

The Spectator, in an article computing King Edward's standing in the county, says:

"The people forgive him that hunger for distraction of which he was accused and which probably was bred in him by those long years of waiting on the step of the throne with nothing serious to do, through which the king grew to late manhood.

"The king often is accused in popular talk of being too gracious to nouveau riches. We are not in the least disposed to deny that many millionaires want much snubbing, but we can, as reasonable politicians, understand the king thinking that the accumulation of new wealth is, in a country which enlarges its population yearly, a benefit to the people, and that to draw new millionaires within the ancient system is to give that system new stability."

Heir Apparent to the Throne of Great Britain.

being, of course, affected by the patient's breathing.

What is far more important is that his majesty is taking ever increasing interest in what is going on in the world outside. That his appetite is improving and that there are no feverish symptoms are signs of greatest promise and form sufficient grounds for the statement made by his medical advisers that the king is showing recuperative power of the most wonderful order.

The queen is cheerful and hopeful and continues to display most devoted solicitude. The king is able to take plenty of nourishment. His diet already includes soup, fish and baked apples. His majesty is also allowed to smoke occasionally. He still opens and reads many of his personal telegrams and letters, and even dictates some replies.

All the functions of the distinguished patient are working admirably. While the drainage pipes have not yet of course been removed, his general progress has been very sure and steady.

Of course any remaining danger lies in the possibility of pus reappearing and reforming in the wound, but of this there is as yet no trace, nor is there any trace of organic disease of any kind.

So confident are all now of the king's complete and early recovery that it has been informally settled that when the time arrives the royal patient will be carefully removed to Cowes and placed on board the royal yacht.

Sir Henry Thompson said the king's condition was hopeful for recovery. It was, however, too early to say that his majesty was out of danger, but if the present improvement continues for a week or ten days he thought preparations for the coronation might be resumed.

The only danger to be feared, in his opinion, was the possibility of cellular or other tissues in the region of the wound becoming affected, but from what other medical men said, the steady improvement in his majesty's condition was attributable to the fact that he had been able to maintain his strength. If the king continues to hold his own in this respect his recovery was assured.

Perhaps more significant than the official news given out is a short telegram from the Daily Mail's correspondent in Copenhagen, which says to at a little fish, to sit up for a while, to smoke, and to read the newspapers and telegrams, the stories are discredited by all the medical fraternity, except possibly that the king was allowed a single cigarette, as he is such an habitual smoker.

The doctors say it is impossible to believe that the physicians were grossly neglectful enough to allow him to take food in the ordinary acceptance of the term. He takes nourishment, but it is probably milk and other food of that kind. It is impossible to believe that he has been sitting up. He must be lying on his back. The slightest nervous agitation has to be avoided, which precludes the idea of his reading. Outside of the surgeons nobody has seen the king except the queen and his own children.

The operating table, bandages and other appliances connected with surgical operations have been removed from the palace.

Only small crowds now gather about Buckingham palace. The bulletins create the greatest satisfaction. Subsequently a member of the government said:

"Really, everything is going on wonderfully well, and we all now think the king will recover, though, of course, we are afraid of being premature or unduly optimistic. The king is proving himself a gallant chap."

The latest bulletins created the most favorable impression in parliamentary circles. Many of the medical experts

RAIN FLOODS MIDDLE WEST

Much Damage Is Caused by the Storm in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois.

STREAMS LEAVE THEIR BANKS

Farmers, Business Men and Railroad Companies Suffer Great Loss as a Result of the Overflow, which Makes Roads Impassable.

The storm that has prevailed for several days is the most widespread known in this country in many years, according to weather bureau officials in all sections, and great damage has been caused.

The storm extends from the Rocky mountains in the west to the Alleghenies in the east, and covers the states of Illinois, Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, as well as being more or less seriously felt in many other states, notably Texas and Tennessee.

In the states mentioned the rainfall Saturday and Sunday averaged from 1 to 2 inches. About an inch on the average fell in the states north, while in the states south the average was less.

Railroad tracks have in many places been washed out and trains wrecked; rivers are overflowing their banks and flooding the surrounding country, causing untold loss to farmers, and thousands of dollars damage has been done by the flooding of basements and cellars where goods were kept.

RIVER RISES.

Vermilion Enters Danville Waterworks, Cutting Off Supply.

At Danville one man is known to have been drowned and it is believed that several others have lost their lives as a result of the storm and its attendant flood.

Ever since the rivers have begun to rise fears have been entertained that the property loss would be heavy. The fears were realized when several buildings were washed away, and when two houses and several other buildings came floating down the north fork of the Vermilion river from some point up stream.

As a result of the unprecedented rainfall the north fork and the Vermilion river, which join at Danville, have left their beds and thousands of dollars' damage has been done by the flood.

Water Supply Cut Off.

Denmark bridge, six miles north, has been swept away. Sutherland bridge, four miles north, is likely to go at any moment, and all the coffer dams, derricks, tool-houses and false work used in the construction of the new Big Four railroad bridge at the western city limits have been carried away.

The water rose to the waterworks buildings, and within an hour stood four feet deep in the engine rooms, where the fires were extinguished. As soon as the supply in the stand-pipe is exhausted Danville will be without water, and factories, the electric light plant and the power house of the street car and interurban lines will be forced to shut down.

TRADES SCHOOLS FOR FELONS

Indiana Convicts Are to Receive Industrial Instruction.

La Porte, Ind., special: One of the results of the investigation of the contract labor system operative at Jeffersonville and Michigan City, it is stated, will be the establishment, in so far as the southern prison is concerned, of trades schools. The convicts will be instructed in the elementary branches half the day and in industrial schools the remainder of the time, so that each man on leaving the institution may have some knowledge of a trade.

This is the plan enthusiastically advocated by Superintendent Hert of the Indiana reformatory. It has been tried in Massachusetts and is said to be successful.

No recommendation has been made regarding the northern prison, where the older criminals are confined.

Eldorado, Kas., special: Miss Jessie Morrison was found guilty of murder in the third degree for the killing of Mrs. Olin Castle. It took the jury twelve hours to agree upon a verdict, and the final disposition was unaccompanied by any suggestion regarding punishment. The young woman will probably be sentenced early this week and it is expected that her counsel will then make another desperate attempt to have the case appealed once more.

LOSE MILLIONS BY THE STORM

Farmers in Illinois Suffer Great Loss by Recent Rainfall.

MANY FIELDS UNDER WATER

Standing Wheat in Central Part of the State Will Be Almost a Total Loss—Egypt's Apples and Peaches Damaged 10 Per Cent.

Springfield.—Unofficial estimates on the damage resulting to crops throughout central Illinois from the rains of the last few days place the damage to the oats and corn crops at high figures. The wheat still standing will be an almost total loss, as the grain was overripe when the rainfall began. In the river bottoms the corn is practically all under water and that on the high ground has suffered extensively. The oats have been prostrated by the torrents of rain and great difficulty will be experienced in harvesting the crop.

Damage Near Alton.

Alton.—The greatest loss of crops by the farmers in this section of the state occurred in the American bottoms farming district in Madison county and in the Piassa creek valley in Jersey county. The Illinois river farming district is badly flooded. The damage to crops in Madison, St. Clair, the southern part of Macoupin county, along the eastern borders of Greene and Jersey counties, and along the western borders of Calhoun county can be fairly estimated at $1,000,000.

Cairo.—The damage to crops in this section of the country has been light, considering the severe wind and rains. The wheat crop has been harvested and the damage to wheat is slight. Corn suffered quite extensively, and it is estimated that about 15 per cent of the crop is lost. The apple and peach crops were damaged to the extent of perhaps 10 per cent of the total crop.

Little Damage in Winnebago.

Rockford.—While the rainfall in Winnebago county for the last three months has been greater than for any corresponding period in ten years, little, if any, damage has been done to crops.

Danville.—Heavy damage to crops in this county, particularly in the low lands along the Vermilion river and its tributaries, is reported as a result of the recent heavy rains. A conservative estimate places the crop loss at $170,000. In the bottom lands at least 75 per cent of the crop is ruined, much of it being wheat in the shock.

Moline.—While it has rained almost every day for the last six weeks, there have been no serious storms in Rock Island or adjoining counties and the damage to crops has been normal.

Damage is $500,000.

Kankakee.—Under present conditions the loss on corn, oats and hay in Kankakee and Iroquois counties will not be less than half a million dollars, perhaps much more. With favorable weather there would be a quick recovery and the loss would be materially lessened.

Quincy.—The damage to crops in this section by the heavy rains is slight. Some oats have been beaten flat, but can be saved. About 1,000 acres of wheat in the bottoms was overflooded. Farmers estimate the damage at $25,000.

Aurora.—The present outlook for Kane, Kendall and De Kalb counties is that the corn will fall 15 per cent below normal crop. Oats are not unusually heavy and are not down badly. With dry weather from now on there will be an unusually large yield.

Wheat and Corn Ruined.

Lebanon.—Streams in this section are swollen beyond all precedent. Hundreds of acres of wheat standing in shock have been swept away and hundreds of acres of fine growing corn ruined.

Havana.—The Illinois river has stopped rising. Spoon river is rapidly falling. The Sangamon is still rising, but slowly. Wheat is beginning to sprout in the shock.

Indianapolis, Ind.—B. F. Johnson, state statistician, thinks that the loss in dollars and cents to Indiana grain from the rains will not amount to a great deal. He says that where the wheat has been damaged there has been a gain in corn and oats to offset it.

Lafayette, Ind.—Heavy rains have caused a rise of twenty feet in the Wabash river. All creeks have overflowed and bottom lands are submerged from one to three feet. Wheat is in bad shape. Thousands of acres of crops have been ruined by the flood.

ROOSEVELT FOR PRESIDENT

Warm Indorsement of the Chief Executive, Who is Recommended for Re-election—Equalization of Taxes Held to Be Necessary.

The Minnesota Republicans in convention at St. Paul nominated a full state ticket. Most of the nominating was by acclamation, for auditor and clerk of the supreme court only one ballot was needed.

After a brief but lively debate the platform as reported by the committee was adopted.

The platform reaffirms the party adherence to the Republican platform of 1900, and after expressing sorrow for the death of President McKinley indorses the administration of President Roosevelt and recommends him for re-election to the presidency. The death of Cushman K. Davis is lamented and he is described as a brave soldier and a pure, wise and trusted statesman.

The people of Minnesota are congratulated upon the patriotic and business-like administration of Gov. Van Sant and other officials of the state, particularly regarding the state institutions.

Indorses Van Sant.

The action of Gov. Van Sant in his efforts to enforce the laws of this state against the consolidation of competing lines of railway is heartily commended.

"We indorse the course of the administration of peace and order and of civil government in the Philippine Islands. We favor the policy of encouraging the participation of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands in their domestic government to the largest extent practicable whenever peace and order are restored."

"We condemn those who continue to resist the authority of the United States, either openly in the Philippines or secretly at home, and we condemn strongly the malignant attacks upon our army and navy."

Favors Tariff Modification.

"We favor such modification in our tariff schedules as is now or may from time to time be required by changing conditions to remove any burdens from our people and to hold and extend our trade among the nations."

"We congratulate the new republic of Cuba upon its entrance among the nations of the earth. We wish for it peace, prosperity and a long and successful national career, and we favor reciprocity with Cuba as urged by President Roosevelt."

"We favor the election of senators by the people and we strongly indorse our present senators, Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp."

"The Republican party of Minnesota indorses its representatives from this state in congress."

Frank W. Bicknell, special agent and explorer of the agricultural department, writing from Buenos Ayres to the bureau of animal industry, says if it is possible for breeders to send really first-class animals there now is a good time to do so, as British cattle have been barred owing to the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in England. FASCINATING DANGER.

The Perils That Beset the Builders of Big Bridges.

The design of a long bridge span is one of the most elaborate mathematical problems that arise in constructive work. The stresses produced by its own weight, by the weight of traffic, by locomotive drivers, by the hammering of flattened wheels, by the action of brakes on an express train, by the high speed on a curved track, by the wind and by the expansion and contraction of the steel in summer and winter are all accurately calculated. The deflection of the loaded and unloaded bridge is determined, and complete drawings are made of every member of it. The bars of steel are tested in machines which will pull in two a horsehair or a steel bar strong enough to lift half a score of the heaviest locomotives at once, and which will crush an eggshell or a steel column, and accurately measure the stress in each case. The different kinds of members are forged, riveted, bored, or planed in perhaps half a dozen remote shops, and, although usually not fitted together there, are examined and measured by specialists to see that they are correct, and are then shipped by scores of carloads to the site of the proposed structure, where steam derricks unload them and pile them many feet high in stacks covering acres of ground.

The bridge piers may rise above the water hundreds of feet apart. It remains to place them on a thousand ton structure, high above a savage chasm, over an impassable current or roaring tide, where the water is deep, the bottom of jagged rocks or treacherous quicksand, or where an old bridge must be removed and the new one built in its place without interrupting traffic on the bridge. To accomplish this the engineer has timber, bolts and ropes, hoisting engines, derricks and a band of intrepid builders who have perhaps followed him for years through more hardship and danger than fall to the lot of almost any other calling.

The complicated framework of a great span is a skeleton with many accurate joints and thousands of steel sinews and bones, each of which must go in exactly the right place in exactly the right order. The builder must weave into the trusses pieces larger, heavier and far more inflexible than whole tree trunks, swiftly hoist and swing them to place hundreds of feet high, fit together the massive girders and huge forged bars with watchmaker's accuracy, support the unwieldy masses until they are keyed together and self-sustaining, and under millions of pounds of stress must adjust them at dizzy heights to mathematical lines. This he may need to do not deliberately, but in dangerous emergencies, at utmost speed, putting forth his whole strength on narrow, springing planks in a furious tempest, in bitter cold or in blazing heat. He may be in the heart of an African desert, menaced by bloodthirsty fanatics, or in a gorge of the Andes, hundreds of miles from tools or supplies, where there is absolutely no supplement to his own resources. Under such conditions bridge building is one of the most fascinating and difficult of engineering problems and requires a different solution for almost every case.—Frank W. Skinner in Century.

Bells.

It was long a fixed idea that silver mixed with the bell metal improved the tone, but this is now considered incorrect. The Acton Nightingale and Silver Bell, two singularly sweet bells at St. John's college, Cambridge, are said to have a mixture of silver, but if true this is not believed by competent authorities to be the cause of their beautiful tone. This idea led to the story of the monk Tandio concealing the silver given him by Charlemagne and casting the bell in the monastery of St. Paul of inferior metal, whereupon he was struck by the clapper and killed. In the ninth century bells were made in France of iron. They have been cast in steel, and the tone has been found nearly equal in fineness to that of the bell metal, but, having less vibration, was deficient in length, and thick glass bells have been made which give a beautiful sound, but are too brittle to long withstand the strokes of the clapper.—Gentleman's Magazine.

The Inventor of the Match.

The first match was the product of the ingenuity of John Frederick Komerer, who early in the nineteenth century was imprisoned in the penitentiary at Hohenasperg, in Germany. He invented the lucifer match while in his gloomy dungeon. The German government forbade the manufacture of matches on the ground of public policy, because some children playing with them had caused a fire. Komerer was ruined by Viennese competition when he was released from prison and died a pauper. Up to 1862 the Vienna manufacturers controlled the match business of the entire world.

A Way Old Acquaintances Have.

"It is too bad," said the visitor from home, "but people who acquire wealth are not the same to their old friends."
"Perhaps there is a reason for that," replied Mrs. Cumrox reminiscently. "People who acquire wealth have feelings the same as any one else, and their old friends sometimes have a very superior way of saying: 'Humph! I knew them when they were as poor as Job's turkey.'"—Washington Star.

SOME WRITERS.

Goldsmith wrote the "Vicar of Wakefield" in six weeks. It is said to have been a story of his own recollections.

Thomas Dunn English wrote "Ben Bolt" in 1843; and some fifty years later George Du Maurier made the tender song famous the world over.

It has been mentioned as a proof of Alexander Pope's love of economy that he wrote most of his verses on scraps of paper and particularly on the backs of letters.

Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre" was rejected by nearly every publisher in England before it scored one of the greatest literary successes in the world's history.

Whittier, the poet, it is reported, said to the doctors in attendance a day or two before his death, "You have done the best possible, and I thank you; but it is of no use—I am worn out."

The poet Heine on the day after his marriage drew up a will in which he bequeathed all he possessed to his wife on condition that she married again. He desired, he said, that at least one man should regret his death.

The Arab Mother's Advice.

When an Arab damsel gets married, her mother gives her the following advice for securing her future happiness: "You are leaving your nest to live with a man with whose ways and habits you are unfamiliar. I advise you to become his slave if you wish to become the absolute mistress of your husband. Be satisfied with little, endeavor to feed him well and watch over his sleep, for hunger begets anger, and sleeplessness makes a man cross-brained. Be dumb as to his secrets, do not appear gloomy when he is merry nor merry when he is sad, and Allah shall bless you."

CHAPTER V.

Russia Takes the Plunge.
Merrick's first inclination when he realized the dastardly nature of the outrage that had been perpetrated upon them was to do something in order to strike back.

Jones had, however, weighed the situation well and knew best how to handle it.
He had Merrick stretch out upon one of the seats, and with a rug made a very fair dummy of himself upon the other. In the flickering, uncertain light it would require an extraordinarily sharp pair of eyes to discover anything wrong.

It chanced that while prowling about, looking under the seats, Jones had run across a small piece of timber some four feet long, by as many inches in diameter, which, being round, had somewhat the appearance of a post. It was an elegant substitute for a battering ram.

And Jones welcomed its appearance with more than a little satisfaction—indeed, the article itself no doubt suggested the legitimate use to which so cleverly constructed a weapon should be put.

Eagerly Jones waited, transferring his watch back and forward from one door to the other.

Ah! what was that—a hand at the window, an arm raised to hold on by some projection above!
Evidently the intruder had expected to find the window closed—at least, he had come prepared for such an obstacle.

Jones saw it coming in time to lower his head, when there was a crash of glass and the whole window went to bits.

When the job of smashing the glass had been completed in such a heroic manner, the face of a man appeared in the opening.

One glance told Jones his identity—there could be no mistaking that yellow head of hair and the blazing orbs of the Russian.

If Jones had any scruples with regard to what he proposed doing they never made themselves known. He had his battering ram in readiness and at the proper time he let it go.

The projectile struck fair and square, and with enough power to tear loose the insecure grip he had upon the carriage.

Merrick heard a yell such as the Cossack of the Don gives when he meets his fate in the mad rush of battle.

"He's gone?" demanded Merrick, who was partly in the dark as to what had occurred, and eager for news, of course.

"Yes—I struck him square in the face, a tremendous blow, with this affair. It knocked him clear off the car and the bridge. I could just see his big figure go whirling down, with arms and legs extended. And I heard the splash when he struck. Ugh! it will haunt me for many a day, I guess."

The picture thus conjured up was so exceedingly dramatic and full of horror that Merrick also shuddered, although his eyes had not beheld the actual occurrence.

"You believe the big Russian is dead, then?" he asked.

"Oh! no, that would be too good; but he'll have a perfectly delightful time getting out of the mud—I heard him swearing after he struck."

The excitement over they settled down to make the best of a bad bargain.

Suddenly the little motor ahead began to send out a series of shrill, agonizing screeches such as electrified even those of strongest nerve, since it seemed to presage a dreadful catastrophe.

Jones and Merrick unconsciously sprang to their feet, and the former made as though to thrust his head out to see what was coming; but ere he could do so there came a shock that sent them both sprawling against the cushioned back of the forward seat.

When Jones and his comrade thus scrambled about among the cushions and small luggage in the endeavor to maintain some decent sort of equilibrium, they knew full well that something out of the ordinary had happened.

Perhaps accidents are far less frequent on European railways than is the case in America, where greater hazards are taken in making speed; but nevertheless they do occur at times, and with just as fearful consequences.

A hasty examination gave Merrick and Jones the pleasing information that beyond a few contusions of small moment they had not suffered any damage from the accident.

Apparently there were others who could not lay claims to such luck.

At any rate, the death-like silence that had followed the last grand crash was succeeded by cries of terror, shrieks and the hoarse voices of alarmed men calling for assistance.

These appealed to the inmates of the carriages where disaster had set more lightly—when did cries for help ever sound in vain in the ears of men who were of the Anglo-Saxon race?

Jones, forcing a door, crawled outside, followed by his comrade.

A scene of turmoil and confusion presented itself such as they must remember long.

From the windows and smashed doors of the wrecked carriages men and women were crawling with almost ludicrous haste, like terrified bees escaping from a hive into which the smoke of tobacco has been injected.

Jones was a man equal to the occasion.

Whenever he saw a head he sprang to the rescue.

Some were bruised and cut more or less, for the shake-up had been pretty rough, and flying glass carries danger with it; but it seemed as though by the mercy of Providence there were to be no fatal casualties.

While he worked, Jones was endeavoring to solve the problem as to how this had happened, so when he reached the vicinity of the overturned motor, he began a search for the driver. If he had stuck by his engine the chances were that he must be underneath the helpless monster and beyond all hope of saving.

Presently, however, a voice addressed him in French, and calmly begged that he would lend a hand toward rescue; and turning, he beheld a man who, from his garb, he knew must have been on the motor, pinned down by a heavy wooden beam or log.

It was the work of but a minute to extricate the man, and as Jones surmised, he turned out to be the engine driver.

He was bruised and sore, but gave thanks that no bones seemed broken.

When Jones had hastily questioned him with the facility of a lawyer, all he discovered was that the alarm had been given when the driver found he was swooping directly down upon a pile of logs that had been purposely placed upon the track, with the intention of stopping the Nice express, and upon which a red lantern had been placed, but which signal was seen at such short range that there was not time to bring the train to a stop, though he made a desperate attempt to do so—his stoker had jumped, but he remained on his motor to see the logs fly in every direction and then find himself pinned under one, ten yards away from the track.

At least Jones had satisfied himself there was no accident but dark design back of the wreck.

What he had learned made him uneasy. If robbery was intended those who took so desperate a means of accomplishing their purpose might doubtless be found looting the wrecked coaches even now.

He started the cry of alarm and sent it along—every man became aroused by the possibility of new danger and for the time being their hurts and losses gave way before the possibility of marauders coming from the hinterland of Italy.

There were other chances, political ones. France was inwardly seething—Royalists were unceasingly plotting to bring about a crisis whereby the army might swing over to their cause, and as the army went so the people would incline.

Some important dignitary in mufti might be on board this train, whose capture would be a feather in the cap of the plotters.

Stranger things have happened in France ere now.

Jones, who had evolved this clever explanation from his brain, looked around to see if he could not find corroboration.

And yet he was more or less startled when he did actually discover moving figures among the trees and rocks, figures of men carrying guns, and who had apparently remained hidden until now for some reason or other.

That they were brigands their number and military precision of movement seemed to veto.

Jones dropped behind a rock and concluded to watch the game—he did not believe it was any of his funeral, but all the same it paid to be on the safe side.

Now, if they would only lay hands on the count, for instance, and carry him off, no one would shed many tears.

To Jones' surprise, however, he saw plain signals pass between the grim leader of the marauders and the man from Africa's burning sands, which proved that honest Count Leon himself was in sympathy with the secret movement not to overthrow the republic, and place the Royalists again in power.

The distressed passengers huddled together like a flock of frightened sheep, while some of the armed men stood on guard others scrutinized each group, and a few more searched the carriages, doubtless appropriating what loose valuables they discovered.

He who seemed to be a leader drew the count aside and sternly covered him with a pistol while he asked a few questions in a low voice.

Then he went direct to a carriage that had escaped injury, as though directed thither, and dragged therefrom an individual who came forth very unwillingly.

Quickly this party made an effort at defense, but was set upon by several of the marauders, disarmed and made a prisoner.

Then sharp commands were given, the armed men fell into line, and while the travelers still huddled about the fires, the mysterious force vanished as strangely as it had come, among the trees and rocks that marked that mountainous section.

Meanwhile Mark Merrick was also engaged in playing with fortune's favors.

When Jones set such a charming example of man's nobility, by rushing hither and yon, pulling unlucky passengers out of their predicament, the younger man, urged on by similar motives, started in the other direction.

He worked like a Trojan, for the cries that came from the lips of frightened women gave him the impression that the catastrophe might be even more serious than as yet appeared.

Among the women was one who seemed more deeply interested in watching the quick, nervous actions of young Merrick than in lamenting the loss of her finery, as some of the other damsels were doing.

This self-possessed young person was petite in figure, and wholly angelic in appearance—in fact, she was no other than the girl from the Transvaal, the owner of unnumbered diamond mines, Little Miss Millions.

Of course Merrick was doing his best to make the ladies comfortable.

He invaded a carriage, secured all he could, and having lugged it to the fire, demanded an owner, who eagerly put in a claim.

All was proceeding well when for the first time he set eyes upon the face of Constance Dare.

As before, when he had seen her in the Parisian carriage, her appearance gave him a shock, for he stood quite still, holding his breath, and passing one hand over his forehead as though in doubt whether he were really awake or dreaming.

Then he was thrilled by the consciousness that her eyes, marching about hither and yon for something, had become fastened on him.

She raised her hand as if involuntarily—she beckoned eagerly that he approach, and as one in a dream Mark Merrick walked on to his fate—he could not have had the power to refuse even though sure destruction lay under his feet. For Love is mightier than cold Reason, and there was that in his past to warrant blind obedience when that little hand bade him no longer hold back.

Once he started Merrick's reluctance vanished, and the blank look of amazement upon his face also gave way to eagerness.

And so he came to where she stood, this girl, who had once before been such a factor in the molding of his life.

Constance had extended a little hand—he did not see it, so eagerly were his eyes drinking in every well remembered lineament of her features, with the mocking memories they stirred into life dancing before him.

She smiled now, smiled with pleasure, and the rosy flush had crept down to her very neck.

"Mark—Mr. Merrick—how strange that we should meet again and under such stormy conditions. It seems fated that we can only come together under the shadow of danger."

Mark found his voice—and her hand.

"Dear Heaven, but I am glad to see you, Constance. You come to me as one from the dead. I have mourned you as gone from this world, and even now I have hard work to believe my senses," he said, pressing her hand in both his own.

"You are a little glad then?" she asked.

"Glad—I am—well, never mind what my condition of mind is. You can surely judge of it by the look in my eyes. God be praised for sparing you. It is wonderful, marvelous even. I cannot dream how it could have happened."

"This is neither the time nor place for an explanation, nor am I wholly sure in my mind that you will care very much to hear what wonderful things have happened to me since that day," she said.

Merrick was quick to reaffirm his eager desire to hear her story.

"Only when you are ready, Constance. As you say, the time and place are neither of them propitious. Just now I am only too glad to know you are alive and well, and still Constance Dare."

There was a significance in these last words that did not fail to catch her attention.

What did he mean?
Had he believed she preferred some other to himself, and that whether living or dead she was lost to him?

(To be continued.)

LESSLER'S STORY ABOUT CHOATE

Great Lawyer Asked for Information About Trial Proceeding.

Mr. Montague Lessler has still another story on Ambassador Choate, which he declares is a little newer than the first ascribed to him.

"Once," said the agile and capable New Yorker, "I was attorney for people with interests opposed to those of the Standard Oil company. There was a preliminary examination of some of the magnates of that company, including Mr. Rockefeller. Finally some of Mr. Choate's clients were drawn into the controversy, and they refused to answer the questions I put to them. The tangle became very intense, and it was necessary to have a long argument before the judge. At that time Mr. Choate himself was in New Jersey arguing a Tobacco Trust case, and we had to postpone our case for over a week. Oh, my! how I studied and fortified myself for the argument against the great Choate. Certainly, you can imagine how I worked."

"Well, the day arrived. Mr. Choate came. They pulled him off in one corner of the room and poured a lot of talk in his ear. Then I spoke for about an hour and a half, making the effort of my life, and Mr. Choate followed for about an hour."

"The following evening Mr. Choate was to deliver an address before the College of the City of New York, where I was educated. I attended. Mr. Choate sitting down was quite as tall as I was standing."

"How are you, Montague?" said he, putting his arm around me affectionately. "Please tell me what all that fuss was about which we argued yesterday."

Are We a Homeless People?

By Ada C. Sweet.

PUZZLE to me is why so many American women find themselves useless at home—so useless, so uninterested, that they can spend time and money in Europe, leaving their husbands to drift about in hotels and clubs or to live in their gloomy, half shut houses, attended by servants and without anything which makes of a house a home. Here on this side of the ocean something like the same problem as to women confronts one. The city streets, shops and offices, its afternoon concert halls and theatres, its parks and gardens, are filled with women, and one cannot observe these throngs of femininity long without seeing that with most of them the thought of home is not dominant.

In hotels and boarding houses are meek or harried looking men with wives of varying style and intelligence. Always it is the woman who gives up the home for the hotel. I never heard of a man with a wife or a family who wanted to live with them outside of a home.

I wonder if women realize what they are giving up when they give up their privilege, gift and occupation of homemaking. It seems to me a selling of a birthright of incalculable value, the trading of home for hotel, of care, protection and love for the chances and changes of foreign travel or the discomforts of hotel life. A "mess of pottage" indeed does the woman get when she makes this bargain with the superficial goddess of fashion and caprice, whose rule is so hard, unlovely and unsatisfying.

For Advice Go to Those Who Have Lost

By Hartley Davis.

AS a matter of cold fact, the only persons who are competent to give good advice on how to succeed are those who have tried and failed. It is easier to discover the weaknesses of the failures than the strength of the successes, and to profit by them.

I never read advice given by a man who had gained great wealth or high position without the feeling that he was keeping something from me. And he was; not with intent, but simply because he could not explain. Every human being who walks along with seven league boots toward his goal is able to do so by reason of some intangible quality in his personality—that is the real man. He may show others the way, but lacking his strength and skill and courage, they must crawl laboriously to the summit and stumble ingloriously down to the valley, while the successful man strides along from mountain top to mountain top. The big man cannot even tell how he climbed to the first height. He leaped over obstacles that would block the weaker brother, scarcely recognizing that they were in his path.

But he who tried and failed knows every barrier, every pitfall, consciously or unconsciously, usually without realizing it. In his eagerness to excuse himself he makes plain the reason why he could not gain his end. He understands weakness and can sympathize with it. The strong man who wins can do neither.

One has to lay his own course and follow it to get anywhere. Most advice and sermons are acceptable when they appeal to one's vanity. It is a virtue to encourage people to give good advice; nothing makes them so happy as to explain how they did it and how they think others can accomplish as much. To ask for advice shows a true altruistic spirit. But one is not likely to go far by following it.

History Teaches Us All to Comprehend the Present

By Richard Le Gallienne.

ERHAPS, of all studies, the study of the first importance to an average citizen is the study of history. The reading of history is a sort of mental travel. Just as a man who has seen no other country but his own is apt to be provincial in his ideas, unintelligently patriotic and intolerant of "the foreigner"—he has never met—so the man who knows no history is limited in his perspective, and comprehends as little the meaning of the contemporary history forming every moment around him as a peasant does the issue of a Presidential election. We read history, not so much to be informed about the past, as to understand the present. We will, of course, begin with the history of our own nation, and we shall have gone but a little way in that without coming to see how that study necessitates our reading the history of other nations, so complex is the process of historic evolution; so indissolubly related is one nation to another in spite of international jealousies and cruel wars! Our national pride may not be abated by this survey, but it will be the more intelligently supported, and we shall have come to realize at least that, though we are undoubtedly the greatest nation on the earth, we are not the only one.

Apart from this general gain in mental expansiveness, into what fascinating byways of human experience will the study of history lead one! So much has been done in this world, so many lives so richly and bravely lived, that we know nothing of until we take up some old history and find a mere name turning to a living man or woman, working, loving, fighting, just as we, maybe, are doing, and the spectacle brings one a curious inspiration and comfort, while it deepens and broadens our humanity as no other study can so well do as the study of history.

Reclaiming the Arid Southwest

By Robert M. Barker.

UNDOUBTEDLY the greatest system in the arid Southwest is in the Pecos Valley of Southeastern New Mexico, where over $4,000,000 has been expended by private enterprise during the last twelve years in turning aside the waters of the Pecos River and making a wonderfully exuberant garden of the valley famed in song and story as the former retreat of the most desperate train robbers, cattle thieves and other outlaws that the West has ever known. In this valley, which is 120 miles long, two enormous reservoirs, McMillan Lake and Lake Avalon, have been made by the erection of dams carried across the river just north of Carlsbad. One of these is 1140 feet over the top, and completely fills a notch worn by the river through a bed of solid limestone. McMillan Lake is thirteen miles long, and contains enough water to supply the entire lower valley, while Lake Avalon is half as large. There are now available for cultivation over 250,000 acres, of which perhaps one-fifth is engaged. Here irrigation has not only restored a sun-baked alkali plain, but it has created several prosperous little settlements, and has transformed the towns of Carlsbad and Roswell from uninteresting and shadeless gambling holes into attractive and lively small cities, each with a wealth of fine trees, hedges and other physical attributes of the well-ordered New England community.

A Rockefeller on Success.

By the Son of Richest Man in America.

IT is a habit of thought in business that the man who gets the most money is the most successful, but though he may get great sums of money honestly and legitimately by his own efforts, that money is of no real use to him unless he uses it in the right way, and it may be a great curse to him, and he may achieve no real success whatever.

If you believe what Christ said of success you must agree that a successful life is one that has been made the most of in the way of doing for others. The highest success is not what one can make, but how one can make one's self most useful. Money, power and place are circumstances more or less useful according to how a man uses them.

Use your life so as to count for the most and have the strongest influence on others for good—that is success. What good we have done will be what we will see when we come to face the result of our lives at death, and that will be the way we will measure our success in life.

The man who has impressed another life for good or has helped another to resist temptation and to turn from evil to good will be a great success in the eyes of Jesus Christ and in the estimation of every thinking man.

As Miss Anna R. Franklin, She Was One of Maryland's Belles. It is now nearly forty years since Miss Anna R. Franklin stood at the altar with Winfield Scott Schley and

To the woman whose husband is in business, and leaves every morning and returns every night regularly, year in and year out, a business trip of a week seems unbearable. But think of this woman who, a whole year at a time, would not see her husband. For many a cruise of a year or longer did Admiral Schley take.

For some years her little boy partly consoled her, but he grew up and would be a soldier. He failed to get the appointment to West Point, and his mother hoped that he would give up his ambition. But the boy came of fighting stock, and falling a commission, enlisted and rose from the ranks to a captaincy.

Life of a Baseball.

"Five balls," said the baseball fan, "will usually last out a professional game. They will never be used afterward except to practice with. The record for the number of balls required for one game is held in Detroit, where a certain match required fourteen to see it through. A $1.50 ball, if its cover rips or if it loses its shape, will be taken back and a new one will be given in exchange for it. The average sphere lasts through one game and two or three days of hard practice. Then it is pretty well used up, and the small boy takes possession of it.—Philadelphia Record.

Capt. Dayton, Who Was Rebuked by Admiral Crowninshield. In reviewing the findings of the Dayton because he did not personally look after their defense, according to custom and quashes the recommendations for court martials.

From a "Hack" to a Coupe.

In the early days of his journalistic career the late Frank R. Stockton was standing with a group of newspaper men, listening to the eloquence of one of their number, who, on the strength of some small authority, was giving his views on "higher journalism" in a pompous and bombastic manner.

At the close of a sonorous period he paused for breath, when Stockton, speaking for the first time, ventured mildly to disagree with the opinion expressed.

"Who are you to dispute me?" blazed the great man. "Why you are only a literary hack!"

"Not even that," responded Stockton meekly, "I'm only a coupe."

He practiced in Australia as an engineer for some time and then transferred himself to London, where he became an author and journalist.

BEFORE THE PUBLIC EYE

FEAR FOR THE POPE.

Italian Police Believe Anarchists Are Plotting Against Him.

The Italian police think themselves on the traces of an anarchist plot against the pope. With much secrecy, but still undoubtedly, precautions are being taken at the Vatican, and vigilance redoubled to protect its aged master, as it is not so difficult to enter that abode as is usually supposed.

The real danger lies, however, in one of the huge functions in St. Peter's, where from 40,000 to 70,000 persons are always gathered together, who obtained their tickets legitimately or otherwise—that is, through regular channels, such as some prelate, or bought them with back-door influence. The pontiff is carried slowly through the church held high above the heads of all, completely dressed in white, an admirable target for an assassin's bullet.

He was enabled to do so by the payment of his debts—supposedly by his rich American father-in-law, Mr. Zimmerman of Cincinnati—and the removal thereby of his disabilities as a peer in good standing.

William Angus Drogo Montagu, the ninth duke of Manchester, succeeded to the title on the death of his father in 1890. His estates were heavily incumbered, particularly the beautiful Kimbolton Castle, with its rare pictures and its relics of Catherine of Aragon. The duke was married two years ago to Helena Zimmerman, daughter of Eugene Zimmerman, the Cincinnati railroad official.

Frye's Valuable Panama.

What is said to be the finest Panama hat in Washington is worn by Senator Frye. It was sent to him by a friend, and came without a band. Senator Frye sent it to his hatter and directed that a suitable band be put around it. The hatter returned word that he would not put a needle in the hat, as it was too good a hat to be punched full of holes. The hatter said the piece of headgear was worth over $100. He placed a loose black band around the hat, without thread fastenings.—Washington Letter.

WILL CHRISTEN NEW WARSHIP.

Miss Susan Quay to Name the Formidable Pennsylvania.

Miss Susan Quay, who will act as sponsor for the new United States cruiser Pennsylvania, is the youngest daughter of Senator Matthew Stanley Quay. She made her debut at Washington in 1896, and at once became quite popular in the younger set of society at the capital. The cruiser upon whose prow Miss Quay will break the traditional bottle of champagne will be the fastest war ship in the American navy and will be one of the safest of the armored ships afoat. The launching will take place at Cramp's shipyards in Philadelphia with very elaborate ceremonies.

Emperor Menelek is Progressive. Emperor Menelek travels incognito and is attended only by M. Ilg of Zurich and a few personal attendants. After a short stay in Switzerland he will proceed to Paris, whence he will return directly to Abyssinia. The object of this visit, it is said, is purely financial, for Menelek hopes to float a loan for the extension of railways, telegraphs and telephones in his own country. The emperor takes a great interest in modern armaments, and is an expert electrician.

ASK FOR STRANGE FAVORS.

President Schurman's Odd Letters Come From Everywhere.

Many strange requests come to the president of a great university, but President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell is particularly blessed. Most of the odd appeals are from people who think he owns part of the Philippine Islands, and from fond mothers who are anxious about undergraduate sons. The limit of strange requests was reached a few days ago, however, in a letter from an up-state farmer, which read something like this:

"I send you by this mail a piece of the meat which was found in the stomach of my dog, which is dead already. We think he was poisoned by a homely critter who lived on the next farm. You will please make an investigation of the meat and tell us what kind of poison it was. That will be evidence. We think you are a very fine college president."

The letter was enough of a shock, says the New York Tribune, but there was a greater one when the box containing the sample of poisoned meat was opened the next day.

Taking a Man Unawares.

Bland, Mo., June 30th.—F. B. Crider describes very graphically how he was overtaken by an enemy and his narrow escape, he says:

"For years I have been troubled with Kidney Disease which came on me so gradually that I did not know what it was until the pains in my back warned me that it was Kidney Trouble."

"I began treatment at once and used one medicine after another, but without help, till at last I was just about to give up in despair.

"Just then I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and bought a few boxes and began to take them. They helped me from the first and now I am completely cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills is the only medicine that ever did me any good. They are worth their weight in gold."

Head of Greek Catholics.

Archbishop Andrew Hodoboy, who was recently sent to this country by the college of propaganda of Rome to take charge of the Greek Catholic priests of this country, has decided to make his home in Scranton, Pa., that being the most central point on account of the great number of Greek Catholics who reside in the anthracite coal regions. Archbishop Hodoboy is to have charge over the Greek Catholics who acknowledge the supremacy of the pope. Orthodox Greek Catholics recognize the czar as the head of their church.

What About Your School Rooms?

You may not this season be able to build a new one, or make the radical changes in the old one that you had in contemplation, but there is no school district in the United States that cannot afford to tint with Alabastine the interior of their buildings, thus making them more attractive, getting colors made with special reference to their effects on the eyes of the pupils, getting a sanitary and rock base cement coating that will not harbor disease germs.

The closely crowded school rooms need all the safeguards to the health of the pupil that intelligent officials can surround them with, and all sanitarians unite in saying that Alabastine is the only proper material to be used on such walls.

Judicial Humor.

In the supreme court of California it is not uncommon to see a learned justice's shoes on the desk while court is in session. It is one of the trite anecdotes of the California bar that Justice McFarland, sitting with his feet on a level with his head one day, fell over backward; whereupon Chief Justice Beatty remarked aloud that his learned brother had certainly reversed himself in a most astounding manner.

DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Dr. Hartman Gives Free Advice to Suffering Women.

MISS LIZZIE SNEATHING

Dr. Hartman, the Famous Gynaecologist and Inventor of Pe-ru-na Offers to Treat Women Free During the Summer Months.

America is the land of nervous women. The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease. By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused by catarrh.

Women afflicted with pelvic catarrh despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

The following letter was recently received:

186 W. 38th st., New York City. The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O. Gentlemen:—"What bread and meat means to the hungry Peruna means to the sick. It is an especially valuable medicine for sick women. I have found that no medicine so quickly restores health and places the body in a normal condition. I but voice the sentiments of women who were once sick, but are now in perfect health."

MISS LIZZIE SNEATHING. All women who are in doubt as to what their trouble is should write Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio. Give him a full description of your trouble, previous treatment, symptoms and age. He will promptly reply, with full directions for treatment free of charge. This is an opportunity which no ailing woman should miss. Dr. Hartman has become renowned through his success in treating women's diseases. His experience in these matters is vast. Correspondence is strictly confidential. No testimonials published without written consent.

BARRINGTON LOCALS.

When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there.
Flag of the free hearts hope and home,
By angel hands to valor given!
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us.

The township of Barrington shows an increase in the valuation of real property over the figures of 1901. The figures returned to the county clerk by Assessor Plagge, show the valuation of real property to be $303,321 for 1902, and $302,206 for 1901. Palatine shows an increase of $468 over the total of 1901 which was $364,971.

"Hubby," said a Henry county farmer's wife, "on August 25 we shall have been married twenty-five years. Don't you think we ought to kill the fat pig and have a feast?" "Kill that pig!" growled Hubby gruffly. "I don't see what we want to jump onto the pig and kill him for. He isn't to blame for what happened twenty-five years ago."

Commencing Sunday matinee Ferris Wheel Park, Chicago, will offer another strong vaudeville show. Smith and Doretto, comedy acrobats; the 3 Keatons, comedy act; Flora Adler, vocalist; Knight Bros., song and dance artists, and many other attractions. Wheel rides are free week day afternoons. Altogether one can spend a very pleasant day at this beautiful outdoor resort.

To keep the boys on the farm make it pleasant and profitable for them. The boy who will be contented with the farm without objects to interest him is stupid indeed. If possessed of ambition he must see the opportunity to satisfy it on the farm, or if not there you would better let him seek it elsewhere. Don't curb genuine, honest ambition in a young man simply to keep him on the farm, if the farm cannot satisfy that ambition.

Attorney Samuel W. Packard, a deacon in the First Congregational church at Oak Park, has resigned and asked release from membership in the church. Mr. Packard is the legal adviser of John Alexander Dowie and will accept his faith.

The Illinois farmers who became discouraged as a result of several bad crop years and sold out and invested in other more "promising" fields, have run away from one of the best sections of earth known to man. When a farmer leaves Illinois to hunt for a better agricultural region he's started on a wild goose chase. It isn't on the map.

The Fox Lake Region Improvement association has been successful in securing legislation by congress permitting the construction of a dam at McHenry to raise the water of Fox river and its tributary lakes. A meeting of those interested in the improvement was held at Fox Lake, Monday, to arrange for building the dam and otherwise improving the lake waterways.

The Barrington people being assured an opportunity to celebrate the day under auspices of the leading civic society, and being disappointed at the last moment, can now celebrate the day as best they can. Fireworks are cheap and there should be no limit to noise and display of patriotic spirit. Let every citizen consider himself a committee of one and see that the eagle screams good and loud.

The Metropolitan Business College puts into possession of a young man or woman, the tools for making his or her way in the world. It qualifies him to do something which the world wants done. We hope that our young people will write to Prof. Powers concerning that excellent school. This is the time to make arrangements for the summer term, which begins July 7th. There are plenty of good openings for smart and capable young people. Prof. Powers is placing hundreds of worthy young men and ladies in good business positions every year, after they have completed their course at his college. The Metropolitan Business College is located at 7 Monroe street, Chicago.

There is no way by which the damage to crops of the country, by the thirty days of rain, can be estimated. The loss entailed is something enormous. In this immediate vicinity the injury will not be so great as in the central and southern portion of the state where the rains have caused floods which have washed the crops from the earth. The weather bureau persists in announcing that in seasons past we have experienced just such weather but no one seems to remember it. Disagreeable things are best forgotten, which probably accounts for the lapse in memory. To make matters worse another installment of the same kind of weather is promised for this month. With coal advancing in price and our winter flannels put away in the camphor-lined chest the prediction is anything but pleasant to think about. This will probably be a season without a summer.

Close of Camp Meeting.
Camp meeting closed Monday afternoon. Unfavorable weather ruled during the entire ten days of the session, but despite that the meetings were generally well attended and productive of good results. There were 14 ministers in attendance besides the local pastor. Among them was President Thoren of Western Union college, LeMars, Iowa, and Rev. Niebel, financial agent of that institution.

The attendance last Sunday was very good, considering the weather. People were present from Chicago, Elgin, Edison Park, Oak Park, Peotone, Naperville and other towns near Barrington. In the afternoon rain began to fall soon after Bishop Sanford began to preach. It worried the ladies' summer toilets to some extent, and a few sought shelter, other than the tent, but the larger part of the congregation remained until the bishop closed, although the sermon lasted an hour and a-half and was a mighty plea for righteousness and for a true and pure life. The sermon will not be quickly forgotten.

At the closing service on Monday a circle was formed and good bye said in the customary way. After all, the meeting of 1902 was a success.

Suit Yourself as to Color.
It is now the fad to color oleomargarine to suit the fancy of any household. Every housewife can be her own decorator of imitation butter, using a little capsule of stuff prepared by the manufacturer for this very purpose. Housewives and cooks who have feared that the ten cents a pound tax placed by congress on the colored article would make the price prohibitive, need have no cause for alarm. They can still serve the golden imitation of the genuine country product, but they will have to color it themselves. As a matter of variety, if they wish to make it green or pink, to match the house decorations on special occasions this may be done.

We regret the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Kimberly from this township, and trust they may find life in the metropolis as pleasant as at their pretty summer home in this region.

Rev. B. H. Niebel of Des Moines, Iowa, is visiting with Rev. Fidler and family. For several years Rev. Niebel was presiding elder in the Des Moines conference of the United Evangelical church. Two years ago he was elected financial agent of Western Union college located at LeMars, Iowa. Rev. Niebel will occupy the pulpit of the Salem church Sunday morning and evening.

Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Kendall enjoyed their tour of the west, Pacific coast and northwest to the full limit. The doctor is more than a casual observer when touring the country and his description of what he saw is interesting to those who have only read of the attractions of the land beyond the great divide. Mr. and Mrs. Kendall wandered mid the orange groves of Pasadena, viewed the attractions lovely Los Angeles and Santa Monica beach; basked in the sunshine at Golden Gate park, San Francisco's most beautiful resort, and sailed along the coast of the Golden state. Portland and Seattle were visited and the doctor has only words of praise for those two monuments to western push and enterprise. Salt Lake City offered many scenes of interest to the tourists. There they viewed the great Mormon temple and attended an organ recital within the huge auditorium. Dr. Kendall went swimming in the "brine" of that wonderful body of salt water. The trip was full of pleasure and Dr. and Mrs. Kendall were greatly benefited by it.

Abandoned the Celebration.
The celebration to have been given in Barrington today under the auspices of Barrington camp, M. W. A., has, by the arrangement committee, been abandoned. The action of the committee, it is said, is due to several causes. No matter what may have influenced the committee, the action will prove a keen disappointment to many who had decided to remain at home this year and join in the observance of the day. If, as it is said, the promoters of the celebration were "scared from their purpose because it might rain," the excuse is a lame one.

The spirit of American patriotism is not dampened by the elements.

There can be no good reason advanced for abandoning the proper observance of our great national holiday, and no community of American citizens ought to allow the day to pass without in some manner celebrating it.

July 4th is not a day set apart for any man or organization to use for money making purposes, but on the contrary a day when every citizen of this great republic should lay aside all cares, get out and thank God that he lives under the protection of that great declaration of human rights, under the shadow of Old Glory.

The Woodmen should have kept their promise to the people, or finding that course impossible, announced their inability to do so and given the management of the celebration into other hands. You can fool some of the people part of the time but you can't fool all the people all the time, is a good thing to keep in mind.

Important Changes on C. & N. W.

A number of important changes in the operating department of the Chicago & Northwestern Ry., have been announced. R. H. Aishton, who has been general superintendent of the company since November 1899, has been promoted to assistant general manager. W. D. Cantillon, assistant superintendent, succeeds Mr. Aishton. Thos. A. Lawson, superintendent of this, the Wisconsin division, is promoted to assistant general superintendent. F. R. Pechin of the Iowa division succeeds Mr. Lawson.

Meat Once a Day.

Our mistakes in eating begin with our breakfast. In many families, perhaps in most, this meal commences with fruit and cereal, goes on to chops and potatoes, hot breads and coffee and concludes with griddlecakes and sirup. At noon, when a man's stomach is only beginning to rest from all this, he has a steak, more potato, bread and butter, coffee and pie, while at home his wife has a slice of cold meat, a cup of tea and a piece of cake. At night the two sit down to dinner, with roast beef, potatoes and bread and butter as the staples of the meal.

Now, no one but a woodchopper or a hunter can possibly eat meat—above all, red meat, such as beef and mutton—three times a day without inviting uric acid to come and take up its dwelling in his system. Nor can he eat white bread, potatoes and pastry day after day without inviting dyspepsia. One has only to let a doctor trace back these diseases to their source to be quite certain on these points.

But if we decide to give up these things, determine to have meat and potatoes only once a day and red meat only once a week; if we taboo pastry, the starchy vegetables, the white bread and heavy sweets, what have we left for the family meals? "Nothing," the distracted housewife will exclaim despairingly at first thought, but really the matter is not as difficult as it seems.

In planning the meals on this basis there is, first of all, chicken, which is invaluable, for it may be cooked in a dozen different ways and seem a new dish each time, and turkey, duck and goose as well. Then there are the white meats, lamb and veal; fish in its multitudinous forms; there are game in its season, vegetables and fruits, with numberless varieties of soups, and the simple sweets, which are made principally from milk and cream, and all forms of breads.—Harper's Bazar.

Battle Against the Heat.

Now that the "heated term" comes on apace public interest will be aroused in an invention lately brought out by the chief of the weather bureau. This is a gravity air cooling machine, by which, it is claimed, houses may be kept at a temperature of 70 degrees during the dog days. The inventor has not yet made known what will be the cost of installing and maintaining his apparatus.

The feasibility of securing a reasonable degree of coolness in office buildings or residences in midsummer never has been questioned. We have in many institutions electric fans and similar devices, but the difficulty is to produce artificial coolness inexpensively—to bring it within reach of lean purses. Much was said two years ago about the utilization of frozen air for house cooling purposes, but frozen air has dropped out of sight. Methods of keeping men comfortable in extremely cold weather have been devised. It may fairly be said that man has conquered cold weather. He has not learned how to deal with hot weather, especially where there are only a few weeks in a year of extreme heat and where houses must be built with an eye to cool weather.

If the chief of the weather bureau can supply an air cooling appliance which will do its work well and not cost too much, he will become a public benefactor and make besides a fortune for himself. Instead of receiving more or less accurate predictions about the weather he might be able to receive handsome royalties from stores and factories all over the country for giving them in summer just the kind of weather they desired.

A PLEASING FRENCH TRAIT.

Love Between Brothers a Strongly Marked Characteristic.

One of the ways in which the close union of French family life shows itself is the great affection of brothers for each other. There is an intimacy between them in good and evil fortune which one does not find in other countries. A brother who takes a high position by his talents loses no opportunity to forward the interests of one of lesser ability or of no ability. He never treats the latter as a drag on him, and perhaps scarcely feels that he is one. Married brothers often like to live in the same house, on different floors, and to hire summer villas in close proximity.

Most of the famous Frenchmen whom I knew had each a brother to whom he was devoted. Louis and Charles Blanc, though so dissimilar in appearance, tastes, disposition, and married to women who disliked each other, were, morally speaking, Siamese twins until death severed the bond. The same might be said of the Garnier. Pages, of Jules Favre and his brother Leon, of Ernest and Arthur Picard, of Puch, the sculptor, and his brother the deputy. Paul and Hippolyte Flaudrin, the painters, were known in their student days as the Siamese twins. It not infrequently happens that brothers go into literary partnership. Instances that occur to me are the Goncourts, the Rosnys, the Marguerites. It would be impossible to discern the work of one of any of these brothers from that of another. What is very curious, each brother, as in the case of Charles and Louis Blanc, Ernest and Arthur Picard, Jules and Leon Favre, differed strikingly in every characteristic from the other. The dissimilarity of the Marguerites is so great that one wonders how brothers could be so unlike. Alphonse Daudet was not a bit like his brother Ernest, an accomplished novelist also.—London News.

It is beginning to be generally understood that a man has as much right to run an automobile at express train speed on a public highway as he has to shoot a cannon ball down a city street.

Now that magnanimity is the order of the day, doubtless Mr. Morgan's shipping combine will grant the British nation as fair a measure of autonomy as is consistent with its imperial purposes.

There is a feeling of apprehension in London that J. Pierpont Morgan will take advantage of the coronation excitement to acquire more power and property.
